Appointment of Guardian ad Litem on Day of Trial. — Where a guardian ad litem for infants and incompetents is appointed on the day of trial, and such guardian accepts service and copies of the pleadings and files his answer the same day, the judgment is irregular and may be declared void or set aside. Simms v. Sampson, 221 N.C. 379, 20 S.E.2d 554 (1942).

Foreign or Domestic Corporation Cannot Be Appointed. — Only a person whose fitness has first been ascertained by the court is eligible for appointment by the court as representative of a minor to institute suit, and neither a foreign nor domestic corporation may be appointed. In re Will of Roediger, 209 N.C. 470, 184 S.E. 74 (1936).

Treatment of Suit Brought by Foreign Guardian. — A guardian appointed in another state has no authority to represent his wards in suits and proceedings in this State, but when he brings suit for them as guardian such suit will be treated as if he were next friend. Tate v. Mott, 96 N.C. 19, 2 S.E. 176 (1887).

Where an infant had a general guardian, such guardian was the only one who could defend on behalf of the infant, and defense by a subsequently appointed guardian ad litem was a nullity. Narron v. Musgrave, 236 N.C. 388, 73 S.E.2d 6 (1952).

Representation of Minor Heir by Administrator in Proceeding to Sell Land. — In an ex parte proceeding to sell land for assets, infant heirs are represented by a guardian, and the order of sale must be approved by the judge. While it is irregular for the administrator in such case to represent a minor heir as guardian, yet, where there is no suggestion of any unfair advantage having been taken in the sale, confirmation, or elsewhere in the proceeding, such irregularity will not vitiate the title of the purchaser. Syme v. Trice, 96 N.C. 243, 1 S.E. 480 (1887); Harris v. Brown, 123 N.C. 419, 31 S.E. 877 (1898).

Suit by Representative of Infant Widow. — In dissenting from her husband's will and applying for a year's allowance, widow who was a minor without a guardian could be represented by a representative, duly appointed. Hollmon v. Hollmon, 125 N.C. 29, 34 S.E. 99 (1899).

Appearance of Husband Unnecessary. — Where an infant feme covert cestui que trust who had no general guardian appeared in a proceeding for the appointment of a trustee by guardian ad litem, the husband did not need to appear. Roseman v. Roseman, 127 N.C. 494, 37 S.E. 518 (1900).

Duty of Guardian ad Litem. — It is the duty of a next friend to represent the infant, to see that the witnesses are present at the trial of the infant's case, and to do all things which are required to secure a judgment favorable to the infant. Teele v. Kerr, 261 N.C. 148, 134 S.E.2d 126 (1964).

Power of Guardian ad Litem Limited. — The power of a next friend is strictly limited to the performance of the precise duty imposed upon him by the order appointing him, that is, the prosecution of the particular action in which he was appointed. Teele v. Kerr, 261 N.C. 148, 134 S.E.2d 126 (1964).

Failure to Plead Infancy of Petitioner as Waiver of Such Defense. — Where a minor petitioned for a writ of habeas corpus in her own name, and not by next friend, and the record on appeal failed to show that the respondent pleaded the infancy of the petitioner as a defense, it was considered as waived. In re Allen, 238 N.C. 367, 77 S.E.2d 907 (1953).

Appealability of Order Appointing Guardian ad Litem. — An order appointing a next friend for plaintiff is an order affecting a substantial right from which plaintiff may appeal. Hagins v. Redevelopment Comm'n, 1 N.C. App. 40, 159 S.E.2d 584 (1968), rev'd on other grounds, 275 N.C. 90, 165 S.E.2d 490 (1969).

Defendant cannot object to representative appointed by trial judge. Carroll v. Montgomery, 128 N.C. 278, 38 S.E. 874 (1901).

Authority of Guardian ad Litem Not Subject to Collateral Attack. — The presence of a guardian ad litem to represent an infant party, and his recognition by the court in proceeding with the cause, precludes an inquiry into his authority in a collateral proceeding. Sumner v. Sessoms, 94 N.C. 371 (1886). See also, Tate v. Mott, 96 N.C. 19, 2 S.E. 176 (1887).

When Collateral Attack on Judgment Precluded. — Where infant defendants were served with a summons in proceedings for the partition of land and a guardian ad litem was appointed, a judgment affirming the sale could not be set aside in a collateral proceeding for alleged fraud or irregularity. Smith v. Gray, 116 N.C. 311, 21 S.E. 200 (1895).

Binding Effect of Judgment on Represented Infants. — Infants without general guardians may appear by their representative, appointed in the manner prescribed, and judgments rendered in such proceedings, otherwise valid, are binding upon and conclusive of the rights of infants in the same manner and to the same extent as persons sui juris. Tate v. Mott, 96 N.C. 19, 2 S.E. 176 (1887); Settle v. Settle, 141 N.C. 553, 54 S.E. 445 (1906).

Whether a new trial will be ordered for failure to appoint a guardian ad litem will depend upon the circumstances of the particular case as to whether the infant or infants have been fully protected in their rights and property; a new trial will not be granted for mere technical error which could have affected the result, but only for error which is prejudicial or harmful. Tart v. Register, 257 N.C. 161, 125 S.E.2d 754 (1962).

Judgment Against Infants Neither Served Nor Represented by Guardian ad Litem Void. — Where it appears that there was no service of process upon infant defendants, and no guardian was appointed to protect their interests, a judgment rendered against them is absolutely void ab initio, and may be set aside at any time for irregularity. Mason v. Miles, 63 N.C. 564 (1869); Larkins v. Bullard, 88 N.C. 35 (1883). See White v. Albertson, 14 N.C. 241 (1831); Pearson v. Nesbitt, 12 N.C. 315 (1832).

Judgment or Order Voidable Where Infant Appears by Attorney. — A judgment for or against an infant, when he appears by attorney but has no guardian or next friend, is not void, but only voidable. Tate v. Mott, 96 N.C. 19, 2 S.E. 176 (1887).

In an action against an infant who appears by an attorney, an order changing the venue is not irregular or void; it is erroneous, and may be reversed or vacated upon application of the infant, upon his arriving at age of majority. Turner v. Douglass, 72 N.C. 127 (1875).

Attainment of Majority Pendente Lite. — Where an infant institutes an action in his own name and arrives at full age before trial, the judgment is binding on both plaintiff and defendant. Hicks v. Beam, 112 N.C. 642, 17 S.E. 490 (1893).

Judgment Against Infant Held Void. — Where an infant was not served, and his guardian ad litem appeared and answered but interposed no real defense, and the court entered judgment on the day of the appointment of the guardian ad litem, the judgment against the infant was void for want of jurisdiction. Narron v. Musgrave, 236 N.C. 388, 73 S.E.2d 6 (1952).

Proceedings Held Not Conclusive upon Infant Defendants. — A decree for the sale of land in a special proceeding was not conclusive upon infant defendants who were not served with process, but who were represented by a guardian ad litem, appointed before the petition was filed on nomination of plaintiff, and who filed an answer prepared for him at plaintiff's instance and without inquiry as to the rights of the infant defendants. Moore v. Gidney, 75 N.C. 34 (1876); Gulley v. Macy, 81 N.C. 356 (1879).

In a suit to enforce a tax lien by foreclosure, where the affidavit, orders and notices appeared sufficient in form to constitute service by publication of notice of summons in accordance with prescribed procedure upon all persons named therein, including heirs at law, both adult and minors, the minors, if any, not having been represented by a guardian ad litem, would not be bound by the judgment of confirmation rendered in the action. McIver Park v. Brinn, 223 N.C. 502, 27 S.E.2d 548 (1943).

Infants as Real Parties Plaintiff. — One who conducts a suit as guardian or next friend for infants is not a party of record, but the infants themselves are the real plaintiffs. George v. High, 85 N.C. 113 (1881); Krachanake v. Acme Mfg. Co., 175 N.C. 435, 95 S.E. 851 (1918).

It is not essential that an infant should know that an action has been brought in his favor by a representative, as his incapacity to judge for himself is presumed, but the court may inquire into the propriety of the action and take such steps as may be necessary. Tate v. Mott, 96 N.C. 19, 2 S.E. 176 (1887).

As to defense by one appointed to prosecute right for infant, see County of Johnston v. Ellis, 226 N.C. 268, 38 S.E.2d 31 (1946).

It is competent for attorney and guardian ad litem to waive a jury trial for infants, even where they have not been regularly served with summons. White v. Morris, 107 N.C. 92, 12 S.E. 80 (1890).

Consent to Judgment or Compromise. — In the case of infant parties, the guardian ad litem or guardian cannot consent to a judgment or compromise without investigation and approval by the court. State ex rel. Hagins v. Phipps, 1 N.C. App. 63, 159 S.E.2d 601 (1968).

Satisfaction of Judgment in Favor of Infant. — Under the statutes of this State, only the clerk or the legal guardian of an infant has authority to receive payment and satisfy a judgment rendered in favor of an infant, and the defendant must pay the judgment to the clerk of the superior court, who holds the funds until the minor reaches his majority or until a general guardian is appointed for him, unless the sum is $1,000 (now $2,000) or less, when he may disburse it himself under the terms of § 7A-111. Teele v. Kerr, 261 N.C. 148, 134 S.E.2d 126 (1964).

Inquisition to Determine Insanity Not Condition Precedent to Appointment. — The court is under duty to appoint a guardian ad litem for a defendant who is non compos mentis and who has no general guardian, and an inquisition to determine the sanity of the defendant is not a condition precedent to such appointment. Moore v. Lewis, 250 N.C. 77, 108 S.E.2d 26 (1959), appeal dismissed, 361 U.S. 232, 80 S. Ct. 371, 4 L. Ed. 2d 350 (1960).

Where allegation of insanity of husband was admitted by demurrer, suit could be brought by his next friend, even though no inquisition of lunacy was had; and the wife could bring the action as such next friend, where she was regularly appointed. Abbott v. Hancock, 123 N.C. 99, 31 S.E. 268 (1898).

Payment of Costs by Representative. — While the representative is not, strictly speaking, a party to the action, and generally will not be taxed with costs, yet where the court finds the fact that he officiously procured his appointment, or was guilty of mismanagement or bad faith, it may tax him with costs. Smith v. Smith, 108 N.C. 365, 12 S.E. 1045, 13 S.E. 113 (1891).

Attorneys' Fees for Prosecution of Guardian. — Where it is proper for the attorneys for a ward, employed by his representative, to receive compensation out of the estate for the prosecution of an action against the guardian, the amount is for the sole determination of the court, irrespective of any contract that may have been made, to be fixed with regard to the value of the services in relation to that of the estate. In re Stone, 176 N.C. 336, 97 S.E. 216 (1918).

Rule 18. Joinder of claims and remedies.

(a) Joinder of claims. — A party asserting a claim for relief as an original claim, counterclaim, cross claim, or third-party claim, may join, either as independent or as alternate claims, as many claims, legal or equitable, as he has against an opposing party.

(b) Joinder of remedies; fraudulent conveyances. — Whenever a claim is one heretofore cognizable only after another claim has been prosecuted to a conclusion, the two claims may be joined in a single action; but the court shall grant relief in that action only in accordance with the relative substantive rights of the parties. In particular, a plaintiff may state a claim for money and a claim to have set aside a conveyance fraudulent as to him, without first having obtained a judgment establishing the claim for money. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1969, c. 895, s. 7.)

COMMENT

General Comment on the Problems Dealt with in the Joinder Rules, Rules 18 to 21. — The fundamental problem sought to be controlled by so-called joinder rules is that of the size which a single lawsuit shall on the one hand be compelled, and, on the other hand, permitted to assume. Hence, the rules of compulsory (minimum allowable size) and permissive (maximum allowable size) joinder. Since size depends both upon the number of claims (causes of action) and parties potentially involved, the rules of joinder have traditionally been separately framed in terms of parties and claims (causes of action).

Permissive Joinder. — The underlying policy controlling maximum permissible size is clear and has always been at least tacitly agreed upon under all procedural systems — namely, that the size should be as large as is compatible with orderly handling of issues and fairness to those parties not necessarily interested in all phases of the lawsuit as finally structured. This in turn is based upon the obvious — that economy of judicial effort is achieved by the resolution in one suit of as many claims, concluding as many parties, as is possible. The rub has come in laying down workable directions which are fairly simple in statement; which nevertheless deal adequately with the potentially two-dimensional nature of the joinder problem (both parties and causes); and which, though couched in a form concrete enough for ready application, state what is essentially a quite flexibly conceived goal, i.e., maximum size commensurate with orderly handling of issues and fairness to all parties. One way to solve what is essentially a very difficult drafting problem is to lay down a fairly rigid, hence easily expressed, limitation in the kinds of cause of action which may be joined. If this is done, the problem of too many parties tends to take care of itself, since under traditional conceptions of the structure of a "cause of action," such a single judicial unit rarely has multiple parties aligned on either side of it (typically only when the substantive law contemplates the existence of parties jointly, or jointly or severally, entitled or obligated). Thus, in most cases of attempted joinder of multiple parties there will be a more basic joinder of causes of action which will come under control of the limitation applicable to joinder of causes. This was the common-law approach, which started out allowing only one claim to be made in any action, and finally relaxed only to the point of allowing joinder of causes when they all fell within one of the "forms of action." The code draftsmen, wedded to this approach, essentially codified it, merely using new terminology, e.g., "contract," in place of old "assumpsit," to define the categories within which joinder of claims is permissive. This approach is artificial, and actually loses sight of the basic policy which should control here, but it is simple to put into directive form, and it "works," albeit at the expense of legitimate considerations. When coupled, as it typically is in the codes, with procedural devices provided to attack misjoinder preliminary to trial, it produces a vast amount of skirmishing at this stage before trial is ever reached. This is the history of application of the code joinder rules. Here the emphasis is on artificial restriction of size, with leeway provided for movement in the direction of enlargement only through the power in judges to consolidate causes not technically subject to joinder.

Another approach, which is also simple of statement, is to go in exactly the opposite direction and state a basic directive for practically unlimited joinder of claims at the pleading stage, limited only by considerations of fairness to any parties not potentially interested in the totality of the lawsuit as then structured, leaving the burden on the judiciary to move in a restricted direction by exercise of the power of severance closer to trial time. This dispenses with pleading stage skirmishes over the alignment of the suit in terms of parties and claims, and defers ultimate structuring while preserving to the parties at this stage all the benefits of an ongoing uninterrupted lawsuit. This last is essentially a description of the federal rule approach to the problem of maximum permissible size or permissive joinder.

Compulsory Joinder. — Going to the problem of minimum allowable size (compulsory joinder), the Commission found that the underlying policy consideration here has traditionally been to insure that all "necessary" or "indispensable" parties should be involved in a lawsuit before it proceeds to trial, or certainly before it proceeds to judgment. Necessity and indispensability have always been viewed in this context as involving two aspects: First, necessity from the standpoint of the judicial economy of concluding in one lawsuit the total potential range of the controversy as defined in the pleadings; Second, necessity from the standpoint of avoiding undue practical prejudice to absent parties (notwithstanding they are not legally concluded) by proceeding to trial and judgment without their presence.

There has never been considered to be any corresponding necessity to compel joinder of several causes of action, hence there have not been rules of "compulsory joinder of causes." The res judicata principle of merger by judgment arises at this stage in the form of the rule against "splitting a cause of action." This, in effect, sets the minimum allowable size of a lawsuit, so far as causes of action is concerned, at one such unit. Beyond this there is no compulsion to "join." Thus, the rules of compulsory joinder have always been rules of compulsory joinder of parties. Here, too, the problem has been to draft concretely to express the essentially flexible consideration of "necessity" above summarized. There has always been general agreement that all parties jointly entitled or obligated were "necessary" in the sense compelling their joinder, and this has been the rule from common-law days, through the codes, and under federal practice. Beyond the "jointly interested" or "united in interest" area, however, the directives have had to rely simply on general formulations of necessity in the sense above discussed. There is remarkably little change in phraseology designed to express this essential notion under the federal rule formulation from that under the codes.

Multiple Causes and Parties. — A particularly difficult problem in framing permissive joinder directives is occasioned by the necessity for taking into account the possibility of both multiple causes and parties. As indicated, despite the inextricably two-dimensional nature of the joinder problem where multiple causes and parties are involved, the traditional approach has been to frame the joinder rules as if joinder of parties and causes were two separate and independent problems. Of course, where there is but a single claim (cause of action) the joinder rule directed solely at the party joinder limitations is completely adequate to control the matter. But where separately framed directives are used, they must be interrelated in some fashion in order to take into account the possibility of joinder of both claims and parties in a single suit. This poses a logical difficulty which has actually defied any but artificial solutions in any system which has sought to impose separately conceived limitations on joinder of parties and causes, and then to interrelate these limitations. Thus, one code solution has been (as in North Carolina) to resolve this logical dilemma by adding to the basic limitations on joinder of causes the all inclusive limitation that all causes must affect all parties. This is a possible solution, but it achieves relative certainty (only relative) at the expense of truly valid considerations of maximum permissible lawsuit size. Another approach, much more likely to achieve the desired goals, is to allow unlimited joinder of claims as such, and to impose limitations only in respect of parties, which limitations apply whether there is but a single or multiple causes of action (claims) involved. This is the federal rules approach and it has proven in practice not only to be more certain of application in given cases, but also to allow closer approximation to the true goals of permissive joinder, i.e., to allow as much to be concluded in any lawsuit as is commensurate with orderly handling of issues and fairness to parties not interested in the entire scope of the suit. Here again, ultimate protection against confusion of issues and unfairness can be provided by severance power reposed in the judiciary, and so it is under the federal rules approach.

Comment on Rule 18 as Originally Enacted. — This is an exact tracking of the federal rule. This reflects the view that the joinder conceptions expressed in this rule are much preferable to the code approach as previously incorporated essentially in former §§ 1-123, 1-68 and 1-69.

The first sentence of section (a) starts with the simplest possible situation by stating the basic rule for permissive joinder of claims as between just two parties. This rule is simply for potentially unlimited joinder, without regard to number and nature. If this be thought to open the door to vast confusion by encouraging an unfettered joinder of numerous completely unrelated claims, two things should be remembered. First, as a practical matter, human affairs do not often contrive to give many legal claims to any particular individual against another particular individual at times close enough together to raise even the possibility of their joinder in a single action. Furthermore, to the extent multiple claims do arise close enough in point of time to raise the joinder possibility, they are extremely likely to arise out of the same basic historical occurrences or transactions, thus presenting fair ground for inclusion in one lawsuit. Secondly, if, however, too numerous claims are allowed to be joined in the pleadings in a particular case, this does not mean that they must therefore be tried in the same case. Both Rules 20(b) and 42(b) contain express mandates to sever claims prior to trial for separate trial where orderliness and fairness require this.

The second sentence posits the more complicated situation of multiple parties and multiple claims, and reiterates the basic rule of unlimited joinder of claims in this situation but with the proviso that the limitations on permissive party joinder (as expressed in Rules 19, 20, and 22) are to be observed. As indicated in the General Comment to this bloc of rules, this is a much more preferable way in logic to handle the difficult problem of interrelating limitations on multiple claim and multiple party joinder than is the code way. The party joinder rules impose quite realistic and sufficient restrictions on unfettered joinder of claims here. For where both multiple claims and multiple parties are involved, two unifying factors in respect of the various parties vis-a-vis the various claims must exist to allow the claims to be joined, i.e., (1) all the claims must arise out of the same aggregation of historical facts (same "transaction or occurrence, etc."), and (2) there must be in respect of all parties some common question of law or fact necessarily to be determined in the action. This is a much more easily understandable and applicable restriction than is the vague "all causes must affect all parties" restriction which underlies all other tests for permissive joinder of claims under the former code approach. It also gets more truly at the valid limiting consideration which should control the maximum size, i.e., the avoidance of too numerous historically unrelated issues in a single action wherein not all the parties are interested in the resolution of all the issues.

The third sentence quite logically makes these rules for permissive joinder of claims and of parties and claims applicable to crossclaims and third-party claims when the integral requirements for prosecuting such claims are met.

By contrast with this logically conceived and well-stated directive for permissive joinder of claims in both the single and multiple party situations, the code approach in former § 1-123 was poorly conceived and has led to logically absurd and unjustifiable results. Thus, for example, in a single party context under this statute, A may sue B in one action for breach of two entirely different contracts, since both causes fall within one of the listed categories of joinable claims, Lyon v. Atlantic C.L.R.R., 165 N.C. 143, 81 S.E. 1 (1914); but A may not in one action sue B, his employer, for (1) negligent injury, and (2) wrongful discharge from employment when A refuses to sign a release as to the negligence claim, because the two causes do not fall within any of the listed categories, not even the "same transaction" category. Pressley v. Great Atl. & Pac. Tea Co., 226 N.C. 518, 39 S.E.2d 382 (1946). In the multiple party context the "joker provision" that notwithstanding claims may be otherwise joinable, they may not be joined if all of them do not affect all parties, has given rise to quite unpredictable results from case to case. For example, in Branch Banking & Trust Co. v. Pierce, 195 N.C. 717, 143 S.E. 524 (1928), against the contention that all causes did not affect all parties, plaintiff was allowed to join several claims against various officers and directors of a corporation, alleging mismanagement notwithstanding the alleged several acts extended over a period of years during all of which it did not appear all the defendants were serving; while in Gattis v. Kilgo, 125 N.C. 133, 34 S.E. 246 (1899), A was not allowed to join a cause of action against B for slander with a cause against B and three others for subsequent publication of the same slander, because all causes did not affect all parties. Legitimate considerations of trial convenience were frequently not served by this Code directive. Thus, most typically, while it will prevent A and B from joining in a negligence case against C from injuries received by the same actionable negligence of C, the courts quite frequently consolidate for trial the separate nonjoinable claims of A and B for trial convenience.

Section (b) establishes a rule of permissive joinder, whose obvious import is to avoid the circuity of action necessitated by successive actions if such joinder were not expressly authorized by rule. The effect of this rule is to codify North Carolina case law in respect of the money claim, fraudulent conveyance joinder. Dawson Bank v. Harris, 84 N.C. 206 (1881) (establishing rule consistently followed since).

Comment on 1969 Amendment to Rule 18. — (a) Although Rule 18(a) was rewritten by the 1969 amendment, it appears that together with other rules affecting joinder of claims, especially Rules 13 and 14, a very liberal joinder of claims practice will be permissible. If there are multiple parties, then the parties' rules will have to be consulted.

Rule 19. Necessary joinder of parties.

(a) Necessary joinder. — Subject to the provisions of Rule 23, those who are united in interest must be joined as plaintiffs or defendants; but if the consent of anyone who should have been joined as plaintiff cannot be obtained he may be made a defendant, the reason therefor being stated in the complaint; provided, however, in all cases of joint contracts, a claim may be asserted against all or any number of the persons making such contracts.

(b) Joinder of parties not united in interest. — The court may determine any claim before it when it can do so without prejudice to the rights of any party or to the rights of others not before the court; but when a complete determination of such claim cannot be made without the presence of other parties, the court shall order such other parties summoned to appear in the action.

(c) Joinder of parties not united in interest — Names of omitted persons and reasons for nonjoinder to be pleaded. — In any pleading in which relief is asked, the pleader shall set forth the names, if known to him, of persons who ought to be parties if complete relief is to be accorded between those already parties, but who are not joined, and shall state why they are omitted. (1967, c. 954, s. 1.)

COMMENT

This rule deals with the problem of the minimum allowable size of a lawsuit, from the standpoint of parties required to be joined in order to proceed to trial. There is no compulsory joinder of causes of action, separately conceived, as noted in the General Comments to this bloc of joinder rules.

As framed, this rule is essentially a recodification of existing and former North Carolina statutes. Specifically, section (a), down to the proviso, is substantially a rewrite of the first sentence of former § 1-70. The introductory phrase, "subject to the provisions of Rule 23," makes the compulsory joinder directive subject to the class-action exception, which is now separately treated in Rule 23. The proviso is substantially a recodification of § 1-72 to carry forward the option to join or not join joint contract obligors plainly stated therein. Section (b) is substantially a tracking of the first sentence of former § 1-73, to express the general notion of "necessary party" based not on substantive jointness of claim but on the more general consideration of fairness and judicial economy of effort developed in the General Comments to this bloc of joinder rules. Adoption of this language involves rejection of the more sophisticated federal rules approach which posits the more refined categories of "indispensable" and "conditionally necessary parties." The code language is retained in the belief that roughly the same functional results are reached under its directive and the case law evolution under it of "proper" and "necessary" parties, and that no sufficiently good purpose would be served by introducing the new and more refined concepts and terminology to justify the risk of confusion from their introduction.

Section (c) is a direct counterpart of federal Rule 19(c). It is adopted because it forces explanation in the first instance of that which may be otherwise extracted by separate and time consuming later motion to require joinder. As such it should save wasted motion and time, if there is an adequate reason, such as unavailability of a party, to explain his nonjoinder in the first place.

CASE NOTES

I. In General.
II. Decisions under Prior Law.

I. IN GENERAL.

This Rule Adopts Prior Case Law Rather Than Federal Rule. — This rule has specifically adopted the prior case law of this jurisdiction concerning proper and necessary parties, rather than the federal rule classifications of "indispensable" and "conditionally necessary" parties. Swenson v. Thibaut, 39 N.C. App. 77, 250 S.E.2d 279, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 296 N.C. 740, 254 S.E.2d 181, 254 S.E.2d 182, 254 S.E.2d 183 (1978).

The heart of this rule lies in the proposition that all parties should be joined whose presence is necessary to a complete determination of the controversy. Thomas v. Thomas, 43 N.C. App. 638, 260 S.E.2d 163 (1979).

Sections (a) and (b) of this rule make no substantive change in the rules relating to joinder of parties as they formerly existed. Crosrol Carding Devs., Inc. v. Gunter & Cooke, Inc., 12 N.C. App. 448, 183 S.E.2d 834 (1971).

This rule makes no change in the categorizing of parties as necessary, proper and formal or in the underlying principles upon which the categories have been based. Crosrol Carding Devs., Inc. v. Gunter & Cooke, Inc., 12 N.C. App. 448, 183 S.E.2d 834 (1971).

Former § 1-73 Compared. — The enactment of this rule has not changed the essence of law, as found by the courts of this State in cases decided under the former § 1-73. Thomas v. Thomas, 43 N.C. App. 638, 260 S.E.2d 163 (1979).

A person is "united in interest" with another party when that person's presence is necessary in order for the court to determine a claim without prejudicing the rights of a party before it or the rights of others not before the court. Ludwig v. Hart, 40 N.C. App. 188, 252 S.E.2d 270, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 454, 256 S.E.2d 807 (1979).

Judgment Void for Nonjoinder of Party "United in Interest." — A judgment which is determinative of a claim arising in an action to which one who is "united in interest" with one of the parties has not been joined is void. Ludwig v. Hart, 40 N.C. App. 188, 252 S.E.2d 270, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 454, 256 S.E.2d 807 (1979).

Joinder Required Where Complete Determination Cannot Otherwise Be Had. — When a complete determination of the matter cannot be had without the presence of other parties, the court must cause them to be brought in. MacPherson v. City of Asheville, 283 N.C. 299, 196 S.E.2d 200 (1973); Booker v. Everhart, 294 N.C. 146, 240 S.E.2d 360 (1978).

Mandatory Duty of Court. — While the real party in interest provisions of § 1A-1, Rule 17 are for the parties' benefit and may be waived if no objection is raised, the necessary joinder rules of this rule place a mandatory duty on the court to protect its own jurisdiction to enter valid and binding judgments. J & B Slurry Seal Co. v. Mid-South Aviation, Inc., 88 N.C. App. 1, 362 S.E.2d 812 (1987).

While a party may waive its right to be sued by a real party in interest, this rule requires the court to join as a necessary party any persons "united in interest" and/or any persons without whom a complete determination of the claim cannot be made. J & B Slurry Seal Co. v. Mid-South Aviation, Inc., 88 N.C. App. 1, 362 S.E.2d 812 (1987).

A sound criterion for deciding whether particular persons must be joined in litigation between others appears in the definition of necessary parties as those persons who have rights which must be ascertained and settled before the rights of the parties to the suit can be determined. Wall v. Sneed, 13 N.C. App. 719, 187 S.E.2d 454 (1972).

Necessary parties must be joined in an action. Crosrol Carding Devs., Inc. v. Gunter & Cooke, Inc., 12 N.C. App. 448, 183 S.E.2d 834 (1971); Booker v. Everhart, 294 N.C. 146, 240 S.E.2d 360 (1978); Long v. City of Charlotte, 306 N.C. 187, 293 S.E.2d 101 (1982).

Effect of Failure to Join Necessary Parties. — A judgment which is determinative of a claim arising in an action in which necessary parties have not been joined is null and void. Rice v. Randolph, 96 N.C. App. 112, 384 S.E.2d 295 (1989).

Who Are Necessary Parties. — A necessary party is one who is so vitally interested in the controversy that a valid judgment cannot be rendered in the action completely and finally determining the controversy without his presence. Crosrol Carding Devs., Inc. v. Gunter & Cooke, Inc., 12 N.C. App. 448, 183 S.E.2d 834 (1971); Wall v. Sneed, 13 N.C. App. 719, 187 S.E.2d 454 (1972); Booker v. Everhart, 294 N.C. 146, 240 S.E.2d 360 (1978).

A person is a necessary party to an action if his interest is such that no decree can be rendered which will not affect him. Wall v. Sneed, 13 N.C. App. 719, 187 S.E.2d 454 (1972).

The term "necessary parties" embraces all persons who have or claim material interests in the subject matter of a controversy, which interests will be directly affected by an adjudication of the controversy. Wall v. Sneed, 13 N.C. App. 719, 187 S.E.2d 454 (1972); Rice v. Randolph, 96 N.C. App. 112, 384 S.E.2d 295 (1989).

A necessary party is one whose presence is required for a complete determination of the claim, and whose interest will be directly affected by the outcome of the litigation. Begley v. Employment Sec. Comm'n, 50 N.C. App. 432, 274 S.E.2d 370 (1981); Brown v. Miller, 63 N.C. App. 694, 306 S.E.2d 502 (1983), cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 310 N.C. 476, 312 S.E.2d 882 (1984).

An insurance company is only a necessary party plaintiff when it has compensated the insured for the insured's entire loss. Howard v. Smoky Mt. Enters., Inc., 76 N.C. App. 123, 332 S.E.2d 200 (1985).

When a third party holds legal title to property which is claimed to be marital property, that third party is a necessary party to the equitable distribution proceeding, with their participation limited to the issue of the ownership of that property. Upchurch v. Upchurch, 122 N.C. App. 172, 468 S.E.2d 61 (1996), review denied, 343 N.C. 517, 472 S.E.2d 26 (1996).

Who Are Proper Parties. — A proper party is one whose interest may be affected by a decree, but whose presence is not essential in order for the court to adjudicate the rights of others. Crosrol Carding Devs., Inc. v. Gunter & Cooke, Inc., 12 N.C. App. 448, 183 S.E.2d 834 (1971).

Proper Parties May Be Joined. — However, whether proper parties will be ordered joined rests within the sound discretion of the trial court. Crosrol Carding Devs., Inc. v. Gunter & Cooke, Inc., 12 N.C. App. 448, 183 S.E.2d 834 (1971); Booker v. Everhart, 294 N.C. 146, 240 S.E.2d 360 (1978); Long v. City of Charlotte, 306 N.C. 187, 293 S.E.2d 101 (1982).

Sisters, although united in interest with their brother in trust estate, were proper, not necessary, parties and did not have to be joined in his claim against decedent's estate for his alleged breach of his fiduciary duty as trustee. Pittman v. Barker, 117 N.C. App. 580, 452 S.E.2d 326, cert. denied, 340 N.C. 261, 456 S.E.2d 833 (1995).

Court Should Correct Defect of Parties by Own Motion. — In the absence of a proper motion by a competent person, a defect of the parties should be corrected by ruling of the court ex mero motu. Booker v. Everhart, 294 N.C. 146, 240 S.E.2d 360 (1978).

When the absence of a necessary party is disclosed, the trial court should refuse to deal with the merits of the action until the necessary party is brought into the action. Any such defect should be corrected by the trial court ex mero motu in the absence of a proper motion by a competent person. White v. Pate, 308 N.C. 759, 304 S.E.2d 199 (1983).

Since a judgment without necessary joinder is void, a trial court should, on its own motion, order a continuance to provide a reasonable time for necessary parties to be joined. J & B Slurry Seal Co. v. Mid-South Aviation, Inc., 88 N.C. App. 1, 362 S.E.2d 812 (1987).

Discretion of Court in Making Parties. — When not regulated by statute, the procedural processes which will best promote the administration of justice are left to the judicial discretion of the trial judge. He has plenary power with respect to those who ought to be made parties to facilitate the administration of justice. Crosrol Carding Devs., Inc. v. Gunter & Cooke, Inc., 12 N.C. App. 448, 183 S.E.2d 834 (1971).

Absence of the real party in interest did not constitute a "fatal defect" where the opposing party failed to show real prejudice in not having had the real party joined at the original trial. Carolina First Nat'l Bank v. Douglas Gallery of Homes, Ltd., 68 N.C. App. 246, 314 S.E.2d 801 (1984).

Absence of necessary parties does not merit a nonsuit. Instead, the court should order a continuance so as to provide a reasonable time for them to be brought in and plead. Booker v. Everhart, 294 N.C. 146, 240 S.E.2d 360 (1978).

Absence of necessary party does not merit dismissal. The absence of a necessary party under this rule does not merit dismissal of the action. City of Albemarle v. Security Bank and Trust Co., 106 N.C. App. 75, 415 S.E.2d 96 (1992).

But Proceedings Should Cease Until Necessary Parties Are Present. — Where a fatal defect of the parties is disclosed, the court should refuse to deal with the merits of the case until the absent parties are brought into the action. Booker v. Everhart, 294 N.C. 146, 240 S.E.2d 360 (1978).

Procedure upon Motion to Dismiss Under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(7). — When faced with a motion to dismiss under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(7) for failure to join a necessary party, the court will decide if the absent party should be joined as a party. If it decides in the affirmative, the court will order him brought into the action. However, if the absentee cannot be joined, the court must then determine, by balancing the guiding factors set forth in section (b) of this rule, whether to proceed without him or to dismiss the action. A dismissal under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(7) is not considered to be on the merits and is without prejudice. Crosrol Carding Devs., Inc. v. Gunter & Cooke, Inc., 12 N.C. App. 448, 183 S.E.2d 834 (1971).

Necessary Parties in Divorce Action. — There are but two necessary parties to an action for divorce: husband and wife. Thomas v. Thomas, 43 N.C. App. 638, 260 S.E.2d 163 (1979).

Children Are Not Proper Parties in Divorce Action. — Where there are children born to a marriage, it is neither proper nor necessary for them to be made parties to an action for divorce between their parents. Thomas v. Thomas, 43 N.C. App. 638, 260 S.E.2d 163 (1979).

Necessary Parties in Action to Set Aside Divorce Decree After Spouse's Death. — The only necessary parties in an action to set aside an absolute divorce decree after the husband's death are the surviving spouse and the personal representative of the deceased spouse. Thomas v. Thomas, 43 N.C. App. 638, 260 S.E.2d 163 (1979).

Husband of plaintiff in paternity suit was not a necessary party where a court had previously determined that he was not the father. Only the interests of the defendant, the alleged father, would be directly affected by the outcome of the litigation. Lombroia v. Peek, 107 N.C. App. 745, 421 S.E.2d 784 (1992).

In an action to recover for breach of trust by defendants as directors of a corporation, the corporation was not a necessary party plaintiff, since plaintiff, in claiming that a portion of proceeds from sale of stock had been earmarked to repay her for a loan to the corporation, claimed an injury peculiar or personal to herself and did not claim injury to the corporation. Snyder v. Freeman, 300 N.C. 204, 266 S.E.2d 593 (1980).

Suit by Beneficiary of Contract. — A party to a contract is ordinarily not a necessary party in a suit brought against the other contracting party by a beneficiary who claims the contract has been breached. Crosrol Carding Devs., Inc. v. Gunter & Cooke, Inc., 12 N.C. App. 448, 183 S.E.2d 834 (1971).

Trustee and Note Holder Necessary Parties in Inverse Condemnation Action. — In an inverse condemnation action, alleged diminution in market value of the property made trustee and holder of the note secured by the deed of trust on that property persons united in interest with the owners, whose presence was necessary for a determination of the claim without prejudice to their rights. Long v. City of Charlotte, 306 N.C. 187, 293 S.E.2d 101 (1982).

Necessary Parties in Adjacent Landowners' Action. — In a private nuisance action alleging that the separate development of the lands owned by adjacent landowners together caused flooding damages, this claim could not be fully adjudicated without the addition of one of these landowners; thus, it was a necessary party. Bjornsson v. Mize, 75 N.C. App. 289, 330 S.E.2d 520, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 537, 335 S.E.2d 13 (1985).

A dispute as to the extinguishment of a subdivision easement by abandonment or adverse possession could not be resolved without the joinder of the grantor or his heirs, who retained fee title to the soil, and the record owners of lots in the subdivision, who had user rights in the easement. Rice v. Randolph, 96 N.C. App. 112, 384 S.E.2d 295 (1989).

The note above has been set out to correct a typographical error in the main pamphlet.

Insurer as Necessary Party. — Where whether or not insurer's legal title to plaintiff's claims was partial or complete, insurer clearly acquired some enforceable legal interest in the subject matter of the action by virtue of assignment provided by subrogation receipt, given insurer's interest in all of plaintiff's claims, a determination of such claims would necessarily prejudice insurer's interests in them, and insurer was therefore a necessary party under this rule. J & B Slurry Seal Co. v. Mid-South Aviation, Inc., 88 N.C. App. 1, 362 S.E.2d 812 (1987).

Insured as Necessary Party Where Certain Claims Not Reimbursed by Insurer. — In action for breach of warranty against encumbrances arising out of the mislocation of a septic tank, initially brought by grantee of residential property who was insured under a title insurance policy issued by company, in which insured-grantee sought funds which he forfeited when his loan could not be refinanced, the extra interest paid and to be paid on his current loan, incident to breach, as well as the expense to relocate the septic tank on his property, substitution of insurance company for insured-grantee as party-plaintiff was error necessitating remand to the trial court for joinder of necessary parties, where insured-grantee had been reimbursed by company only for expenses incurred to relocate the septic tank, as since the record did not reveal that insured-grantee released or otherwise dismissed his claims for forfeited funds and extra interest, insured-grantee was a necessary party to the action. Commonwealth Land Title Ins. Co. v. Stephenson, 97 N.C. App. 123, 387 S.E.2d 77 (1990), aff'd, 101 N.C. 379, 399 S.E.2d 380 (1990).

Since plaintiff's claim for loss of consortium derived from his wife's cause of action for her personal injuries, plaintiff was united in interest with his spouse and thus a necessary party to her action. The court, therefore, erred in denying plaintiff's motion to join his loss of consortium claim with his wife's action and in dismissing his claim for loss of consortium on the ground that it was not joined with his wife's action. Mrosla v. Feldman, 90 N.C. App. 261, 368 S.E.2d 39 (1988).

Lessor, Rather Than Assignee of Lease, Held to Be Real Party in Interest in Action Against Lessees. — Language of an assignment of a lease clearly established that lessor assigned only the right to rent payments, and plaintiff retained all other rights under the lease, including right to enforce lessees' tax obligation under lease; thus, the lessor was a real party in interest in action against lessees who defaulted under lease. Martin v. Ray Lackey Enters., Inc., 100 N.C. App. 349, 396 S.E.2d 327 (1990).

Since assignee of lease received no right in the assignment to collect taxes from lessees, assignee's presence in the case brought by assignor/lessor against lessee for failure to pay taxes under lease was not necessary for a complete determination, and any judgment entered could not prejudice either assignees or the lessees. Martin v. Ray Lackey Enters., Inc., 100 N.C. App. 349, 396 S.E.2d 327 (1990).

II. DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW.

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former §§ 1-70, 1-73 and 1-123.

Intent of Former § 1-73. — Former § 1-73 contemplated that all persons necessary to a complete determination of the controversy, the matter in litigation, and affected by the same in some way, as between the original parties to the action, could in some instances be made parties plaintiff or defendant and in others had to be made parties. But it did not imply that any person who might have a cause of action against the plaintiff alone, or a cause of action against the defendant alone, unaffected by the cause of action as between the plaintiff and defendant, could or had to be made a party. It did not contemplate the determination of two separate and distinct causes of action, as between the plaintiff and a third party, or the defendant and a third party, in the same action. It was only when, as between the original parties litigant, other parties were material or interested, that it was proper to make them parties. McDonald v. Morris, 89 N.C. 99 (1883); Moore v. Massengill, 227 N.C. 244, 41 S.E.2d 655 (1947).

Who Are Necessary Parties. — Necessary or indispensable parties are those whose interests are such that no decree can be rendered which will not affect them, and therefore the court cannot proceed until they are brought in. Pickelsimer v. Pickelsimer, 255 N.C. 408, 121 S.E.2d 586 (1961).

A person is a necessary party to an action when he is so vitally interested in the controversy involved in the action that a valid judgment cannot be rendered in the action completely and finally determining the controversy without his presence as a party. Garrett v. Rose, 236 N.C. 299, 72 S.E.2d 843 (1952); Manning v. Hart, 255 N.C. 368, 121 S.E.2d 721 (1961); Strickland v. Hughes, 273 N.C. 481, 160 S.E.2d 313 (1968); Maryland Cas. Co. v. Hall, 2 N.C. App. 198, 162 S.E.2d 691 (1968).

Persons in interest are necessary parties to a final adjudication. Meadows v. Marsh, 123 N.C. 189, 31 S.E. 476 (1898).

As to persons held necessary or unnecessary parties, see Browning v. Pratt, 17 N.C. 44 (1831); Harris v. Bryant, 83 N.C. 568 (1880); Peacock v. Harris, 85 N.C. 146 (1881); Dawkins v. Dawkins, 93 N.C. 283 (1885).

Joinder of Necessary Parties Mandatory. — Provision of former § 1-73 that the court must cause necessary parties to be brought in was mandatory, and contemplated only the making of necessary parties. Simon v. Raleigh City Bd. of Educ., 258 N.C. 381, 128 S.E.2d 785 (1963).

Former § 1-73 made it mandatory when a complete determination of the controversy could not be made without the presence of other parties for these others to be made parties to the action. They were necessary parties. Overton v. Tarkington, 249 N.C. 340, 106 S.E.2d 717 (1959); Maryland Cas. Co. v. Hall, 2 N.C. App. 198, 162 S.E.2d 691 (1968).

When Additional Parties Must Be Brought In. — When a complete determination of the matter cannot be had without the presence of other parties, the court must cause them to be brought in. W.F. Kornegay & Co. v. Farmers & Merchants' Steamboat Co., 107 N.C. 115, 12 S.E. 123 (1890); Maxwell v. Barringer, 110 N.C. 76, 14 S.E. 516 (1892); Parton v. Allison, 111 N.C. 429, 16 S.E. 415 (1892); Burnett v. Lyman, 141 N.C. 500, 54 S.E. 412 (1906), appeal dismissed, 146 N.C. 597, 59 S.E. 877 (1907); McKeel v. Holloman, 163 N.C. 132, 79 S.E. 445 (1913); Barbee v. Cannady, 191 N.C. 529, 132 S.E. 572 (1926); Fry v. Pomona Mills, 206 N.C. 768, 175 S.E. 156 (1934).

When a complete determination of a controversy cannot be made without the presence of a party, the court must cause such party to be brought in, because such party is a necessary party and has an absolute right to intervene in a pending action. Strickland v. Hughes, 273 N.C. 481, 160 S.E.2d 313 (1968).

It is the duty of the court to bring in all parties necessary to a complete determination of the controversy. State ex rel. Jones v. Griggs, 219 N.C. 700, 14 S.E.2d 836 (1941).

Necessity of Bringing in Additional Parties Must Clearly Appear. — An order to bring additional parties into an action will not be granted until the necessity for making them parties clearly appears. Lee v. Eure, 92 N.C. 283 (1885).

Consent of the Parties. — Unless by consent of the parties, only such new parties may regularly be admitted, by amendment, to the action as are necessary to its proper determination; but where defendants do not object to such amendment introducing new plaintiffs, their assent is to be taken as implied. Richards v. Smith, 98 N.C. 509, 4 S.E. 625 (1887).

Requisite Interest of New Party. — To entitle one to the benefits of provision allowing new parties to be brought in, such additional party must have a legal interest in the subject matter of the litigation, and the interest of a new party must be of such direct and immediate character that he will either gain or lose by the direct operation and effect of the judgment. Griffin & Vose, Inc. v. Non-Metallic Minerals Corp., 225 N.C. 434, 35 S.E.2d 247 (1945).

Discretionary Power of Court. — As a general rule the trial court has the discretionary power to make new parties, especially when necessary in order that there may be a full and final determination and adjudication of all matters involved in controversy. Service Fire Ins. Co. v. Horton Motor Lines, 225 N.C. 588, 35 S.E.2d 879 (1945).

The fact that plaintiff alone, without joinder of the owner, could not maintain his action did not limit the discretionary power of the judge. Service Fire Ins. Co. v. Horton Motor Lines, 225 N.C. 588, 35 S.E.2d 879 (1945).

As to review of decision, see Merrill v. Merrill, 92 N.C. 657 (1885).

Person Refusing to Join as Plaintiff May Be Made Defendant. Hardy v. Miles, 91 N.C. 131 (1884); Wilson v. Pearson, 102 N.C. 290, 9 S.E. 707 (1889); Elliott v. Brady, 172 N.C. 828, 90 S.E. 951 (1916).

But Must Be Served with Summons. Plemmons v. Southern Imp. Co., 108 N.C. 614, 13 S.E. 188 (1891).

A judgment that determines points of law adverse to a person is not sufficient grounds for making him defendant. Clark v. W.R. Bonsal & Co., 157 N.C. 270, 72 S.E. 954 (1911).

The term "proper party" means a party who has an interest in the controversy or subject matter which is separable from the interest of the other parties before the court, so that it may, but will not necessarily, be affected by a decree or judgment which does complete justice between the other parties. Strickland v. Hughes, 273 N.C. 481, 160 S.E.2d 313 (1968).

Defect of Parties. — A defect of parties occurs when there has been a failure to join either a plaintiff or a defendant whose presence in the suit is necessary to give the court jurisdiction and authority to decide the controversy. When such a defect appears from the complaint itself, it is a ground for demurrer and a fatal defect unless the necessary party is brought in. Miller v. Jones, 268 N.C. 568, 151 S.E.2d 23 (1966).

Continuance for Bringing in Necessary Parties. — If other parties are necessary to a final determination of the cause, the court should order a continuance to provide a reasonable time for them to be brought in and to plead. Plemmons v. Cutshall, 230 N.C. 595, 55 S.E.2d 74 (1949).

Right of Tenant in Common to Sue Alone. — One tenant in common may sue without joining his cotenants for the recovery of possession of common property. Thames v. Jones, 97 N.C. 121, 1 S.E. 692 (1887). See also, Wilson v. Arentz, 70 N.C. 670 (1874).

Unconnected Parties Defendant with Common Interest. — Several persons, although unconnected with each other, may be made defendants if they have a common interest centering in the point in issue in the cause. Virginia-Carolina Chem. Co. v. Floyd, 158 N.C. 455, 74 S.E. 465 (1912).

Party Unheard of for Years. — Where a person concerned in interest is stated in the bill to have moved away and to have not been heard of for many years, so that he cannot be served with process, that is a good reason as between third parties for not making him a party; and the court will proceed to a hearing notwithstanding. Ingram v. Lanier, 2 N.C. 221 (1795).

Insolvency of Defendant. — Mere insolvency of a defendant cannot alone determine the right of a plaintiff to join him with others in a tort action if he is liable, since the test is in the validity of the cause of action and the good faith of the plaintiff in making the joinder, and insolvency does not destroy the remedy, but merely affects the prospects of collection. Hough v. Southern Ry., 144 N.C. 692, 57 S.E. 469 (1907).

Where there was an allegation of mutual mistake of the common grantor of plaintiff and defendant, and of plaintiff and defendant as grantees in deeds simultaneously executed and delivered to them by said grantor, it was held proper for the court to make the grantor a party defendant. Smith v. Johnson, 209 N.C. 729, 184 S.E. 486 (1936).

In action by purchaser against real estate brokers to recover earnest money paid, wherein the seller was a necessary party to a complete determination of the controversy, denial of motion for his joinder as additional party defendant was held reversible error. Lampros v. Chipley, 228 N.C. 236, 45 S.E.2d 126 (1947).

Real Owners as Parties in Action Between Lessor and Lessee. — Where lessors sued lessees for rent, and the latter showed, as a counterclaim, that the lessors had no right to make the lease, and that the real owners thereof had brought suit against one of the lessees, and would recover damages for its use during such lease, the persons claiming as real owners should have been made parties to the action. McKesson v. Mendenhall, 64 N.C. 286 (1870).

Action to Set Aside Deed to Purchaser of Tax Sale Certificate. — In an action to set aside a deed to a purchaser at a foreclosure of a tax sale certificate, the purchaser at the sale, the owners of the property and all persons having any interest in the property should be made parties for a complete determination of the controversy. County of Buncombe v. Penland, 206 N.C. 299, 173 S.E. 609 (1934).

Where plaintiff claims under a voluntary conveyance made by cestui que trust, he cannot, in any form of action, obtain legal title and possession until the trustee is made a party. Matthews v. McPherson, 65 N.C. 189 (1871).

Several parties may have a cause of action which arises out of the same motor vehicle collision, but that does not mean necessarily that all of them are required to litigate their respective rights or causes of action in one and the same action. Manning v. Hart, 255 N.C. 368, 121 S.E.2d 721 (1961); Maryland Cas. Co. v. Hall, 2 N.C. App. 198, 162 S.E.2d 691 (1968).

Claim for unpaid wages due an employee can be joined in one action with similar claims assigned to him, and if the claims are assigned to joint assignees, all assignees must be parties and recover in their joint right. Morton v. Thornton, 257 N.C. 259, 125 S.E.2d 464 (1962).

Personal Representatives as Necessary Parties in Ejectment Action. — Where in an action of ejectment the controversy involved was whether the plaintiff owned the land in fee simple absolute, or whether the defendant owned the land in fee simple, subject to a charge payable in equal shares to the plaintiff and personal representatives of six decedents, the personal representatives of these six decedents were so vitally interested in this controversy that a valid judgment could not be rendered in the action completely and finally determining the controversy without their presence as parties. This being true, they were necessary parties to the action. Garrett v. Rose, 236 N.C. 299, 72 S.E.2d 843 (1952).

Trustee as Necessary Party in Foreclosure Action. — In an action for foreclosure, the trustee in the deed of trust is a necessary and indispensable party. Watson v. Carr, 4 N.C. App. 287, 166 S.E.2d 503 (1969).

Where a note secured by a deed of trust is payable to joint payees, they must join as parties in an action to foreclose the deed of trust, and when one of them refuses to join as a plaintiff, such payee is properly joined as a defendant. Underwood v. Otwell, 269 N.C. 571, 153 S.E.2d 40 (1967).

Suit by Joint Holders of Bill or Note. — Where a bill or note is made payable to several persons, or is endorsed or assigned to several, they are joint holders and must sue jointly as such. Underwood v. Otwell, 269 N.C. 571, 153 S.E.2d 40 (1967).

Where owner sued contractor for breach of contract and contractor sought to have subcontractor joined as a party defendant, former § 1-73, permitting joint tortfeasors to be brought in for enforcing contribution, was inapplicable. Gaither Corp. v. Skinner, 238 N.C. 254, 77 S.E.2d 659 (1953).

If, prior to institution of plaintiff's action, defendant could have sued either the plaintiff, the other party, or both, there is no reason why the defendant would be required to join the other party as a codefendant to its cause of action on a counterclaim against plaintiff. Bullard v. Berry Coal & Oil Co., 254 N.C. 756, 119 S.E.2d 910 (1961).

Rule 20. Permissive joinder of parties.

(a) Permissive joinder. — All persons may join in one action as plaintiffs if they assert any right to relief jointly, severally, or in the alternative in respect of or arising out of the same transaction, occurrence, or series of transactions or occurrences and if any question of law or fact common to all parties will arise in the action. All persons may be joined in one action as defendants if there is asserted against them jointly, severally, or in the alternative, any right to relief in respect of or arising out of the same transaction, occurrence, or series of transactions or occurrences and if any question of law or fact common to all parties will arise in the action. A plaintiff or defendant need not be interested in obtaining or defending against all the relief demanded. Judgment may be given for one or more of the plaintiffs according to their respective rights to relief, and against one or more defendants according to their respective liabilities.

(b) Separate trial. — The court shall make such orders as will prevent a party from being embarrassed, delayed, or put to expense by the inclusion of a party against whom he asserts no claim and who asserts no claim against him, and shall order separate trials or make other orders to prevent delay or prejudice. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1973, c. 75.)

COMMENT

This is an exact counterpart of federal Rule 20, and was proposed because it was felt, as developed in the General Comment to this bloc of rules, that the federal approach to permissive joinder is a much more serviceable one than was the code approach.

As pointed out in that Comment, the only limitations in respect of joinder in the federal approach are those related literally to party joinder. These limitations contemplate both single claim actions and multiple claim actions. In the multiple party-multiple claim action they are related by reference as limitations on claim joinder, as indicated in the Comment to Rule 18.

The rule is designed generally to express the notion that the limiting factors which control maximum lawsuit size in either single claim or multiple claim (by referring party joinder limitations to the claim joinder rule) litigation are (1) that the right to relief asserted by or against each party joined in the action should arise generally out of the same general aggregation of historical facts, and (2) furthermore, that in respect of all parties joined there must be involved for necessary determination in the lawsuit as structured a common question of law or fact. Beyond these limitations designed to keep the issues within bounds of fairness to parties and orderliness of handling, there is no requirement that every party must be affected by, or interested in, all the relief sought in the total action. And it is made plain, in furtherance of this notion, that the judgment entered in lawsuits involving multiple similarly aligned parties may be conformed to the possibility that not all parties are interested in all the relief to be given.

Section (b) provides the final safeguard against dangerous oversize and complexity through joinder by laying down a specific mandate for severance or such other orders as will protect parties in multiple party cases from unfairness resulting from their lack of interest or involvement in every facet of the case as permitted to be structured by the joinder rules.

II. PERMISSIVE JOINDER.

Purpose of Alternative Joinder Provisions. — The alternative joinder provisions of this rule were drafted for the express purpose of allowing a plaintiff who is faced with uncertainty as to the cause of her injuries to present her alternative theories to a jury, which must then decide from the evidence whether liability exists and if so which of the two or more defendants joined is liable to the plaintiff. Woods v. Smith, 297 N.C. 363, 255 S.E.2d 174 (1979).

Alternative claims may be joined under section (a) of this rule if two tests are met. First, each claim must arise out of the same transaction, the same occurrence, or a series of either. The second test is that each claim must contain a question of law or fact, which will arise, common to all parties. Aetna Ins. Co. v. Carroll's Transf., Inc., 14 N.C. App. 481, 188 S.E.2d 612 (1972).

The practical occasion for alternative joinder is that created by uncertainty as to which of several parties is entitled to recover or is liable. Aetna Ins. Co. v. Carroll's Transf., Inc., 14 N.C. App. 481, 188 S.E.2d 612 (1972).

When Need for Joinder of Defendants in Alternative Arises. — The need for joinder of defendants in the alternative most often arises when the substance of plaintiff's claim indicates that he is entitled to relief from someone, but he does not know which of two or more defendants is liable under the circumstances set forth in the complaint. Woods v. Smith, 297 N.C. 363, 255 S.E.2d 174 (1979).

Alternative Fact Allegations Not Admissions. — Alternative fact allegations made in good faith and based on genuine doubt are not admissions against interest so as to be admissible in evidence against the pleader. The pleader states the facts in the alternative because he is uncertain as to the true facts, and he is not "admitting" anything other than his uncertainty. Woods v. Smith, 297 N.C. 363, 255 S.E.2d 174 (1979).

Right to Present Evidence and Submit Alternative Claims to Jury. — A plaintiff who pleads claims in the alternative against two or more defendants when she is uncertain as to the true facts but believes she is entitled to recover from at least one of the defendants is entitled to present evidence at trial to support both claims, and if she does, to submit both claims to the jury for decision. Woods v. Smith, 297 N.C. 363, 255 S.E.2d 174 (1979).

As to effect of one defendant's admission where negligence of other defendant is imputed to plaintiff, see Woods v. Smith, 297 N.C. 363, 255 S.E.2d 174 (1979).

Joining Insurance Company Which Has Partially Paid Loss. — It is not error to join, as a proper party plaintiff to the action, an insurance company which has partially paid the insured for the insured's loss, but the insurance company's presence in the action is not required. Howard v. Smoky Mt. Enters., Inc., 76 N.C. App. 123, 332 S.E.2d 200 (1985).

Slander. — In general, slander is an individual tort, and two or more persons each uttering slander against the same individual may not be held jointly liable in the absence of a conspiracy between or among them. However, although defendants, who were not alleged to have conspired, could not be held jointly liable, plaintiff was not precluded from pursuing his claims against both defendants in the same civil action. Shuping v. Barber, 89 N.C. App. 242, 365 S.E.2d 712 (1988).

III. SEPARATE TRIALS.

Power of Judge to Order Separate Trials. — Section (b) of this rule authorizes the judge to order separate trials or make other orders to prevent a party from being embarrassed, delayed, or put to expense by the joinder of a party. This may be done on motion of either party, and the decision whether to do so rests in the discretion of the trial judge. Aetna Ins. Co. v. Carroll's Transf., Inc., 14 N.C. App. 481, 188 S.E.2d 612 (1972).

Although the basic philosophy of the party joinder provisions is to allow relatively unrestricted initial joinder, there are provisions in section (b) of this rule and in § 1A-1, Rule 42(b) for the trial judge to sever and order separate trials. Aetna Ins. Co. v. Carroll's Transf., Inc., 14 N.C. App. 481, 188 S.E.2d 612 (1972); Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Smith, 44 N.C. App. 685, 262 S.E.2d 646, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 379, 267 S.E.2d 685 (1980), overruled on other grounds, 302 N.C. 539, 276 S.E.2d 397 (1981).

Section 1A-1, Rule 42(b) Confers Same Power Contemplated by Section (b). — Section 1A-1, Rule 42(b), which gives to the trial judge general power to sever, confers the same power contemplated by section (b) of this rule. Aetna Ins. Co. v. Carroll's Transf., Inc., 14 N.C. App. 481, 188 S.E.2d 612 (1972).

Whether or not there should be severance rests in the sound discretion of the trial judge. Aetna Ins. Co. v. Carroll's Transf., Inc., 14 N.C. App. 481, 188 S.E.2d 612 (1972).

IV. DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW.

Basic Joinder Concept. — The code of civil procedure was bottomed on the basic concept that a court ought to bring before it as parties in a particular action all persons who might have interests either by way of rights or by way of liabilities in the subject matter of the action, so that a single judgment might be rendered effectually determining all such rights and liabilities for the protection of all concerned. Burgess v. Trevathan, 236 N.C. 157, 72 S.E.2d 231 (1952).

Object of former § 1-68 was to permit all persons who came within its terms to unite as parties plaintiff, so that a single judgment might be rendered completely determining the controversy for the protection of all concerned. Hall v. DeWeld Mica Corp., 244 N.C. 182, 93 S.E.2d 56 (1956); Whitehead v. Margel, 220 F. Supp. 933 (W.D.N.C. 1963).

Plaintiffs' Interests Need Not Be Identical. — The fact that the interests of plaintiffs are legally severable, or not common or identical, is no bar to their joinder where they have a common interest in the subject of the action and the relief sought. Wilson v. Horton Motor Lines, 207 N.C. 263, 176 S.E. 750 (1934); Peed v. Burleson's, Inc., 242 N.C. 628, 89 S.E.2d 256 (1955).

But Their Interests Must Be Consistent. — While it is not necessary that all parties plaintiff have the identity of interest required by the common law, it is necessary that their interests be consistent. Burton v. City of Reidsville, 240 N.C. 577, 83 S.E.2d 651 (1954).

Two or more plaintiffs representing opposing interests with reference to the main purpose of the action may not be joined. Burton v. City of Reidsville, 240 N.C. 577, 83 S.E.2d 651 (1954).

Joinder of Proper Parties Within Discretion of Court. — Proper parties are those whose interest might be affected by a decree, but the court can proceed to adjudicate the rights of others without necessarily affecting them, and whether they shall be brought in or not is within the discretion of the court. Pickelsimer v. Pickelsimer, 255 N.C. 408, 121 S.E.2d 586 (1961).

Joinder of Parties in Alternative. — Where defendant is liable to one or two parties in the alternative, so that if he is liable to one he is not liable to the other, and defendant is not sure to which of the parties liability obtains, he is entitled to join both as plaintiffs. American Air Filter Co. v. Robb, 267 N.C. 583, 148 S.E.2d 580 (1966).

Joinder of defendants in the alternative is permitted where there is but one cause of action. For instance, if A wishes to sue B, the driver of a motor vehicle, and his employer for B's negligence, but is uncertain whether C or D was the principal, he may join them both as defendants in the alternative. Conger v. Travelers Ins. Co., 260 N.C. 112, 131 S.E.2d 889 (1963).

Where the wrongful acts of two or more persons concur in producing a single injury, with or without concert between them, they may be treated as joint tort-feasors and, as a rule, sued separately or together at the election of plaintiffs. Chumley v. Great Atl. & Pac. Tea Co., 191 F. Supp. 254 (M.D.N.C. 1961), citing Raulf v. Elizabeth City Light & Power Co., 176 N.C. 691, 97 S.E. 236 (1918).

In an action by a partner for the dissolution of the partnership and for proper application of the partnership assets, plaintiff partner may join as a defendant the transferee of the defendant partner, upon allegation that the transfer was wrongful, in order to have the entire controversy settled in one action, and plaintiff is not compelled first to bring an action to establish the fact of the existence of the partnership and then another action for an accounting. Bright v. Williams, 245 N.C. 648, 97 S.E.2d 247 (1957).

Attack on Note Payable to Bearer. — Where trustee in deed of trust which purported to secure payment of note payable to bearer was a party to action brought by plaintiff to set aside deed of trust on the grounds that the note was false and fictitious and participated actively in its defense, the holder of the alleged note, who was unknown to plaintiff, could not be deemed a necessary party to the action. Virginia-Carolina Laundry Supply Corp. v. Scott, 267 N.C. 145, 148 S.E.2d 1 (1966).

As to joinder of insured in insurer's action to enforce subrogation, see Burgess v. Trevathan, 236 N.C. 157, 72 S.E.2d 231 (1952), commented on in 31 N.C.L. Rev. 224 (1953).

Insurance company which pays insured for part of the loss is a proper party to an action brought by the insured against a tort-feasor to recover the total amount of the loss, and may be brought into the action at the insistance of the insured or the tort-feasor, either in the capacity of an additional plaintiff or in the capacity of an additional defendant. Commented on in 31 N.C.L. Rev. 224 (1953). See also Burgess v. Trevathan, 236 N.C. 157, 72 S.E.2d 231 (1952); Swenson v. Thibaut, 39 N.C. App. 77, 250 S.E.2d 279 (1978).

Husband and Wife as Plaintiffs. — Where plaintiffs, husband and wife, alleged that they owned home in which they lived and that defendant's mining operations resulted in damage to it, the allegation that they owned their home was sufficient to show that both had an interest in the property, and therefore both were properly joined as plaintiffs. Hall v. DeWeld Mica Corp., 244 N.C. 182, 93 S.E.2d 56 (1956).

Suit of Husbands on Trade Acceptances and Wives as Guarantors. — There was no misjoinder of parties and causes of action where the plaintiff in the same proceeding sued husbands on trade acceptances and sued their wives on guaranties executed to secure such trade acceptances. Arcady Farms Milling Co. v. Wallace, 242 N.C. 686, 89 S.E.2d 413 (1955).

Joinder of Husband and Wife in Action for Negligent Use of Property Held as Tenants by Entirety. — A husband and wife, holding property as tenants by the entirety, may properly be named defendants and held jointly liable for injuries resulting from the negligent use of the property, unless there is evidence shown at the trial that the husband exercised such exclusive control of the property as to exonerate the wife from liability. Whitehead v. Margel, 220 F. Supp. 933 (W.D.N.C. 1963).

Rule 21. Procedure upon misjoinder and nonjoinder.

Neither misjoinder of parties nor misjoinder of parties and claims is ground for dismissal of an action; but on such terms as are just parties may be dropped or added by order of the court on motion of any party or on its own initiative at any stage of the action. Any claim against a party may be severed and proceeded with separately. (1967, c. 954, s. 1.)

COMMENT

This is an exact counterpart to federal Rule 21, with the addition of the phrase "nor misjoinder of parties and claims" appearing in the first sentence. The general purpose of the rule is clearly to solidify the basic notion under the federal approach that faulty structuring of a case in terms of joinder of improper parties should not give rise to any drastic interruption of its normal progress to trial. Rather, the safeguard of restructuring without interruption, through severance or dropping of parties, without dismissal, is provided as an adequate protection against the evils of proceeding to trial in an overly-complex structure. The phrase referring to misjoinder of parties and causes, while probably not strictly necessary from the logical standpoint, is inserted because of the developed North Carolina case law rule for dismissal rather than severance where there is "misjoinder of both parties and causes." See Brandis, Permissive Joinder of Parties and Causes in North Carolina, 25 N.C.L. Rev. 1, pp. 49-53 (1946).

CASE NOTES

Rule Is Counterpart of Federal Rule 21. — This rule is an exact counterpart of federal Rule 21, except for the addition of the phrase "nor misjoinder of parties and claims," which was inserted because of the prior procedure upon "dual misjoinder"; under the prior procedure there was a misjoinder of parties and causes if any plaintiff or defendant, though interested in one or more tracts, was not interested in all tracts. Presnell v. Trollinger Inv. Co., 20 N.C. App. 722, 202 S.E.2d 493 (1974).

One of the purposes of this rule is to ensure that parties properly before the court may litigate their differences without being penalized by delay due to those who are not properly before the court. Presnell v. Trollinger Inv. Co., 20 N.C. App. 722, 202 S.E.2d 493 (1974).

Existing parties to a lawsuit are entitled to notice of a motion to bring in additional parties. Pask v. Corbitt, 28 N.C. App. 100, 220 S.E.2d 378 (1975).

Order Void for Lack of Notice Void for All Purposes. — If an order allowing amendment and adding a party defendant is void for lack of notice to the original defendant, it is void for all purposes. Pask v. Corbitt, 28 N.C. App. 100, 220 S.E.2d 378 (1975).

Misjoinder of parties is not ground for dismissal of the action, but the court, on motion of any party or on its own initiative, may order that a misjoined party be dropped. W & H Graphics, Inc. v. Hamby, 48 N.C. App. 82, 268 S.E.2d 567 (1980).

Directed Verdict Not Required for Nonjoinder of Remaindermen in Action by Life Tenant. — Plaintiff, as holder of life estate, had a right to maintain an action to protect her interests in the property, and nonjoinder of the remaindermen did not entitle defendants to a directed verdict, but at most entitled them to have the remaindermen joined as parties upon their motion to do so. Schell v. Rice, 37 N.C. App. 377, 246 S.E.2d 61, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 648, 248 S.E.2d 253 (1978).

Summary judgment, like dismissal of the action, is not appropriate in cases of misjoinder of parties and claims. Shuping v. Barber, 89 N.C. App. 242, 365 S.E.2d 712 (1988).

Since plaintiff's claim for loss of consortium derived from his wife's cause of action for her personal injuries, plaintiff was united in interest with his spouse and thus a necessary party to her action. The court, therefore, erred in denying plaintiff's motion to join his loss of consortium claim with his wife's action and in dismissing his claim for loss of consortium on the ground that it was not joined with his wife's action. Mrosla v. Feldman, 90 N.C. App. 261, 368 S.E.2d 39 (1988).

Applied in Koob v. Koob, 16 N.C. App. 326, 192 S.E.2d 40 (1972); Swenson v. Thibaut, 39 N.C. App. 77, 250 S.E.2d 279 (1978); Coffey v. Coffey, 94 N.C. App. 717, 381 S.E.2d 467 (1989).

Rule 22. Interpleader.

(a) Persons having claims against the plaintiff may be joined as defendants and required to interplead when their claims expose or may expose the plaintiff to double or multiple liability. It is not ground for objection to the joinder that the claims of the several claimants or the titles on which their claims depend do not have a common origin or are not identical but are adverse to and independent of one another, or that the plaintiff avers that he is not liable in whole or in part to any or all of the claimants. A defendant exposed to similar liability may obtain such interpleader by way of crossclaim or counterclaim. The provisions of this rule supplement and do not in any way limit the joinder of parties permitted in Rule 20.

(b) Where funds are subject to competing claims by parties to the action, the court may order the party in possession of the funds either to deposit the funds in an interest bearing account in a bank, savings and loan, or trust company licensed to do business in this State or to deposit the funds with the clerk. If the funds are deposited in a bank, savings and loan, or trust company, the court shall specify the type of interest bearing account to be used. Funds deposited with the clerk shall be invested or deposited as provided in G.S. 7A-112 and G.S. 7A-112.1. Upon determination of the action, the judgment shall provide for disbursement of the principal and interest earned on the funds while so deposited. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1989, c. 668, s. 1.)

COMMENT

This rule makes clear that a liberalized use of interpleader is to be permitted. In particular, Pomeroy's four limitations on the use of interpleader are specifically repudiated. While the North Carolina court has not yet turned its back on these limitations, it has indicated some impatience with them. See Simon v. Raleigh City Bd. of Educ., 258 N.C. 381, 128 S.E.2d 785 (1963).

Rule 23. Class actions.

(a) Representation. — If persons constituting a class are so numerous as to make it impracticable to bring them all before the court, such of them, one or more, as will fairly insure the adequate representation of all may, on behalf of all, sue or be sued.

(b) Secondary action by shareholders. — In an action brought to enforce a secondary right on the part of one or more shareholders or members of a corporation or an unincorporated association because the corporation or association refuses to enforce rights which may properly be asserted by it, the complaint shall be verified by oath.

(c) Dismissal or compromise. — A class action shall not be dismissed or compromised without the approval of the judge. In an action under this rule, notice of a proposed dismissal or compromise shall be given to all members of the class in such manner as the judge directs. (1967, c. 954, s. 1.)

COMMENT

Section (a). — In respect to class actions, the Commission adheres rather closely to the statutory provisions in North Carolina. See former § 1-70. It will be seen that three requirements are present. First, there must be a "class." Second, there must be such numerosity as to make impracticable the joinder of all members of the class. Third, there must be an assurance of adequacy of representation. This last requirement, while not contained in the statute, is surely necessary if the class action is to have any binding effect on absentees. See Hansberry v. Lee, 311 U.S. 32, 61 S. Ct. 115, 85 L. Ed. 22, 132 A.L.R. 741 (1940).

Section (b). — The Commission has not followed the federal rule in this section in its requirements that a shareholder must allege that he was a shareholder at the time of the transaction of which he complains. It was the Commission's thought that such a requirement may well deprive shareholders of any remedy when the corporation has suffered grievous injury. The Commission has also chosen not to follow the federal rule in its requirement of allegations in respect to the shareholder's efforts to persuade the managing directors to take remedial action. The Commission does not, however, take the positive approach of saying such allegations are unnecessary. Rule 8 governing what a complaint must contain is a sufficient guide in this matter.

Section (c). — This section seems obviously desirable in the protection that it affords absentees.

CASE NOTES

I. In General.
II. Decisions under Prior Law.

I. IN GENERAL.

Federal Rules and Cases. — Both the North Carolina Rules of Civil Procedure and the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure contain a requirement that the complaint initiating a shareholder derivative action be verified under oath. Alford v. Shaw, 327 N.C. 526, 398 S.E.2d 445 (1990).

Because the present federal rule and its predecessors (which also contained a verification requirement) have been interpreted and discussed widely, the Supreme Court will turn to federal cases to elucidate the purpose behind this requirement. Certain aspects of this rule and the procedures in North Carolina governing derivative suits may differ from the federal approach; however, insofar as the purposes of certain of the federal and State rules are congruent, cases explaining federal rules are helpful. Alford v. Shaw, 327 N.C. 526, 398 S.E.2d 445 (1990).

Origins of Section (a). — Section (a) of this rule is closely patterned after Rule 23 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure as it existed prior to 1966 (the year of the Federal Rule revision) and former § 1-70. English v. Holden Beach Realty Corp., 41 N.C. App. 1, 254 S.E.2d 223, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 609, 257 S.E.2d 217 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

Objectives of Rule. — This rule has as its objectives the efficient resolution of the claims or liabilities of many individuals in a single action and the elimination of repetitious litigation and possible inconsistent adjudications involving common questions, related events, or requests for similar relief. English v. Holden Beach Realty Corp., 41 N.C. App. 1, 254 S.E.2d 223, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 609, 257 S.E.2d 217 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

Purpose of section (a) of this rule is to assure adequacy of representation afforded class. Carnahan v. Reed, 53 N.C. App. 589, 281 S.E.2d 408 (1981).

This rule should receive a liberal construction, and it should not be loaded down with arbitrary and technical restrictions. English v. Holden Beach Realty Corp., 41 N.C. App. 1, 254 S.E.2d 223, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 609, 257 S.E.2d 217 (1979); Faulkenbury v. Teachers' & State Employees' Retirement Sys., 108 N.C. App. 357, 424 S.E.2d 420 (1993), aff'd, 335 N.C. 158, 436 S.E.2d 821 (1993).

Permissible Application of Rule. — In general, courts focusing on this rule have given it a permissive application, so that common questions have been found to exist in a wide range of contexts. English v. Holden Beach Realty Corp., 41 N.C. App. 1, 254 S.E.2d 223, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 609, 257 S.E.2d 217 (1979).

The requirements for a class action are: (1) The existence of a class; (2) the class members within the jurisdiction of the court must adequately represent any class members outside the jurisdiction of the court; (3) the class must be so numerous as to make it impracticable to bring each member before the court; (4) more than one issue of law or fact common to the class should be present; (5) the party representing the class must fairly insure the representation of all class members; and (6) adequate notice must be given to the class members. Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 79 N.C. App. 447, 339 S.E.2d 437, rev'd on other grounds, 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987); Perry v. Union Camp Corp., 100 N.C. App. 168, 394 S.E.2d 681 (1990).

Existence of a Class Prerequisite to Action Under Rule. — Although not specifically mentioned in this rule, an essential prerequisite of an action under the rule is that there must be a "class." English v. Holden Beach Realty Corp., 41 N.C. App. 1, 254 S.E.2d 223, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 609, 257 S.E.2d 217 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

What Constitutes a "Class". — A "class," for purposes of representation, is a group of persons whose interests are so closely similar that an adequate representation of the legal position of one of them will accomplish the same purpose as would be achieved were all of them present and participating in the proceeding. English v. Holden Beach Realty Corp., 41 N.C. App. 1, 254 S.E.2d 223, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 609, 257 S.E.2d 217 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

"Class" Defined More Expansively Than Under Former Law. — The repeal of former § 1-70 and adoption of the less restrictive language of only the first sentence of the 1938 version of Federal Rule 23 reveals a legislative intent that the term "class" under this rule be defined more expansively than under former law. Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

"Community of Interest" Not Required. — A "class" exists under this rule when the named and unnamed members each have an interest in either the same issue of law or of fact, and that issue predominates over issues affecting only individual class members. It is unnecessary for any member of the class to share a jural relationship or "community of interest" with any other member of the class. Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

Statements in cases holding or implying that the former "community of interest" standard applies under § 1A-1, Section (a) of this rule, e.g., Maffei v. Alert Cable Television of N.C., Inc., 75 N.C. App. 473, 331 S.E.2d 188 (1985), rev'd on other grounds, 316 N.C. 615, 342 S.E.2d 867 (1986); English v. Holden Beach Realty Corp., 41 N.C. App. 1, 254 S.E.2d 223, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 609, 257 S.E.2d 217 (1979); and Mosley v. National Fin. Co., 36 N.C. App. 109, 243 S.E.2d 145, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 467, 246 S.E.2d 9 (1978), are disapproved by the Supreme Court. Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

Whether a class exists is a question of fact that will be determined on the basis of the circumstances of each case. English v. Holden Beach Realty Corp., 41 N.C. App. 1, 254 S.E.2d 223, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 609, 257 S.E.2d 217 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

Whether a class exists is a question of fact to be determined by the court on a case-by-case basis. Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 79 N.C. App. 447, 339 S.E.2d 437 (1986), rev'd on other grounds, Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

Court Must Make Findings of Fact Regarding Class Certification. — Findings of fact are required by the trial court when rendering a judgment granting or denying class certification in order for the appellate courts to afford meaningful review under the abuse of discretion standard. Such findings must be made with sufficient specificity to allow effective appellate review. Nobles v. First Carolina Communications, Inc., 108 N.C. App. 127, 423 S.E.2d 312 (1992), cert. denied, 333 N.C. 463, 427 S.E.2d 623 (1993).

Action Not Precluded Where Some Class Members Outside Court's Jurisdiction. —

The fact that some members of the class are located outside the court's jurisdiction does not prevent the institution of a class action, so long as there are class members within the jurisdiction who adequately represent those outside. English v. Holden Beach Realty Corp., 41 N.C. App. 1, 254 S.E.2d 223, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 609, 257 S.E.2d 217 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

Class must be so numerous as to make it impracticable to bring all members before the court. English v. Holden Beach Realty Corp., 41 N.C. App. 1, 254 S.E.2d 223, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 609, 257 S.E.2d 217 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

In order to bring a proceeding under this rule, it is necessary to make an allegation in the complaint that the defendants constitute a class so numerous as to make it impracticable to bring them all before the court. Baxter v. Jones, 14 N.C. App. 296, 188 S.E.2d 622, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 621, 190 S.E.2d 465 (1972).

Parties seeking to utilize this rule must establish that the class members are so numerous that it is impractical to bring them all before the court. It is not necessary that they demonstrate the impossibility of joining class members, but they must demonstrate substantial difficulty or inconvenience in joining all members of the class. Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

There is no hard and fast formula for determining what is a "numerous" class. The number is not dependent upon any arbitrary limit, but rather upon the circumstances of each case. English v. Holden Beach Realty Corp., 41 N.C. App. 1, 254 S.E.2d 223, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 609, 257 S.E.2d 217 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987); Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

Test for "Impracticability". — The legal test for "impracticability" of joining all members of a class, thus warranting a representative or class suit by or against some of the members, is not impossibility of joinder, but only difficulty or inconvenience in joining all members of the class. English v. Holden Beach Realty Corp., 41 N.C. App. 1, 254 S.E.2d 223, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 609, 257 S.E.2d 217 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

The pleadings should disclose the number and make-up of the class, the impracticability of bringing them all before the court and the personal interest in the action of the parties representing the class. English v. Holden Beach Realty Corp., 41 N.C. App. 1, 254 S.E.2d 223, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 609, 257 S.E.2d 217 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

Affirmative Averment Under § 1A-1, Rule 9(a). — Allegations that a party is a member of and properly represents a class under this rule suffice as the "affirmative averment" of "capacity and authority to sue" required by § 1A-1, Rule 9(a). Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

Plaintiffs were entitled to proceed as a class against corporate purchaser on the claims contained in the original complaint because the transfer occurred after the court certified the action as a class action, they had knowledge of the claims being asserted against seller at the time the transfer was made, and as transferee of all the assets, purchased the contracts which were the subject matter of the plaintiffs' original complaint. Dublin v. UCR, Inc., 115 N.C. App. 209, 444 S.E.2d 455 (1994), appeal dismissed and cert. denied, — N.C. —, 449 S.E.2d 569 (1994).

Who May Bring Class Action. — As is obvious from the wording of section (a) of this rule, one who is not a member of the represented class may not bring a class action representing that class. Carnahan v. Reed, 53 N.C. App. 589, 281 S.E.2d 408 (1981).

Representatives Must Have Personal Interest. — Those purporting to represent the class must show that they have a personal, and not just a technical or official, interest in the action. English v. Holden Beach Realty Corp., 41 N.C. App. 1, 254 S.E.2d 223, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 609, 257 S.E.2d 217 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

And it must not appear that there is a conflict of interest between members of the class who are not parties and those members who are representing the class as parties. English v. Holden Beach Realty Corp., 41 N.C. App. 1, 254 S.E.2d 223, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 609, 257 S.E.2d 217 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

The named representatives must show that there is no conflict of interest between them and the members of the class who are not named parties, so that the interest of the unnamed class members will be adequately and fairly protected. Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

Party or parties representing the class must be such as will fairly ensure adequate representation of all. This requirement is also one of due process. English v. Holden Beach Realty Corp., 41 N.C. App. 1, 254 S.E.2d 223, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 609, 257 S.E.2d 217 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

The class representatives within this jurisdiction must establish that they will adequately represent those outside the jurisdiction. Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

More than one issue of law or fact common to the class should be present in order to maintain a class action. English v. Holden Beach Realty Corp., 41 N.C. App. 1, 254 S.E.2d 223, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 609, 257 S.E.2d 217 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

Burden on Party Invoking Rule. — The party who is invoking this rule has the burden of showing that all of the prerequisites of utilizing the class action procedure have been satisfied. English v. Holden Beach Realty Corp., 41 N.C. App. 1, 254 S.E.2d 223, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 609, 257 S.E.2d 217 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987); Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 79 N.C. App. 447, 339 S.E.2d 437 (1986), rev'd on other grounds, 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

Plaintiff has the burden of showing that the alleged representatives are members of the class and that the interests of absent class members will be adequately protected. English v. Holden Beach Realty Corp., 41 N.C. App. 1, 254 S.E.2d 223, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 609, 257 S.E.2d 217 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

Discretion of Trial Court. — In deciding whether an action may be maintained as a class action, the trial court is accorded a degree of discretion. English v. Holden Beach Realty Corp., 41 N.C. App. 1, 254 S.E.2d 223, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 609, 257 S.E.2d 217 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

Court Supervision of Communications With Potential Class Members Not Abuse of Discretion. — In a class action challenging interest rates that were charged in financing the purchase of mobile homes, trial court did not abuse its discretion in supervising communications with potential class members, as the trial court did not allow unlimited unsupervised communications with potential class members and restricted contact to the level it deemed appropriate at that stage of litigation. Gibbons v. CIT Group/Sales Fin., Inc., 101 N.C. App. 502, 400 S.E.2d 104, cert. denied, 329 N.C. 496, 407 S.E.2d 856 (1991), cert. denied, 329 N.C. 496, 407 S.E.2d 856 (1991).

Although this rule should receive a liberal construction and be kept free from technical restrictions, a court has broad discretion in deciding whether to allow a class action. Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 79 N.C. App. 447, 339 S.E.2d 437 (1986), rev'd on other grounds, 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

In deciding whether to certify a class, a trial judge has broad discretion and may consider factors not expressly mentioned in this rule. Maffei v. Alert Cable TV of N.C., Inc., 316 N.C. 615, 342 S.E.2d 867 (1986).

Court May Take into Account Considerations Not Dealt with in Rule. — A court has broad discretion in deciding whether to allow the maintenance of a class action, and may take account of considerations not expressly dealt with in this rule in reaching a decision. English v. Holden Beach Realty Corp., 41 N.C. App. 1, 254 S.E.2d 223, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 609, 257 S.E.2d 217 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

Notice to Members of Class Required. — While section (a) of this rule does not require it, fundamental fairness and due process dictate that adequate notice, determined in the discretion of the trial court, be given to members of the class. English v. Holden Beach Realty Corp., 41 N.C. App. 1, 254 S.E.2d 223, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 609, 257 S.E.2d 217 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987); Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

The North Carolina Supreme Court has held that fundamental fairness and due process require that adequate notice be given to the members of a class. Hamilton v. Memorex Telex Corp., 118 N.C. App. 1, 454 S.E.2d 278 (1995).

The trial court should require that the best notice practical under the circumstances be given to class members. Such notice should include individual notice to all members who can be identified through reasonable efforts, but it need not comply with the formalities of service of process. Notice of the action should be given as soon as possible after the action is commenced. Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

Opportunity to Request Exclusion from Class. — As part of notification, the trial court may require that potential class members be given an opportunity to request exclusion from the class within a specified time in a manner similar to the current federal practice. Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

Refusal to Certify on Cost and Benefits Analysis. — Although one of the basic purposes of class actions is to provide a forum whereby claims which might not be economically pursued individually can be aggregated in an efficient and economically reasonable manner, there is a level at which the costs in pursuing the class action far outweigh any economic good sense and fair use of judicial resources. Maffei v. Alert Cable TV of N.C., Inc., 316 N.C. 615, 342 S.E.2d 867 (1986), upholding trial court's refusal to certify a class where the recovery which each member stood to gain was a mere 29 cents.

Unintentional illegality in the language of standard or uniform contracts cannot be raised as a shield to prevent plaintiffs from prosecuting a suit as a class action. Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

Plaintiff had no standing to bring suit challenging action of corporation where he failed to maintain his status as a holder of a beneficial interest in the stock of that corporation throughout the pendency of the litigation. Ashburn v. Wicker, 95 N.C. App. 162, 381 S.E.2d 876 (1989).

Plaintiff had no standing to challenge a loan made by defendant corporation to other defendant when plaintiff's beneficial interest, if any, in the defendant corporation consisted of a pledge of stock which secured a debt that was paid by another pledgee of the stock before plaintiff filed suit. Ashburn v. Wicker, 95 N.C. App. 162, 381 S.E.2d 876 (1989).

Appeal of Order Dismissing Class Action. — Although order dismissing class action without prejudice did not determine the controversy and was interlocutory, the order affected a substantial right of the unnamed plaintiffs and was immediately appealable. Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 79 N.C. App. 447, 339 S.E.2d 437 (1986), rev'd on other grounds, 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

An order denying certification of a class action is appealable. Nobles v. First Carolina Communications, Inc., 108 N.C. App. 127, 423 S.E.2d 312 (1992), cert. denied, 333 N.C. 463, 427 S.E.2d 623 (1993).

While an order denying a class certification is interlocutory, it is nonetheless immediately appealable as it affects a substantial right of the unnamed plaintiffs. Faulkenbury v. Teachers' & State Employees' Retirement Sys., 108 N.C. App. 357, 424 S.E.2d 420, cert. denied, 334 N.C. 162, 432 S.E.2d 358, aff'd per curiam, 335 N.C. 158, 436 S.E.2d 821 (1993).

Review of Order Denying Class Certification. — The decision to grant or deny class certification rests within the sound discretion of the trial court; therefore, the appropriate standard for appellate review is whether the trial court's decision manifests an abuse of discretion. In this regard, an appellate court is bound by the court's findings of fact if they are supported by competent evidence. Nobles v. First Carolina Communications, Inc., 108 N.C. App. 127, 423 S.E.2d 312 (1992), cert. denied, 333 N.C. 463, 427 S.E.2d 623 (1993).

Certification of Class Held Proper. — The trial court properly certified suit as a class action where the class was divided into six subclasses, three of these consisting of living persons who retired as vested members of the Retirement System, and three of these subclasses consisting of living beneficiaries, heirs, or personal representatives of persons comprising the first three subclasses in an action regarding calculation of disability payments. Faulkenbury v. Teachers' & State Employees' Retirement Sys., 108 N.C. App. 357, 424 S.E.2d 420, cert. denied, 334 N.C. 162, 432 S.E.2d 358, aff'd per curiam, 335 N.C. 158, 436 S.E.2d 821 (1993).

Procedure and Discovery in Shareholders' Derivative Actions. — For a case discussing interplay of rules and statutes governing procedure and discovery in shareholders' derivative action, particularly with respect to former § 55-55(c) (see now § 55-7-40), this rule, and § 1A-1, Rules 12 and 56, see Alford v. Shaw, 327 N.C. 526, 398 S.E.2d 445 (1990).

Verification Requirement Not Jurisdictional. — Although complaint in shareholders' derivative suit was not properly verified, because § 1A-1, Rule 23(b) addresses the procedure to be followed in, and not the substantive elements of, a shareholder's derivative suit, plaintiffs' failure to comply with the verification requirement at the time the complaint was filed was not a jurisdictional defect. Alford v. Shaw, 327 N.C. 526, 398 S.E.2d 445 (1990).

Where Purposes of Verification Requirement Have Been Met. — Because this rule's verification requirement is not jurisdictional in nature, where the purposes behind the rule have been fulfilled by the time the objection to a defective or absent verification is lodged, dismissal or summary judgment in favor of defendants is not appropriate. Alford v. Shaw, 327 N.C. 526, 398 S.E.2d 445 (1990).

Defendants waived their objection to lack of proper verification in shareholders' derivative suit by failing to raise the issue of verification until the fourth time the case was heard in the appellate division. Alford v. Shaw, 327 N.C. 526, 398 S.E.2d 445 (1990).

Because defendants raised the verification issue for the first time in appellate briefs before the Supreme Court, over seven years after the complaint was filed, and after many years of active litigation of the suit, defendants waived their right to complain about verification. Alford v. Shaw, 327 N.C. 526, 398 S.E.2d 445 (1990).

Class Based on Underpayment of Benefits. — A class was established where each of the parties had a claim based on contentions of underpayment of retirement benefits, and this claim predominated over issues affecting only individual class members. Faulkenbury v. Teachers' & State Emps. Retirement Sys., 345 N.C. 683, 483 S.E.2d 422 (1997).

II. DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW.

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former § 1-70.

Federal Counterpart. — Former § 1-70 had its counterpart in Rule 23a of the Federal Civil Rules of Procedure. Cocke v. Duke Univ., 260 N.C. 1, 131 S.E.2d 909 (1963).

Provisions merely provide a ready means for dispatch of business. Cocke v. Duke Univ., 260 N.C. 1, 131 S.E.2d 909 (1963).

Exception to the general rule that all persons interested in and to be affected by suit must be made parties on one or the other side obtains when they "may be very numerous and it may be impractical to bring them all before the court," a rule prevailing in the former equity practice. Glenn v. Farmers' Bank, 72 N.C. 626 (1875); Bronson v. Wilmington N.C. Life Ins. Co., 85 N.C. 411 (1881); Foster v. Hackett, 112 N.C. 546, 17 S.E. 426 (1893). See also, Thames v. Jones, 97 N.C. 121, 1 S.E. 692 (1887); McMillan v. Reeves, 102 N.C. 550, 9 S.E. 449 (1889).

Showing of Authority to Join Causes of Action in Favor of Other Parties Similarly Situated. — A party plaintiff may not join with his own cause of action against a defendant causes of action against the same defendant in favor of other parties similarly situated, in the absence of a showing of authority to bring such actions in their behalf. Nodine v. Goodyear Mtg. Corp., 260 N.C. 302, 132 S.E.2d 631 (1963).

Where potential beneficiaries of a trust were so numerous that it was practically impossible to bring them all before the court in an action seeking modification of the trust, a beneficiary of each class could be made a party and represent the class. The court's jurisdiction over the trust was not dependent on acquiring personal jurisdiction over every potential beneficiary. Cocke v. Duke Univ., 260 N.C. 1, 131 S.E.2d 909 (1963).

Community of Interest of Cemetery Lot Owners. — Plaintiff was authorized to bring an action on behalf of himself and other owners of lots in a cemetery who by reason of similar representations were induced to buy lots, as such lot owners had a community of interest. Mills v. Carolina Cem. Park Corp., 242 N.C. 20, 86 S.E.2d 893 (1955).

Where property was conveyed to trustees for use as a community house or playground for the benefit of the residents of the community, and an action was instituted involving title to the property in which representative members of the community were made parties, the judgment in the action was binding upon the minors and all members of the community not made parties under provision for class representative. Carswell v. Creswell, 217 N.C. 40, 7 S.E.2d 58 (1940).

Rule 24. Intervention.

(a) Intervention of right. — Upon timely application anyone shall be permitted to intervene in an action:

(1) When a statute confers an unconditional right to intervene; or

(2) When the applicant claims an interest relating to the property or transaction which is the subject of the action and he is so situated that the disposition of the action may as a practical matter impair or impede his ability to protect that interest, unless the applicant's interest is adequately represented by existing parties.

(b) Permissive intervention. — Upon timely application anyone may be permitted to intervene in an action.

(1) When a statute confers a conditional right to intervene; or

(2) When an applicant's claim or defense and the main action have a question of law or fact in common. When a party to an action relies for ground of claim or defense upon any statute or executive order administered by a federal or State governmental officer or agency or upon any regulation, order, requirement, or agreement issued or made pursuant to the statute or executive order, such officer or agency upon timely application may be permitted to intervene in the action. In exercising its discretion the court shall consider whether the intervention will unduly delay or prejudice the adjudication of the rights of the original parties.

(c) Procedure. — A person desiring to intervene shall serve a motion to intervene upon all parties affected thereby. The motion shall state the grounds therefor and shall be accompanied by a pleading setting forth the claim or defense for which intervention is sought. The same procedure shall be followed when a statute gives a right to intervene, except when the statute prescribes a different procedure. (1967, c. 954, s. 1.)

Section (a). — This section, providing for intervention as of right, while closely following the federal rule, spells out a practice much like that already achieved in North Carolina. Intervention now is of right in claim and delivery and in attachment by virtue of § 1-440.43 and § 1-482. In respect to subsection (2), it will be noted that the harm to the intervenor's interest is to be considered from a "practical" standpoint, rather than technically. In other words, the intervenor need not be threatened with being bound in a strict res judicata sense. Further, it should be noted that adequate representation for the proposed intervenor is not limited to purely formal representation. But a present party may, in appropriate circumstances, be relied on to protect the intervenor's interest even though there is no formal relationship. See Annot., 84 ALR 2d 1412 (1962).

It will be observed that in any case, the application to intervene must be "timely." What will be "timely" will depend on the circumstances of the case.

Section (b). — This section perhaps establishes a broader base for permissive intervention than North Carolina now has but the Commission believes that the flexibility it makes possible to be highly desirable and the Commission is confident that the stated guide to the court as to what it shall consider in deciding whether or not to permit intervention will insure adequate protection for the original parties.

Section (c). — This section with its simple statement of the required procedure should be useful.

CASE NOTES

I. In General.
II. Decisions under Prior Law.

I. IN GENERAL.

Federal Rule Substantially Similar. — With only minor exceptions, Federal Rule 24 and this rule are substantially the same. Where the phrase "Statute of the United States" appears in the federal rule, the word "statute" is used in this rule. Ellis v. Ellis, 38 N.C. App. 81, 247 S.E.2d 274 (1978).

Federal Court Holdings Instructive. — With only minor exceptions, this Rule and Rule 24 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure are substantially the same; thus, the holdings of the federal circuit courts are instructive. Virmani v. Presbyterian Health Servs., 127 N.C. App. 629, 493 S.E.2d 310 (1997).

Former § 150A-23(d) (now § 150A-23(d) Compared. — While this rule contains specific requirements which control and limit intervention, former § 150A-23(d) (now § 150B-23(d)) clearly provided discretionary intervention in the Commissioner of Insurance by providing that the agency may permit any interested person to intervene and participate in the proceeding to the extent deemed appropriate. This language has been construed to provide intervention broader than the permissive intervention under this rule. State ex rel. Comm'r of Ins. v. North Carolina Rate Bureau, 300 N.C. 460, 269 S.E.2d 538 (1980).

No Substantive Change from Former Statute. — The rules of intervention as set out in the Rules of Civil Procedure make no substantive change in the rules as previously set out in former § 1-73. River Birch Assocs. v. City of Raleigh, 326 N.C. 100, 388 S.E.2d 538 (1990).

Intervention pursuant to section (b) of this rule is permissive and within the discretion of the trial court. In re Scearce, 81 N.C. App. 531, 345 S.E.2d 404, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 415, 349 S.E.2d 589 (1986).

An intervenor by permission need not show a direct personal or pecuniary interest in the subject of the litigation. In re Scearce, 81 N.C. App. 531, 345 S.E.2d 404, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 415, 349 S.E.2d 589 (1986).

Prerequisites to Nonstatutory Intervention. — Subsection (a)(2) of this rule sets forth three prerequisites to nonstatutory intervention as a matter of right: (1) an interest relating to the property or transaction; (2) practical impairment of the protection of that interest; and (3) inadequate representation of that interest by existing parties. Ellis v. Ellis, 38 N.C. App. 81, 247 S.E.2d 274 (1978); Howell v. Howell, 89 N.C. App. 115, 365 S.E.2d 181 (1988); Procter v. Raleigh Bd. of Adjustment, — N.C. App. —, 514 S.E.2d 745 (1999).

In determining whether motion to intervene is timely, trial court will give consideration to: (1) the status of the case; (2) the unfairness or prejudice to the existing parties; (3) the reason for any delay in moving for intervention; (4) the resulting prejudice to the applicant if the motion is denied; and (5) any unusual circumstances. State Employees' Credit Union, Inc. v. Gentry, 75 N.C. App. 260, 330 S.E.2d 645 (1985); Procter v. Raleigh Bd. of Adjustment, — N.C. App. —, 514 S.E.2d 745 (1999).

Motion Prior to Trial and After Judgment. — As a general rule, motions to intervene made prior to trial are seldom denied. Conversely, motions to intervene made after judgment has been rendered are disfavored and are granted only after a finding of extraordinary and unusual circumstances and upon a strong showing of entitlement and justification. State Employees' Credit Union, Inc. v. Gentry, 75 N.C. App. 260, 330 S.E.2d 645 (1985).

In situations where a judgment has been entered, motions to intervene are granted only upon a finding of extraordinary and unusual circumstances or a strong showing of entitlement and justification. Procter v. Raleigh Bd. of Adjustment, — N.C. App. —, 514 S.E.2d 745 (1999).

A motion to intervene after the entry of default against the defendant, his liability to the plaintiff being conclusively established, the extent of liability never being in issue, was untimely. State Employees' Credit Union, Inc. v. Gentry, 75 N.C. App. 260, 330 S.E.2d 645 (1985).

An intervenor is as much a party to the action as the original parties are and has rights equally as broad. Leonard E. Warner, Inc. v. Nissan Motor Corp., 66 N.C. App. 73, 311 S.E.2d 1 (1984).

Rule is silent as to the extent an intervenor may participate in the action once the court allows him in as a party. In view of the liberal philosophy of the rules as regards joinder and enlargement, anything less than full right of participation seems unduly restrictive and tends to defeat the important rules policy of avoiding multiplicity of actions. Once the intervenor becomes a party, he should be a party for all purposes. Harrington v. Overcash, 61 N.C. App. 742, 301 S.E.2d 528 (1983).

The granting of a motion to intervene pursuant to this rule is not ordinarily appealable. Kahan v. Longiotti, 45 N.C. App. 367, 263 S.E.2d 345, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 374, 267 S.E.2d 675 (1980), overruled on other grounds, Love v. Moore, 305 N.C. 575, 291 S.E.2d 141 (1982).

Although the rule is not absolute, ordinarily no appeal will lie from an order permitting intervention of parties unless the order adversely affects a substantial right which the appellant may lose if not granted an appeal before final judgment. The rule applies with equal vigor without regard to whether the trial court grants a motion to intervene as a matter of right pursuant to section (a) of this rule or as permissive intervention pursuant to section (b) of this rule. Wood v. City of Fayetteville, 35 N.C. App. 738, 242 S.E.2d 640, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 264, 245 S.E.2d 781 (1978).

But May Be Reviewed on Appeal from Final Judgment. — An order granting intervention may be reviewed upon appeal from the final judgment in the cause. Wood v. City of Fayetteville, 35 N.C. App. 738, 242 S.E.2d 640, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 264, 245 S.E.2d 781 (1978).

Court's Discretion Not Reviewable Absent Abuse. — The court's discretion in regard to permissive intervention under subsection (b)(2) of this rule is not reviewable in the absence of a showing of abuse. Ellis v. Ellis, 38 N.C. App. 81, 247 S.E.2d 274 (1978).

Service by Intervenor. — An intervenor party who is granted permission to intervene pursuant to subsection (b)(2) of this rule is not required to then issue a summons and complaint pursuant to Rule 4. The service pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 5 of the motion to intervene, accompanied with the complaint, is sufficient service upon the party against whom relief is sought or denied in the intervenor's pleading and is sufficient process to acquire jurisdiction over the party if all other requisites for jurisdiction over the party are met. Kahan v. Longiotti, 45 N.C. App. 367, 263 S.E.2d 345, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 374, 267 S.E.2d 675 (1980), overruled on other grounds, Love v. Moore, 305 N.C. 575, 291 S.E.2d 141 (1982).

A party who intervenes pursuant to this rule is not required to issue a summons and complaint pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 4. In re Shamp, 82 N.C. App. 606, 347 S.E.2d 848 (1986), cert. denied, 318 N.C. 695, 351 S.E.2d 750 (1987).

Service, pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 5, of the motion accompanied with the pleading is sufficient service upon the party against whom relief is sought or denied in the intervenor's pleading and is sufficient process to acquire jurisdiction over the party if all other requisites for jurisdiction are met. In re Shamp, 82 N.C. App. 606, 347 S.E.2d 848 (1986), cert. denied, 318 N.C. 695, 351 S.E.2d 750 (1987).

Intervention by Foster Parents. — In proceeding brought by Department of Social Services in which custody was put in issue by guardian ad litem and natural father, trial court did not err in permitting child's foster parents to intervene. In re Scearce, 81 N.C. App. 531, 345 S.E.2d 404, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 415, 349 S.E.2d 589 (1986), distinguishing Oxendine v. Catawba County Dep't of Social Servs., 303 N.C. 699, 281 S.E.2d 370 (1981).

Intervention by Grandmother. — As grandmother's interest in obtaining compensation from defendant for amounts expended for child support would be impaired by any judgment involving defendant's child support obligation which failed to take her claim for reimbursement into account, regardless of whether she would be bound by that judgment, and she would, as a practical matter, suffer the expense and inconvenience of bringing a separate suit against defendant, and would also be impeded by defendant's ability to force litigation of the additional issue of res judicata, her intervention would be allowed. State ex rel. Pender County Child Support Enforcement Agency v. Parker, 319 N.C. 354, 354 S.E.2d 501 (1987).

Intervention in Zoning Matter. — A motion to intervene in a setback zoning case was timely, even though it was made after the trial court entered judgment adverse to intervenors, where the intervenors' interest previously had been adequately represented by the Board of Adjustment, and they sought to intervene only when the Board decided not to appeal. Procter v. Raleigh Bd. of Adjustment, — N.C. App. —, 514 S.E.2d 745 (1999).

Neighbors were entitled to intervene in a zoning setback case in which the trial court allowed builders a special use permit, where the neighbors had an interest in preserving the character of their neighborhood, the protection of that interest was impaired by the Board of Adjustment's decision not to appeal from the trial court's judgment, and the neighbors' interests were no longer adequately represented. Procter v. Raleigh Bd. of Adjustment, — N.C. App. —, 514 S.E.2d 745 (1999).

Successful bidder at an auction sale may intervene to contest a motion to enjoin conveyance of the property which was the subject of the auction sale. Northwestern Bank v. Robertson, 25 N.C. App. 424, 213 S.E.2d 363 (1975).

In an action to quiet title brought by a mother against those of her children and their spouses who would not execute a quitclaim deed to her for her homeplace, trial judge properly denied motion to intervene brought by some of her other children who had executed a quitclaim deed and who sought to have their deed set aside, since the deed related to a different transaction, even though it involved the same property. Ellis v. Ellis, 38 N.C. App. 81, 247 S.E.2d 274 (1978).

The refusal to grant permissive intervention is an interlocutory order. Howell v. Howell, 89 N.C. App. 115, 365 S.E.2d 181 (1988).

Owner of garage and wrecker service, with whom sheriff contracted to store certain cars levied on pursuant to court order, was a legal possessor, and under § 44A-2(d) had a lien on the cars from the time he began towing them away; such lien was enforceable under the explicit language of § 1-440.43 and this rule, by intervention. Case v. Miller, 68 N.C. App. 729, 315 S.E.2d 737 (1984).

Motion for Intervention Denied. — Where claimants to client security fund did not have an interest in the funds held by the trustee/conservator, the trial properly denied motion for intervention. In re Gertzman, 115 N.C. App. 634, 446 S.E.2d 130, cert. denied, 337 N.C. 801, 449 S.E.2d 571 (1994).

Declaratory Judgment Actions. — The trial court erred by denying a motion to intervene in a declaratory judgment insurance coverage action which was filed by the plaintiff in an underlying tort action. United Servs. Auto. Ass'n v. Simpson, 126 N.C. App. 393, 485 S.E.2d 337 (1997).

A physician and his employer did not have a right under this rule to intervene in a declaratory judgment action brought by an infant patient's estate to determine which heirs would share in the proceeds, if any, of a wrongful death action against the physician and employer, as the physician and employer had no significantly protectable interest in the declaratory judgment action. Alford v. Davis, 131 N.C. App. 214, 505 S.E.2d 917 (1998).

Applied in Allgood v. Town of Tarboro, 281 N.C. 430, 189 S.E.2d 255 (1972); Berta v. North Carolina State Hwy. Comm'n, 36 N.C. App. 749, 245 S.E.2d 409 (1978); Raintree Corp. v. Rowe, 38 N.C. App. 664, 248 S.E.2d 904 (1978); Wood v. City of Fayetteville, 43 N.C. App. 410, 259 S.E.2d 581 (1979); Thompson v. Thompson, 70 N.C. App. 147, 319 S.E.2d 315 (1984); Thompson v. Thompson, 313 N.C. 313, 328 S.E.2d 288 (1985); Gummels v. North Carolina Dep't of Human Resources, 97 N.C. App. 245, 388 S.E.2d 223 (1990); State ex rel. Long v. Interstate Cas. Ins. Co., 106 N.C. App. 470, 417 S.E.2d 296 (1992); Surles v. Surles, 113 N.C. App. 32, 437 S.E.2d 661 (1993); Pryor v. Merten, 127 N.C. App. 483, 490 S.E.2d 590 (1997), review denied, 347 N.C. 578, 502 S.E.2d 597 (1998).

II. DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW.

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former §§ 1-70 and 1-73.

Ordinarily it is within the discretion of the court to permit proper parties to intervene. Childers v. Powell, 243 N.C. 711, 92 S.E.2d 65 (1956); Strickland v. Hughes, 273 N.C. 481, 160 S.E.2d 313 (1968).

But a person who is a necessary party has an absolute right to intervene in a pending action, and the court commits error when it refuses to permit him to exercise such right. Garrett v. Rose, 236 N.C. 299, 72 S.E.2d 843 (1952).

Refusal to permit a necessary party to intervene is error. Strickland v. Hughes, 273 N.C. 481, 160 S.E.2d 313 (1968).

Before a third party will be permitted to become a party defendant in a pending action, he must show that he has some legal interest in the subject matter of the litigation. His interest must be of such direct and immediate character that he will either gain or lose by the direct operation and effect of the judgment, and it must be involved in the subject matter of the action. One whose interest in the matter in litigation is not a direct or substantial interest, but is indirect, inconsequential, or contingent cannot claim the right to defend. Strickland v. Hughes, 273 N.C. 481, 160 S.E.2d 313 (1968).

Intervention Where Defendant's Failure to Answer Shows Absence of Controversy Between Parties. — Where in an action to establish and enforce a lien for labor on defendants' land, the defendants filed no answer, persons who claimed to hold a mortgage on the land were not entitled to intervene, since there was no controversy between plaintiff and defendant. Childers v. Powell, 243 N.C. 711, 92 S.E.2d 65 (1956).

Intervening Plaintiffs with Interests Adverse to Original Plaintiffs. — In an action filed by taxpayers to enjoin city from destroying low cost rental units belonging to city, intervenors were not entitled to come into case as parties plaintiff where their pleadings expressly denied all material allegations of the claims wholly antagonistic to those alleged by the plaintiffs. Burton v. City of Reidsville, 240 N.C. 577, 83 S.E.2d 651 (1954).

Rule 25. Substitution of parties upon death, incompetency or transfer of interest; abatement.

(a) Death. — No action abates by reason of the death of a party if the cause of action survives. In such case, the court, on motion at any time within the time specified for the presentation of claims in G.S. 28A-19-3, may order the substitution of said party's personal representative or collector and allow the action to be continued by or against the substituted party.

(b) Insanity or incompetency. — No action abates by reason of the incompetency or insanity of a party. If such incompetency or insanity is adjudicated, the court, on motion at any time within one year after such adjudication, or afterwards on a supplemental complaint, may order that said party be represented by his general guardian or trustee or a guardian ad litem, and, allow the action to be continued. If there is no adjudication, any party may suggest such incompetency or insanity to the court and it shall enter such order in respect thereto as justice may require.

(c) Abatement ordered unless action continued. — At any time after the death, insanity or incompetency of a party, the court in which an action is pending, upon notice to such person as it directs and upon motion of any party aggrieved, may order that the action be abated, unless it is continued by the proper parties, within a time to be fixed by the court, not less than six nor more than 12 months from the granting of the order.

(d) Transfer of interest. — In case of any transfer of interest other than by death, the action shall be continued in the name of the original party; but, upon motion of any party, the court may allow the person to whom the transfer is made to be joined with the original party.

(e) Death of receiver of corporation. — No action against a receiver of a corporation abates by reason of his death, but, upon suggestion of the facts on the record, it continues against his successor or against the corporation in case a new receiver is not appointed and such successor or the corporation is automatically substituted as a party.

(f) Public officers; death or separation from office. —

(1) When a public officer is a party to an action in his official capacity and during its pendency dies, resigns or otherwise ceases to hold office, the action does not abate and his successor is automatically substituted as a party. Proceedings following the substitution shall be in the name of the substituted party, but any misnomer not affecting substantial rights of the parties shall be disregarded. An order of substitution may be entered at any time, but the omission to enter such an order shall not affect the substitution.

(2) When a public officer sues or is sued in his official capacity, he may be described as a party by his official title rather than by name; but the court may require his name to be added.

(g) No abatement after verdict. — After a verdict is rendered in any action, the action does not abate by reason of the death of a party, whether or not the cause of action upon which it is based is a type which survives. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1977, c. 446, s. 3.)

Former § 1-74 and federal Rule 25 were generally comparable in providing for no automatic abatement of actions upon death, disability or transfer of interest of parties, but, instead, for a right to continue the action by or against substituted parties. The most important difference was in their respective ways of finally cutting off the right to continue. The federal rule allows two years within which parties may be substituted so as to continue the action, then for automatic dismissal if this has not been done within the period. Former § 1-74 allowed substitution and continuance on mere motion for one year after death or disability, and afterwards on supplemental complaint. No automatic dismissal was provided, but there was further provision that a party might be forced by the opposite party to either get substitution for continuation or suffer dismissal within a time specified by the court. Furthermore, former § 1-75 in a very awkward and questionable way imposed a duty on the adverse party to suggest to the court the death or disability of his opponent, and then a duty on the clerk to notify the proper representative to come in and file pleadings.

On balance, it was felt that the State procedure had served North Carolina well enough in this area and that accordingly the form of former § 1-74 should be followed. There has been an attempt, however, to dress the format up somewhat, using catchlines for separate sections and cleaning up some of the incomplete and ambiguous language.

Furthermore, there has been added section (f), tracking the language of federal Rule 25(d), relating to death and separation of public officers. There is no comparable provision in the current law.

Finally, former § 1-75 was omitted entirely, on the basis that it was ambiguous, and that in apparently requiring new pleadings by substituted parties, it was not desirable. Its requirements have in fact been overlooked by the North Carolina court which has allowed substitution and continuation of actions without compliance with its provisions. See Alexander v. Patton, 90 N.C. 557 (1884).

The only danger in this scheme is that a party may try to lie back until a successor in interest has lost all chance of proceeding successfully and then coming in with a supplemental complaint and trying to resurrect the successor to force a continuation within time specified under section (c). But the court has prevented plaintiffs from so acting. See Sawyer v. Cowell, 241 N.C. 681, 86 S.E.2d 431 (1955).

CASE NOTES

I. In General.
II. Decisions under Prior Law.

I. IN GENERAL.

Action to Collect Debt Survives Death of Plaintiff. — There was no merit to defendant's contention that action to collect a debt (a foreign judgment) abated because he had not been served with process at the time of the death of plaintiff, since a cause of action based upon the collection of a debt survives the death of a plaintiff. Mazzocone v. Drummond, 42 N.C. App. 493, 256 S.E.2d 843, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 298, 259 S.E.2d 300 (1979).

Supplemental Pleading. — In order for a supplemental pleading under section (a) of this rule to be procedurally proper, it must satisfy the requirements of § 1A-1, Rule 15(d). Deutsch v. Fisher, 32 N.C. App. 688, 233 S.E.2d 646 (1977), decided under section (a) prior to 1977 amendment.

Effect of Section (c). — Section (c) of this rule does not provide for substitution, but provides a method by which a party may place a time limitation on the right to substitution. Silverthorne v. Coastal Land Co., 42 N.C. App. 134, 256 S.E.2d 397, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 300, 259 S.E.2d 302 (1979).

Order provided for in section (c) of this rule is intended to be used prior to any substitution of parties, since it provides for notice to "such person as [the court] directs," which has been correctly viewed as requiring notice to those who "would reasonably be expected to represent most closely the interest of the deceased." It is then up to the persons interested in the estate of the deceased to arrange for substitution of the appropriate party. Silverthorne v. Coastal Land Co., 42 N.C. App. 134, 256 S.E.2d 397, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 300, 259 S.E.2d 302 (1979).

There is no burden on a party seeking an order of abatement to make any showing that the plaintiff's failure to actively prosecute the lawsuit was without excuse. Silverthorne v. Coastal Land Co., 42 N.C. App. 134, 256 S.E.2d 397, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 300, 259 S.E.2d 302 (1979).

Section (d) of this rule is merely a procedural rule; substantive law governs its application. Carolina First Nat'l Bank v. Douglas Gallery of Homes, Ltd., 68 N.C. App. 246, 314 S.E.2d 801 (1984).

Failure to Make Substitution Directed by Court. — Where an incompetent plaintiff died after institution of action by her next friend, and the court authorized and directed substitution of her administrator as new plaintiff, failure so to substitute required dismissal of appeal by the court against the next friend. Ginn v. Smith, 20 N.C. App. 526, 201 S.E.2d 739 (1974).

Dismissal of Action for Divorce upon Husband's Death. — Trial court did not err in dismissing husband's action for divorce and wife's counterclaim for equitable distribution where husband died before decree of absolute divorce was granted. Caldwell v. Caldwell, 93 N.C. App. 740, 379 S.E.2d 271, cert. denied, 325 N.C. 270, 384 S.E.2d 513 (1989).

Effect of Chapter 35A on Continuation for Incompetency. — Chapter 35A has had significant impact on section (b) of this rule, which discusses the continuation of an action when one party becomes incompetent. In a situation in which no incompetency adjudication has yet occurred, the action contemplated in the last clause would be referral of the competency issue to the clerk of superior court for action under Chapter 35A. Culton v. Culton, 96 N.C. App. 620, 386 S.E.2d 592 (1989), reversed on other grounds, 327 N.C. 624, 398 S.E.2d 323 (1990).

Applied in MacPherson v. City of Asheville, 283 N.C. 299, 196 S.E.2d 200 (1973); In re Estate of Etheridge, 33 N.C. App. 585, 235 S.E.2d 924 (1977); Thomas v. Thomas, 43 N.C. App. 638, 260 S.E.2d 163 (1979); Saintsing v. Taylor, 57 N.C. App. 467, 291 S.E.2d 880 (1982).

Stated in Elmore v. Elmore, 67 N.C. App. 661, 313 S.E.2d 904 (1984); Buie v. High Point Assocs. Ltd. Partnership, 119 N.C. App. 155, 458 S.E.2d 212 (1995).

Hunter, 106 N.C. App. 614, 418 S.E.2d 299 (1992); Farm Credit Bank v. Edwards, 121 N.C. App. 72, 464 S.E.2d 305 (1995).

II. DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW.

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former § 1-74.

Common-Law Rule Changed. — The rule of the common law that a personal right of action dies with the person was changed by former § 1-74 and former § 28-172 and, except in the instances specified in former § 28-175, an action originally maintainable by or against a deceased person was maintainable by or against his personal representative. Suskin v. Maryland Trust Co., 214 N.C. 347, 199 S.E. 276 (1938).

The rule of the common law that a personal right of action dies with the person has been changed. Paschal v. Autry, 256 N.C. 166, 123 S.E.2d 569 (1962).

No action abates with death except as provided. Baggarly v. Calvert, 70 N.C. 688 (1874); Sledge v. Reid, 73 N.C. 440 (1875); Wood v. Watson, 107 N.C. 52, 12 S.E. 49 (1890). See also, Shields v. Lawrence, 72 N.C. 43 (1875); Latham v. Latham, 178 N.C. 12, 100 S.E. 131 (1919).

Except by Order of Court. — Under former § 1-74, where the right survives, an action does not abate by the death of a party, except by order of the court. Burnett v. Lyman, 141 N.C. 500, 54 S.E. 412, 115 Am. St. R. 691 (1906), appeal dismissed, 146 N.C. 597, 59 S.E. 877 (1907); Moore v. Moore, 151 N.C. 555, 66 S.E. 598 (1909).

A judgment is necessary to abate an action, for the court may, ex mero motu, enter judgment when it appears that plaintiff failed for a year to prosecute his action against the representatives or successors in interest of the original defendant, whose death has been suggested, though the records show no discontinuance of the action. Rogerson v. Leggett, 145 N.C. 7, 58 S.E. 596 (1907).

An action which survives disability or death does not abate until a judgment of the court is entered to that effect. Sawyer v. Cowell, 241 N.C. 681, 86 S.E.2d 431 (1955).

Where a cause of action survives, the action does not abate by the death of the plaintiff ipso facto, but only upon application of the party aggrieved, and then only in the discretion of the court, and in a time to be fixed, not less than six months nor more than one year from the granting of the order. Moore v. North Carolina R.R., 74 N.C. 528 (1876).

Continuance of Action by Personal Representative or Successor. — In case of the death of a party, the court, at any time within one year thereafter or afterwards, on a supplemental complaint, may allow the action to be continued by or against his representative or successor in interest. Pennington v. Pennington, 75 N.C. 356 (1876).

A decedent's cause or right of action surviving his death can be continued and prosecuted only by his personal representative. Neal v. Associates Disct. Corp., 260 N.C. 771, 133 S.E.2d 699 (1963).

Limit on Power to Continue Action Against Defendant's Representative Successor. — Power of the court to allow an action which survives the death of defendant to be continued against defendant's personal representative or successor in interest may not be invoked by a plaintiff who has kept his action in a semidormant condition for a number of years and then calls defendant's heir into court after the heir, by lapse of time, is unable to make good his defense or that defense which the ancestor might have made. Sawyer v. Cowell, 241 N.C. 681, 86 S.E.2d 431 (1955).

Wrongful Death Action Does Not Abate by Death, Resignation or Removal of Representative. — Once the personal representative of an estate is duly appointed, if such representative dies, resigns, or is removed, the law contemplates a continuity of succession until the estate has been fully administered; hence, upon the death, resignation, or removal of a representative who has properly brought an action for wrongful death, the action does not abate. Harrison v. Carter, 226 N.C. 36, 36 S.E.2d 700, 164 A.L.R. 697 (1946).

Death, etc., of Relator in State's Action upon Official Bonds. — In an action brought by the State upon official bonds, the relator is but an agent of the State in seeking to recover the moneys due, and if he dies or goes out of office the action does not abate. Davenport v. McKee, 98 N.C. 500, 4 S.E. 545 (1887).

As to binding effect of judgment against first administrator or administrator de bonis non in an action to renew it, see Thompson v. Badham, 70 N.C. 141 (1874).

Where two of several plaintiffs died and as they had no personal representative within a year thereafter, no motion was made to continue the action as to them, but the cause remained upon the docket and was proceeded with by the remaining plaintiffs, whose rights were finally determined, and the defendants did not apply to have the action abated as to the deceased plaintiffs, it was within the discretion of the presiding judge to allow the personal representative of such deceased parties to file a supplementary complaint and prosecute the action, his motion to be allowed to do so having been made before the final judgment was rendered in the cause. State ex rel. Coggins v. Flythe, 114 N.C. 274, 19 S.E. 701 (1894).

Action for Wrongful Cutting and Removal of Timber. — If a cause of action for damages for the wrongful cutting and removal of timber from realty belonging to the deceased accrued, in whole or in part, during his lifetime, the action for damages would survive to his executors. However, if such an injury to the realty was committed after his death, the right of action would belong to his heirs or devisees. Paschal v. Autry, 256 N.C. 166, 123 S.E.2d 569 (1962).

Article 5.

Depositions and Discovery.

Rule 26. General provisions governing discovery.

(a) Discovery methods. — Parties may obtain discovery by one or more of the following methods: depositions upon oral examination or written questions; written interrogatories; production of documents or things or permission to enter upon land or other property, for inspection and other purposes; physical and mental examinations; and requests for admission.

(b) Discovery scope and limits. — Unless otherwise limited by order of the court in accordance with these rules, the scope of discovery is as follows:

(1) In General. — Parties may obtain discovery regarding any matter, not privileged, which is relevant to the subject matter involved in the pending action, whether it relates to the claim or defense of the party seeking discovery or to the claim or defense of any other party, including the existence, description, nature, custody, condition and location of any books, documents, or other tangible things and the identity and location of persons having knowledge of any discoverable matter. It is not ground for objection that the information sought will be inadmissible at the trial if the information sought appears reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence nor is it grounds for objection that the examining party has knowledge of the information as to which discovery is sought.

The frequency or extent of use of the discovery methods set forth in section (a) shall be limited by the court if it determines that: (i) the discovery sought is unreasonably cumulative or duplicative, or is obtainable from some other source that is more convenient, less burdensome, or less expensive; (ii) the party seeking discovery has had ample opportunity by discovery in the action to obtain the information sought; or (iii) the discovery is unduly burdensome or expensive, taking into account the needs of the case, the amount in controversy, limitations on the parties' resources, and the importance of the issues at stake in the litigation. The court may act upon its own initiative after reasonable notice or pursuant to a motion under section (c).

(2) Insurance Agreements. — A party may obtain discovery of the existence and contents of any insurance agreement under which any person carrying on an insurance business may be liable to satisfy part or all of a judgment which may be entered in the action or to indemnify or reimburse for payments made to satisfy the judgment. Information concerning the insurance agreement is not by reason of disclosure admissible in evidence at trial. For purposes of this subsection, an application for insurance shall not be treated as part of an insurance agreement.

(3) Trial Preparation; Materials. — Subject to the provisions of subsection (b)(4) of this rule, a party may obtain discovery of documents and tangible things otherwise discoverable under subsection (b)(1) of this rule and prepared in anticipation of litigation or for trial by or for another party or by or for that other party's consultant, surety, indemnitor, insurer, or agent only upon a showing that the party seeking discovery has substantial need of the materials in the preparation of his case and that he is unable without undue hardship to obtain the substantial equivalent of the materials by other means. In ordering discovery of such materials when the required showing has been made, the court may not permit disclosure of the mental impressions, conclusions, opinions, or legal theories of an attorney or other representative of a party concerning the litigation in which the material is sought or work product of the attorney or attorneys of record in the particular action.

A party may obtain without the required showing a statement concerning the action or its subject matter previously made by that party. Upon request, a person not a party may obtain without the required showing a statement concerning the action or its subject matter previously made by that person. If the request is refused, the person may move for a court order. The provisions of Rule 37(a)(4) apply to the award of expenses incurred in relation to the motion. For purposes of this paragraph, a statement previously made is (i) a written statement signed or otherwise adopted or approved by the person making it, or (ii) a stenographic, mechanical, electrical, or other recording, or a transcription thereof, which is a substantially verbatim recital of an oral statement by the person making it and contemporaneously recorded.

(4) Trial Preparation; Experts. — Discovery of facts known and opinions held by experts, otherwise discoverable under the provisions of subsection (b)(1) of this rule and acquired or developed in anticipation of litigation or for trial, may be obtained only as follows:

a. 1. A party may through interrogatories require any other party to identify each person whom the other party expects to call as an expert witness at trial, to state the subject matter on which the expert is expected to testify, and to state the substance of the facts and opinions to which the expert is expected to testify and a summary of the grounds for each opinion.

2. Upon motion, the court may order further discovery by other means, subject to such restrictions as to scope and such provisions, pursuant to subdivision (b)(4)c [(b)(4)b] of this rule, concerning fees and expenses as the court may deem appropriate.

b. Unless manifest injustice would result, (i) the court shall require that the party seeking discovery pay the expert a reasonable fee for time spent in responding to discovery under subdivision (b)(4)a2 of this rule; and (ii) with respect to discovery obtained under subdivision (b)(4)a2 of this rule the court may require the party seeking discovery to pay the other party a fair portion of the fees and expenses reasonably incurred by the latter party in obtaining facts and opinions from the expert.

(c) Protective orders. — Upon motion by a party or by the person from whom discovery is sought, and for good cause shown, the judge of the court in which the action is pending may make any order which justice requires to protect a party or person from unreasonable annoyance, embarrassment, oppression, or undue burden or expense, including one or more of the following: (i) that the discovery not be had; (ii) that the discovery may be had only on specified terms and conditions, including a designation of the time or place; (iii) that the discovery may be had only by a method of discovery other than that selected by the party seeking discovery; (iv) that certain matters not be inquired into, or that the scope of the discovery be limited to certain matters; (v) that discovery be conducted with no one present except persons designated by the court; (vi) that a deposition after being sealed be opened only by order of the court; (vii) that a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information not be disclosed or be disclosed only in a designated way; (viii) that the parties simultaneously file specified documents or information enclosed in sealed envelopes to be opened as directed by the court.

If the motion for a protective order is denied in whole or in part, the court may, on such terms and conditions as are just, order that any party or person provide or permit discovery. The provisions of Rule 37(a)(4) apply to the award of expenses incurred in relation to the motion.

(d) Sequence and timing of discovery. — Unless the court upon motion, for the convenience of parties and witnesses and in the interests of justice, orders otherwise, methods of discovery may be used in any sequence and the fact that a party is conducting discovery, whether by deposition or otherwise, shall not operate to delay any other party's discovery. Any order or rule of court setting the time within which discovery must be completed shall be construed to fix the date after which the pendency of discovery will not be allowed to delay trial or any other proceeding before the court, but shall not be construed to prevent any party from utilizing any procedures afforded under Rules 26 through 36, so long as trial or any hearing before the court is not thereby delayed.

(e) Supplementation of responses. — A party who has responded to a request for discovery with a response that was complete when made is under no duty to supplement his response to include information thereafter acquired, except as follows:

(1) A party is under a duty seasonably to supplement his response with respect to any question directly addressed to (i) the identity and location of persons having knowledge of discoverable matters, and (ii) the identity of each person expected to be called as an expert witness at trial, the subject matter on which he is expected to testify, and the substance of his testimony.

(2) A party is under a duty seasonably to amend a prior response if he obtains information upon the basis of which (i) he knows that the response was incorrect when made, or (ii) he knows that the response though correct when made is no longer true and the circumstances are such that a failure to amend the response is in substance a knowing concealment.

(3) A duty to supplement responses may be imposed by order of the court, agreement of the parties, or at any time prior to trial through new requests for supplementation of prior responses.

(f) Discovery conference. — At any time after commencement of an action the court may direct the attorneys for the parties to appear before it for a conference on the subject of discovery. The court may do so upon motion by the attorney for any party if the motion includes:

(1) A statement of the issues as they then appear;

(2) A proposed plan and schedule of discovery;

(3) Any limitations proposed to be placed on discovery;

(4) Any other proposed orders with respect to discovery; and

(5) A statement showing that the attorney making the motion has made a reasonable effort to reach agreement with opposing attorneys on the matters set forth in the motion. Each party and his attorney are under a duty to participate in good faith in the framing of a discovery plan if a plan is proposed by the attorney for any party. Notice of the motion shall be served on all parties. Objections or additions to matters set forth in the motion shall be served not later than 10 days after service of the motion.

Following the discovery conference, the court shall enter an order tentatively identifying the issues for discovery purposes, establishing a plan and schedule for discovery, setting limitations on discovery, if any; and determining such other matters, including the allocation of expenses, as are necessary for the proper management of discovery in the action. An order may be altered or amended whenever justice so requires.

Subject to the right of a party who properly moves for a discovery conference to prompt convening of the conference, the court may combine the discovery conference with a pretrial conference authorized by Rule 16.

(f1) Medical malpractice discovery conference. — In a medical malpractice action as defined in G.S. 90-21.11, upon the case coming at issue or the filing of a responsive pleading or motion requiring a determination by the court, the judge shall, within 30 days, direct the attorneys for the parties to appear for a discovery conference. At the conference the court may consider the matters set out in Rule 16, and shall:

(1) Rule on all motions;

(2) Establish an appropriate schedule for designating expert witnesses, consistent with a discovery schedule pursuant to subdivision (3), to be complied with by all parties to the action such that there is a deadline for designating all expert witnesses within an appropriate time for all parties to implement discovery mechanisms with regard to the designated expert witnesses;

(3) Establish by order an appropriate discovery schedule designated so that, unless good cause is shown at the conference for a longer time, and subject to further orders of the court, discovery shall be completed within 150 days after the order is issued; nothing herein shall be construed to prevent any party from utilizing any procedures afforded under Rules 26 through 36, so long as trial or any hearing before the court is not thereby delayed; and

(4) Approve any consent order which may be presented by counsel for the parties relating to parts (2) and (3) of this subsection, unless the court finds that the terms of the consent order are unreasonable.

If a party fails to identify an expert witness as ordered, the court shall, upon motion by the moving party, impose an appropriate sanction, which may include dismissal of the action, entry of default against the defendant, or exclusion of the testimony of the expert witness at trial.

(g) Signing of discovery requests, responses, and objections. — Every request for discovery or response or objection thereto made by a party represented by an attorney shall be signed by at least one attorney of record in his individual name, whose address shall be stated. A party who is not represented by an attorney shall sign the request, response, or objection and state his address. The signature of the attorney or party constitutes a certification that he has read the request, response, or objection and that to the best of his knowledge, information, and belief formed after a reasonable inquiry it is: (1) consistent with the rules and warranted by existing law or a good faith argument for the extension, modification, or reversal of existing law; (2) not interposed for any improper purpose, such as to harass or cause unnecessary delay or needless increase in the cost of litigation; and (3) not unreasonable or unduly burdensome or expensive, given the needs of the case, the discovery already had in the case, the amount in controversy, and the importance of the issues at stake in the litigation. If a request, response, or objection is not signed, it shall be stricken unless it is signed promptly after the omission is called to the attention of the party making the request, response, or objection and a party shall not be obligated to take any action with respect to it until it is signed.

If a certification is made in violation of the rule, the court, upon motion or upon its own initiative, shall impose upon the person who made the certification, the party on whose behalf the request, response, or objection is made, or both, an appropriate sanction, which may include an order to pay the amount of the reasonable expenses incurred because of the violation, including a reasonable attorney's fee. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1971, c. 750; 1975, c. 762, s. 2; 1985, c. 603, ss. 1-4; 1987, c. 859, s. 3.)

Comment to this Rule as Originally Enacted. — Section (a). — This section gives a broad right of discovery to any party to take the testimony of any person, including a party, by oral deposition, pursuant to Rule 30, or by written interrogatories, pursuant to Rule 31, for the purpose of discovery or for use as evidence or for both purposes. Under prior practice the depositions of persons might be taken and perpetuated by deposition, and under former § 1-568.1 et seq. the deposition of a party might be taken for the purpose of discovery or for use as evidence or for both purposes.

Under this rule the necessity of obtaining court authorization is avoided, except leave of court must be obtained when plaintiff seeks to take a deposition within 30 days after the commencement of the action. Under prior practice a deposition of a proposed witness might be taken without order of court (former § 8-71). Under former §§ 1-568.10 and 1-568.11, a court order was necessary for examination of an adverse party.

Attendance of witnesses may be compelled by subpoena; attendance of a party by notice. Sanctions are provided in Rule 37(d) in the event a party fails to respond to the notice.

The last sentence of section (a) is much broader than the federal rule, which refers only to "a person confined in prison."

Section (b). — This section indicates the broad scope of examination and that it may cover not only evidence for use at the trial, but also inquiry into matters in themselves inadmissible at trial but which will lead to the discovery of evidence unless the court otherwise directs under Rule 30 (b) or (d).

Aside from the limitations of Rule 30(b) and (d), section (b) contains three limitations: (1) The deponent may be examined regarding any matter which is relevant to the subject matter in the pending action. (2) The deponent may not be examined regarding a matter which is privileged. (3) The deponent shall not be required to produce or submit for inspection any writing or data prescribed in the last sentence of section (b). This limitation (3) is based upon the proposed 1946 amendment to Rule 30(b).

Section (c). — This section is the same as the federal rule.

Section (d). — The use of a deposition at the trial stage is sharply limited by section (d). To be used, a deposition must not only satisfy one of the conditions of section (d), but also the limiting phrase in the first sentence of the section, "so far as admissible under the rules of evidence."

Section (e). — This section is added out of an abundance of caution.

Comment to the 1975 Amendment. — A limited rearrangement of the discovery rules is made, whereby certain rule provisions are transferred, as follows: Existing Rule 26(a) is transferred to Rules 30(a) and 31(a). Existing Rule 26(c) is transferred to Rule 30(c). Existing Rules 26(d) and (e) are transferred to Rule 32. Revisions of the transferred provisions, if any, are discussed in the notes appended to Rules 30, 31, and 32. In addition, Rule 30(b) is transferred to Rule 26(c). The purpose of this rearrangement is to establish Rule 26 as a rule governing discovery in general.

Section (a) — Discovery Devices. — This is a new section listing all of the discovery devices provided in the discovery rules and establishing the relationship between the general provision of Rule 26 and the specific rules for particular discovery devices. The provision that the frequency of use of these methods is not limited confirms existing law. It incorporates in general form a provision now found in Rule 33.

Section (b) — Scope of Discovery. — This section is recast to cover the scope of discovery generally. It regulates the discovery obtainable through any of the discovery devices listed in Rule 26(a).

All provisions as to scope of discovery are subject to the initial qualification that the court may limit discovery in accordance with these rules. Rule 26(c) (transferred from 30(b)) confers broad powers on the courts to regulate or prevent discovery even though the materials sought are within the scope of 26(b), and these powers have always been freely exercised. The new subsections in Rule 26(b) do not change existing law with respect to such situations.

Subsection (b)(1) — In General. — The language is changed to provide for the scope of discovery in general terms, rather than being limited to the scope of depositions. The subsection, although in terms applicable only to depositions, was incorporated by reference in existing Rules 33 and 34. Since decisions as to relevance to the subject matter of the action are made for discovery purposes well in advance of trial, a flexible treatment of relevance is required and the making of discovery, whether voluntary or under court order, is not a concession or a determination of relevance for purposes of trial. The substance of the subdivision represents no substantial change from the corresponding former provision. The provision of this subsection relating to matters within the knowledge of the party conducting discovery is taken from the existing North Carolina provision. It does not appear in the federal rule.

Subsection (b)(2) — Insurance Agreements. — This represents no change from the existing North Carolina provision.

Subsection (b)(3) — Work Product. — North Carolina had adopted a version of this rule in advance of the 1970 amendments to the federal rules. The present amendment would alter the test for compelling production from "injustice or undue hardship" to "substantial need" that cannot be satisfied without "undue hardship." It would also expand the scope of the protection of mental impressions, conclusions, opinions or legal theories to those of an "other representative of a party," e.g., an insurer. The wording of this subsection varies slightly from the federal rule; the basic substance of the subsection, however, remains unchanged.

Party's Right to Own Statement. — An exception to the requirement of this subsection enables a party to secure production of his own statement without any special showing. Ordinarily, a party gives a statement without insisting on a copy because he does not yet have a lawyer and does not understand the legal consequences of his actions. Thus, the statement is given at a time when he functions at a disadvantage. Discrepancies between his trial testimony and earlier statement may result from lapse of memory or ordinary inaccuracy; a written statement produced for the first time at trial may give such discrepancies a prominence which they do not deserve. In appropriate cases the court may order a party to be deposed before his statement is produced. E.g., McCoy v. GMC, 33 F.R.D. 354 (W.D. Pa. 1963); Smith v. Central Linen Serv. Co., 39 F.R.D. 15 (D. Md. 1966); Fernandes v. United Fruit Co., 50 F.R.D. 82 (D. Md. 1970).

In order to clarify and tighten the provision on statements by a party, the term "statement" is defined. The definition is adapted from 18 U.S.C. § 3500(e) (Jencks Act). The statement of a party may of course be that of plaintiff or defendant, and it may be that of an individual or of a corporation or other organization.

Section 8-89.1, which contains a similar provision whose application is restricted to personal injury plaintiffs, is repealed in connection with the enactment of this section.

Witness' Right to Own Statement. — A second exception to the requirement of this subsection permits a nonparty witness to obtain a copy of his own statement without any special showing. Many, though not all, of the considerations supporting a party's right to obtain his statement apply also to the nonparty witness.

Subsection (b)(4) — Trial Preparation; Experts. — This is a new provision dealing with discovery of information (including facts and opinions) obtained by a party from an expert retained by that party in relation to litigation or obtained by the expert and not yet transmitted to the party. The subsection deals with those experts whom the party expects to call as trial witnesses. It should be noted that the subsection does not address itself to the expert whose information was not acquired in preparation for trial but rather because he was an actor or viewer with respect to transactions or occurrences that are part of the subject matter of the lawsuit. Such an expert should be treated as an ordinary witness.

Subdivision (b)(4)a deals with discovery of information obtained by or through experts who will be called as witnesses at trial. The provision is responsive to problems suggested by a relatively recent line of authorities. Many of these cases present intricate and difficult issues as to which expert testimony is likely to be determinative. Prominent among them are food and drug, patent, and condemnation cases.

In cases of this character, a prohibition against discovery of information held by expert witnesses produces in acute form the very evils that discovery has been created to prevent. Effective cross-examination of an expert witness requires advance preparation. The lawyer even with the help of his own experts frequently cannot anticipate the particular approach his adversary's expert will take or the data on which he will base his judgment on the stand. Similarly, effective rebuttal requires advance knowledge of the line of testimony of the other side. If the latter is foreclosed by a rule against discovery, then the narrowing of issues and elimination of surprise which discovery normally produces are frustrated.

Although the trial problems flowing from lack of discovery of expert witnesses are most acute and noteworthy when the case turns largely on experts, the same problems are encountered when a single expert testifies. Thus, subdivision (b)(4)a draws no line between complex and simple cases, or between cases with many experts and those with but one. The rule established by this subdivision is patterned substantially after the result reached by a number of courts in the former absence of such a provision in the federal rules.

Past judicial restrictions on discovery of an adversary's expert, particularly as to his opinions, reflect the fear that one side will benefit unduly from the other's better preparation. The procedure established in subdivision (b)(4)a holds the risk to a minimum. Discovery is limited to trial witnesses, and may be obtained only at a time when the parties know who their expert witnesses will be. A party must as a practical matter prepare his own case in advance of that time, for he can hardly hope to build his case out of his opponent's experts.

Subdivision (b)(4)a provides for discovery of an expert who is to testify at the trial. A party can require one who intends to use the expert to state the substance of the testimony that the expert is expected to give. The court may order further discovery, and it has ample power to regulate its timing and scope and to prevent abuse. Ordinarily, the order for further discovery shall compensate the expert for his time, and may compensate the party who intends to use the expert for past expenses reasonably incurred in obtaining facts or opinions from the expert. Those provisions are likely to discourage abusive practices.

Under subdivision (b)(4)b, the court is directed or authorized to issue protective orders, including an order that the expert be paid a reasonable fee for time spent in responding to discovery, and that the party whose expert is made subject to discovery be paid a fair portion of the fees and expenses that the party incurred in obtaining information from the expert. The court may issue the latter order as a condition of discovery, or it may delay the order until after discovery is completed. These provisions for fees and expenses meet the objection that it is unfair to permit one side to obtain without cost the benefit of an expert's work for which the other side has paid, often a substantial sum.

In ordering discovery under (b)(4)a2, the court has discretion whether to award fees and expenses to the other party; its decision should depend upon whether the discovering party is simply learning about the other party's case or is going beyond this to develop his own case.

Note: The General Assembly deleted from the drafting committee's text a proposed provision identical to Federal Rule 26(b)(4)(B) expressly providing for discovery in very limited circumstances of experts retained in anticipation of litigation or in preparation for trial, but who are not expected to be called as witnesses. Failure to adopt this provision would not appear to foreclose such discovery on a proper showing under Rule 26(b)(3) or Rule 34.

Section (c) — Protective Orders. — The provisions of existing [former] Rule 30(b) are transferred to this section (c), as part of the rearrangement of Rule 26. The language has been changed to give it application to discovery generally.

In addition, drafting changes are made to carry out and clarify the sense of the rule. Insertions are made to avoid any possible implication that a protective order does not extend to "time" as well as to "place" or may not safeguard against "undue burden or expense."

The new reference to trade secrets and other confidential commercial information reflects existing law. The courts have not given trade secrets automatic and complete immunity against disclosure, but have in each case weighed their claim to privacy against the need for disclosure. Frequently, they have been afforded a limited protection.

The section contains new matter relating to sanctions. When a motion for a protective order is made and the court is disposed to deny it, the court may go a step further and issue an order to provide or permit discovery. This will bring the sanctions of Rule 37(b) directly into play. Since the court has heard the contentions of all interested persons, an affirmative order is justified. In addition, the court may require the payment of expenses incurred in relation to the motion.

Section (d) — Sequence and Priority. — This new provision is concerned with the sequence in which parties may proceed with discovery and with related problems of timing. The principal effects of the new provision are first, to eliminate any fixed priority in the sequence of discovery, and second, to make clear and explicit the court's power to establish priority by an order issued in a particular case. North Carolina has not suffered from the problems presented by rules of priority of discovery existing in some other jurisdictions under the original federal rules. This rule will insure that we do not develop any such problems. The last sentence allows discovery to continue to the time of trial so long as it does not result in a delay of trial or of any other proceeding before the court.

Section (e) — Supplementation of Responses. — The rules do not now state whether interrogatories (and questions at deposition as well as requests for inspection and admissions) impose a "continuing burden" on the responding party to supplement his answers if he obtains new information. The issue is acute when new information renders substantially incomplete or inaccurate an answer which was complete and accurate when made. It is essential that the rules provide an answer to this question. The parties can adjust to a rule either way, once they know what it is.

Arguments can be made both ways. Imposition of a continuing burden reduces the proliferation of additional sets of interrogatories. Some courts have adopted local rules establishing such a burden. Others have imposed the burden by decision. On the other hand, there are serious objections to the burden, especially in protracted cases. Although the party signs the answers, it is his lawyer who understands their significance and bears the responsibility to bring answers up to date. In a complex case all sorts of information reaches the party, who little understands its bearing on answers previously given to interrogatories. In practice, therefore, the lawyer under a continuing burden must periodically recheck all interrogatories and canvass all new information. But a full set of new answers may no longer be needed by the interrogating party. Some issues will have been dropped from the case, some questions are now seen as unimportant, and other questions must in any event be reformulated.

Section (e) provides that a party is not under a continuing burden except as expressly provided. An exception is made as to the identity of persons having knowledge of discoverable matters, because of the obvious importance to each side of knowing all witnesses and because information about witnesses routinely comes to each lawyer's attention. Many of the decisions on the issue of a continuing burden have in fact concerned the identity of witnesses. An exception is also made as to expert trial witnesses in order to carry out the provisions of Rule 26(b)(4).

Another exception is made for the situation in which a party, or more frequently his lawyer, obtains actual knowledge that a prior response is incorrect. This exception does not impose a duty to check the accuracy of prior responses, but it prevents knowing concealment by a party or attorney. Finally, a duty to supplement may be imposed by order of the court in a particular case (including an order resulting from a pretrial conference) or by agreement of the parties. A party may of course make a new discovery request which requires supplementation of prior responses.

The duty will normally be enforced, in those limited instances where it is imposed, through sanctions imposed by the trial court, including exclusion of evidence, continuance, or other action, as the court may deem appropriate.

I. IN GENERAL.

Editor's Note. — Some of the cases cited below were decided under section (b) of this rule and § 1A-1, Rule 30 as they stood before the 1975 amendment.

The purpose and intent of this rule is to prevent a party who has discoverable information from making evasive, incomplete, or untimely responses to requests for discovery. Green ex rel. Green v. Maness, 69 N.C. App. 292, 316 S.E.2d 917, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 621, 323 S.E.2d 922 (1984).

The purpose behind section (e) of this rule is to prevent a party with discoverable information from making untimely, evasive, or incomplete responses to requests for discovery. Bumgarner v. Reneau, 332 N.C. 624, 422 S.E.2d 686 (1992).

Existence of Privilege Is Determined by Court, Not Parties. — Unilateral determination by a party that documents are privileged, and on that account may be withheld from discovery in defiance of a court order to produce them, rests the matter upon the ipse dixit of each defendant and not upon the judgment of the court. Determination of whether a privilege applies must be by the court, not the individual claiming the privilege, and the court may conduct a preliminary inquiry into its propriety. Midgett v. Crystal Dawn Corp., 58 N.C. App. 734, 294 S.E.2d 386 (1982).

Remedy for Error in Discovery Orders Is Not Open Defiance. — When a party willfully disobeys an order entered with personal and subject matter jurisdiction, a judgment of contempt (a permissible § 1A-1, Rule 37 sanction) is appropriate even if the order was erroneously issued. Such an order is not void and is entitled to respect. The proper remedy for any error therein is not by open defiance, but by appeal. Midgett v. Crystal Dawn Corp., 58 N.C. App. 734, 294 S.E.2d 386 (1982).

In Camera Inspection in Discretion of Court. — Whether to conduct an in camera inspection of documents appears, as a general rule, to rest in the sound discretion of the trial court. Midgett v. Crystal Dawn Corp., 58 N.C. App. 734, 294 S.E.2d 386 (1982).

The trial court has express authority under § 1A-1, Rule 37 to impose sanctions on a party who balks at discovery requests. Green ex rel. Green v. Maness, 69 N.C. App. 292, 316 S.E.2d 917, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 621, 323 S.E.2d 922 (1984).

The imposition of sanctions under § 1A-1, Rule 37 for failure to comply with section (e) of this rule is within the sound discretion of the trial judge. Willoughby v. Wilkins, 65 N.C. App. 626, 310 S.E.2d 90 (1983), cert. denied, 310 N.C. 631, 315 S.E.2d 697, 315 S.E.2d 698 (1984); Bumgarner v. Reneau, 332 N.C. 624, 422 S.E.2d 686 (1992).

Seasonable Supplemental Responses. — Defendant's supplemental response to interrogatories was not rendered "seasonable" within the meaning and intent of subsection (e)(1) of this rule by the mere fact that there was no occasion for imposition of sanctions for failing to respond to discovery request with due diligence and good faith. Green ex rel. Green v. Maness, 69 N.C. App. 292, 316 S.E.2d 917, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 621, 323 S.E.2d 922 (1984).

Supplemental answers to interrogatories are not seasonable when the answers are made so close to the time of trial that the party seeking discovery thereby is prevented from preparing adequately for trial, even with the exercise of due diligence. Willoughby v. Wilkins, 65 N.C. App. 626, 310 S.E.2d 90 (1983), cert. denied, 310 N.C. 631, 315 S.E.2d 697, 315 S.E.2d 698 (1984); Green ex rel. Green v. Maness, 69 N.C. App. 292, 316 S.E.2d 917, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 621, 323 S.E.2d 922 (1984).

As to pretrial discovery at common law for criminal or civil litigants, see News & Observer Publishing Co. v. State ex rel. Starling, 312 N.C. 276, 322 S.E.2d 133 (1984).

No right of inspection of public documents existed at common law when inspection was sought merely to satisfy curiosity. News & Observer Publishing Co. v. State ex rel. Starling, 312 N.C. 276, 322 S.E.2d 133 (1984).

Statutes have now replaced former equitable rights of discovery and bills of discovery in equity have been abolished. News & Observer Publishing Co. v. State ex rel. Starling, 312 N.C. 276, 322 S.E.2d 133 (1984).

Civil discovery is now governed by statute. The Supreme Court of the United States has indicated that rules governing discovery in civil cases are a matter of legislative grace. News & Observer Publishing Co. v. State ex rel. Starling, 312 N.C. 276, 322 S.E.2d 133 (1984).

Civil litigants enjoy no absolute right to discovery of documents in the hands of others. News & Observer Publishing Co. v. State ex rel. Starling, 312 N.C. 276, 322 S.E.2d 133 (1984).

Court Permitted Further Discovery. — Where in response to plaintiffs' interrogatories concerning the facts and opinions to which each of defendant's experts would testify, and the grounds therefor, defendant responded with the same standardized statement for each of his expert witnesses which was largely a disclaimer of defendant's negligence, the court acted within its discretion in permitting further discovery. Green ex rel. Green v. Maness, 69 N.C. App. 403, 316 S.E.2d 911, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 621, 323 S.E.2d 922 (1984).

Amendment of Discovery Schedule. — A medical malpractice plaintiff was not entitled to an amendment of a discovery scheduling order so that plaintiff could depose new experts, even if this were done within the deadline of the original discovery schedule, since it might not have been feasible for the defendants to depose such experts within the deadline. Alston v. Duke Univ., — N.C. App. —, 514 S.E.2d 298 (1999).

Failure to Address Claims of Privilege. — Trial judge erred in releasing documents to the plaintiffs without addressing the defendant's Rule 26(b) claims of privilege. Hall v. Cumberland County Hosp. Sys., 121 N.C. App. 425, 466 S.E.2d 317, cert. denied, 343 N.C. 122, 468 S.E.2d 780 (1996).

Where an order was entered allowing plaintiff to examine defendants pursuant to former procedure for the purpose of securing information to file a complaint, plaintiff had a vested right to conduct such examination and did not need to move for an adverse examination under either this rule or § 1A-1, Rule 27(b) upon enactment of the Rules of Civil Procedure. Williams v. Blount, 14 N.C. App. 139, 187 S.E.2d 464 (1972).

Sanction for Taking Deposition in Violation of Rules. — Striking of the notice of the taking of a deposition and prohibiting its further use was a reasonable sanction for a deposition procured in violation of deposition rules, even though it was defendant's counsel, and not defendant itself, who committed the acts giving rise to the sanction. Turner v. Duke Univ., 101 N.C. App. 276, 399 S.E.2d 402, cert. denied, 329 N.C. 504, 407 S.E.2d 552 (1991).

Sanctions for Improper Discovery. — A motion under the more specific rule governing sanctions in the context of discovery responses is the proper avenue for sanctioning improper conduct relative to discovery. Brooks v. Giesey, 334 N.C. 303, 432 S.E.2d 339 (1993).

Sanctions Under Subsection (g). — The imposition of sanctions for discovery abuses under subsection (g) informs offending counsel of exactly what action is being sanctioned. This process alleviates any due process concerns an attorney might raise by claiming not to know which of his or her actions merit sanctions. Brooks v. Giesey, 334 N.C. 303, 432 S.E.2d 339 (1993).

Applied in Continental Ins. Co. v. Foard, 9 N.C. App. 630, 177 S.E.2d 431 (1970); Harris v. Parker, 17 N.C. App. 606, 195 S.E.2d 121 (1973); Hardison v. Williams, 21 N.C. App. 670, 205 S.E.2d 551 (1974); Peterson v. Johnson, 28 N.C. App. 527, 221 S.E.2d 920 (1976); Tennessee-Carolina Transp., Inc. v. Strick Corp., 291 N.C. 618, 231 S.E.2d 597 (1977); Craig v. Kessing, 36 N.C. App. 389, 244 S.E.2d 721 (1978); Bullock v. Insurance Co. of N. Am., 39 N.C. App. 386, 250 S.E.2d 732 (1979); Dworsky v. Travelers Ins. Co., 49 N.C. App. 446, 271 S.E.2d 522 (1980); Four Seasons Homeowners Ass'n v. Sellers, 62 N.C. App. 205, 302 S.E.2d 848 (1983); Industrotech Constructors, Inc. v. Duke Univ., 67 N.C. App. 741, 314 S.E.2d 272 (1984); Alford v. Shaw, 72 N.C. App. 537, 324 S.E.2d 878 (1985); Jennings v. Jessen, 103 N.C. App. 739, 407 S.E.2d 264 (1991); Powers v. Parisher, 104 N.C. App. —, 513 S.E.2d 598 (1999).

Stated in Shepherd v. Oliver, 57 N.C. App. 188, 290 S.E.2d 761 (1982); Cantwell v. Cantwell, 109 N.C. App. 395, 427 S.E.2d 129 (1993).

II. SCOPE OF DISCOVERY GENERALLY.

Section (b) of this rule is not unconstitutional on the grounds that it deprives a party of property without due process of law, authorizes an unreasonable search and seizure, denies equal protection of the laws, or impairs the right to contract. Marks v. Thompson, 282 N.C. 174, 192 S.E.2d 311 (1972).

Enforced discovery as authorized by the provisions of this rule is not an unwarranted invasion of defendant's privacy. Marks v. Thompson, 282 N.C. 174, 192 S.E.2d 311 (1972).

The goal of the discovery rules is to facilitate the disclosure, prior to trial, of any unprivileged information that is relevant and material to the lawsuit so as to permit the narrowing and sharpening of basic issues and facts to go to trial. Willoughby v. Wilkins, 65 N.C. App. 626, 310 S.E.2d 90 (1983), cert. denied, 310 N.C. 631, 315 S.E.2d 697, 315 S.E.2d 698 (1984).

Matters Relevant to Claims and Defenses Within Scope of Discovery. — The scope of discovery is not limited to matters relevant to claims for relief, but also includes matters relevant to defenses. Shellhorn v. Brad Ragan, Inc., 38 N.C. App. 310, 248 S.E.2d 103, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 735, 249 S.E.2d 804 (1978).

The provision of section (b) of this rule that "it is not ground for objection that the testimony will be inadmissible at the trial if the testimony sought appears reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence" refers only to testimony that will or might be inadmissible at trial. Wright v. Wright, 281 N.C. 159, 188 S.E.2d 317 (1972).

The relevancy test for discovery is not the same as the relevancy test for admissibility into evidence. Shellhorn v. Brad Ragan, Inc., 38 N.C. App. 310, 248 S.E.2d 103, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 735, 249 S.E.2d 804 (1978).

The test of relevancy under this rule is not the stringent test required at trial. Willis v. Duke Power Co., 291 N.C. 19, 229 S.E.2d 191 (1976).

The test of relevancy under subsection (b) of this rule differs from the more stringent test of relevancy under § 8C-1, Rule 401. Adams v. Lovette, 105 N.C. App. 23, 411 S.E.2d 620, aff'd, 332 N.C. 659, 422 S.E.2d 575 (1992).

And determination that information is relevant for discovery is not conclusive of its admissibility as relevant evidence at trial. Shellhorn v. Brad Ragan, Inc., 38 N.C. App. 310, 248 S.E.2d 103, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 735, 249 S.E.2d 804 (1978).

When Information Is Relevant for Discovery. — To be relevant for purposes of discovery, the information need only be "reasonably calculated" to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. Shellhorn v. Brad Ragan, Inc., 38 N.C. App. 310, 248 S.E.2d 103, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 735, 249 S.E.2d 804 (1978).

Records Irrelevant for Discovery Purposes. — Whether or not plaintiff's replacement had a relationship with a high school student during his previous employment, the complete student records at high school and school personnel records were irrelevant to whether defendants intentionally inflicted emotional distress on plaintiff, constructively and wrongfully discharged her, or maliciously interfered with her contract; therefore, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying motion to compel discovery. Wagoner v. Elkin City Schs. Bd. of Educ., 113 N.C. App. 579, 440 S.E.2d 119, cert. denied, 336 N.C. 615, 447 S.E.2d 414 (1994).

The underlying claims for relief must be aligned with documents requested for discovery to determine if the documents are within the scope of discovery. Shellhorn v. Brad Ragan, Inc., 38 N.C. App. 310, 248 S.E.2d 103, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 735, 249 S.E.2d 804 (1978).

Filing of Answer Does Not Waive Right Against Self-Incrimination. — The mere filing of a verified answer does not operate to effectuate a waiver of the right to assert the privilege against self-incrimination. Gunn v. Hess, 90 N.C. App. 131, 367 S.E.2d 399 (1988).

The right of discovery must yield to the privilege against compulsory self-incrimination. Stone v. Martin, 56 N.C. App. 473, 289 S.E.2d 898, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 306 N.C. 392, 294 S.E.2d 220 (1982).

Courts cannot compel disclosure of information which would tend to incriminate the person from whom it is sought and cannot impose sanctions on one who refuses to disclose privileged information. Stone v. Martin, 56 N.C. App. 473, 289 S.E.2d 898, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 306 N.C. 392, 294 S.E.2d 220 (1982).

Relevant matter that is privileged is not discoverable unless interests of justice outweigh the protected privilege. Shellhorn v. Brad Ragan, Inc., 38 N.C. App. 310, 248 S.E.2d 103, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 735, 249 S.E.2d 804 (1978).

Rule Does Not Affect Privacy Surrounding Confidential Relationships. — The General Assembly, in enacting the Rules of Civil Procedure, did not contemplate that § 1A-1, Rule 33 and section (b) of this rule would enable husband and wife, in actions between them, to require the other to answer interrogatories relating to acts of adultery or conduct from which adultery might be implied during the subsistence of their marriage; the General Assembly did not intend in such manner to remove the cloak of privacy surrounding the confidential relationships of husband and wife. Wright v. Wright, 281 N.C. 159, 188 S.E.2d 317 (1972).

Protection of Confidential Commercial Information. — The courts under this rule should be careful in the interests of justice to prevent disclosure of confidential commercial information to avoid annoyance, embarrassment or oppression, particularly where the action is between competitors. Harrington Mfg. Co. v. Powell Mfg. Co., 26 N.C. App. 414, 216 S.E.2d 379, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 242, 217 S.E.2d 679 (1975).

Discovery Order Held to Violate Right Against Self-Incrimination. — In an action for alienation of affections and criminal conversation with plaintiff's husband, trial court's order compelling defendant to answer interrogatories which asked in effect whether she had committed fornication or adultery violated defendant's right against self-incrimination. Gunn v. Hess, 90 N.C. App. 131, 367 S.E.2d 399 (1988).

242, 217 S.E.2d 679 (1975).

Sections 8-56 and 50-10 are distinguishable from section (b) of this rule, in that they relate to the disqualification of husband or wife as a witness with reference to specific matters, not to the admissibility or inadmissibility of the testimony of a qualified witness. Wright v. Wright, 281 N.C. 159, 188 S.E.2d 317 (1972).

Orders regarding matters of discovery are within the discretion of the trial court and will not be upset on appeal absent a showing of abuse of discretion. Hudson v. Hudson, 34 N.C. App. 144, 237 S.E.2d 479, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 589, 239 S.E.2d 264 (1977); Ritter v. Kimball, 67 N.C. App. 333, 313 S.E.2d 1 (1984); Weaver v. Weaver, 88 N.C. App. 634, 364 S.E.2d 706, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 330, 368 S.E.2d 875 (1988).

The determination of whether and when to convene a discovery conference is a matter left to the discretion of the trial judge. Gibbons v. CIT Group/Sales Fin., Inc., 101 N.C. App. 502, 400 S.E.2d 104, cert. denied, 329 N.C. 496, 407 S.E.2d 856 (1991), cert. denied, 329 N.C. 496, 407 S.E.2d 856 (1991).

Discovery Plan Required for Discovery Conference. — While § 1A-1, Rule 26(f) requires the court to impose a discovery plan if a discovery conference is held, court is not obligated to impose discovery plan if no discovery conference has been held. Gibbons v. CIT Group/Sales Fin., Inc., 101 N.C. App. 502, 400 S.E.2d 104, cert. denied, 329 N.C. 496, 407 S.E.2d 856 (1991), cert. denied, 329 N.C. 496, 407 S.E.2d 856 (1991).

Though discovery in annexation proceedings is not altogether forbidden, its scope is necessarily limited by the nature of the proceeding. Campbell v. City of Greensboro, 70 N.C. App. 252, 319 S.E.2d 323, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 312 N.C. 492, 322 S.E.2d 553 (1984).

Information Regarding Expert Witnesses. — This rule permits a party to obtain by interrogatories from another party three things: (1) The identity of any expert witness the other party expects to call at trial; (2) the subject matter on which the expert is expected to testify; and (3) the substance of the facts and opinions to which the expert is expected to testify and a summary of the grounds for each opinion. Mack v. Moore, 91 N.C. App. 478, 372 S.E.2d 314 (1988), appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 323 N.C. 704, 377 S.E.2d 225 (1989).

When Identity of Expert Is Discoverable. — Neither this rule not its federal counterpart speaks specifically to the issue of whether a party is entitled to discover the identity of a nontestifying expert. Mack v. Moore, 91 N.C. App. 478, 372 S.E.2d 314 (1988), appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 323 N.C. 704, 377 S.E.2d 225 (1989).

Before it can be determined if the identity of an expert is discoverable, the party resisting discovery should set forth with some specificity the reasons he believes the expert's identity is not discoverable. The propounding party is then entitled to a determination of the expert's status based on an in camera review by the trial court. Mack v. Moore, 91 N.C. App. 478, 372 S.E.2d 314 (1988), appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 323 N.C. 704, 377 S.E.2d 225 (1989).

If an expert (1) has facts and opinions otherwise discoverable under Subsection (b)(1) of this rule, (2) acquired or developed such facts and opinions in anticipation of litigation or for trial, and (3) is expected to be called as an expert witness at trial, subsection (b)(4) of this rule is controlling and his identity is discoverable. If such an expert is not expected to testify, the identity of that expert is not discoverable. Mack v. Moore, 91 N.C. App. 478, 372 S.E.2d 314 (1988), appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 323 N.C. 704, 377 S.E.2d 225 (1989).

Where witness was both a fact and expert (doctor) witness, he could be deposed without a court order, and his testimony could only be limited by objection during the deposition if he was questioned regarding his expert opinion. Green ex rel. Green v. Maness, 69 N.C. App. 403, 316 S.E.2d 911, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 621, 323 S.E.2d 922 (1984).

Other Witnesses and Exhibits. — With the exception of expert trial witnesses, whose identities are discoverable under the provisions of subdivision (b)(4) of this rule, a party is not entitled to find out, by discovery, which witnesses his opponent intends to call, or the documents and exhibits a party opponent intends to present at the trial; instead, the names of witnesses and lists of exhibits a party opponent intends to use at trial are obtainable through the pretrial conference. King v. Koucouliotes, 108 N.C. App. 751, 425 S.E.2d 462, cert. granted, 334 N.C. 163, 432 S.E.2d 361, discretionary review improvidently granted, 335 N.C. 164, 436 S.E.2d 132 (1993).

Accident Reports. — Accident report was held to be discoverable. Cook v. Wake County Hosp. Sys., 125 N.C. App. 618, 482 S.E.2d 546 (1997).

Defendant hospital's accident reporting policy existed to serve a number of nonlitigation, business purposes which imposed a duty on employees to report any extraordinary occurrences within the hospital to risk management; thus, absent any salient facts, it could not be said that hospital employee prepared accident report because of the prospect of litigation. Cook v. Wake County Hosp. Sys., 125 N.C. App. 618, 482 S.E.2d 546 (1997).

III. INSURANCE AGREEMENTS.

The 1971 amendment to section (b) of this rule, adding a paragraph relating to insurance agreements, was a valid exercise of legislative authority. Marks v. Thompson, 282 N.C. 174, 192 S.E.2d 311 (1972).

Purpose of 1971 Amendment. — The promotion of settlements was not the primary purpose of the 1971 amendment to section (b) of this rule. Rather, its primary purpose was to enable both plaintiff and defendant to have equal information concerning all facts necessary to enable each to make a fair evaluation of his position incident to settlement negotiations. Marks v. Thompson, 282 N.C. 174, 192 S.E.2d 311 (1972).

Effect of 1971 Amendment. — The 1971 amendment to section (b) of this rule conferred upon a party the legal right to obtain discovery of the existence and contents of insurance agreements referred to therein. Marks v. Thompson, 282 N.C. 174, 192 S.E.2d 311 (1972).

Section (b) of this rule authorizes pretrial discovery of information concerning automobile liability insurance carried by a defendant where the only issues raised by the pleadings relate to negligence, contributory negligence and damage. Marks v. Thompson, 14 N.C. App. 272, 188 S.E.2d 22, aff'd, 282 N.C. 174, 192 S.E.2d 311 (1972).

Authority of Judge When Party Exercises Right to Obtain Discovery of Insurance Agreement. — When a party elects to exercise the legal right to obtain discovery of the existence and contents of insurance agreements under section (b) of this rule, the discretionary authority conferred upon the judge relates only to the time, place and circumstances of such discovery. Marks v. Thompson, 282 N.C. 174, 192 S.E.2d 311 (1972).

IV. TRIAL PREPARATION.

Materials Prepared in Anticipation of Litigation Protected. — Any materials prepared in anticipation of any litigation by the party from whom discovery is sought are protected under subsection (b)(3) of this rule. The protection is allowed not only materials prepared after the other party has secured an attorney, but also those prepared under circumstances in which a reasonable person might anticipate a possibility of litigation. Willis v. Duke Power Co., 291 N.C. 19, 229 S.E.2d 191 (1976).

Scope of Attorney-Client Privilege. — Protection of the attorney-client privilege is absolute under this rule and the privilege under the rule is identical in scope to the traditional privilege. Willis v. Duke Power Co., 291 N.C. 19, 229 S.E.2d 191 (1976).

Scope of "Work Product" Exception. — Although not a privilege, the "work product" or trial preparation exception is a "qualified immunity" and extends to all materials prepared "in anticipation of litigation or for trial by or for another party or by or for that other party's consultant, surety, indemnitor, insurer or agent." Willis v. Duke Power Co., 291 N.C. 19, 229 S.E.2d 191 (1976).

Materials prepared in the ordinary course of business are not protected under subsection (b)(3) of this rule, nor does the protection extend to facts known by any party. Willis v. Duke Power Co., 291 N.C. 19, 229 S.E.2d 191 (1976).

Physician Not Retained for Purpose of Litigation. — In an action for negligence in treatment and diagnosis allegedly causing the death of a patient, taking the deposition of a physician after the date set by a court order for identifying and deposing expert witnesses was not a violation of subsection (b)(4) of this rule where, even though all doctors may be considered experts in that they possess a specialized knowledge of medicine, the physician was not retained for the purpose of litigation but had treated plaintiff's wife and his knowledge of her case arose before her death, and the purpose of the deposition was to elicit the doctor's observations as to her medical condition. Turner v. Duke Univ., 91 N.C. App. 446, 372 S.E.2d 320 (1988), rev'd on other grounds, 325 N.C. 152, 381 S.E.2d 706 (1989), aff'd, 101 N.C. App. 276, 399 S.E.2d 402, cert. denied, 329 N.C. 504, 407 S.E.2d 552 (1991).

Defense counsel may not interview medical malpractice plaintiff's nonparty treating physicians privately without plaintiff's express consent. Defendant instead must utilize the statutorily recognized methods of discovery enumerated in this rule. Crist v. Moffatt, 326 N.C. 326, 389 S.E.2d 41 (1990).

Doctor Not Always Expert Witness. — Although, by general definition, all doctors may be considered experts in that they possess a specialized knowledge of medicine beyond that of the layman, not every role of a doctor as a witness in a legal controversy is in the capacity of an "expert" witness. Turner v. Duke Univ., 325 N.C. 152, 381 S.E.2d 706 (1989), aff'd, 101 N.C. App. 276, 399 S.E.2d 402, cert. denied, 329 N.C. 504, 407 S.E.2d 552 (1991).

In a malpractice case, the Court of Appeals correctly concluded that in deposing doctor after July 17, 1987, university did not violate order requiring identification and deposition of expert witnesses prior to that date; university properly listed doctor as an ordinary witness since doctor was not questioned about the standard of patient's care at the university, the university did not retain doctor for the purpose of litigation, his knowledge of patient's case arose before her death and before the litigation, and the purpose of the doctor's depositions was to elicit his observations as to the patient's medical condition. Turner v. Duke Univ., 325 N.C. 152, 381 S.E.2d 706 (1989) ??? aff'd, 101 N.C. App. 276, 399 S.E.2d 402, cert. denied, 329

Inadequate Time to Prepare Response as Grounds for Continuance. — In malpractice action defendant's supplemental response to plaintiffs' interrogatories and plaintiffs' deposing of the new expert defense witness disclosed thereby a little over one day before trial began came too close to trial time to allow plaintiffs adequate time to prepare a response to the newly disclosed information; thus trial court erred in refusing to grant plaintiffs' motion for continuance. Green ex rel. Green v. Maness, 69 N.C. App. 403, 316 S.E.2d 911, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 621, 323 S.E.2d 922 (1984).

V. PROTECTIVE ORDERS.

The trial judge's order under section (c) of this rule is discretionary and is reviewable only for abuse of that discretion. Booker v. Everhart, 33 N.C. App. 1, 234 S.E.2d 46 (1977), rev'd on other grounds, 294 N.C. 146, 240 S.E.2d 360 (1978).

The trial judge does not have unlimited authority to issue a protective order. An order under section (c) of this rule is, however, discretionary, and is reviewable only for abuse of discretion. Williams v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 67 N.C. App. 271, 312 S.E.2d 905 (1984); Ritter v. Kimball, 67 N.C. App. 333, 313 S.E.2d 1 (1984).

Protective orders pursuant to section (c) of this rule are within the trial court's discretion and will only be disturbed for an abuse of discretion. Hartman v. Hartman, 82 N.C. App. 167, 346 S.E.2d 196, cert. denied as to additional issues, 318 N.C. 506, 349 S.E.2d 860 (1986), aff'd, 319 N.C. 396, 354 S.E.2d 239 (1987).

Sanctions. — The trial court properly denied the plaintiff's motion for relief from a judgment under this rule that struck her designation of an expert witness, where the plaintiff sought no extension of time to designate expert witnesses in a medical malpractice case, did not offer any excuse for the late designation, and acknowledged that the failure to designate was due to her attorney's negligence. Briley v. Farabow, 348 N.C. 537, 501 S.E.2d 649 (1998).

Protective Order Upheld. — Order of trial court granting plaintiff's counsel's motion for a protective order, made pursuant to a notice filed by defendant's counsel of an intention to depose plaintiff's counsel and to videotape the proceeding, whereby an oral deposition would not be had, but defendant would be allowed to use interrogatories, did not constitute an abuse of discretion. Weaver v. Weaver, 88 N.C. App. 634, 364 S.E.2d 706, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 330, 368 S.E.2d 875 (1988).

Protective order was appropriate in malpractice action where request was tardy and constituted an undue burden as it covered voluminous medical records replete with confidential information that would require exhaustive scrutiny and extensive redaction. Fallis v. Watauga Medical Ctr., Inc., — N.C. App. —, 510 S.E.2d 199 (1999).

Award of expenses in malpractice case against defendant was justified under section (c) of this rule because defendant's motion to quash was denied and under § 1A-1, Rule 37(a)(4) because plaintiffs' motion to compel was granted. Green ex rel. Green v. Maness, 69 N.C. App. 403, 316 S.E.2d 911, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 621, 323 S.E.2d 922 (1984).

Nullified by Dismissal. — Where plaintiff entered a dismissal in her action for claim and delivery, her argument that trial court erred in entering protective order concerning possession was moot, as the protective order was nullified by plaintiff's dismissal. Doe v. Duke Univ., 118 N.C. App. 406, 455 S.E.2d 470 (1995).

VI. DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW.

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former § 8-71.

The competency, in proper cases, of written depositions for the production of proof in civil actions is unquestioned. In such cases, it sufficiently complies with the constitutional mandate if the testimony was taken under oath in the manner prescribed by law, with opportunity to cross-examine. Chesson v. Kieckhefer Container Co., 223 N.C. 378, 26 S.E.2d 904 (1943).

Right of Cross-Examination. — Where a cause has been referred and regularly proceeded with before a commissioner to take a deposition therein, the party has a right to cross-examine the witnesses of the opposing party, which may not be denied him as a matter of law. Sugg v. St. Mary's Oil Engine Co., 193 N.C. 814, 138 S.E. 169 (1927).

Taking of Deposition Optional. — A party may take a deposition; he is not obliged to do so and it is optional with him whether he will or not. Sparrow v. Blount, 90 N.C. 514 (1884).

Former § 8-71 did not contemplate taking the deposition of a person disqualified to give evidence in a case. Yow v. Pittman, 241 N.C. 69, 84 S.E.2d 297 (1954); Waldron Buick Co. v. GMC, 251 N.C. 201, 110 S.E.2d 870 (1959); Lockwood v. McCaskill, 261 N.C. 754, 136 S.E.2d 67 (1964).

Defendants could not take the deposition of plaintiff's physician, because under § 8-53 he was disqualified to testify as to information he acquired in attending plaintiff in a professional capacity. Waldron Buick Co. v. GMC, 251 N.C. 201, 110 S.E.2d 870 (1959).

Hence, it had to be considered in connection with § 8-53, relating to confidential communications between physician and patient. Yow v. Pittman, 241 N.C. 69, 84 S.E.2d 297 (1954); Waldron Buick Co. v. GMC, 251 N.C. 201, 110 S.E.2d 870 (1959); Lockwood v. McCaskill, 261 N.C. 754, 136 S.E.2d 67 (1964).

No Authority to Enter Order in Chambers for Pretrial Examination of Physician Regarding Confidential Communications. — The judge of the superior court has no authority to enter an order in chambers for the pretrial examination of a physician in regard to confidential communications of his patient. Yow v. Pittman, 241 N.C. 69, 84 S.E.2d 297 (1954).

Leading Questions. — It is discretionary with the trial judge whether or not answers to leading questions shall be striken out of a deposition. Bank v. Carr, 130 N.C. 479, 41 S.E. 876 (1902).

Rule 27. Depositions before action or pending appeal.

(1) Petition. — A person who desires to perpetuate his own testimony or that of another person regarding any matter may file a verified petition in the appropriate court in a county where any expected adverse party resides. The petition shall be entitled in the name of the petitioner and shall show: (i) that the petitioner expects that he, or his personal representative, heirs, legatees or devisees, will be a party to an action cognizable in any court, but that he is presently unable to bring it or cause it to be brought, (ii) the subject matter of the expected action and his reasons for desiring to perpetuate it, (iii) the facts which he desires to establish by the proposed testimony and his reasons for desiring to perpetuate it, (iv) the names or a description of the persons he expects will be adverse parties and their addresses so far as known, and (v) the names and addresses of the persons to be examined and the substance of the testimony which he expects to elicit from each, and shall ask for an order authorizing the petitioner to take the depositions of the persons to be examined named in the petition, for the purpose of perpetuating their testimony.

(2) Notice and Service. — The petitioner shall thereafter serve a notice upon each person named in the petition as an expected adverse party, together with a copy of the petition, stating that the petitioner will apply to the court, at a time and place named therein, for the order described in the petition. At least 20 days before the date of hearing (or within such time as the court may direct) the notice shall be served in the manner provided in Rule 4(j)(1) or (2) for service of summons; but if such service cannot with due diligence be made upon any expected adverse party named in the petition, the court may make such order as is just for service by publication or otherwise, and shall appoint, for persons not served in the manner provided in Rule 4(j)(1) or (2), an attorney who shall represent them, in case they are not otherwise represented. If any expected adverse party is a minor or incompetent the provisions of Rule 17(c) apply.

(3) Order and Examination. — If the court is satisfied that the perpetuation of the testimony may prevent a failure or delay of justice, it shall make an order designating or describing the persons whose depositions may be taken and specifying the subject matter of the examination and whether the depositions shall be taken upon oral examination or written questions. The depositions may then be taken in accordance with these rules; and the court may make orders of the character provided for by Rules 34 and 35. For the purpose of applying these rules to depositions for perpetuating testimony, each reference therein to the court in which the action is pending shall be deemed to refer to the court in which the petition for such deposition was filed.

(4) Use of Deposition. — If a deposition to perpetuate testimony is taken under these rules or if, although not so taken, it would be admissible in evidence in the courts of the United States or the state in which it is taken, it may be used in any action involving the same subject matter subsequently brought in a court of this State in accordance with the provisions of Rule 32(a), or in any other court under whose rules it is admissible.

(b) Pending appeal. — If an appeal has been taken from the determination of any court or if petition for review or certiorari has been served and filed, or before the taking of an appeal or the filing of a petition for review or certiorari if the time therefor has not expired, the court in which the determination was made may allow the taking of the depositions of witnesses to perpetuate their testimony for use in the event of further proceedings in the trial court. In such case the party who desires to perpetuate the testimony may make a motion in the trial court for leave to take the depositions, upon the same notice and service thereof as if the action was pending in the trial court. The motion shall show (i) the names and addresses of the persons to be examined and the substance of the testimony which he expects to elicit from each; (ii) the reasons for perpetuating their testimony. If the court finds that the perpetuation of the testimony is proper to avoid a failure or delay of justice, it may make an order allowing the depositions to be taken and may make orders of the character provided for by Rules 34 and 35, and thereupon the depositions may be taken and used in the same manner and under the same conditions as are prescribed in these rules for depositions taken in actions pending in the trial court.

(c) Perpetuation by action. — This rule does not limit the power of a court to entertain an action to perpetuate testimony. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1975, c. 762, s. 2.)

COMMENT

Comment to this Rule as Originally Enacted. — The objectives here are to provide simple procedures for discovery when the purpose is preservation of testimony or the obtaining of information with which to prepare a complaint and further, in appropriate cases, to provide for discovery pending appeal.

Section (a). — Former §§ 8-85 to 8-88 provided for a special proceeding or a civil action to perpetuate testimony. Under section (a), the most significant change in respect to perpetuating testimony is that no summons is necessary. But there is a requirement of notice.

Section (b) [Now Deleted]. — This section deals with discovery for the purpose of obtaining information to prepare a complaint. It carries forward all of the protections to a prospective defendant incorporated in former § 1-121. But, again, no service of process is necessary. After the contemplated order is obtained, the procedure set forth in the other discovery rules will apply.

Section (c) [Now Section (b)]. — This section adds something new in providing for the situation where it may be desirable to take a deposition pending an appeal.

Comment to the 1975 Amendment. — This amendment deletes present Rule 27(b) which provided for depositions before action to obtain information to prepare a complaint. This provision and its predecessor generated about one half of all the appeals from orders relating to discovery in the North Carolina courts, most of them determined adversely to the party who initiated the procedure. Whatever may have been the justification for this procedure under the former code pleading practice in North Carolina, the adoption of the liberalized pleading requirements of Rule 8 would appear to have eliminated the necessity for retaining it.

The former sections (c) and (d) are redesignated as sections (b) and (c) respectively.

Rule 28. Persons before whom depositions may be taken.

(a) Within the United States. — Within the United States or within a territory or insular possession subject to the dominion of the United States, depositions shall be taken before a person authorized to administer oaths by the laws of this State, of the United States or of the place where the examination is held, or before a person appointed by the court in which the action is pending. A person so appointed has power to administer oaths and take testimony.

(b) In foreign countries. — Depositions may be taken in a foreign country:

(1) Pursuant to any applicable treaty or convention;

(2) Pursuant to a letter of request, whether or not captioned a letter rogatory;

(3) On notice before a person authorized to administer oaths in the place where the examination is held, either by the law thereof or by the law of the United States; or

(4) Before a person commissioned by the court, and a person so commissioned shall have the power by virtue of his commission to administer any necessary oath and take testimony. A commission or a letter of request shall be issued on application and notice and on terms that are just and appropriate. It is not requisite to the issuance of a commission or a letter of request that the taking of the deposition in any other manner is impracticable or inconvenient; and both a commission and a letter of request may be issued in proper cases. A notice or commission may designate the person before whom the deposition is to be taken either by name or descriptive title. A letter of request may be addressed "To the Appropriate Authority in (here name the country)." When a letter of request or any other device is used pursuant to any applicable treaty or convention, it shall be captioned in the form prescribed by that treaty or convention. Evidence obtained in response to a letter of request need not be excluded merely because the testimony was not taken under oath, or any similar departure from the requirements for depositions taken within the United States under these rules.

(c) Disqualification for interest. — Unless the parties agree otherwise by stipulation as provided in Rule 29, no deposition shall be taken before a person who is any of the following:

(1) A relative, employee, or attorney of any of the parties;

(2) A relative or employee of an attorney of the parties;

(3) Financially interested in the action; or

(4) An independent contractor if the contractor or the contractor's principal is under a blanket contract for the court reporting services with an attorney of the parties, party to the action, or party having a financial interest in the action. Notwithstanding the disqualification under this rule, the party desiring to take the deposition under a stipulation shall disclose the disqualification in writing in a Rule 30(b) notice of deposition and shall inform all parties to the litigation on the record of the existence of the disqualification under this rule and of the proposed stipulation waiving the disqualification. Any party opposing the proposed stipulation as provided in the notice of deposition shall give timely written notice of his or her opposition to all parties.

For the purposes of this rule, a blanket contract means a contract to perform court reporting services over a fixed period of time or an indefinite period of time, rather than on a case by case basis, or any other contractual arrangement which compels, guarantees, regulates, or controls the use of particular court reporting services in future cases.

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, a person is prohibited from taking a deposition under any contractual agreement that requires transmission of the original transcript without the transcript having been certified as provided in Rule 30(f) by the person before whom the deposition was taken.

(d) Depositions to be used outside this State. —

(1) A person desiring to take depositions in this State to be used in proceedings pending in the courts of any other state or country may present to a judge of the superior or district court a commission, order, notice, consent, or other authority under which the deposition is to be taken, whereupon it shall be the duty of the judge to issue the necessary subpoenas pursuant to Rule 45. Orders of the character provided in Rules 30(b), 30(d), and 45(b) may be made upon proper application therefor by the person to whom such subpoena is directed. Failure by any person without adequate excuse to obey a subpoena served upon him pursuant to this rule may be deemed a contempt of the court from which the subpoena issued.

(2) The commissioner herein provided for shall not proceed to act under and by virtue of his appointment until the party seeking to obtain such deposition has deposited with him a sufficient sum of money to cover all costs and charges incident to the taking of the deposition, including such witness fees as are allowed to witnesses in this State for attendance upon the superior court. From such deposit the commissioner shall retain whatever amount may be due him for services, pay the witness fees and other costs that may have been incurred by reason of taking such deposition, and if any balance remains in his hands, he shall pay the same to the party by whom it was advanced. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1975, c. 762, s. 2; 1995, c. 389, s. 4; 1999-264, s. 1.)

COMMENT

Comment to this Rule as Originally Enacted. — This rule is the same as the federal rule except that "of this State" has been inserted in section (a), and section (d) has been added.

Under section (a) depositions for use in North Carolina need not be taken within the State. They may be taken wherever the party taking the deposition desires, subject to the protective provisions of Rule 30(b). However, a subpoena to require a witness to attend the deposition will not run outside the State. Many states have statutes comparable to present § 8-84, making their subpoena power available to compel residents to appear for depositions to be used in foreign states.

Section (d) has no counterpart in the federal rules. It is designed to permit courts in this State to assist parties in proceedings in other states to take depositions in this State for use in such proceedings. North Carolina now has such a statute as indicated above. This rule also requires the party taking a deposition to make a deposit insuring the payment of all fees and costs incident to the taking of the deposition. This practice will be new.

Comment to the 1975 Amendment. — This section is amended slightly to conform to the federal rule, but its substance remains unchanged.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1995, c. 389, s. 4, which rewrote subsection (b), is applicable to civil actions filed on or after October 1, 1995.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 1999-264, s. 1, effective October 1, 1999, and applicable to depositions taken on or after October 1, 1999, rewrote subsection (c).

Ed. 2d 783 (1999).

II. DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW.

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former § 8-71.

Qualification of Commissioner Presumed. — A commissioner appointed to take depositions will be presumed to be properly qualified until the contrary is shown. Gregg v. Mallet, 111 N.C. 74, 15 S.E. 936 (1892).

The commissioner should not be related to either of the parties, but the burden of proving this relationship rests upon the movant. Younce v. Broad River Lumber Co., 155 N.C. 239, 71 S.E. 329 (1911).

Mistake in Name. — Where notice to take depositions correctly stated the name of the commissioner appointed to take them and was otherwise regular, it was error for the trial judge to exclude the depositions as evidence on account of a slight error in the spelling of the commissioner's name. Hardy v. Phoenix Mut. Life Ins. Co., 167 N.C. 22, 83 S.E. 5 (1914).

Rule 29. Stipulations regarding discovery procedure.

Unless the court orders otherwise, the parties may by written stipulation (i) provide that depositions may be taken before any person, at any time or place, upon any notice, and in any manner and when so taken may be used like other depositions, and (ii) modify the procedures provided by these rules for other methods of discovery. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1975, c. 762, s. 1.)

COMMENT

Comment to this Rule as Originally Enacted. — This rule is identical with federal Rule 29. In many cases, saving time and expense is just as important as strict formality. It should be noted that the stipulation relates only to the formalities of taking depositions, and not to their use at trial. Hence, parties may stipulate as to time, place, and manner of taking of a deposition without waiving objections to its admissibility under Rule 26(d).

Comment to the 1975 Amendment. — [Prior to the 1975 amendment] there is [was] no provision for stipulations varying the procedures by which methods of discovery other than depositions are [were] governed. It is common practice for parties to agree on such variations, and the amendment recognizes such agreements and provides a formal mechanism in the rules for giving them effect. Any stipulation varying the procedures may be superseded by court order.

Rule 30. Depositions upon oral examination.

(a) When depositions may be taken. — After commencement of the action, any party may take the testimony of any person, including a party, by deposition upon oral examination. Leave of court, granted with or without notice, must be obtained only if the plaintiff seeks to take a deposition prior to the expiration of 30 days after service of the summons and complaint upon any defendant or service made under Rule 4(e), except that leave is not required (i) if a defendant has served a notice of taking deposition or otherwise sought discovery, or (ii) if special notice is given as provided in subsection (b)(2) of this rule. The attendance of witnesses may be compelled by subpoena as provided in Rule 45, provided that no subpoena need be served on a deponent who is a party or an officer, director or managing agent of a party, provided the party has been served with notice pursuant to subsection (b)(1) of this rule. The deposition of a person confined in prison or of a patient receiving in-patient care in or confined to an institution or hospital for the mentally ill or mentally handicapped may be taken only by leave of court on such terms as the court prescribes.

(b) Notice of examination; general requirements; place of examination; special notice; nonstenographic recording; production of documents and things; deposition of organization. —

(1) A party desiring to take the deposition of any person upon oral examination shall give notice in writing to every other party to the action. The notice shall state the time and place for taking the deposition and the name and address of each person to be examined, if known, and, if the name is not known, a general description sufficient to identify him or the particular class or group to which he belongs. If a subpoena duces tecum is to be served on the person to be examined, the designation of the materials to be produced as set forth in the subpoena shall be attached to or included in the notice. The notice shall be served on all parties at least 15 days prior to the taking of the deposition when any party required to be served resides without the State and shall be served on all parties at least 10 days prior to the taking of the deposition when all of the parties required to be served reside within the State. Depositions of parties, officers, directors or managing agents of parties or of other persons designated pursuant to subsection (b)(6) hereof to testify on behalf of a party may be taken only at the following places:

A resident of the State may be required to attend for examination by deposition only in the county wherein he resides or is employed or transacts his business in person. A nonresident of the State may be required to attend for such examination only in the county wherein he resides or within 50 miles of the place of service except that a judge, as defined by subdivision (h) of this rule, may, upon motion showing good cause, require that a party who selected the county where the action is pending as the forum for the action or an officer, director or managing agent of such a party, or a person designated pursuant to subsection (b)(6) hereof to testify on behalf of such a party present himself for the taking of his deposition in the county where the action is pending. The judge upon granting the motion may make any other orders allowed by Rule 26(c) with respect thereto, including orders with respect to the expenses of the deponent.

(2) Leave of court is not required for the taking of a deposition by plaintiff if the notice (i) states that the person to be examined is about to go out of the county where the action is pending and more than 100 miles from the place of trial, or is about to go out of the United States, or is bound on a voyage to sea, and will be unavailable for examination unless his deposition is taken before expiration of the 30-day period, and (ii) sets forth facts to support the statement. The plaintiff's attorney shall sign the notice, and his signature constitutes a certification by him that to the best of his knowledge, information, and belief the statement and supporting facts are true. The sanctions provided by Rule 11 are applicable to the certification.

If a party shows that when he was served with notice under this subsection (b)(2) he was unable through the exercise of diligence to obtain counsel to represent him at the taking of the deposition, the deposition may not be used against him.

(3) The court may for cause shown enlarge or shorten the time for taking the deposition.

(4) Unless the court orders otherwise, testimony at a deposition may be recorded by sound recording, sound-and-visual, or stenographic means. If the testimony is to be taken by other means in addition to or in lieu of stenographic means, the notice shall state the methods by which it shall be taken and shall state whether a stenographer will be present at the deposition. In the case of a deposition taken by stenographic means, the party that provides for the stenographer shall provide for the transcribing of the testimony taken. If the deposition is by sound recording only, the party noticing the deposition shall provide for the transcribing of the testimony taken. If the deposition is by sound-and-visual means, the appearance or demeanor of deponents or attorneys shall not be distorted through camera techniques. Regardless of the method stated in the notice, any party or the deponent may have the testimony recorded by stenographic means.

(5) A party deponent, deponents who are officers, directors or managing agents of parties and other persons designated pursuant to subsection (b)(6) hereof to testify on behalf of a party may not be served with a subpoena duces tecum, but the notice to a party for the deposition of such a deponent may be accompanied by a request made in compliance with Rule 34 for the production of documents and tangible things at the taking of the deposition. The procedure of Rule 34, except as to time for response, shall apply to the request. When a notice to take such a deposition is accompanied by a request made in compliance with Rule 34 the notice and the request must be served at least 15 days earlier than would otherwise be required by Rule 30(b)(1), and any objections to such a request must be served at least seven days prior to the taking of the deposition.

(6) A party may in his notice and in a subpoena name as the deponent a public or private corporation or a partnership or association or governmental agency and describe with reasonable particularity the matters on which examination is requested. In that event, the organization so named shall designate one or more officers, directors, or managing agents, or other persons who consent to testify on its behalf, and may set forth, for each person designated, the matters on which he will testify. A subpoena shall advise a nonparty organization of its duty to make such a designation. It shall not be necessary to serve a subpoena on an organization which is a party, but the notice, served on a party without an accompanying subpoena shall clearly advise such of its duty to make the required designation. The persons so designated shall testify as to matters known or reasonably available to the organization. This subsection (b)(6) does not preclude taking a deposition by any other procedure authorized in these rules.

(7) The parties may stipulate in writing or the court may upon motion order that a deposition be taken by telephone. For the purposes of this rule and Rules 28(a), 37(a)(1) and 45(d), a deposition taken by telephone is taken in the district and the place where the deponent is to answer questions propounded to him.

(c) Examination and cross-examination; record of examination; oath; objections. — Examination and cross-examination of witnesses may proceed as permitted at the trial under the provisions of Rule 43(b). The person before whom the deposition is to be taken shall put the deponent on oath and shall personally, or by someone acting under his direction and in his presence, record the testimony of the deponent. The testimony shall be taken stenographically or recorded by any other means ordered in accordance with subsection (b)(4) of this rule. If requested by one of the parties, the testimony shall be transcribed.

All objections made at the time of the examination to the qualifications of the person before whom the deposition is taken, or to the manner of taking it, or to the evidence presented, or to the conduct of any party, and any other objection to the proceedings, shall be noted upon the deposition by the person before whom the deposition is taken. Subject to any limitations imposed by orders entered pursuant to Rule 26(c) or 30(d), evidence objected to shall be taken subject to the objections. In lieu of participating in the oral examination, parties may serve written questions in a sealed envelope on the party who served the notice of taking the deposition, and he shall transmit them to the person before whom the deposition is to be taken who shall open them at the deposition, propound them to the witness and record the answers verbatim.

(d) Motion to terminate or limit examination. — At any time during the taking of the deposition, on motion of a party or of the deponent and upon a showing that the examination is being conducted in bad faith or in such manner as unreasonably to annoy, embarrass, or oppress the deponent or party, a judge of the court in which the action is pending or any judge in the county where the deposition is being taken may order before whom the examination is being taken to cease forthwith from taking the deposition, or may limit the scope and manner of the taking of the deposition as provided in Rule 26(c). If the order made terminates the examination, it shall be resumed thereafter only upon the order of a judge of the court in which the action is pending. Upon demand of the objecting party or deponent, the taking of the deposition shall be suspended for the time necessary to make a motion for an order. The provisions of Rule 37(a)(4) apply to the award of expenses incurred in relation to the motion.

(e) Submission to deponent; changes; signing. — The sound-and-visual recording, or the transcript of it, if any, the transcript of the sound recording, or the transcript of a deposition taken by stenographic means, shall be submitted to the deponent for examination and shall be reviewed by the deponent, unless such examination and review are waived by the deponent and by the parties. If there are changes in form or substance, the deponent shall sign a statement reciting such changes and the reasons given by the deponent for making them. The person administering the oath shall indicate in the certificate prescribed by subdivision (f)(1) whether any review was requested and, if so, shall append any changes made by the deponent. The certificate shall then be signed by the deponent, unless the parties by stipulation waive the signing or the deponent is ill or cannot be found or refuses to sign. If the certificate is not signed by the deponent within 30 days of its submission to him, the person before whom the deposition was taken shall sign the certificate and state on the certificate the fact of the waiver or of the illness or absence of the deponent or the fact of the refusal or failure to sign together with the reason, if any, given therefor; and the deposition may then be used as fully as though the certificate were signed unless on a motion to suppress under Rule 32(d)(4) the court holds that the reasons given for the refusal to sign require rejection of the deposition in whole or in part.

(f) Certification and filing by person administering the oath; exhibits; copies; notice of filing. —

(1) The person administering the oath shall certify that the deponent was duly sworn by him and that the deposition is a true record of the testimony given by the deponent. This certificate shall be in writing and accompany the sound-and-visual or sound recording or transcript of the deposition. He shall then place the deposition in an envelope or package endorsed with the title of the action and marked "Deposition of (here insert name of witness)" and shall personally deliver it or mail it by first class mail to the party taking the deposition or his attorney who shall preserve it as the court's copy.

Documents and things produced for inspection during the examination of the deponent shall, upon the request of a party, be marked for identification and annexed to and returned with the deposition, and may be inspected and copied by any party, except that (i) the person producing the materials may substitute copies to be marked for identification, if he affords to all parties fair opportunity to verify the copies by comparison with the originals, and (ii) if the person producing the materials requests their return, the person before whom the deposition is taken shall mark them, give each party an opportunity to inspect and copy them, and return them to the person producing them, and the materials may then be used in the manner as if annexed to and returned with the deposition. Any party may move for an order that the original be annexed to and returned with the deposition to the court, pending final disposition of the case.

(2) Upon payment of reasonable charges therefor, the person administering the oath shall furnish a copy of the deposition to any party or to the deponent.

(3) The clerk shall give prompt notice of the filing of a deposition to all parties.

(g) Failure to attend or to serve subpoena; expenses. —

(1) If the party giving the notice of the taking of a deposition fails to attend and proceed therewith and another party attends in person or by attorney pursuant to the notice, the judge may order the party giving the notice to pay to such other party the reasonable expenses incurred by him and his attorney in attending, including reasonable attorney's fees.

(2) If the party giving the notice of the taking of a deposition of a witness fails to serve a subpoena upon him and the witness because of such failure does not attend, and if another party attends in person or by attorney because he expects the deposition of that witness to be taken, the judge may order the party giving the notice to pay to such other party the reasonable expenses incurred by him and his attorney in attending, including reasonable attorney's fees.

(h) Judge; definition. —

(1) In respect to actions in the superior court, a judge of the court in which the action is pending shall, for the purposes of this rule, and Rule 26,

Rule 31, Rule 33, Rule 34, Rule 35, Rule 36 and Rule 37, be a superior court judge who has jurisdiction pursuant to G.S. 7A-47.1 or G.S. 7A-48 in that county.

(2) In respect to actions in the district court, a judge of the court in which the action is pending shall, for the purposes of this rule, Rule 26, Rule 31, Rule 33, Rule 34, Rule 35, Rule 36 and Rule 37, be the chief district judge or any judge designated by him pursuant to G.S. 7A-192.

(3) In respect to actions in either the superior court or the district court, a judge of the court in the county where the deposition is being taken shall, for the purposes of this rule, be a superior court judge who has jurisdiction pursuant to G.S. 7A-47.1 or G.S. 7A-48 in that county, or the chief judge of the district court or any judge designated by him pursuant to G.S. 7A-192. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1973, c. 828, s. 1; c. 1126, ss. 1, 2; 1975, c. 762, s. 2; 1977, c. 769; 1983, c. 201, s. 2; c. 801, ss. 1, 2; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1037, s. 42; 1995, c. 353, ss. 1-3; 1995 (Reg. Sess., 1996), c. 742, s. 4.)

COMMENT

Comment to this Rule as Originally Enacted. — This rule prescribes the procedure for taking depositions upon oral examination. Depositions upon written interrogatories are governed by Rule 31. The procedure fixed by Rule 30 governs depositions upon oral examination in all cases, whether a deposition with or without leave of court as provided in Rule 26(a), or under an order of court for the perpetuation of testimony before action under Rule 27 (a) or under order of court for the perpetuation of testimony pending appeal as provided in Rule 27(b) or under order of court as provided in Rule 27(c).

Section (a) differs from federal Rule 30 (a) in that a specific time for serving notice prior to the taking of the deposition is fixed, instead of "reasonable notice" as is found in the federal rule. Furthermore, section (a) does not authorize the court to extend or shorten the time fixed by the rule. Such a provision is contained in federal Rule 30(a).

Sections (b) and (d) provide for protection from the abuse of the discovery procedure to either the opposing party or the person to be examined. Before the taking of the deposition begins, either may apply for protection under section (b). During the taking of the deposition either may apply for protection under section (d). Under section (b) application is made to the judge of the court in which the action is pending upon motion seasonably made. "Seasonably" means as soon as the person making the motion learns that he will need the protective order. Moore's Federal Practice, § 30.05, (2nd Ed.). Such a motion must comply with Rule 7(b), be served and filed in compliance with Rule 5, and be served within the time provided in Rule 6(d).

A change has been made in federal Rule 30(c) in that a provision has been added with respect to the payment for transcribing when the transaction is requested by a party other than the party taking the deposition. In some cases the sole purpose of the deposition may be for discovery only, and not for use at the trial. Hence, the court should have this power.

The words "or by some method by which the testimony is written or typed as it is given" are inserted in section (c) for the purpose of indicating that, in the absence of agreement, testimony may be taken by any of the methods described.

As has been indicated, section (d) provides for protection during the taking of the deposition. Such a motion may be made before a judge of a court in which an action is pending or a judge of the court in which the deposition is being taken. Section (d) authorizes the judge to order either party or the deponent to pay such costs as may be deemed reasonable upon the granting or refusing of such a motion.

Section (e) changes former procedure to the extent that the deposition need not be signed by the deponent unless one of the parties or the deponent makes such a request.

Section (f) contains no provision for opening a deposition similar to former practice (repealed § 8-71). No good reason exists for continuing that practice, since in most cases all parties have copies of the deposition, and objections which have been entered at the taking of the deposition can be passed on at the time of trial.

Section (g) is identical with federal Rule 30(g). Apparently there is no provision under present statutes for the taxing of expenses under such circumstances.

Comment to the 1975 Amendment. — Section (a). — This section contains the provisions of existing [former] Rule 26(a), transferred here as part of the rearrangement relating to Rule 26. Existing [former] Rule 30(a) is transferred to 30(b). Changes in language have been made to conform to the new arrangement.

This section is further revised in regard to the requirement of leave of court for taking a deposition. The present procedure, requiring a plaintiff to obtain leave of court if he serves notice of taking a deposition within 30 days after commencement of the action, is changed in several respects. First, leave is required by reference to the time the deposition is to be taken rather than the date of serving notice of taking. Second, the 30-day period runs from the service of summons and complaint on any defendant, rather than the commencement of the action. Third, leave is not required beyond the time that defendant initiates discovery, thus showing that he has retained counsel. As under the present practice, a party not afforded a reasonable opportunity to appear at a deposition, because he has not yet been served with process, is protected against use of the deposition at trial against him. See Rule 32(a) transferred from [former] 26(d). Moreover, he can later redepose the witness if he so desires.

The purpose of requiring the plaintiff to obtain leave of court is to protect a defendant who has not had an opportunity to retain counsel and inform himself as to the nature of the suit. This protection, however, is relevant to the time of taking the deposition, not to the time that notice is served. Similarly, the protective period should run from the service of process rather than the filing of the complaint with the court. The new procedure is consistent in principle with the provisions of Rules 33, 34 and 36 as revised.

Plaintiff is excused from obtaining leave even during the initial 30-day period if he gives the special notice provided in subsection (b)(2). The required notice must state that the person to be examined is about to go out of the district where the action is pending and more than 100 miles from the place of trial, or out of the United States, or on a voyage to sea, and will be unavailable for examination unless deposed within the 30-day period. Defendant is protected by a provision that the deposition cannot be used against him if he was unable through exercise of diligence to obtain counsel to represent him.

The North Carolina modification of the former federal rule, requiring leave of court to depose mental patients as well as prisoners, is retained in substance.

The provision obviating the necessity of serving a subpoena on a deponent who is a party or an officer, director or managing agent of a party where the party has been served with notice of the deposition incorporates by rule the result reached by decision in most federal courts.

Section (b). — Existing [former] Rule 30(b) on protective orders has been transferred to Rule 26(c), and existing former Rule 30(a) relating to the notice of taking deposition has been transferred to this section. Because new material has been added, subsection numbers have been inserted.

Subsection (b)(1). — If a subpoena duces tecum is to be served, a copy thereof or a designation of the materials to be produced must accompany the notice. Each party is thereby enabled to prepare for the deposition more effectively. The former North Carolina requirement, designating the length of notice required, is retained in preference to the standard of reasonable notice contained in the federal rules. The provision with respect to the place of deposition is removed in a modified form to this subsection from Rule 45(d)(2), where it referred only to deponents testifying under subpoena, and not to party deponents testifying pursuant to notice only.

Subsection (b)(2). — This subsection is discussed in the note to section (a), to which it relates.

Subsection (b)(3). — This provision is new, although the power of the Court to alter the time of a deposition has probably always existed.

Subsection (b)(4). — In order to facilitate less expensive procedures, provision is made for the recording of testimony by other than stenographic means — e.g., by mechanical, electronic, or photographic means. Because these methods give rise to problems of accuracy and trustworthiness, the party taking the deposition is required to apply for a court order. The order is to specify how the testimony is to be recorded, preserved, and filed, and it may contain whatever additional safeguards the court deems necessary.

Subsection (b)(5). — A provision is added to enable a party, through service of notice, to require another party to produce documents or things at the taking of his deposition. This may now be done as to a nonparty deponent through use of subpoena duces tecum as authorized by Rule 45, but some federal courts held under the former federal rule that documents could be secured from a party only under former Rule 34, which required notice, hearing and an order finding good cause for production. With the elimination of "good cause" from Rule 34, the reason for this restrictive doctrine has disappeared.

Whether production of documents or things should be obtained directly under Rule 34 or at the deposition under this rule will depend on the nature and volume of the documents or things. Both methods are made available. When the documents are few and simple, and closely related to the oral examination, ability to proceed via this rule will facilitate discovery. If the discovering party insists on examining many and complex documents at the taking of the deposition, thereby causing undue burdens on others, the latter may, under Rules 26(c) or 30(d), apply for a court order that the examining party proceed via Rule 34 alone. The provisions as to the timing of such request eliminates an ambiguity present in the new federal rule and insures that the party giving notice of the taking of a deposition will know in advance of the deposition what documents or things the deponent declines to produce. This will allow the deposing party an opportunity to seek an order to compel production under Rule 37(a) prior to the deposition if he is so advised and will serve to minimize the risk that a deposition will be adjourned because of the previously undisclosed refusal of the deponent to produce requested documents or things.

Subsection (b)(6). — A new provision is added, whereby a party may name a corporation, partnership, association or governmental agency as the deponent and designate the matters on which he requests examination, and the organization shall then name one or more of its officers, directors, or managing agents, or other persons consenting to appear and testify on its behalf with respect to matters known or reasonably available to the organization. The organization may designate persons other than officers, directors, and managing agents, but only with their consent. Thus, an employee or agent who has an independent or conflicting personal injury case — can refuse to testify on behalf of the organization.

This procedure supplements the existing practice whereby the examining party designates the corporate official to be deposed. Thus, if the examining party believes that certain officials who have not testified pursuant to this subsection have added information, he may depose them. On the other hand, a court's decision whether to issue a protective order may take account of the availability and use made of the procedures provided in this subsection.

The new procedure should be viewed as an added facility for discovery, one which may be advantageous to both sides as well as an improvement in the deposition process. It will reduce the difficulties now encountered in determining, prior to the taking of a deposition, whether a particular employee or agent is a "managing agent." It will curb the "bandying" by which officers or managing agents of a corporation are deposed in turn but each disclaims knowledge of facts that are clearly known to persons in the organization and thereby to it. The provision should also assist organizations which find that an unnecessarily large number of their officers and agents are being deposed by a party uncertain of who in the organization has knowledge. Some courts have held that under the existing rules a corporation should not be burdened with choosing which person is to appear for it. This burden is not essentially different from that of answering interrogatories under Rule 33, and is in any case lighter than that of an examining party ignorant of who in the corporation has knowledge.

This rule is so phrased that notice to parties, including a party deponent, and a subpoena to a nonparty organization are required to bring the rule into play.

The wording of this subsection is slightly altered from that of the federal rule to eliminate an ambiguity as to whether the subpoena must be issued to a party.

Section (c). — A new sentence is inserted at the beginning, representing the transfer of existing [former] Rule 26(c) to this section. Another addition conforms to the new provision in subsection (b)(4).

The present rule provides that transcription shall be carried out unless all parties waive it. In view of the many depositions taken from which nothing useful is discovered, the revised language provides that transcription is to be performed if any party requests it.

Parties choosing to serve written questions rather than participate personally in an oral deposition are directed to serve their questions on the party taking the deposition, since the officer is often not identified in advance. Confidentiality is preserved, since the questions may be served in a sealed envelope.

Section (d). — The assessment of expenses incurred in relation to motions made under this section (d) is made subject to the provisions of Rule 37(a). The standards for assessment of expenses are more fully set out in Rule 37(a), and these standards should apply to the essentially similar motions of this section.

Section (e). — The provision relating to the refusal of a deponent to sign his deposition is tightened through insertion of a 30-day time period and a provision allowing use of the deposition upon the refusal or failure of the deponent to sign and return it within the required time.

Subsection (f)(1). — A provision is added which codifies in a flexible way the procedure for handling exhibits related to the deposition and at the same time assures each party that he may inspect and copy documents and things produced at a nonparty witness in response to a subpoena duces tecum. As a general rule and in the absence of agreement to the contrary or order of the court, exhibits produced without objection are to be annexed to and returned with the deposition, but a deponent may substitute copies for purposes of marking and he may obtain return of the exhibits. The right of the parties to inspect exhibits for identification and to make copies is assured.

The former requirement of North Carolina Rule 26(f)(1) that the original and one copy be filed with the clerk is abandoned. In practice it proved to have little utility and was generally waived or ignored.

Subsection (f)(3). — This provision clarifies the conflict between former Rule 30(f)(3) which required the party to give the notice, and [former] 32(e) which required the clerk to do so. It also eliminates the former requirement that the party taking the deposition furnish a copy to all other parties. Whatever the reason for the former requirement may have been, in practice it has penalized the party with limited means who must utilize depositions to make out his claim or defense.

Section (g). — This provision contained only minor changes in phraseology not affecting the substance of the rule.

CASE NOTES

I. In General.
II. Decisions under Prior Law.

I. IN GENERAL.

Right to take deposition granted by section (a) of this rule is unqualified, except for provision of § 1A-1, Rule 26(c) authorizing the trial court to issue "protective orders." Tennessee-Carolina Transp., Inc. v. Strick Corp., 291 N.C. 618, 231 S.E.2d 597 (1977).

Effect of Adverse Testimony in Deposition Generally. — When a party gives adverse testimony in a deposition or at trial, that testimony should not, in most instances, be conclusively binding on him to the extent that his opponent may obtain either summary judgment or a directed verdict. Woods v. Smith, 297 N.C. 363, 255 S.E.2d 174 (1979).

Two exceptions to the general rule regarding the effect of adverse testimony in a deposition should be noted: (1) When a party gives deliberate, unequivocal and repeated testimony which is diametrically opposed to the essential allegations of the complaint, destroying the theory of the action, which testimony is intentionally given and unremedied by any further testimony, the testimony should be treated as binding judicial admissions rather than evidential admissions; (2) When a party gives adverse testimony, and there is insufficient evidence to the contrary presented to support the allegations of the complaint, summary judgment or a directed verdict would in most cases properly be granted. Woods v. Smith, 297 N.C. 363, 255 S.E.2d 174 (1979).

Where witness was both a fact and an expert witness he could be deposed without a court order and his testimony could only be limited by objection during the deposition if he was questioned regarding his expert opinion. Green ex rel. Green v. Maness, 69 N.C. App. 403, 316 S.E.2d 911, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 621, 323 S.E.2d 922 (1984).

Opposition to Discovery Was Correct Where Subpoena Not Issued Correctly. — In order to compel the deposition testimony of a nonparty, a subpoena must be issued from the county in which the deposition is to be taken, and a proper subpoena should have been issued from the Clerk of Superior Court of Wake County directing a nonparty in a divorce case to appear in Wake County; therefore, nonparty and her attorney were substantially justified in opposing the discovery sought pursuant to the subpoena issued from Mecklenburg County and the trial court's imposition of attorney fees under § 1A-1, Rule 37(a)(4) was error. Cochran v. Cochran, 93 N.C. App. 574, 378 S.E.2d 580 (1989).

Jurisdiction of Court. — District Court was without jurisdiction, pending the appeal, to find deponent in contempt of the order appealed from; thus, its findings and order to that effect were void. Wilson v. Wilson, 124 N.C. App. 371, 477 S.E.2d 254 (1996).

Applied in Brooks v. Smith, 27 N.C. App. 223, 218 S.E.2d 489 (1975); Kent v. Humphries, 50 N.C. App. 580, 275 S.E.2d 176 (1981); Adair v. Adair, 62 N.C. App. 493, 303 S.E.2d 190 (1983).

Cited in Sharpe v. Worland, — N.C. App. —, 511 S.E.2d 35 (1999).

II. DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW.

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former §§ 8-71 and 8-72.

Presumption of Regularity. — The presumption is that a deposition has been properly taken when it appears thereon that it was taken by one named in the commission on the day named and at the designated place. Younce v. Broad River Lumber Co., 155 N.C. 239, 71 S.E. 329 (1911).

The object of the notice is to give the party an opportunity to attend and cross-examine; and, while on the one hand, a party will not be forced to attend on Sunday, or on a day when his presence is required at another place for the purpose of that very suit, so, on the other, it held that the principle is complied with substantially, if the notice describes the place with reasonable certainty. Owens v. Kinsey, 51 N.C. 38 (1858).

Notice to One of Several Joint Defendants. — Upon a bill against joint administrators relative to the acts of the intestate, of which the administrators put in a joint answer, a deposition taken by the plaintiff upon notice to only one of the defendants was excluded even though it was the deposition of the plaintiff's only witness, who had since died. Cox v. Smitherman, 37 N.C. 66 (1841).

Variance Between Notice and Certificate. Where a deposition certified to have been taken at the house of J.E. was objected to because the notice was to take it at the house of J.A.E., it was held that it would be presumed that the notice and certificate referred to the same person. Ellmore v. Mills, 2 N.C. 359 (1796).

A misdescription of a place, in one small particular, in a notice to take depositions will not be fatal, if other descriptive terms are used in the notice, less liable to mistake, by which such place may be identified. Pursell v. Long, 52 N.C. 102 (1859).

A notice to take a deposition on "the 5th or 6th" of a certain month was held sufficient. Kenedy v. Alexander, 2 N.C. 25 (1794).

Notice to take a deposition on a particular day of every week for three successive months is not good. Bedell v. President & Dirs. of State Bank, 12 N.C. 483 (1828).

Where notice is served that depositions will be taken at the same time in two different places, so that the party who is notified cannot be present at both, he may attend at either place designated and disregard the notice as to the other, and the deposition taken in his absence at the other place will, on motion, be quashed or suppressed, but where he elects to appear by counsel and cross-examines the witnesses without making any objection at the time, this is a waiver as to any defect in the notice. Ivey v. Bessemer City Cotton Mills, 143 N.C. 189, 55 S.E. 613 (1906).

Where notice was given to take the deposition of certain named parties "and others," and depositions of those particularly mentioned were not taken, it was held to be no ground for exception. McDugald v. Smith, 33 N.C. 576 (1850).

Where the notice directed the commissioner to take the depositions of persons named "and others," depositions taken of others than those named were admissible. In re Will of Rawlings, 170 N.C. 58, 86 S.E. 794 (1915).

Taking of Deposition in Party's Place of Business. — It is not error to take a deposition in the place of business of one of the parties if such place is named in the notice and there is no suggestion that the other party suffered any prejudice thereby. Bank v. Carr, 130 N.C. 479, 41 S.E. 876 (1902).

Duty of Witness to Answer. — The commissioner acts for the court, and it is the duty of the witness to answer proper questions propounded by him, just as if the examination was conducted before the judge or clerk. Bradley Fertilizer Co. v. Taylor, 112 N.C. 141, 17 S.E. 69 (1893).

Necessity of Sealing. — A deposition must be sealed up by the commissioners, so as to prevent inspection and alteration; it need not be certified under the seal of the commissioners. Ward v. Ely, 12 N.C. 372 (1828).

Where a deposition was found among papers, with a commission unattached, and an envelope which appeared to have been sealed up and afterwards broken open, it was held that this was sufficient evidence to justify the clerk in finding that the deposition had been taken under such commission, and had been returned to him sealed up by the commissioner, and therefore, that the clerk had done right in passing upon and allowing such deposition to be read. Hill v. Bell, 61 N.C. 122 (1867).

Mailing of Deposition to Clerk by Attorney. — Where the notary public taking a deposition in another state sealed the same in an envelope addressed to the clerk of the superior court, the fact that the attorney of the party offering the deposition in evidence brought the sealed envelope back with him to this state and dropped it in the mail, as requested by the notary, did not render the deposition incompetent. Randle v. Grady, 228 N.C. 159, 45 S.E.2d 35 (1947).

When Delay in Execution of Commission Insufficient for Continuance. — Commissions to take testimony are issued at the instance and for the benefit of one of the parties, and he will usually make them returnable at the earliest day consistent with convenience. But if through laches or from a wish to delay the trial, he should not do so, the nonexecution of the commission will be adjudged an insufficient reason for asking a continuance. Duncan v. Hill, 19 N.C. 291 (1837).

Rule 31. Depositions upon written questions.

(a) Serving questions; notice. — After commencement of the action, any party may take the testimony of any person, including a party, by deposition upon written questions. The attendance of witnesses may be compelled by the use of subpoena as provided in Rule 45 provided that no subpoena need be served on a deponent who is a party or an officer, director or managing agent of a party, provided the party has been served with notice pursuant to this rule. Such a deposition shall be taken in the county where the witness resides or is employed or transacts his business in person unless the witness agrees that it may be taken elsewhere. The deposition of a person confined in prison or of a patient receiving in-patient care in or confined to an institution or hospital for the mentally ill or mentally handicapped may be taken only by leave of court on such terms as the court prescribes.

A party desiring to take a deposition upon written questions shall serve them upon every other party with a notice stating (i) the name and address of the person who is to answer them, if known, and if the name is not known, a general description sufficient to identify him or the particular class or group to which he belongs, and (ii) the name or descriptive title and address of the officer before whom the deposition is to be taken. A deposition upon written questions may be taken of a public or private corporation or a partnership or association or governmental agency in accordance with the provisions of Rule 30(b)(6).

Within 30 days after the notice and written questions are served, a party may serve cross questions upon all other parties. Within 10 days after being served with cross questions, a party may serve redirect questions upon all other parties. Within 10 days after being served with redirect questions, a party may serve recross questions upon all other parties. The court may for cause shown enlarge or shorten the time.

(b) Person to take responses and prepare record. — A copy of the notice and copies of all questions served shall be delivered by the party taking the deposition to the person designated in the notice to take the deposition, who shall proceed promptly, in the manner provided by Rule 30(c), (e), and (f), to take the testimony of the deponent in response to the questions and to prepare, certify, and file or mail the deposition, attaching thereto the copy of the notice and the questions received by him.

(c) Notice of filing. — When the deposition is filed the clerk shall promptly give notice thereof to all parties. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1975, c. 762, s. 2.)

COMMENT

Comment to this Rule as Originally Enacted. — This rule provides an alternative method for taking depositions which a party may employ rather than taking the deposition on oral examination as provided for in Rule 30, and follows very closely federal Rule 31.

Under former § 8-71, when a deposition was returned to the court, the clerk was required to open and pass on it after giving parties or their attorney not less than one day's notice. Section (c) simply requires the party taking the deposition to give notice of the filing of the deposition.

"Rule 31(d) permits a party or a deponent to make a motion in the court in which the action is pending for any protective order specified in Rule 30. The motion, however, must be made prior to the taking of the testimony of the deponent. This time limitation upon the making of the motion is perfectly proper with respect to a party, but if applied also to a motion made by a deponent, it is inconsistent with the practice that the interrogatories are not to be shown to the deponent in advance of the taking of the deposition. While the time limitation imposed by Rule 30(d) upon the making of a motion for a protective order is in terms applicable to a motion by a deponent, it is believed that the proper practice should be that the interrogatories should not be shown to the deponent in advance of the taking of his deposition, except upon consent of the parties, and that the deponent should be allowed to make a motion for a protective order during the taking of the deposition as provided in Rule 30(d) for the making of a similar motion by a deponent upon an oral examination." 4 Moore's Federal Practice, § 31.06.

Comment to the 1975 Amendment. — Confusion is created by the use of the same terminology to describe both the taking of a deposition upon "written interrogatories" pursuant to this rule and the serving of "written interrogatories" upon parties pursuant to Rule 33. The distinction between these two modes of discovery will be more readily and clearly grasped through substitution of the word "questions" for "interrogatories" throughout this rule.

Section (a). — A new paragraph is inserted at the beginning of this section to conform to the rearrangement of provisions in Rules 26(a), 30(a), and 30(b).

The revised section permits designation of the deponent by general description or by class or group. This conforms to the practice for depositions on oral examination.

The new procedure provided in Rule 30(b)(6) for taking the deposition of a corporation or other organization through persons designated by the organizations is incorporated by reference.

The service of all questions, including cross, redirect, and recross, is to be made on all parties. This will inform the parties and enable them to participate fully in the procedure.

The time allowed for service of cross, redirect, and recross questions has been extended. Experience with the existing time limits under the former federal rule showed them to be unrealistically short. No special restriction is placed on the time for serving the notice of taking the deposition and the first set of questions. Since no party is required to serve cross questions less than 30 days after the notice and questions are served, the defendant has sufficient time to obtain counsel. The court may for cause shown enlarge or shorten the time.

The provision obviating the necessity of service of subpoena on a party or an officer, director or managing agent of a party conforms to revised Rule 30(a) and federal case law in the absence of a similar provision in the federal rules.

The North Carolina modification of the former federal rule, requiring leave of court to depose mental patients as well as prisoners, is retained in substance.

Section (c). — This section is amended to conform to the change in Rule 30(f)(3).

Former Section (d). — Since new Rule 26(c) provides for protective orders with respect to all discovery, and expressly provides that the court may order that one discovery device be used in place of another, section (d) is eliminated as unnecessary.

CASE NOTES

Use of Deposition at Trial Stage Limited. — Although the Rules of Civil Procedure provide extensive rights of discovery to any party, the use of a deposition in a civil case at the trial stage is sharply limited. Maness v. Bullins, 11 N.C. App. 567, 181 S.E.2d 750, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 395, 183 S.E.2d 242 (1971).

Admission of Interrogatories Held Error. — Where the record contained no indication by evidence or stipulation as to whereabouts of a deponent who was not a party at the time the case came on for trial, and there was no finding or inquiry by the trial judge as to the existence of any of the conditions which would have made the interrogatories competent and admissible in evidence, their admission constituted prejudicial error. Maness v. Bullins, 11 N.C. App. 567, 181 S.E.2d 750, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 395, 183 S.E.2d 242 (1971).

In order to compel the deposition testimony of a nonparty, a subpoena must be issued from the county in which the deposition is to be taken, and a proper subpoena should have been issued from the Clerk of Superior Court of Wake County directing a nonparty in a divorce case to appear in Wake County; therefore, nonparty and her attorney were substantially justified in opposing the discovery sought pursuant to the subpoena issued from Mecklenburg County and the trial court's imposition of attorney's fees under § 1A-1, Rule 37(a)(4) was error. Cochran v. Cochran, 93 N.C. App. 574, 378 S.E.2d 580 (1989).

Rule 32. Use of depositions in court proceedings.

(a) Use of depositions. — At the trial or upon the hearing of a motion or an interlocutory proceeding or upon a hearing before a referee, any part or all of a deposition, so far as admissible under the rules of evidence applied as though the witness were then present and testifying, may be used against any party who was present or represented at the taking of the deposition or who had reasonable notice thereof, in accordance with any of the following provisions:

(1) Any deposition may be used by any party for the purpose of contradicting or impeaching the testimony of deponent as a witness.

(2) The deposition of a person called as a witness may also be used as substantive evidence by any party adverse to the party who called the deponent as a witness and it may be used by the party calling deponent as a witness as substantive evidence of such facts stated in the deposition as are in conflict with or inconsistent with the testimony of deponent as a witness.

(3) The deposition of a party or of any one who at the time of taking the deposition was an officer, director, or managing agent, or a person designated under Rule 30(b)(6) or 31(a) to testify on behalf of a public or private corporation, partnership or association or governmental agency which is a party may be used by an adverse party for any purpose, whether or not the deponent testifies at the trial or hearing.

(4) The deposition of a witness, whether or not a party, may be used by any party for any purpose if the court finds: that the witness is dead; or that the witness is at a greater distance than 100 miles from the place of trial or hearing, or is out of the United States, unless it appears that the absence of the witness was procured by the party offering the deposition; or that the witness is unable to attend or testify because of age, illness, infirmity, or imprisonment; or that the party offering the deposition has been unable to procure the attendance of the witness by subpoena; or upon application and notice, that such exceptional circumstances exist as to make it desirable, in the interest of justice and with due regard to the importance of presenting testimony of witnesses orally in open court, to allow the deposition to be used; or the witness is an expert witness whose testimony has been procured by videotape as provided for under Rule 30(b)(4).

(5) If only part of a deposition is offered in evidence by a party, an adverse party may require him to introduce any other part which is relevant to the part introduced, and any party may introduce any other parts.

Substitution of parties pursuant to Rule 25 does not affect the right to use depositions previously taken; and, when an action in any court of the United States or of any state has been dismissed and another action involving the same subject matter is afterward brought between the same parties or their representatives or successors in interest, all depositions lawfully taken and duly filed in the former action may be used in the latter as if originally taken therefor.

(b) Objections to admissibility. — Subject to the provisions of Rules 28(b) and subsection (d)(3) of this rule, objection may be made at the trial or hearing to receiving in evidence any deposition or part thereof for any reason which would require the exclusion of the evidence if the witness were then present and testifying.

(c) Effect of taking or using depositions. — A party does not make a person his own witness for any purpose by taking his deposition. The introduction in evidence of the deposition or any part thereof for any purpose other than that of contradicting or impeaching the deponent makes the deponent the witness of the party introducing the deposition, but this shall not apply to the use by an adverse party of a deposition under subsection (a)(2) or (a)(3) of this rule. At the trial or hearing any party may rebut any relevant evidence contained in a deposition whether introduced by him or by any other party.

(d) Effect of errors and irregularities in depositions. —

(1) As to Notice. — All errors and irregularities in the notice for taking a deposition are waived unless written objection is promptly served upon the party giving the notice.

(2) As to Disqualification of Person before Whom Taken. — Objection to taking a deposition because of disqualification of the person before whom it is to be taken is waived unless made before the taking of the deposition begins or as soon thereafter as the disqualification becomes known or could be discovered with reasonable diligence.

(3) As to Taking of Deposition. —

a. Objections to the competency of a witness or to the competency, relevancy, or materiality of testimony are not waived by failure to make them before or during the taking of the deposition, unless the ground of the objection is one which might have been obviated or removed if presented at that time.

b. Errors and irregularities occurring at the oral examination in the manner of taking the deposition, in the form of the questions or answers, in the oath or affirmation, or in the conduct of parties, and errors of any kind which might be obviated, removed, or cured if promptly presented, are waived unless seasonable objection thereto is made at the taking of the deposition.

c. Objections to the form of written questions submitted under Rule 31 are waived unless served in writing upon the party propounding them within the time allowed for serving the succeeding cross or other questions and within five days after service of the last questions authorized.

(4) As to Completion and Return of Deposition. — Errors and irregularities in the manner in which the testimony is transcribed or the deposition is prepared, signed, certified, sealed, indorsed, transmitted, filed, or otherwise dealt with by the person taking the deposition under Rules 30 and 31 are waived unless a motion to suppress the deposition or some part thereof is made with reasonable promptness after such defeat is, or with due diligence might have been, ascertained. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1975, c. 762, s. 2; 1977, c. 984; 1981, c. 599, s. 2.)

COMMENT

Comment To This Rule as Originally Enacted. — The purpose of this rule is to require defects in the taking of depositions to be pointed out promptly in order that the erring party may have an opportunity to correct the errors and prevent waste of time and expense by a subsequent claim to suppress a deposition based upon some technical error.

Section (a) carries forward former § 1-568.23 (a).

Under former law objection based upon the disqualification of the person before whom the deposition is to be taken could be made at any time up to trial. Under section (b) such an objection would be unavailable at trial.

Sections (c)(1) and (2) follow verbatim federal Rule 32 (c)(1) and (3) and former § 1-568.23(b) and (d).

Federal Rule 32(c)(2), which is the same as former § 1-568.23(c), has been omitted.

Section (d). — This section follows federal Rule 32(d) verbatim and is quite similar to former §§ 1-568.22 and 1-568.23(e) except in this rule objection must be made with "reasonable promptness," whereas, under former statutes, a motion to suppress must have been made within ten days after the deposition was filed.

Comment to the 1975 Amendment. — As part of the rearrangement of the discovery rules, existing [former] sections (d) and (e) of Rule 26 are transferred to Rule 32 as new sections (a) and (c). The provisions of Rule 32 are retained as section (d) of Rule 32 with appropriate changes in the lettering and numbering of subheadings. The new rule is given a suitable new title. A beneficial by-product of the rearrangement is that provisions which are naturally related to one another are placed in one rule.

A change is made in new Rule 32(a), whereby it is made clear that the rules of evidence are to be applied to depositions offered at trial as though the deponent were then present and testifying at trial. This eliminates the possibility of certain technical hearsay objections which are based, not on the contents of deponent's testimony, but on his absence from court. The language of present [former] Rule 26(d) does not appear to authorize these technical objections, but it is not entirely clear.

The provisions of former Rule 26(d)(2)a and b, governing use of a deposition where the deponent testifies at trial, are preserved in Rule 32(a)(1) and (2) with the added provision that any party may use a deposition to contradict or impeach a witness who testifies at trial.

Note present [former] Rule 26(e), transferred to Rule 32(b).

An addition in Rule 32(a)(2) provides for use of a deposition of a person designated by a corporation or other organization, which is a party, to testify on its behalf. This complements the new procedure for taking the deposition of a corporation or other organization provided in Rules 30(b)(6) and 31(a). The addition is appropriate, since the deposition is in substance and effect that of the corporation or other organization which is a party.

References to other rules are changed to conform to the rearrangement, and minor verbal changes have been made for clarification. The time for objecting to written questions served under Rule 31 is slightly extended.

The somewhat unwieldy provisions of former Rule 32(e) relating to the mechanics of handling objections to all or part of a deposition are abandoned in favor of present Rule 32(b).

The absence of specific provisions relating to the time when objections of various kinds must be made has necessitated the entry of a stipulation on the subject in every carefully taken deposition. Rules 32(d)(3)a and b incorporate in the rules provisions that are almost universally stipulated by the parties in the absence of a rule.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Some of the cases cited below were decided under former sections (d) and (e) of § 1A-1, Rule 26 as it stood before the 1975 amendment.

To the extent they are in conflict, this rule takes precedence over § 8-83. Nytco Leasing, Inc. v. Southeastern Motels, Inc., 40 N.C. App. 120, 252 S.E.2d 826 (1979).

But insofar as it does not conflict with this rule, § 8-83 remains in effect. Wright v. American Gen. Life Ins. Co., 59 N.C. App. 591, 297 S.E.2d 910 (1982), cert. denied, 307 N.C. 582, 299 S.E.2d 653 (1983).

Deposition of Non-Party Witness. — To be admissible at trial, the deposition of an unavailable non-party witness must meet the requirements of both this Rule and N.C.R. Evid. 804(b)(1). Pleasant Valley Promenade v. Lechmere, Inc., 120 N.C. App. 650, 464 S.E.2d 47 (1995).

Use of Depositions at Trial Stage Limited. — Although the Rules of Civil Procedure provide extensive rights of discovery to any party, the use of a deposition in a civil case at the trial stage is sharply limited. Maness v. Bullins, 11 N.C. App. 567, 181 S.E.2d 750, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 395, 183 S.E.2d 242 (1971); Warren v. City of Asheville, 74 N.C. App. 402, 328 S.E.2d 859, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 336, 333 S.E.2d 496 (1985).

Generally, testimony by deposition is less desirable than oral testimony, and it should ordinarily be used as a substitute only if the witness is not available to testify in person.

Warren v. City of Asheville, 74 N.C. App. 402, 328 S.E.2d 859, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 336, 333 S.E.2d 496 (1985).

Oral testimony is more desirable, but a deposition may be used if a witness is unavailable. Investors Title Ins. Co. v. Herzig, 330 N.C. 681, 413 S.E.2d 268 (1992).

As to nonadmissibility of depositions for purposes of corroboration, see Miller v. Kennedy, 22 N.C. App. 163, 205 S.E.2d 741, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 661, 207 S.E.2d 755 (1974).

Use of Party's Deposition Under Subsection (a)(3). — While under subdivisions (2) and (9) of § 8-83 the presence of a witness in court is a proper basis for excluding the witness's deposition, it is no basis for excluding the deposition of a party, which subsection (a)(3) of this rule makes useable without restriction, if it is otherwise admissible under the rules of evidence. Stilwell v. Walden, 70 N.C. App. 543, 320 S.E.2d 329 (1984).

Whether a deposition may be used at trial pursuant to subsection (a)(4) of this rule will depend upon the circumstances at the time of the trial. Tennessee-Carolina Transp., Inc. v. Strick Corp., 291 N.C. 618, 231 S.E.2d 597 (1977).

There is no distinction between a discovery deposition and a trial deposition, under this rule. Robertson v. Nelson, 116 N.C. App. 324, 447 S.E.2d 488 (1994).

Admittance of Portion of Deposition Does Not Require Admittance of Entire Deposition. — Trial court did not err in allowing in evidence selected portions of each of the two plaintiffs' depositions and in overruling plaintiffs' motions that the entire depositions be admitted. Plaintiffs' reliance on this section was misplaced since plaintiffs alleged a right to have the entire depositions admitted once a portion had been offered into evidence; this section allows the admission of "any other part which is relevant to the part introduced." Lenins v. K-Mart Corp., 98 N.C. App. 590, 391 S.E.2d 843 (1990).

Continuous Search for Witness Unnecessary. — Nothing in the plain language of this rule indicates that an attorney must maintain a continuous search for a witness until either the witness is found or the deposition is used. Econo-Travel Motor Hotel Corp. v. Foreman's, Inc., 44 N.C. App. 126, 260 S.E.2d 661 (1979), cert. denied, 299 N.C. 544, 265 S.E.2d 404 (1980).

Incarcerated Parent in Parental Termination Proceeding. — When an incarcerated parent is denied transportation to the hearing in contested termination cases, the better practice is for the court, when so moved, to provide the funds necessary for the deposing of the incarcerated parent. The parent's deposition, combined with representation by counsel at the hearing, will ordinarily provide sufficient participation by the incarcerated parent so as to reduce the risk of error attributable to his absence to a level consistent with due process. In re Quevedo, 106 N.C. App. 574, 419 S.E.2d 158, appeal dismissed, 332 N.C. 483, 424 S.E.2d 397 (1992).

Admission of Interrogatories Held Error. — Where the record contained no indication by evidence or stipulation as to the whereabouts of a deponent who was not a party at the time the case came on for trial, and there was no finding or inquiry by the trial judge as to the existence of any of the conditions specified in former subsection (d)(3) of § 1A-1, Rule 26 (similar to subsection (a)(4) of this rule) which would have made the interrogatories competent and admissible in evidence, their admission constituted prejudicial error. Maness v. Bullins, 11 N.C. App. 567, 181 S.E.2d 750, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 395, 183 S.E.2d 242 (1971).

Admissibility of Adverse Examination of Defendant's President in Workers' Compensation Hearing. — In a workers' compensation hearing, the admissibility of an adverse examination of defendant's president was governed by former subsection (d)(1) of § 1A-1, Rule 26 (similar to subsection (a)(3) of this rule) and portions of the adverse examination offered by plaintiffs should have been received in evidence, notwithstanding defendant's president had testified in one of the hearings and resided within 75 miles of the hearing site. Gay v. Guaranteed Supply Co., 12 N.C. App. 149, 182 S.E.2d 664 (1971).

Rule applicable to the testimony at trial of an adverse party under § 1A-1, Rule 43(b) is equally applicable to the adverse party's testimony under adverse examination. Bowen v. Constructors Equip. Rental Co., 283 N.C. 395, 196 S.E.2d 789 (1973).

In marking the distinction between the introduction and use of the testimony of an adverse party, whether obtained by adverse examination prior to trial or at trial, and the introduction and use of the testimony of a witness other than a party, whether obtained by deposition or at trial, both this rule and § 1A-1, Rule 43(b) recognize that the self-interest of the adverse party bears upon the credibility of that portion of his testimony which tends to exculpate him and to place blame upon another. Bowen v. Constructors Equip. Rental Co., 283 N.C. 395, 196 S.E.2d 789 (1973).

Effect of Giving Adverse Testimony in Deposition Generally. — When a party gives adverse testimony in a deposition or at trial, that testimony should not, in most instances, be conclusively binding on him to the extent that his opponent may obtain either summary judgment or a directed verdict. Woods v. Smith, 297 N.C. 363, 255 S.E.2d 174 (1979).

Two exceptions to the general rule regarding the effect of giving adverse testi- mony in a deposition should be noted: (1) When a party gives deliberate, unequivocal and repeated testimony which is diametrically opposed to the essential allegations of the complaint, destroying the theory of the action, which testimony is intentionally given and unremedied by any further testimony, the testimony should be treated as binding judicial admissions rather than evidential admissions; (2) When a party gives adverse testimony, and there is insufficient evidence to the contrary presented to support the allegations of the complaint, summary judgment or a directed verdict would in most cases properly be granted. Woods v. Smith, 297 N.C. 363, 255 S.E.2d 174 (1979).

Effect of Introducing Adverse Examination of Defendant. — The introduction in evidence by a plaintiff of the adverse examination of the defendant no longer makes the defendant a witness for the plaintiff. Plaintiff does not thereby represent the defendant as being worthy of belief as to each and every aspect of his testimony, but may impeach him as well as contradict him. Bowen v. Constructors Equip. Rental Co., 283 N.C. 395, 196 S.E.2d 789 (1973).

Cross-Examination Concerning Deposition Taken in Unrelated Case. — In a personal injury action, defense counsel could cross-examine plaintiff concerning his deposition taken in another pending, unrelated case. And as plaintiff's statements concerning his lack of prior medical problems contradicted plaintiff's testimony as to the extent of his injuries sustained as a result of the collision with defendant, his prior inconsistent statements could be used for purposes of impeachment and were admissible. Gillespie v. Draughn, 54 N.C. App. 413, 283 S.E.2d 548 (1981), cert. denied, 304 N.C. 726, 288 S.E.2d 805 (1982).

Where depositions were only offered for corroborative purposes, the trial court did not err in admitting them. Hart v. Hart, 74 N.C. App. 1, 327 S.E.2d 631 (1985).

Insufficient Evidence of Witness's Illness. — Party's attorney failed to offer sufficient proof of a witness's alleged illness, and the trial court did not abuse its discretion in refusing to admit testimony under subdivision (a)(4), where the attorney orally stated that he had received the information that witness was ill from the witness's wife over the telephone, and offered no other form of proof concerning the alleged illness. Vandervoort v. McKenzie, 117 N.C. App. 152, 450 S.E.2d 491 (1994).

Judicial Notice of Distance Between Cities Not Required. — Where an attorney sought to have a deposition admitted pursuant to subdivision (a)(4) of the Rules of Civil Procedure by asserting that the witness was more than 100 miles from the place of trial, the trial court did not abuse its discretion by declining to take judicial notice of the distance between two cities. Vandervoort v. McKenzie, 117 N.C. App. 152, 450 S.E.2d 491 (1994).

Applied in Holbrooks v. Duke Univ., Inc., 63 N.C. App. 504, 305 S.E.2d 69 (1983); In re City of Durham Annexation Ordinance No. 5791, 66 N.C. App. 472, 311 S.E.2d 898 (1984).

Rule 33. Interrogatories to parties.

(a) Availability; procedures for use. — Any party may serve upon any other party written interrogatories to be answered by the party served or, if the party served is a public or private corporation or a partnership or association or governmental agency, by any officer or agent, who shall furnish such information as is available to the party. Interrogatories may, without leave of court, be served upon the plaintiff after commencement of the action and upon any other party with or after service of the summons and complaint upon that party.

A party may direct no more than 50 interrogatories, in one or more sets, to any other party, except upon leave granted by the Court for good cause shown or by agreement of the other party. Interrogatory parts and subparts shall be counted as separate interrogatories for purposes of this rule.

There shall be sufficient space following each interrogatory in which the respondent may state the response. The respondent shall: (1) state the response in the space provided, using additional pages if necessary; or (2) restate the interrogatory to be followed by the response.

Each interrogatory shall be answered separately and fully in writing under oath, unless it is objected to, in which event the reasons for objection shall be stated in lieu of an answer. An objection to an interrogatory shall be made by stating the objection and the reason therefor either in the space following the interrogatory or following the restated interrogatory. The answers are to be signed by the person making them, and the objections signed by the attorney making them. The party upon whom the interrogatories have been served shall serve a copy of the answers, and objections if any, within 30 days after the service of the interrogatories, except that a defendant may serve answers or objections within 45 days after service of the summons and complaint upon the defendant. The court may allow a shorter or longer time. The party submitting the interrogatories may move for an order under Rule 37(a) with respect to any objection to or other failure to answer an interrogatory.

(b) Scope; use at trial. — Interrogatories may relate to any matters which can be inquired into under Rule 26(b), and the answers may be used to the extent permitted by the rules of evidence.

An interrogatory otherwise proper is not necessarily objectionable merely because an answer to the interrogatory involves an opinion or contention that relates to fact or the application of law to fact, but the court may order that such an interrogatory need not be answered until after designated discovery has been completed or until a pretrial conference or other later time.

(c) Option to produce business records. — Where the answer to an interrogatory may be derived or ascertained from the business records of the party upon whom the interrogatory has been served or from an examination, audit or inspection of such business records, or from a compilation, abstract or summary based thereon, and the burden of deriving or ascertaining the answer is substantially the same for the party serving the interrogatory as for the party served, it is a sufficient answer to such interrogatory to specify the records from which the answer may be derived or ascertained and to afford to the party serving the interrogatory reasonable opportunity to examine, audit or inspect such records and to make copies, compilations, abstracts or summaries. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1971, c. 1156, s. 4.5; 1975, c. 99; c. 762, s. 2; 1987, c. 73; c. 613, s. 1.)

COMMENT

Comment to this Rule as Originally Enacted. — Under former § 1-568.17 a party might examine upon written interrogatories.

This rule provides that the scope of the interrogatories is the same as that for discovery generally, as set out in Rule 26(b). Hence, interrogatories may be used for purposes of discovery. Also, the use of answers to interrogatories is limited by Rule 26(d) as well as by ordinary rules of evidence.

The period in which plaintiff may not serve interrogatories without leave of court has been lengthened from 10 days, as in federal Rule 33, to 30 days. This corresponds to the time for filing answer or other pleading or motion and thus preserves the general scheme by which a defendant is given 30 days to take his first action unless the court otherwise orders.

It should be noted that this rule does not require notice to parties other than the one to be examined. Former § 1-568.17 required that a copy of the order for examination and a copy of the interrogatories be delivered to all other parties.

The problems which might be presented in cases where the interrogatories call for documents to be attached are covered in Rule 26(b), which governs the scope of the interrogatories.

Comment to the 1975 Amendment. Section (a). — The mechanics of the operation of Rule 33 are substantially revised by the proposed amendment, with a view to reducing court intervention. There is generally agreement that interrogatories have spawned a greater percentage of objections and motions than any other discovery device.

The procedures provided in former Rule 33 seemed calculated to encourage objections and court motions. The time period allowed for objecting to interrogatories, 10 days, was too short. The time pressures tended to encourage objections as a means of gaining time to answer. The time for objections was even shorter than for answers, and the party ran the risk that if he failed to object in time he may have waived his objections. It often seemed easier to object than to seek an extension of time. Unlike Rules 30(d) and 37(a), Rule 33 imposed no sanction of expenses on a party whose objections were clearly unjustified. Rule 33 assured that the objections led directly to court, through its requirement that they be served with a notice of hearing. Although this procedure did not preclude an out-of-court resolution of the dispute, the procedure tended to discourage informal negotiations. If answers were served and they were thought inadequate, the interrogating party could move under Rule 37(a) for an order compelling adequate answers. There was no assurance that the hearing on objections and that on inadequate answers would be heard together.

The amendment improves the procedure of Rule 33 in the following respects:

(1) The time allowed for response applies to both answers and objections, but a defendant need not respond in less than 45 days after service of the summons and complaint upon him. As is true under existing law, the responding party who believes that some parts or all of the interrogatories are objectionable may choose to seek a protective order under new Rule 26(c) or may serve objections under this rule. Unless he applies for a protective order, he is required to serve answers or objections in response to the interrogatories, subject to the sanctions provided in Rule 37(d). Answers and objections are served together, so that a response to each interrogatory is encouraged, and any failure to respond is easily noted.

(2) In view of the enlarged time permitted for response, it is no longer necessary to require leave of court for service of interrogatories. The purpose of this requirement — that defendant have time to obtain counsel before a response must be made — is adequately fulfilled by the requirement that interrogatories be served upon a party with or after service of the summons and complaint upon him.

(3) If objections are made, the burden is on the interrogating party to move under Rule 37(a) for a court order compelling answers, in the course of which the court will pass on the objections. The change in the burden of going forward does not alter the existing obligation of an objecting party to justify his objections. If the discovering party asserts that an answer is incomplete or evasive, again he may look to Rule 37(a) for relief, and he should add this assertion to his motion to overrule objections. There is no requirement that the parties consult informally concerning their differences, but the new procedure should encourage consultation.

A change is made in section (a) which is not related to the sequence of procedures. The restriction to "adverse" parties is eliminated. The courts have generally construed this restriction as precluding interrogatories unless an issue between the parties is disclosed by the pleadings — even though the parties may have conflicting interests. The resulting distinctions have often been highly technical. Eliminating the requirement of "adverse" parties from Rule 33 brings it into line with all other discovery rules.

A second change in section (a) is the addition of the term "governmental agency" to the listing of organizations whose answers are to be made by any officer or agent of the organization. This does not involve any change in existing law. Compare the similar listing in Rule 30(b)(6).

The duty of a party to supplement his answers to interrogatories is governed by a new provision in Rule 26(e).

Section (b). — There are numerous and conflicting federal decisions on the question whether and to what extent interrogatories are limited to matters "of fact," or may elicit opinions, contentions, and legal conclusions.

Rule 33 is amended to provide that an interrogatory is not objectionable merely because it calls for an opinion or contention that relates to fact or the application of law to fact. Efforts to draw sharp lines between facts and opinions have invariably been unsuccessful, and the clear trend of the cases is to permit "factual" opinions. As to requests for opinions or contentions that call for the application of law to fact, they can be most useful in narrowing and sharpening the issues, which is a major purpose of discovery. On the other hand, under the new language interrogatories may not extend to issues of "pure law," i.e., legal issues unrelated to the facts of the case.

Since interrogatories involving mixed questions of law and fact may create disputes between the parties which are best resolved after much or all of the other discovery has been completed, the court is expressly authorized to defer an answer. Likewise, the court may delay determination until pretrial conference, if it believes that the dispute is best resolved in the presence of the judge.

The use of answers to interrogatories at trial is made subject to the rules of evidence. The provisions governing use of depositions, to which this rule presently refers, are not entirely apposite to answers to interrogatories, since deposition practice contemplates that all parties will ordinarily participate through cross-examination.

Certain provisions are deleted from section (b) because they are fully covered by new Rule 26(c) providing for protective orders and Rules 26(a) and 26(d). The language of the section is thus simplified without any change of substance.

Section (c). — This is a new section relating especially to interrogatories which require a party to engage in burdensome or expensive research into his own business records in order to give an answer. The section gives the party an option to make the records available and place the burden of research on the party who seeks the information. This provision, without undermining the liberal scope of interrogatory discovery, places the burden of discovery upon its potential benefitee, and alleviates a problem which in the past has troubled federal courts. The interrogating party is protected against abusive use of this provision through the requirement that the burden of ascertaining the answer be substantially the same for both sides. A respondent may not impose on an interrogating party a mass of records as to which research is feasible only for one familiar with the records. At the same time, the respondent unable to invoke this section does not on that account lose the protection available to him under new Rule 26(c) against oppressive or unduly burdensome or expensive interrogatories. And even when the respondent successfully invokes the section, the court is not deprived of its usual power, in appropriate cases, to require that the interrogating party reimburse the respondent for the expense of assembling his records and making them intelligible.

Disclosure of trial witnesses. — Prior to the 1970 revision the federal cases were in conflict as to whether a party could be required at a proper time, in response to an interrogatory or by other discovery devices, to state the names and addresses of witnesses then known, and whom he proposed to call at trial. Probably the weight of reported authority was that a party is not required so to do. But at least the judge at pretrial under Rule 16 may require disclosure in the exercise of a sound discretion in light of all the circumstances.

And the 1970 revision provides that "A party may through interrogatories require any other party to identify each person whom the other party expects to call as an expert witness at trial, to state the subject matter on which the expert is expected to testify, and to state the substance of the facts and opinions to which the expert is expected to testify and a summary of the grounds for each opinion." Rule 26(b)(4) a 1, supra.

Obtaining copies of documents, etc., by requesting a party to attach them to his answers to interrogatories. — Formerly Rule 34 required a motion showing good cause as a prerequisite to obtaining discovery and production of documents and things for inspection, copying or photographing. Accordingly, most federal authorities held that interrogatories to a party requesting copies of documents were not proper and that copies of statements or witnesses and other documents could be obtained from a party only under Rule 34 (or Rules 26 and 45) upon a showing of good cause. The present revision eliminates the good-cause requirement in Rule 34; but section (b) of that rule sets out the procedure that should be followed in obtaining inspection, etc. Rule 34 does not, however, deal with discovery of trial preparation materials. That matter is now dealt with by Rule 26(b)(3), (4), supra. Those provisions allow a party or a witness to obtain a copy of his own written statement as of right. And a party is entitled, as of right, to obtain from any other party the names of expert witnesses whom he expects to call at trial, and a statement of the substance of the facts and opinions to which the expert is expected to testify. Rule 26(b)(4) a 1, supra. As to other trial preparation materials a party must make the showing spelled out in Rule 26(b)(3), supra. This requirement, accordingly, should not be circumvented by an improper use of Rule 33 or Rule 34.

Rule 30(b)(5) does, however, provide that "The notice to a party deponent may be accompanied by a request made in compliance with Rule 34 for the production of documents and tangible things at the taking of the deposition."

CASE NOTES

Applicability of §§ 8-56 and 50-10. — The provisions of §§ 8-56 and 50-10 which render a husband or wife an incompetent witness apply to answers to interrogatories as well as to testimony at trial. Wright v. Wright, 281 N.C. 159, 188 S.E.2d 317 (1972).

The General Assembly, in enacting the Rules of Civil Procedure, did not contemplate that this rule and § 1A-1, Rule 26(b) would enable husband and wife in actions between them to require the other to answer interrogatories relating to acts of adultery or conduct from which adultery might be implied during the subsistence of their marriage; the General Assembly did not intend in such manner to remove the cloak of privacy surrounding the confidential relationships of husband and wife. Wright v. Wright, 281 N.C. 159, 188 S.E.2d 317 (1972).

Attestation by Defendant to Answers Not His Own. — Section 1A-1, Rule 37(d) does not come into operation if the responding party meets the requirements of this rule. However, by attesting to answers that were not his, defendant did not meet the requirements of this rule. Therefore, the imposition of sanctions of default against defendant was proper under § 1A-1, Rule 37(d). Hunter v. Spaulding, 97 N.C. App. 372, 388 S.E.2d 630 (1990).

No Shield of Deniability. — Any requirement that a person supply answers that are "reasonably available" does not mean that a person may distend this rule to fashion a shield of so-called "deniability." Hunter v. Spaulding, 97 N.C. App. 372, 388 S.E.2d 630 (1990).

Failure to Object to Interrogatories as Waiver. — Ordinarily, in the absence of an extension of time, failure to object to interrogatories within the time fixed by the rule is a waiver of any objection. Golding v. Taylor, 19 N.C. App. 245, 198 S.E.2d 478, cert. denied, 284 N.C. 121, 199 S.E.2d 659 (1973).

Where plaintiff was properly served with interrogatories but refused to answer them without good cause, and did not serve objections to any of the interrogatories on defendant or ask for an extension of time to answer, the trial court properly dismissed plaintiff's action. Hammer v. Allison, 20 N.C. App. 623, 202 S.E.2d 307, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 233, 204 S.E.2d 23 (1974).

Absent Some Overriding Constitutional Privilege. — When time has lapsed the defendant will be deemed to have waived its right to object to interrogatories, absent some overriding constitutional privilege such as self-incrimination. Harrington Mfg. Co. v. Powell Mfg. Co., 26 N.C. App. 414, 216 S.E.2d 379, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 242, 217 S.E.2d 679 (1975).

Principle that ordinarily failure to timely object to interrogatories waives objections thereto must yield to the privilege against self-incrimination guaranteed by U.S. Const., Amend. XIV. Golding v. Taylor, 19 N.C. App. 245, 198 S.E.2d 478, cert. denied, 284 N.C. 121, 199 S.E.2d 659 (1973).

Trial court acts within its discretion in making and refusing discovery orders. George W. Shipp Travel Agency, Inc. v. Dunn, 20 N.C. App. 706, 202 S.E.2d 812, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 237, 204 S.E.2d 23 (1974).

Where plaintiff served answers to interrogatories after defendant had filed motion to dismiss and plaintiff's failure to comply with this rule clearly prejudiced the defendant's ability to prepare for trial, the court had authority to dismiss the action. Hayes v. Browne, 76 N.C. App. 98, 331 S.E.2d 763 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 587, 341 S.E.2d 25 (1986).

Interrogatories as Admissions of Party Opponent. — Defendant's answers to interrogatories, duly signed by defendant's attorney, were admissions of a party opponent, and as such should have been admitted into evidence. Karp v. University of N.C., 78 N.C. App. 214, 336 S.E.2d 640 (1985).

Party May Not Disavow Answers at Trial Which He Gave on Interrogatories. — This rule does not permit a party to swear to the truth of answers given on interrogatories and then, at trial, to disavow knowledge about those answers. Hunter v. Spaulding, 97 N.C. App. 372, 388 S.E.2d 630 (1990).

Applied in Marks v. Thompson, 282 N.C. 174, 192 S.E.2d 311 (1972); Baxter v. Jones, 14 N.C. App. 296, 188 S.E.2d 622 (1972); Harris v. Parker, 17 N.C. App. 606, 195 S.E.2d 121 (1973).

Rule 34. Production of documents and things and entry upon land for inspection and other purposes.

(a) Scope. — Any party may serve on any other party a request (i) to produce and permit the party making the request, or someone acting on his behalf, to inspect and copy, any designated documents (including writings, drawings, graphs, charts, photographs, phono-records, and other data compilations from which information can be obtained, translated, if necessary, by the respondent through detection devices into reasonably usable form), or to inspect and copy, test, or sample any tangible things which constitute or contain matters within the scope of Rule 26(b) and which are in the possession, custody or control of the party upon whom the request is served; or (ii) to permit entry upon designated land or other property in the possession or control of the party upon whom the request is served for the purpose of inspection and measuring, surveying, photographing, testing, or sampling the property or any designated object or operation thereon, within the scope of Rule 26(b).

(b) Procedure. — The request may, without leave of court, be served upon the plaintiff after commencement of the action and upon any other party with or after service of the summons and complaint upon that party. The request shall set forth the items to be inspected either by individual item or by category, and describe each item and category with reasonable particularity. The request shall specify a reasonable time, place, and manner of making the inspection and performing the related acts.

The party upon whom the request is served shall serve a written response within 30 days after the service of the request, except that a defendant may serve a response within 45 days after service of the summons and complaint upon that defendant. The court may allow a shorter or longer time. The response shall state, with respect to each item or category, that inspection and related activities will be permitted as requested, unless the request is objected to, in which event the reasons for objection shall be stated. If objection is made to part of an item or category, the part shall be specified. The party submitting the request may move for an order under Rule 37(a) with respect to any objection to or other failure to respond to the request or any part thereof, or any failure to permit inspection as requested.

There shall be sufficient space following each request in which the respondent may state the response. The respondent shall: (1) state the response in the space provided, using additional pages if necessary; or (2) restate the request to be followed by the response. An objection to a request shall be made by stating the objection and the reason therefor either in the space following the request or following the restated request.

(c) Persons not parties. — This rule does not preclude an independent action against a person not a party for production of documents and things and permission to enter upon land. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1969, c. 895, s. 8; 1973, c. 923, s. 1; 1975, c. 762, s. 2; 1987, c. 613, s. 2.)

COMMENT

Comment to this Rule as Originally Enacted. — Former statutes in a pending action authorized the court to order an inspection of writings (§ 8-89) and the production of documents (§ 8-90).

The protective provisions of Rule 30(b) are incorporated in this rule by reference.

The provisions in this rule limiting the scope of the examination as permitted in Rule 26(b) and the specification in Rule 26(b) of documents which shall not be the subject of discovery would appear to provide explicit regulations on such matters and avoid complexities which have existed under the federal rules.

Comment to the 1969 Amendment. — The 1969 amendment deleted former subsection (b) which dealt with discovery of certain documents without order of court. Since this whole area is now undergoing intensive study, it was thought desirable to delay action until a later date.

Comment to the 1975 Amendment. — Rule 34 is revised to accomplish the following major changes in the existing rule: (1) To eliminate the requirement of good cause for production, which was formerly superimposed on the provisions regulating the permissible scope of discovery; (2) To have the rule operate without the necessity of the court's participation; (3) To include testing and sampling as well as inspecting or photographing tangible things; and (4) To make clear that the rule does not preclude an independent action for analogous discovery against persons not parties.

Section (a). — Good cause is eliminated because it has furnished an uncertain and erratic protection to the parties from whom production is sought and is now rendered unnecessary by virtue of the more specific provisions added to Rule 26(b) relating to materials assembled in preparation for trial and to experts retained or consulted by parties.

The good-cause requirement was originally inserted in federal Rule 34 as a general protective provision in the absence of experience with the specific problems that would arise thereunder. The overwhelming proportion of the cases in which the formula of good cause has been applied to require a specific showing are those involving trial preparation. In practice, the courts have not treated documents as having a special immunity to discovery simply because of their being documents. Protection may be afforded to claims of privacy or secrecy or of undue burden or expense under what is now Rule 26(c) (previously Rule 30(b)). To be sure, an appraisal of "undue" burden inevitably entails consideration of the needs of the party seeking discovery. With special provisions added to govern trial preparation materials and experts, there is no longer any occasion to retain the requirement of good cause.

The revision of Rule 34 to have it operate extrajudicially rather than by court order is to a large extent a reflection of existing practice.

The inclusion of testing and sampling of tangible things and objects or operations on land reflects a need frequently encountered by parties in preparation for trial. If the operation of a particular machine is the basis of a claim for negligent injury, it will often be necessary to test its operating parts or to sample and test the products it is producing.

The inclusive description of "documents" is revised to accord with changing technology. It makes clear that Rule 34 applies to electronic data compilations from which information can be obtained only with the use of detection devices, and that when the data can as a practical matter be made usable by the discovering party only through respondent's devices, respondent may be required to use his devices to translate the data into usable form. In many instances, this means that respondent will have to supply a printout of computer data. The burden thus placed on respondent will vary from case to case, and the courts have ample power under Rule 26(c) to protect respondent against undue burden or expense, either by restricting discovery or requiring that the discovering party pay costs. Similarly, if the discovering party needs to check the electronic source itself, the court may protect respondent with respect to preservation of his records, confidentiality of nondiscoverable matters, and costs.

Section (b). — The procedure provided in Rule 34 is essentially the same as that in Rule 33, as amended, and the discussion in the note appended to that rule is relevant to Rule 34 as well. Problems peculiar to Rule 34 relate to the specific arrangements that must be worked out for inspection and related acts of copying, photographing, testing, or sampling. The rule provides that a request for inspection shall set forth the items to be inspected either by item or category, describing each with reasonable particularity, and shall specify a reasonable time, place, and manner of making the inspection.

Section (c). — Rule 34 as revised continues to apply only to parties. Comments from the bar to the drafters of the federal rule made clear that in the preparation of cases for trial it is occasionally necessary to enter land or inspect large tangible things in the possession of a person not a party, and that some federal courts had dismissed independent actions in the nature of bills in equity for such discovery on the ground that Rule 34 is preemptive. While an ideal solution to this problem is to provide for discovery against persons not parties in Rule 34, both the jurisdictional and procedural problems are very complex. For the present, this section makes clear that Rule 34 does not preclude independent actions for discovery against persons not parties.

Relation to other rules. — Rule 34 does not deal with trial preparation materials, since discovery as to those materials is specially dealt with by Rule 26(b)(3), (4). Accordingly, those provisions should not be circumvented by an improper use of Rule 33 or 34.

A request made in compliance with Rule 34 may accompany the notice to a party deponent to take his oral deposition. Rule 30(b)(5).

CASE NOTES

I. In General.
II. Decisions under Prior Law.

I. IN GENERAL.

The purpose of this rule is to prevent litigants from engaging in mere fishing expeditions to discover evidence or using the rule for harassment purposes. Williams v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 67 N.C. App. 271, 312 S.E.2d 905 (1984).

Requirement of Court Order Based Upon Motion and Good Cause Eliminated. — The new procedure for obtaining production and inspection of documents has eliminated the requirement of a court order based upon motion and good cause. This new rule simply requires serving the request for production upon the other party. Willis v. Duke Power Co., 291 N.C. 19, 229 S.E.2d 191 (1976).

Prerequisites of Production. — This rule requires that as a prerequisite of production, documents must be (1) "designated," (2) "within the scope" of § 1A-1, Rule 26(b), and (3) in the "possession, custody or control" of a party from whom they are sought. Willis v. Duke Power Co., 291 N.C. 19, 229 S.E.2d 191 (1976).

Asserting Work Product Privilege Insufficient Without Written Objection or Protective Order. — Assertion by counsel of a work product privilege to the tapes and transcripts was insufficient to meet the requirements of this rule where he did not file a written objection nor seek a protective order, and his failure to do either entitled the opposing party to proceed under Rule 37(d). Pugh v. Pugh, 113 N.C. App. 375, 438 S.E.2d 214 (1994).

The party seeking production must show that prerequisites are satisfied. Willis v. Duke Power Co., 291 N.C. 19, 229 S.E.2d 191 (1976).

"Designation" by Categories. — "Designation," as used in this rule, does not necessarily mean that documents must be separately described. Designation by categories may be sufficient, depending upon the categories utilized. Willis v. Duke Power Co., 291 N.C. 19, 229 S.E.2d 191 (1976).

As to what constituted good cause under this rule prior to 1975 amendment, see Stanback v. Stanback, 287 N.C. 448, 215 S.E.2d 30 (1975).

When a party requests production of documents under this rule, he must show good cause, which includes the elements of necessity and relevance. Williams v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 67 N.C. App. 271, 312 S.E.2d 905 (1984).

A mere statement that an examination is material and necessary is not sufficient to support a production order. Williams v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 67 N.C. App. 271, 312 S.E.2d 905 (1984).

Applied in Lineberger v. Colonial Life & Accident Ins. Co., 12 N.C. App. 135, 182 S.E.2d 643 (1971); Midgett v. Crystal Dawn Corp., 58 N.C. App. 734, 294 S.E.2d 386 (1982); Kirkhart v. Saieed, 107 N.C. App. 293, 419 S.E.2d 580 (1992).

II. DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW.

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former §§ 8-89 and 8-90.

As to liberal construction of former provisions, see Abbitt v. Gregory, 196 N.C. 9, 144 S.E. 297 (1928); H.L. Coble Constr. Co. v. Housing Auth., 244 N.C. 261, 93 S.E.2d 98 (1956); Diocese of W.N.C. v. Sale, 254 N.C. 218, 118 S.E.2d 399 (1961).

Former §§ 8-89 and 8-90 did not supersede the subpoena duces tecum. Vaughan v. Broadfoot, 267 N.C. 691, 149 S.E.2d 37 (1966).

Former § 8-89 only authorized the judge to order one party to exhibit the writing to the other and required a copy to be given him or permit him to take a copy of the same, within a specified time. It was not intended that there should be an investigation of the controversies, with witnesses and lawyers on both sides. Sheek v. Sain, 127 N.C. 266, 37 S.E. 334 (1900).

An examination of an adverse party could be joined with an order under former § 8-89 for an inspection of writings in the possession or under the control of the party to be examined. Abbitt v. Gregory, 196 N.C. 9, 144 S.E. 297 (1928).

Substitute for Bill of Discovery. — Former § 8-89 was primarily designed and intended to afford facilities for the ascertainment of truths that were formerly supplied by a bill of discovery. Girard Nat'l Bank v. McArthur, 165 N.C. 374, 81 S.E. 327 (1914).

Affidavit as Prerequisite to Order for Discovery and Inspection. — As a prerequisite to an order for pretrial discovery and inspection of documents under former provisions, the courts, following their own procedure for discovery in aid of a bill of equity, required the applicant to show by affidavit the necessity for the inspection and the materiality to the issue of the documents sought to be inspected. If the affidavit was insufficient, any order based upon it was invalid. Vaughan v. Broadfoot, 267 N.C. 691, 149 S.E.2d 37 (1966).

The affidavit supporting an order for inspection of writings must sufficiently designate the writings sought to be inspected and show that they are material to the inquiry, and where the affidavit is insufficient an order based thereon is invalid. Dunlap v. London Guar. & Accident Co., 202 N.C. 651, 163 S.E. 750 (1932); Flanner v. Saint Joseph Home for Blind Sisters, 227 N.C. 342, 42 S.E.2d 225 (1947); H.L. Coble Constr. Co. v. Housing Auth., 244 N.C. 261, 93 S.E.2d 98 (1956); Tillis v. Calvine Cotton Mills, 244 N.C. 587, 94 S.E.2d 600 (1956).

The affidavit must set forth facts showing the materiality and necessity of the papers sought to be produced, and the mere averment that they are material and necessary is insufficient. Patterson v. Southern Ry., 219 N.C. 23, 12 S.E.2d 652 (1941).

When Application for Order Is Sufficiently Definite. — An application for an order for inspection of writings is sufficiently definite when it refers to papers under the exclusive control of the adverse party which relate to the immediate issue in controversy, and which cannot be more definitely described by applicant. Rivenbark v. Shell Union Oil Corp., 217 N.C. 592, 8 S.E.2d 919 (1940).

While a "roving commission for the inspection of papers" will not be ordinarily allowed, an application for an order for inspection of writings was sufficiently definite when it referred to papers under the exclusive control of the adverse party, which related to the immediate issue in controversy and could not be definitely described, and an order based thereon would be upheld. Bell v. Murchison Nat'l Bank, 196 N.C. 233, 145 S.E. 241 (1928).

Instrument Sought Must Be Pertinent to Issue. — Upon motion to allow inspection or copy of books, papers, etc., before trial, it must be made to appear that the instrument in question relates to the merits of the action or is pertinent to the issue. Evans v. Seaboard Air Line Ry., 167 N.C. 415, 83 S.E. 617 (1914).

The law will not permit a "fishing or ransacking expedition," either by subpoena duces tecum or a bill of discovery. Vaughan v. Broadfoot, 267 N.C. 691, 149 S.E.2d 37 (1966).

A person will not be ordered to allow an inspection of a writing if the party making the request knows the contents thereof. Sheek v. Sain, 127 N.C. 266, 37 S.E. 334 (1900).

Information to Be Used in Action Against Third Party. — Plaintiff could not proceed under former § 8-89 to examine defendant's records and documents for the purpose of obtaining information to form the basis of an action against a third party. Flanner v. Saint Joseph Home for Blind Sisters, 227 N.C. 342, 42 S.E.2d 225 (1947).

As to requirement of due notice, see Vann v. Lawrence, 111 N.C. 32, 15 S.E. 1031 (1892).

What Constitutes Due Notice. — Due notice is notice sufficient to enable the party to have the document when called for. McDonald v. Carson, 95 N.C. 377 (1886).

Insufficient Notice. — Generally if a party dwells in another town than that in which the trial is had, a service of notice upon him at the place where the trial is had, or after he has left home to attend court, to produce papers, is not sufficient. Beard v. Southern Ry., 143 N.C. 136, 55 S.E. 505 (1906).

Duration of Notice. — A notice to produce papers, etc., "on a trial to be had this day" is not confined to a trial on that day, but extends to a trial at a subsequent term. State v. Kimbrough, 13 N.C. 431 (1830).

Necessity That Complaint Be Filed. — A court could not, under former § 8-90, order the production of papers by defendant where no complaint had been filed. Branson v. Fentress, 35 N.C. 165 (1851).

Acquiring Information Necessary to Filing of Complaint. — In an action against a clinic and doctors for alleged tortious defamation and disclosures of confidential information acquired professionally, plaintiff was held entitled to an order requiring defendants to produce specified papers and documents to afford information necessary to the filing of the complaint. Nance v. Gilmore Clinic, Inc., 230 N.C. 534, 53 S.E.2d 531 (1949), distinguishing Flanner v. Saint Joseph Home for Blind Sisters, 227 N.C. 342, 42 S.E.2d 225 (1947), where the matter sought to be discovered was not necessary as a basis for filing the complaint.

In an action by a stockholder of a corporation to set aside as fraudulent an assignment by the corporation of a contract, the plaintiff was entitled to inspect the records and books of the corporation in order to obtain information upon which to frame his complaint. Holt v. Southern Finishing & Whse. Co., 116 N.C. 480, 21 S.E. 919 (1895).

Where no answer was filed, defendant was not entitled to an order to inspect a check in possession of the plaintiff. Sheek v. Sain, 127 N.C. 266, 37 S.E. 334 (1900).

Discretion of Court. — Whether the trial court would grant an order for the inspection of writings upon a sufficient affidavit rested in its sound discretion. Dunlap v. London Guar. & Accident Co., 202 N.C. 651, 163 S.E. 750 (1932); Tillis v. Calvine Cotton Mills, 244 N.C. 587, 94 S.E.2d 600 (1956).

It was within the sound discretion of the trial court to order a party to give to the adverse party an inspection and copy of any books, papers and documents in his possession or under his control which contained evidence relating to the merits of the action or the defense thereto. Abbitt v. Gregory, 196 N.C. 9, 144 S.E. 297 (1928).

Res Judicata Held Inapplicable. — An order of the judge reversing an order of the clerk with reference to the production of papers was a discretionary matter, and being an administrative order in the cause and not affecting the merits, was not res judicata; hence, the motion could be renewed and a new order obtained. Mills v. Biscoe Lumber Co., 139 N.C. 524, 52 S.E. 200 (1905).

Compelling Production After Earlier Refusal. — Where the judge refuses an inspection which is of the character authorized, it still rests within his discretion to compel the production of the writing later or upon trial, when its competency and pertinency as evidence bearing on the issue may be better determined. Evans v. Seaboard Air Line Ry., 167 N.C. 415, 83 S.E. 617 (1914).

Order of Court Upheld. — Trial court's refusal to grant plaintiff's motion for an order that defendant produce certain written statements signed by witnesses, employees of defendant, which statements these employees testified they used to refresh their recollection before becoming witnesses, was not error, the granting of such motion being in the discretion of the court, where the record failed to show that the requirements of former §§ 8-89 and 8-90 were met by plaintiff, or that the written statements were in court. Star Mfg. Co. v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 222 N.C. 330, 23 S.E.2d 32 (1942).

Where plaintiff's motion was for inspection of writings in the possession of the corporate defendant, and the order allowed inspection of writings in the possession of both the corporate and individual defendant, but both defendants were represented by the same counsel and it appeared that the individual defendant was the president of the corporate defendant and that the writings referred to in the order all related to business of the corporate defendant, abuse of discretion in granting the order was not shown. Tillis v. Calvine Cotton Mills, 244 N.C. 587, 94 S.E.2d 600 (1956).

Former § 8-89 did not authorize issuance of an order that respondent deposit papers in the clerk's office. Mills v. Biscoe Lumber Co., 139 N.C. 524, 52 S.E. 200 (1905).

Papers produced by the method prescribed are competent evidence for all legitimate purposes. Austin v. Secrest, 91 N.C. 214 (1884).

Proof by Parol. — The contents of a paper writing cannot be proved by parol unless notice has been given to the adverse party who has it in his possession to produce it on trial. Murchison v. McLeod, 47 N.C. 239 (1855).

Motion to nonsuit a plaintiff for not producing books or papers could not be made unless a previous order of the court had been obtained for the production of such books or papers. Graham v. Hamilton, 25 N.C. 381 (1843).

Where plaintiff's affidavit stated that he had not seen letter ordered produced since he sent it, that he had not knowingly destroyed it, and that he had made diligent search for it and could not find it, sufficient cause was shown for a discharge of the rule for its production. Fuller v. McMillian, 44 N.C. 206 (1853).

An appeal lies from an order requiring a person to allow an inspection of paper writings. Sheek v. Sain, 127 N.C. 266, 37 S.E. 334 (1900).

Necessity of Stating Facts. — The Supreme Court will not pass upon the propriety of discharging a rule for the production of papers unless the facts are stated upon which the application is based. Maxwell v. McDowell, 50 N.C. 391 (1858).

Rule 35. Physical and mental examination of persons.

(a) Order for examination. — When the mental or physical condition (including the blood group) of a party, or of an agent or a person in the custody or under the legal control of a party, is in controversy, a judge of the court in which the action is pending as defined by Rule 30(h) may order the party to submit to a physical or mental examination by a physician or to produce for examination his agent or the person in his custody or legal control. The order may be made only on motion for good cause shown and upon notice to the person to be examined and to all parties and shall specify the time, place, manner, conditions, and scope of the examination and the person or persons by whom it is to be made.

(b) Report of examining physician. —

(1) If requested by the party against whom an order is made under Rule 35(a) or the person examined, the party causing the examination to be made shall deliver to him a copy of a detailed written report of the examining physician setting out his findings, including results of all tests made, diagnoses and conclusions, together with like reports of all earlier examinations of the same condition. After such request and delivery the party causing the examination shall be entitled upon request to receive from the party against whom the order is made a like report of any examination, previously or thereafter made, of the same condition, unless, in the case of a report of examination of a person not a party, the party shows that he is unable to obtain it. The court on motion may make an order against a party requiring delivery of a report on such terms as are just, and if a physician fails or refuses to make a report the court may exclude his testimony if offered at the trial.

(2) By requesting and obtaining a report of the examination so ordered or by taking the deposition of the examiner, the party examined waives any privilege he may have in that action or any other involving the same controversy, regarding the testimony of every other person who has examined or may thereafter examine him in respect of the same mental or physical condition.

(3) This subsection applies to examinations made by agreement of the parties, unless the agreement expressly provides otherwise. This subsection does not preclude discovery of a report of an examining physician or the taking of a deposition of the physician in accordance with the provisions of any other rule. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1975, c. 762, s. 2.)

COMMENT

Comment to this Rule as Originally Enacted. — Section (a). — This section differs from federal Rule 35(a) only in the inclusion of certain changes proposed by the Advisory Committee in its 1955 report. Such inclusions make clear the right to require a blood test in an action in which blood relationships are in controversy. The provision for the examination of a person in the custody or under the legal control of a party will permit the examination of a minor or incompetent.

This procedure is new to North Carolina practice. However, the right to require the plaintiff in a civil action to recover personal injuries to submit to a physical examination was recognized in Flythe v. Eastern Carolina Coach Co., 195 N.C. 777, 143 S.E. 865 (1928). Section 8-50.1 authorizes the court in actions in which the question of paternity arises to order a blood test.

Section (b). — This section permits the party examined to obtain the report of the physician making the examination. Since the party causing the examination could not obtain a copy of such a report made at the instance of the examined party because he might claim the report was privileged, this rule expressly provides that after the examined party requests a copy of the report of the examination made at the instance of the party causing the examination, the latter is entitled upon request to receive a report from the party examined of any examination previously or thereafter made concerning the same mental or physical examination.

The court is given the discretionary power to order that a copy of the report be furnished to any other party to the action.

Comment to the 1975 Amendment. — North Carolina adopted this provision in this form in advance of its adoption as a part of the federal rules. The provisions bringing an agent of a party within the scope of the rule is the only present change aside from the addition of subsection (b)(3).

Subsection (b)(3). — This new subsection removes any possible doubt that reports of examination may be obtained although no order for examination has been made under Rule 35(a). Examinations are very frequently made by agreement and sometimes before the party examined has an attorney. The federal courts have uniformly ordered that reports be supplied and it appears best to fill the technical gap in the present rule.

The subsection also makes clear that reports of examining physicians are discoverable not only under Rule 35(b) but under other rules as well. To be sure, if the report is privileged, then discovery is not permissible under any rule other than Rule 35(b) and it is permissible under Rule 35(b) only if the party requests a copy of the report of examination made by the other party's doctor. But if the report is unprivileged and is subject to discovery under the provisions of rules other than Rule 35(b) — such as Rules 34 or 26(b)(3) or (4) — discovery should not depend upon whether the person examined demands a copy of the report.

Rule 36. Requests for admission; effect of admission.

(a) Request for admission. — A party may serve upon any other party a written request for the admission, for purposes of the pending action only, of the truth of any matters within the scope of Rule 26(b) set forth in the request that relate to statements or opinions of fact or of the application of law to fact, including the genuineness of any documents described in the request. Copies of documents shall be served with the request unless they have been or are otherwise furnished or made available for inspection and copying. The request may, without leave of court, be served upon the plaintiff after commencement of the action and upon any other party with or after service of the summons and complaint upon that party. If the request is served with service of the summons and complaint, the summons shall so state.

Each matter of which an admission is requested shall be separately set forth. The matter is admitted unless, within 30 days after service of the request, or within such shorter or longer time as the court may allow, the party to whom the request is directed serves upon the party requesting the admission a written answer or objection addressed to the matter, signed by the party or by his attorney, but, unless the court shortens the time, a defendant shall not be required to serve answers or objections before the expiration of 60 days after service of the summons and complaint upon him. If objection is made, the reasons therefor shall be stated. The answer shall specifically deny the matter or set forth in detail the reasons why the answering party cannot truthfully admit or deny the matter. A denial shall fairly meet the substance of the requested admission, and when good faith requires that a party qualify his answer or deny only a part of the matter of which an admission is requested, he shall specify so much of it as is true and qualify or deny the remainder. An answering party may not give lack of information or knowledge as a reason for failure to admit or deny unless he states that he has made reasonable inquiry and that the information known or readily obtainable by him is insufficient to enable him to admit or deny. A party who considers that a matter of which an admission has been requested presents a genuine issue for trial may not, on that ground alone, object to the request; he may, subject to the provisions of Rule 37(c), deny the matter or set forth reasons why he cannot admit or deny it.

There shall be sufficient space following each request in which the respondent may state the response. The respondent shall:

(1) State the response in the space provided, using additional pages if necessary; or

(2) Restate the request to be followed by the response. An objection to a request shall be made by stating the objection and the reason therefor either in the space following the request or following the restated request.

The party who has requested the admissions may move to determine the sufficiency of the answers or objections. Unless the court determines that an objection is justified, it shall order that an answer be served. If the court determines that an answer does not comply with the requirements of this rule, it may order either that the matter is admitted or that an amended answer be served. The court may, in lieu of these orders, determine that final disposition of the request be made at a pretrial conference or at a designated time prior to trial. The provisions of Rule 37(a)(4) apply to the award of expenses incurred in relation to the motion.

(b) Effect of admission. — Any matter admitted under this rule is conclusively established unless the court on motion permits withdrawal or amendment of the admission. Subject to the provisions of Rule 16 governing amendment of a pretrial order, the court may permit withdrawal or amendment when the presentation of the merits of the action will be subserved thereby and the party who obtained the admission fails to satisfy the court that withdrawal or amendment will prejudice him in maintaining his action or defense on the merits. Any admission made by a party under this rule is for the purpose of pending action only and is not an admission by him for any other purpose nor may it be used against him in any other proceeding. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1975, c. 762, s. 2; 1981, c. 384, ss. 1, 2; 1987, c. 613, s. 3.)

COMMENT

Comment to this Rule as Originally Enacted. — Pretrial admissions of genuineness of documents were governed by former § 8-91. The provisions of this statute regarding taxation of costs are carried forward in Rule 37(c).

The last sentence of section (a) is designed to preclude a party from offering lack of knowledge as a ground for refusing to admit when, in fact, he has the means to such knowledge reasonably within his power. To allow such a technical ground for refusal on any other basis would render the effect of the admission provision practically useless.

Section (b) does not appear in the federal rule. This section places the burden on the party serving the request to answer to interrogatories or detail reasons why he cannot.

Comment to the 1975 Amendment. — Rule 36 serves two vital purposes, both of which are designed to reduce trial time. Admissions are sought, first to facilitate proof with respect to issues that cannot be eliminated from the case, and secondly, to narrow the issues by eliminating those that can be. The changes made in the rules are designed to serve these purposes more effectively. Certain disagreements in the courts about the proper scope of the rule are resolved. In addition, the procedural operation of the rule is brought into line with other discovery procedures, and the binding effect of an admission is clarified.

Section (a). — As revised, the section provides that a request may be made to admit any matters within the scope of Rule 26(b) that relate to statements or opinions of fact or of the application of law to fact. It thereby eliminates the requirement that the matters be "of fact." This change resolves conflicts in the federal court decisions as to whether a request to admit matters of "opinion" and matters involving "mixed law and fact" is proper under the rule.

Not only is it difficult as a practical matter to separate "fact" from "opinion," but an admission on a matter of opinion may facilitate proof or narrow the issues or both. An admission of a matter involving the application of law to fact may, in a given case, even more clearly narrow the issues. For example, an admission that an employee acted in the scope of his employment may remove a major issue from the trial. The amended provision does not authorize requests for admissions of law unrelated to the facts of the case.

Requests for admission involving the application of law to fact may create disputes between the parties which are best resolved in the presence of the judge after much or all of the other discovery has been completed. Power is therefore expressly conferred upon the court to defer decision until a pretrial conference is held or until a designated time prior to trial. On the other hand, the court should not automatically defer decision; in many instances, the importance of the admission lies in enabling the requesting party to avoid the burdensome accumulation of proof prior to the pretrial conference.

Courts have also divided on whether an answering party may properly object to requests for admission as to matters which that party regards as "in dispute." The proper response in such cases is an answer. The very purpose of the request is to ascertain whether the answering party is prepared to admit or regards the matter as presenting a genuine issue for trial. In his answer, the party may deny, or he may give as his reason for inability to admit or deny the existence of a genuine issue. The party runs no risk of sanctions if the matter is genuinely in issue, since Rule 37(c) provides a sanction of costs only when there are no good reasons for a failure to admit.

On the other hand, requests to admit may be so voluminous and so framed that the answering party finds the task of identifying what is in dispute and what is not unduly burdensome. If so, the responding party may obtain a protective order under Rule 26(c). Some of the decisions sustaining objections on "disputability" grounds could have been justified by the burdensome character of the requests.

Another sharp split of authority exists on the question whether a party may base his answer on lack of information or knowledge without seeking out additional information. One line of cases has held that a party may answer on the basis of such knowledge as he has at the time he answers. A larger group of cases, supported by commentators, has taken the view that if the responding party lacks knowledge, he must inform himself in reasonable fashion.

The rule as revised adopts the majority view, as in keeping with a basic principle of the discovery rules that a reasonable burden may be imposed on the parties when its discharge will facilitate preparation for trial and ease the trial process. It has been argued against this view that one side should not have the burden of "proving" the other side's case. The revised rule requires only that the answering party make reasonable inquiry and secure such knowledge and information as are readily obtainable by him. In most instances, the investigation will be necessary either to his own case or to preparation for rebuttal. Even when it is not, the information may be close enough at hand to be "readily obtainable." Rule 36 requires only that the party state that he has taken these steps. The sanction for failure of a party to inform himself before he answers lies in the award of costs after trial, as provided in Rule 37(c).

The requirement that the answer to a request for admission be sworn is deleted in favor of a provision that the answer be signed by the party or by his attorney. The provisions of Rule 36 make it clear that admissions function very much as pleadings do. Thus, when a party admits in part and denies in part, his admission is for purposes of the pending action only and may not be used against him in any other proceeding. The broadening of the rule to encompass mixed questions of law and fact reinforces this feature. Rule 36 does not lack a sanction for false answers; Rule 37(c) furnishes an appropriate deterrent.

The existing language describing the available grounds for objection to a request for admission is eliminated as neither necessary nor helpful. The statement that objection may be made to any request which is "improper" adds nothing to the provisions that the party serve an answer or objection addressed to each matter and that he state his reasons for any objection. None of the other discovery rules sets forth grounds for objection, except so far as all are subject to the general provisions of Rule 26.

Changes are made in the sequence of procedures in Rule 36 so that they conform to the new procedures in Rules 33 and 34. The major changes are as follows:

(1) The normal time for response to a request for admissions is lengthened from 20 to 30 days, conforming more closely to prevailing practice. A defendant need not respond, however, in less than 45 days after service of the summons and complaint upon him. The court may lengthen or shorten the time when special situations require it.

(2) The present requirement that the plaintiff wait 10 days to serve requests without leave of court is eliminated. The revised provision accords with those in Rules 33 and 34.

(3) The requirement that the objecting party move automatically for a hearing on his objection is eliminated, and the burden is on the requesting party to move for an order. The change in the burden of going forward does not modify present law on burden of persuasion. The award of expenses incurred in relation to the motion is made subject to the comprehensive provisions of Rule 37(a)(4).

(4) A problem peculiar to Rule 36 arises if the responding party serves answers that are not in conformity with the requirements of the rule — for example, a denial is not "specific," or the explanation of inability to admit or deny is not "in detail." Rule 36 now makes no provision for court scrutiny of such answers before trial, and it seems to contemplate that defective answers bring about admissions just as effectively as if no answer had been served. Some cases have so held.

Giving a defective answer the automatic effect of an admission may cause unfair surprise. A responding party who purported to deny or to be unable to admit or deny will for the first time at trial confront the contention that he has made a binding admission. Since it is not always easy to know whether a denial is "specific" or an explanation is "in detail," neither party can know how the court will rule at trial and whether proof must be prepared. Some courts, therefore, have entertained motions to rule on defective answers. They have at times ordered that amended answers be served, when the defects were technical, and at other times have declared that the matter was admitted. The rule as revised conforms to the latter practice.

Section (b). — The rule does not now indicate the extent to which a party is bound by his admission. Some courts view admissions as the equivalent of sworn testimony. At least in some jurisdictions a party may rebut his own testimony, and by analogy an admission made pursuant to Rule 36 may likewise be thought rebuttable.

The new provisions give an admission a conclusively binding effect, for purposes only of the pending action, unless the admission is withdrawn or amended. In form and substance a Rule 36 admission is comparable to an admission in pleadings or a stipulation drafted by counsel for use at trial, rather than to an evidentiary admission of a party. Unless the party securing an admission can depend on its binding effect, he cannot safely avoid the expense of preparing to prove the very matters on which he has secured the admission, and the purpose of the rule is defeated.

Provision is made for withdrawal or amendment of an admission. This provision emphasizes the importance of having the action resolved on the merits, while at the same time assuring each party that justified reliance on an admission in preparation for trial will not operate to his prejudice.

CASE NOTES

It is no longer necessary to make a sworn statement in response to the request for admissions under the present rule. The rule now only requires that the response be signed by the party or counsel. Rutherford v. Bass Air Conditioning Co., 38 N.C. App. 630, 248 S.E.2d 887 (1978), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 586, 254 S.E.2d 34 (1979); Southland Assocs. Realtors v. Miner, 65 N.C. App. 126, 308 S.E.2d 773 (1983).

Where a party deliberately destroys, alters or creates a false document to subvert an adverse party's investigation of his right to seek a legal remedy, and injuries are pleaded and proven, a claim for the resulting increased costs of the investigation will lie. Henry v. Deen, 310 N.C. 75, 310 S.E.2d 326 (1984).

A trial judge may allow withdrawal of an admission. Whitley v. Coltrane, 65 N.C. App. 679, 309 S.E.2d 712 (1983).

Discretion with Trial Court to Allow or Disallow Withdrawal of Admissions. — Trial court was correct in not requiring plaintiff to present evidence that withdrawal or amendment would prejudice it in maintaining its action; the language of the rule gives the trial court the discretion to allow or not allow a party to withdraw admissions, and that in the exercise of that discretion, trial court was not required to consider whether the withdrawal of the admissions would prejudice plaintiff in maintaining its action. Interstate Hwy. Express, Inc. v. S & S Enters., Inc., 93 N.C. App. 765, 379 S.E.2d 85 (1989).

Procedure for Having Requests Deemed Admitted for Insufficiency. — To be entitled to have requests for admissions deemed admitted for insufficiency under this rule, a party must first move the trial court to determine the sufficiency of the responses, and then obtain a ruling from the court to this effect. Southern Nat'l Bank v. B & E Constr. Co., 46 N.C. App. 736, 266 S.E.2d 1 (1980).

Facts admitted under this rule are sufficient to support a grant of summary judgment. Goins v. Puleo, 350 N.C. 277, 512 S.E.2d 748 (1999).

Facts admitted by one defendant are not binding on a codefendant. Barclays Am. Fin., Inc. v. Haywood, 65 N.C. App. 387, 308 S.E.2d 921 (1983).

Plaintiff Not Bound by Facts Admitted by Codefendants as Between Themselves. — This rule was clearly not intended to permit codefendants who admit facts as between themselves to bind the plaintiff, the adverse party, to those facts as admitted. Mace v. Bryant Constr. Corp., 48 N.C. App. 297, 269 S.E.2d 191 (1980).

Failure to Respond to Plaintiff's Request. — By failing to respond to plaintiff's request for admissions, defendants allowed the facts in question to be judicially established. Town of Chapel Hill v. Burchette, 100 N.C. App. 157, 394 S.E.2d 698 (1990).

Patient's failure to respond to health care providers' request for admission that the applicable standard of care was not breached entitled providers to summary judgment in patient's malpractice action. Goins v. Puleo, 350 N.C. 277, 512 S.E.2d 748 (1999).

Admission Sufficient to Support Summary Judgment. — When facts are admitted pursuant to subsection (b), these facts have been held to be sufficient to support a grant of summary judgment. Fieldcrest Cannon, Inc. v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 124 N.C. App. 232, 477 S.E.2d 59 (1996), aff'd per curiam, — N.C. App. —, 489 S.E.2d 452 (1997), aff'd, 127 N.C. App. 729, 493 S.E.2d 658 (1997).

Use of Admission. — Subsection (b) is clear in its mandate that admissions made in one action may not be used against the party who made them in any other proceeding outside of the one pending. Fieldcrest Cannon, Inc. v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 124 N.C. App. 232, 477 S.E.2d 59 (1996), aff'd per curiam, — N.C. App. —, 489 S.E.2d 452 (1997), aff'd, 127 N.C. App. 729, 493 S.E.2d 658 (1997).

Rule 37. Failure to make discovery; sanctions.

(a) Motion for order compelling discovery. — A party, upon reasonable notice to other parties and all persons affected thereby, may apply for an order compelling discovery as follows:

(1) Appropriate Court. — An application for an order to a party or a deponent who is not a party may be made to a judge of the court in which the action is pending, or, on matters relating to a deposition where the deposition is being taken in this State, to a judge of the court in the county where the deposition is being taken, as defined by Rule 30(h).

(2) Motion. — If a deponent fails to answer a question propounded or submitted under Rules 30 or 31, or a corporation or other entity fails to make a designation under Rule 30(b)(6) or 31(a), or a party fails to answer an interrogatory submitted under Rule 33, or if a party, in response to a request for inspection submitted under Rule 34, fails to respond that inspection will be permitted as requested or fails to permit inspection as requested, the discovering party may move for an order compelling an answer, or a designation, or an order compelling inspection in accordance with the request. When taking a deposition on oral examination, the proponent of the question shall complete the examination on all other matters before he adjourns the examination in order to apply for an order.

If the court denies the motion in whole or in part, it may make such protective order as it would have been empowered to make on a motion made pursuant to Rule 26(c).

(3) Evasive or Incomplete Answer. — For purposes of this subdivision an evasive or incomplete answer is to be treated as a failure to answer.

(4) Award of Expenses of Motion. — If the motion is granted, the court shall, after opportunity for hearing, require the party or deponent whose conduct necessitated the motion or the party advising such conduct or both of them to pay to the moving party the reasonable expenses incurred in obtaining the order, including attorney's fees, unless the court finds that the opposition to the motion was substantially justified or that other circumstances make an award of expenses unjust.

If the motion is denied, the court shall, after opportunity for hearing, require the moving party to pay to the party or deponent who opposed the motion the reasonable expenses incurred in opposing the motion, including attorney's fees, unless the court finds that the making of the motion was substantially justified or that other circumstances make an award of expenses unjust.

If the motion is granted in part and denied in part, the court may apportion the reasonable expenses incurred in relation to the motion among the parties and persons in a just manner.

(b) Failure to comply with order. —

(1) Sanctions by Court in County Where Deposition Is Taken. — If a deponent fails to be sworn or to answer a question after being directed to do so by a judge of the court in the county in which the deposition is being taken, the failure may be considered a contempt of that court.

(2) Sanctions by Court in Which Action Is Pending. — If a party or an officer, director, or managing agent of a party or a person designated under Rule 30(b)(6) or 31(a) to testify on behalf of a party fails to obey an order to provide or permit discovery, including an order made under section (a) of this rule or Rule 35, or if a party fails to obey an order entered under Rule 26(f) a judge of the court in which the action is pending may make such orders in regard to the failure as are just, and among others the following:

a. An order that the matters regarding which the order was made or any other designated facts shall be taken to be established for the purposes of the action in accordance with the claim of the party obtaining the order;

b. An order refusing to allow the disobedient party to support or oppose designated claims or defenses, or prohibiting him from introducing designated matters in evidence;

c. An order striking out pleadings or parts thereof, or staying further proceedings until the order is obeyed, or dismissing the action or proceeding or any part thereof, or rendering a judgment by default against the disobedient party;

d. In lieu of any of the foregoing orders or in addition thereto, an order treating as a contempt of court the failure to obey any orders except an order to submit to a physical or mental examination;

e. Where a party has failed to comply with an order under Rule 35(a) requiring him to produce another for examination, such orders as are listed in subdivisions a, b, and c of this subsection, unless the party failing to comply shows that he is unable to produce such person for examination.

In lieu of any of the foregoing orders or in addition thereto, the court shall require the party failing to obey the order to pay the reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, caused by the failure, unless the court finds that the failure was substantially justified or that other circumstances make an award of expenses unjust.

(c) Expenses on failure to admit. — If a party fails to admit the genuineness of any document or the truth of any matter as requested under Rule 36, and if the party requesting the admissions thereafter proves the genuineness of the document or the truth of the matter, he may apply to the court for an order requiring the other party to pay him the reasonable expenses incurred in making that proof, including reasonable attorney's fees. The court shall make the order unless it finds that (i) the request was held objectionable pursuant to Rule 36(a), or (ii) the admission sought was of no substantial importance, or (iii) the party failing to admit had reasonable ground to believe that he might prevail on the matter, or (iv) there was other good reason for the failure to admit.

(d) Failure of party to attend at own deposition or serve answers to interrogatories or respond to request for inspection. — If a party or an officer, director, or managing agent of a party or a person designated under Rule 30(b)(6) or 31(a) to testify on behalf of a party fails (i) to appear before the person who is to take his deposition, after being served with a proper notice, or (ii) to serve answers or objections to interrogatories submitted under Rule 33, after proper service of the interrogatories, or (iii) to serve a written response to a request for inspection submitted under Rule 34, after proper service of the request, the court in which the action is pending on motion may make such orders in regard to the failure as are just, and among others it may take any action authorized under subdivisions a, b, and c of subsection (b)(2) of this rule. In lieu of any order or in addition thereto, the court shall require the party failing to act to pay the reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, caused by the failure, unless the court finds that the failure was substantially justified or that other circumstances make an award of expenses unjust.

The failure to act described in this section may not be excused on the ground that the discovery sought is objectionable unless the party failing to act has applied for a protective order as provided by Rule 26(c).

(e), (f) Reserved for future codification purposes.

(g) Failure to participate in the framing of a discovery plan. — If a party or his attorney fails to participate in good faith in the framing of a discovery plan by agreement as is required by Rule 26(f), the court may, after opportunity for hearing, require such party or his attorney to pay to any other party the reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, caused by the failure. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1973, c. 827, s. 1; 1975, c. 762, s. 2; 1985, c. 603, ss. 5-7.)

COMMENT

Comment to this Rule as Originally Enacted. — Under § 8-78 and former §§ 1-568.18 and 1-568.19, sanctions against either a deponent or adverse party for failure to answer or to appear are provided for. Under § 8-78 a deponent may be committed to jail upon warrant of the commissioner before whom the deposition is taken. Under former §§ 1-568.18 and 1-568.19 sanctions could be applied only upon order of court issued either by the clerk of superior court in which the action was pending or the judge having jurisdiction.

Under this rule sanctions can be applied only for failure to comply with a court order. Hence, if discovery procedure requires a court order as under Rules 34 or 35, failure to obey the order can be punished immediately under section (b)(2). But where the discovery procedure is set in motion by the parties themselves, the party seeking discovery must first obtain a court order under section (a) requiring the recalcitrant party or witness to make discovery. The only exception to this is found in section (d), which permits an immediate sanction against parties, their officers, or managing agents for a willful failure to appear.

Comment to the 1975 Amendment. — Rule 37 provides generally for sanctions against parties or persons unjustifiably resisting discovery. Experience in the federal courts brought to light a number of the defects in the language of the rule as well as instances in which it was not serving the purposes for which it was designed. In addition, changes being made in other discovery rules require conforming amendments to Rule 37.

Rule 37 sometimes refers to a "failure" to afford discovery and at other times to a "refusal" to do so. Taking note of this dual terminology, federal courts imported into "refusal" a requirement of "willfullness." In Societe Internationale v. Rogers, 357 U.S. 197, 78 S. Ct. 1087, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1255 (1958), the United States Supreme Court concluded that the rather random use of these two terms in Rule 37 showed no design to use them with consistently distinctive meanings, that "refused" in Rule 37(b)(2) meant simply a failure to comply, and that willfulness was relevant only to the selection of sanctions, if any, to be imposed. Substitution of "failure" for "refusal" throughout Rule 37 should eliminate confusion.

Section (a). — Rule 37(a) provides relief to a party seeking discovery against one who, with or without stated objections, fails to afford the discovery sought. It has always fully served this function in relation to depositions, but the amendments being made to Rules 33 and 34 give Rule 37(a) added scope and importance. Under existing Rule 33, a party objecting to interrogatories must make a motion for court hearing on his objections. The changes now made in Rules 33 and 37(a) make it clear that the interrogating party must move to compel answers, and the motion is provided for in Rule 37(a). Existing Rule 34, since it requires a court order prior to production of documents or things or permission to enter on land, has no relation to Rule 37(a). Amendments of Rules 34 and 37(a) create a procedure similar to that provided for Rule 33.

Subsection (a)(1). — This is a new provision making clear to which court a party may apply for an order compelling discovery. In relation to Rule 33 interrogatories and Rule 34 requests for inspection, the court where the action is pending is the appropriate enforcing tribunal. The new provision spells out the respective roles of the court where the action is pending and the court where the deposition is taken. In some instances, two courts are available to a party seeking to compel answers from a party deponent. The party seeking discovery may choose the court to which he will apply, but the court has power to remit the party to the other court as a more appropriate forum.

Subsection (a)(2). — This subsection contains the substance of existing provisions of Rule 37(a) authorizing motions to compel answers to questions put at depositions and to interrogatories. New provisions authorize motions for orders compelling designation under Rules 30(b)(6) and 31(a) and compelling inspection in accordance with a request made under Rule 34. If the court denies a motion, in whole or in part, it may accompany the denial with issuance of a protective order. Compare the converse provision in Rule 26(c).

Subsection (a)(3). — This new provision makes clear that an evasive or incomplete answer is to be considered, for purposes of subsection (a), a failure to answer. The federal courts have consistently held that they have the power to compel adequate answers. This power of the court is recognized and incorporated into the rule.

Subsection (a)(4). — This subsection adds provisions for award of expenses, including reasonable attorney's fees, to the prevailing party or person when a motion is made for an order compelling discovery. The prior North Carolina rule had no such provision. The provision requires that expenses be awarded unless the conduct of the losing party or person is found to have been "substantially justified." This language is intended to encourage judges to be more alert to abuses occurring in the discovery process.

On many occasions, to be sure, the dispute over discovery between the parties is genuine, though ultimately resolved one way or the other by the court. In such cases, the losing party is substantially justified in carrying the matter to court. But the rules should deter the abuse implicit in carrying or forcing a discovery dispute to court when no genuine dispute exists. And the potential or actual imposition of expenses is virtually the sole formal sanction in the rules to deter a party from pressing to a court hearing frivolous requests for or objections to discovery.

The proposed provision provides in effect that expenses should ordinarily be awarded unless a court finds that the losing party acted justifiably in carrying his point to court. At the same time, a necessary flexibility is maintained, since the court retains the power to find that other circumstances make an award of expenses unjust — as where the prevailing party also acted unjustifiably. The amendment does not significantly limit the discretion of the court, but rather presses the court to address itself to abusive practices.

Section (b). — This section deals with sanctions for failure to comply with a court order.

The scope of Rule 37(b)(2) is broadened by extending it to include any order "to provide or permit discovery," including orders issued under Rules 37(a) and 35. Various rules authorize orders for discovery — e.g., Rule 35(b)(1), Rule 26(c) as revised, Rule 37(d). Rule 37(b)(2) should provide comprehensively for enforcement of all these orders. On the other hand, the reference to Rule 34 is deleted to conform to the changed procedure in that rule.

Paragraph e provides that sanctions which have been available against a party for failure to comply with an order under Rule 35(a) to submit to examination will now be available against him for his failure to comply with a Rule 35(a) order to produce a third person for examination, unless he shows that he is unable to produce the person. In this context, "unable" means in effect "unable in good faith."

Subsection (b)(2) is amplified to provide for payment of reasonable expenses caused by the failure to obey the order. Although Rules 37(b)(2) and 37(d) have been silent as to award of expenses, federal courts have nevertheless ordered them on occasion. The provision places the burden on the disobedient party to avoid expenses by showing that his failure is justified or that special circumstances make an award of expenses unjust. Allocating the burden in this way conforms to the provisions as to expenses in Rule 37(a), and is particularly appropriate when a court order is disobeyed.

An added reference to directors of a party is similar to a change made in section (d) and is explained in the note to that section. The added reference to persons designated by a party under Rules 30(b)(6) or 31(a) to testify on behalf of the party carries out the new procedure in those rules for taking a deposition of a corporation or other organization.

Section (c). — Rule 37(c) provides a sanction for the enforcement of Rule 36 dealing with requests for admission. Rule 36 provides the mechanism whereby a party may obtain from another party in appropriate instances either (1) an admission, or (2) a sworn and specific denial, or (3) a sworn statement "setting forth in detail the reasons why he cannot truthfully admit or deny." If the party obtains the second or third of these responses, in proper form, Rule 36 does not provide for a pretrial hearing on whether the response is warranted by the evidence thus far accumulated. Instead, Rule 37(c) is intended to provide post-trial relief in the form of a requirement that the party improperly refusing the admission pay the expenses of the other side in making the necessary proof at trial.

Rule 37(c), as now written, addresses itself in terms only to the sworn denial and is silent with respect to the statement of reasons for an inability to admit or deny. There is no apparent basis for this distinction, since the sanction provided in Rule 37(c) should deter all unjustified failures to admit. This omission in the rule has caused confused and diverse treatment in the federal courts. The amendment eliminates this defect in Rule 37(c) by bringing within its scope all failures to admit.

Additional provisions in Rule 37(c) protect a party from having to pay expenses if the request for admission was held objectionable under Rule 36(a) or if the party failing to admit had reasonable ground to believe that he might prevail on the matter. The latter provision emphasizes that the true test under Rule 37(c) is not whether a party prevailed at trial but whether he acted reasonably in believing that he might prevail.

Section (d). — The scope of section (d) is broadened to include responses to requests for inspection under Rule 34, thereby conforming to the new procedures of Rule 34.

The permissible sanctions are broadened to include such orders "as are just." Although former federal Rule 37(d) in terms provided for only three sanctions, all rather severe, the federal courts had interpreted it as permitting softer sanctions than those which it set forth. The rule is changed to provide the greater flexibility as to sanctions which the cases show is needed.

The resulting flexibility as to sanctions eliminates any need to retain the requirement that the failure to appear or respond be "willful." The concept of "willful failure" is at best subtle and difficult, and the cases do not supply a bright line. Many courts have imposed sanctions without referring to willfulness. In addition, in view of the possibility of light sanctions, even a negligent failure should come within Rule 37(d). If default is caused by counsel's ignorance of federal practice, or by his preoccupation with another aspect of the case, dismissal of the action and default judgment are not justified, but the imposition of expenses and fees may well be. "Willfulness" continues to play a role, along with various other factors, in the choice of sanctions. Thus, the scheme conforms to Rule 37(b) as construed by the Supreme Court in Societe Internationale v. Rogers, 357 U.S. 197, 208, 78 S. Ct. 1087, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1255 (1958).

A provision is added to make clear that a party may not properly remain completely silent even when he regards a notice to take his deposition or a set of interrogatories or requests to inspect as improper and objectionable. If he desires not to appear or not to respond, he must apply for a protective order. Prior to the adoption of this rule, federal cases were divided on whether a protective order must be sought. The party from whom discovery is sought is afforded, through Rule 26(c), a fair and effective procedure whereby he can challenge the request made. At the same time, the total noncompliance with which Rule 37(d) is concerned may impose severe inconvenience or hardship on the discovering party and substantially delay the discovery process.

The failure of an officer or managing agent of a party to make discovery as required by present Rule 37(d) is treated as the failure of the party. The rule as revised provides similar treatment for a director of a party. There is slight warrant for the present distinction between officers and managing agents on the one hand and directors on the other. Although the legal power over a director to compel his making discovery may not be as great as over officers or managing agents, the practical differences are negligible. That a director's interests are normally aligned with those of his corporation is shown by the provisions of old Rule 26(d)(2), transferred to 32(a)(2) (deposition of director of party may be used at trial by an adverse party for any purpose) and of Rule 43(b) (director of party may be treated at trial as a hostile witness on direct examination by any adverse party). Moreover, in those rare instances when a corporation is unable through good-faith efforts to compel a director to make discovery, it is unlikely that the court will impose sanctions.

CASE NOTES

The discovery rules should be construed liberally so as to substantially accomplish their purposes. AT & T Co. v. Griffin, 39 N.C. App. 721, 251 S.E.2d 885, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 304, 254 S.E.2d 921 (1979); Carpenter v. Cooke, 58 N.C. App. 381, 293 S.E.2d 630, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 306 N.C. 740, 295 S.E.2d 758 (1982).

Not every abuse of discovery merits imposition of punitive sanctions. Rose v. Isenhour Brick & Tile Co., 120 N.C. App. 235, 461 S.E.2d 782 (1995), aff'd, 344 N.C. 153, 472 S.E.2d 774 (1996).

Administration of the discovery rules lies necessarily within the province of the trial courts. AT & T Co. v. Griffin, 39 N.C. App. 721, 251 S.E.2d 885, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 304, 254 S.E.2d 921 (1979); Carpenter v. Cooke, 58 N.C. App. 381, 293 S.E.2d 630, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 306 N.C. 740, 295 S.E.2d 758 (1982).

Courts cannot compel disclosure of information which would tend to incriminate the person from whom it is sought and cannot impose sanctions on one who refuses to disclose privileged information. Stone v. Martin, 56 N.C. App. 473, 289 S.E.2d 898, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 306 N.C. 392, 294 S.E.2d 220 (1982).

But Privilege Against Self-Incrimination Not to Be Used as Sword to Defeat Civil Actions. — A defendant has the right to refuse to answer interrogatories and requests for admission on the ground that to answer may tend to incriminate him. Invocation of this constitutional privilege may legitimately serve as a shield, with potential to protect defendant from criminal responsibility which may ensue from the acts and omissions alleged. It is not an abuse of discretion, however, to refuse to allow that privilege to serve also as a sword, with potential to defeat civil actions which may likewise ensue from those acts and omissions. Stone v. Martin, 53 N.C. App. 600, 281 S.E.2d 402 (1981), reaffirmed on rehearing, 56 N.C. App. 473, 289 S.E.2d 898, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 306 N.C. 392, 294 S.E.2d 220 (1982).

Where, in a suit by shareholders against corporation and individual defendants, none of the requested discovery to which the court ordered response would compel defendant to admit the calculation and intent requisite to establish fraudulent conduct, and such responses would therefore not necessarily tend to subject defendant to a punitive damages award, there was no impropriety in the court's order. Stone v. Martin, 56 N.C. App. 473, 289 S.E.2d 898, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 306 N.C. 392, 294 S.E.2d 220 (1982).

Information Irrelevant for Discovery Purposes. — Whether or not plaintiff's replacement had a relationship with a high school student during his previous employment, the complete student records at high school and school personnel records were irrelevant to whether defendants intentionally inflicted emotional distress on plaintiff, constructively and wrongfully discharged her, or maliciously interfered with her contract; therefore, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying motion to compel discovery. Wagoner v. Elkin City Schs. Bd. of Educ., 113 N.C. App. 579, 440 S.E.2d 119, cert. denied, 336 N.C. 615, 447 S.E.2d 414 (1994).

Responding Party May Not Unilaterally Interpret Relevant Scope. — The responding party may not unilaterally "interpret" the relevant scope of its response and only provide that information it considers discoverable. Roan-Baker v. Southeastern Hosp. Supply Corp., 99 N.C. App. 30, 392 S.E.2d 663 (1990).

The trial judge has broad discretion in imposing sanctions to compel discovery under this rule. F.E. Davis Plumbing Co. v. Ingleside W. Assocs., 37 N.C. App. 149, 245 S.E.2d 555, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 648, 248 S.E.2d 250 (1978).

This rule is flexible, and a broad discretion must be given to the trial judge with regard to sanction. AT & T Co. v. Griffin, 39 N.C. App. 721, 251 S.E.2d 885, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 304, 254 S.E.2d 921 (1979); Laing v. Liberty Loan Co., 46 N.C. App. 67, 264 S.E.2d 381, appeal dismissed, 300 N.C. 557, 270 S.E.2d 109 (1980); Carpenter v. Cooke, 58 N.C. App. 381, 293 S.E.2d 630, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 306 N.C. 740, 295 S.E.2d 758 (1982).

The imposition of sanctions under section (d) of this rule is in the sound discretion of the trial judge. American Imports, Inc. v. G.E. Employees W. Region Fed. Credit Union, 37 N.C. App. 121, 245 S.E.2d 798 (1978).

The imposition of sanctions under this rule for failure to comply with § 1A-1, Rule 26(e) is within the sound discretion of the trial judge. Willoughby v. Wilkins, 65 N.C. App. 626, 310 S.E.2d 90 (1983), cert. denied, 310 N.C. 631, 315 S.E.2d 697, 315 S.E.2d 698 (1984).

In addition to its inherent authority to regulate trial proceedings, the trial court has express authority under this rule to impose sanctions on a party who balks at discovery requests. Green ex rel. Green v. Maness, 69 N.C. App. 292, 316 S.E.2d 917, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 621, 323 S.E.2d 922 (1984).

The choice of sanctions under Rule 37 is within the trial court's discretion and will not be overturned on appeal absent a showing of abuse of that discretion. Brooks v. Giesey, 106 N.C. App. 586, 418 S.E.2d 236 (1992), aff'd, 334 N.C. 303, 432 S.E.2d 339 (1993).

Sanctions such as striking answers and/or counterclaims and awarding attorney fees are well within the court's discretion in cases involving a refusal to respond to discovery requests and a refusal to obey an order to compel discovery. Kewaunee Scientific Corp. v. Eastern Scientific Prods., Inc., 122 N.C. App. 734, 471 S.E.2d 451 (1996).

The trial court retains inherent authority to impose sanctions for discovery abuses beyond those enumerated by this rule. Cloer v. Smith, — N.C. App. —, 512 S.E.2d 779 (1999).

A trial court must consider less severe sanctions before dismissing a plaintiff's complaint under subsection (d) of this rule. Goss v. Battle, 111 N.C. App. 173, 432 S.E.2d 156 (1993).

In determining if dismissal of a workers' compensation proceeding was an abuse of discretion, factors to be considered include the exclusivity provision of § 97-10.1, the appropriateness of alternative sanctions under this rule, the proportionality of dismissal to the actions meriting sanction, and whether other statutory powers, such as holding a person in contempt under § 97-80, can bring the result desired by imposition of a sanction. Matthews v. Charlotte-Mecklenburg Hosp. Auth., — N.C. App. —, 510 S.E.2d 388 (1999).

Sanctions Imposed on Attorney. — Trial court was justified in imposing sanctions on attorney where notice of plaintiff's deposition was actually sent to her office, and court of appeals could only assume that plaintiff was unaware that she needed to bring any documents with her because her counsel never informed her of such. Pugh v. Pugh, 113 N.C. App. 375, 438 S.E.2d 214 (1994).

The proximity of the discovery abuse to the date of trial is one factor the trial court may consider when determining whether or not to award sanctions. Roan-Baker v. Southeastern Hosp. Supply Corp., 99 N.C. App. 30, 392 S.E.2d 663 (1990).

Party Not Precluded from Presenting Witnesses and Exhibits at Trial. — Where plaintiff, in a deposition, specifically requested from the defendant the names of his trial witnesses and a list of his trial exhibits, but made no showing that he had a special need for defendant's list of witnesses and exhibits ten months prior to trial, the information sought was not discoverable and defendant's failure to provide such information could not preclude him from presenting witnesses and exhibits at the trial. King v. Koucouliotes, 108 N.C. App. 751, 425 S.E.2d 462, cert. granted, 334 N.C. 163, 432 S.E.2d 361, discretionary review improvidently granted, 335 N.C. 164, 436 S.E.2d 132 (1993).

Movant Need Not Show Prejudice to Obtain Sanctions. — This rule does not require the movant to show that it was prejudiced by the nonmovant's actions in order to obtain sanctions for abuse of discovery. Roan-Baker v. Southeastern Hosp. Supply Corp., 99 N.C. App. 30, 392 S.E.2d 663 (1990).

Discretion as to Time for Payment of Expenses Under Subsection (a)(4). — It is within the trial court's discretion to require that expenses assessed pursuant to subsection (a)(4) of this rule be paid at any time after entry of an order pursuant to the rule. Accordingly, the better practice would be for all such orders to include a provision as to when payment of such expenses shall be made. Hall v. Carter, 90 N.C. App. 668, 369 S.E.2d 623 (1988).

Default Judgment. — Under this rule, where an answer to the complaint has been filed, and a party fails to answer requested discovery, the opposing party may move the court to order the answer stricken, and if granted, for entry of default judgment against the disobedient party. O'Neal v. Murray, 105 N.C. App. 102, 411 S.E.2d 628 (1992).

Court Order Not Prerequisite to Default Judgment. — While issuance of a court order compelling discovery is the more common procedure employed by courts, the clear wording of section (d) of this rule contradicts the position that this is a prerequisite to entry of a default judgment. First Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Powell, 58 N.C. App. 229, 292 S.E.2d 731 (1982), aff'd, 307 N.C. 467, 298 S.E.2d 386 (1983).

Order Deemed Conditional and Void. — Where a court order conditioned the dismissal of plaintiff's action upon plaintiff's failure to produce discovery materials previously ordered, the second order was not self-executing, and was therefore conditional and void.

Cassidy v. Cheek, 308 N.C. 670, 303 S.E.2d 792 (1983).

Purpose of Mandatory Allowance of Expenses. — Provision in section (d) of this rule for a mandatory allowance of expenses against a party which fails to respond to a discovery request, unless other sanctions are imposed under this rule or unless the failure "was substantially justified or . . . other circumstances make an award of expenses unjust," is designed to discourage dilatory practices and frivolous refusals to comply with discovery procedures. Willis v. Duke Power Co., 291 N.C. 19, 229 S.E.2d 191 (1976).

If a party's failure to produce documents is shown to be due to inability fostered neither by its own conduct nor by circumstances within its control, it is exempt from the sanctions of this rule. Laing v. Liberty Loan Co., 46 N.C. App. 67, 264 S.E.2d 381, appeal dismissed, 300 N.C. 557, 270 S.E.2d 109 (1980).

Subsection (a)(3) of this rule specifically provides that an evasive or incomplete answer is to be treated as a failure to answer; however, if a party is unable to answer discovery requests because of circumstances beyond its control, it cannot be compelled to answer. A good faith effort at compliance with the court order is required of the deponent. Benfield v. Benfield, 89 N.C. App. 415, 366 S.E.2d 500 (1988).

Burden to Show Justification for Failure to Answer Interrogatories. — This rule sets out possible consequences of a party's failure "without good cause" to comply with the court's order to answer interrogatories. If a noncomplying party wishes to avoid court-imposed sanctions for his failure, the burden is upon him to show that there is justification for his noncompliance. Silverthorne v. Coastal Land Co., 42 N.C. App. 134, 256 S.E.2d 397, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 300, 259 S.E.2d 302 (1979).

If a noncomplying party wishes to avoid court-imposed sanctions for his failure to answer interrogatories, the burden is upon him to show that there is justification for his noncompliance. Hayes v. Browne, 76 N.C. App. 98, 331 S.E.2d 763 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 587, 341 S.E.2d 25 (1986).

Subsection (a)(3) of this rule specifically provides that an evasive or incomplete answer is to be treated as a failure to answer; however, if a party is unable to answer discovery requests because of circumstances beyond its control, it cannot be compelled to answer. A good faith effort at compliance with the court order is required of the deponent. Benfield v. Benfield, 89 N.C. App. 415, 366 S.E.2d 500 (1988).

Imposition of Section (d) Sanctions Dependent on Circumstances. — Whether such extreme sanctions as are authorized by section (d) of this rule should be imposed must be determined from the circumstances of each case. Cutter v. Brooks, 36 N.C. App. 265, 243 S.E.2d 423 (1978).

Section (d) Inapplicable When Answers, Responses or Objections are Filed. — If a party files answers or objections to interrogatories, or serves a written response to a request for inspection, no sanctions under section (d) of this rule may be obtained, and the proper procedure for the party seeking discovery is to obtain an order compelling discovery under section (a) of this rule. Willis v. Duke Power Co., 291 N.C. 19, 229 S.E.2d 191 (1976).

Rule Inapplicable to Requests for Protective Order. — This rule was inapplicable to plaintiff's request for sanctions because plaintiff did not compel discovery, but instead sought to prevent discovery by asking for a protective order. Wachovia Bank v. Bob Dunn Jaguar, Inc., 117 N.C. App. 165, 450 S.E.2d 527 (1994).

Section (d) of this rule requires no finding that the refusal to attend a deposition was willful before the court imposes sanctions. American Imports, Inc. v. G.E. Employees W. Region Fed. Credit Union, 37 N.C. App. 121, 245 S.E.2d 798 (1978).

Trial judge did not abuse his discretion by ordering default judgment without finding that defendant had willfully failed to appear at his deposition, as the 1975 amendment to section (d) of this rule omitted the requirement that sanctions be leveled against a party who failed to respond to pretrial discovery "without good cause." Cutter v. Brooks, 36 N.C. App. 265, 243 S.E.2d 423 (1978).

The language of section (d) of this rule requires no finding of willfulness. The 1975 amendment to section (d) deletes the specific reference to "willful" from the rule. Hayes v. Browne, 76 N.C. App. 98, 331 S.E.2d 763 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 587, 341 S.E.2d 25 (1986).

Default as Sanction for Failure to Attend Deposition. — Section (d) of this rule allows a judge to default a claim as a sanction for failure to appear for a deposition after having been given proper notice. American Imports, Inc. v. G.E. Employees W. Region Fed. Credit Union, 37 N.C. App. 121, 245 S.E.2d 798 (1978); Adair v. Adair, 62 N.C. App. 493, 303 S.E.2d 190, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 319, 307 S.E.2d 162 (1983).

For case upholding default judgment after failure to respond to request for admissions or to answer interrogatories, see Bowes v. Bowes, 43 N.C. App. 586, 259 S.E.2d 389 (1979), cert. denied, 299 N.C. 120, 262 S.E.2d 5 (1980); Vick v. Davis, 77 N.C. App. 359, 335 S.E.2d 197 (1985), aff'd, 317 N.C. 328, 345 S.E.2d 217 (1986).

Issuance of Court Order Not Prerequisite to Entry of Default Judgment. — While issuance of a court order is the more common procedure employed by courts, the clear wording of section (d) of this rule contradicts position that this is a prerequisite to entry of a default judgment. First Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Powell, 58 N.C. App. 229, 292 S.E.2d 731 (1982), aff'd, 307 N.C. 467, 298 S.E.2d 386 (1983).

Hearing on Punitive Damages After Default. — Due process concerns demand that a party who is defaulted for failure to answer interrogatories be afforded an opportunity to be heard on the question of punitive damages. Hunter v. Spaulding, 97 N.C. App. 372, 388 S.E.2d 630 (1990).

Dismissal of Plaintiff's Action for Failure to Answer Interrogatories. — Where plaintiff was properly served with interrogatories but refused to answer them without good cause and did not serve on defendant objections to any of the interrogatories or ask for an extension of time to answer, the trial court properly dismissed plaintiff's action. Hammer v. Allison, 20 N.C. App. 623, 202 S.E.2d 307, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 233, 204 S.E.2d 23 (1974).

Where plaintiff served answers to interrogatories after defendant had filed motion to dismiss and plaintiff's failure to comply with § 1A-1, Rule 33 clearly prejudiced the defendant's ability to prepare for trial, the court had authority to dismiss the action. Hayes v. Browne, 76 N.C. App. 98, 331 S.E.2d 763 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 587, 341 S.E.2d 25 (1986).

Failure of some answering defendants to answer interrogatories did not entitle plaintiffs to judgment based on their own conclusions and contentions. Baxter v. Jones, 14 N.C. App. 296, 188 S.E.2d 622, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 621, 190 S.E.2d 465 (1972).

Defendant's supplemental response to interrogatories was not rendered "seasonable" within the meaning and intent of § 1A-1, Rule 26(e)(1) by the mere fact that there was no occasion for imposition of sanctions for failing to respond to discovery request with due diligence and good faith. Green ex rel. Green v. Maness, 69 N.C. App. 292, 316 S.E.2d 917, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 621, 323 S.E.2d 922 (1984).

Dismissal of Counterclaim for Failure to Timely Answer Interrogatories. — Trial court's dismissal of defendant's counterclaim for his failure to comply with discovery order was not error where plaintiff served defendant with some 45 interrogatories and for no apparent reason defendant failed to respond, where trial court filed an order ordering defendant to submit his answers on or before 5:00 P.M. that same day and defendant still failed to comply, and where plaintiff later received defendant's answers, which were handwritten, unresponsive, and incomplete. Lincoln v. Grinstead, 94 N.C. App. 122, 379 S.E.2d 671 (1989).

Order Striking Defenses. — In an action to recover on a construction contract, where defendants failed to comply with a discovery order requiring specific information with respect to their allegations of misrepresentation by plaintiff, negligence and carelessness by plaintiff and overpayment to plaintiff, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in entering an order striking those defenses since the evidence disclosed that defendants were either alleging defenses which they could not support with evidence or were willfully refusing to disclose information to which plaintiff was entitled, and the sanction imposed by the court was within the limits prescribed by this rule. F.E. Davis Plumbing Co. v. Ingleside W. Assocs., 37 N.C. App. 149, 245 S.E.2d 555, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 648, 248 S.E.2d 250 (1978).

Hearing officer's order excluding petitioner's expert witnesses for failure to identify them, in violation of court order, until four days before the hearing date, showed no abuse of discretion. Mount Olive Home Health Care Agency, Inc. v. North Carolina Dep't of Human Resources, 78 N.C. App. 224, 336 S.E.2d 625 (1985).

Sanctions in Response to Motion in Limine Improper. — A sanction under subdivision (b)(2)(b) of this rule may only be imposed for failure of a party to comply with a court order compelling discovery. Thus, where the trial court ordered imposition of subdivision (b)(2)(b) sanctions in response to a motion in limine, and the movant did not obtain an order compelling discovery, the court improperly granted the motion in limine. Stilley v. Automobile Enters. of High Point, Inc., 55 N.C. App. 33, 284 S.E.2d 684 (1981), cert. denied, 305 N.C. 307, 290 S.E.2d 708 (1982); Stone v. Martin, 56 N.C. App. 473, 289 S.E.2d 898, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 306 N.C. 392, 294 S.E.2d 220 (1982).

Where a party deliberately destroys, alters or creates a false document to subvert an adverse party's investigation of his right to seek a legal remedy, and injuries are pleaded and proven, a claim for the resulting increased costs of the investigation will lie. Henry v. Deen, 310 N.C. 75, 310 S.E.2d 326 (1984).

Order requiring defendant to pay plaintiff's attorneys' fees was authorized by subsection (a)(4) of this rule, and was interlocutory, as it did not finally determine the action nor affect a substantial right which might be lost, prejudiced or be less than adequately protected by exception to entry of the interlocutory order. Benfield v. Benfield, 89 N.C. App. 415, 366 S.E.2d 500 (1988).

But Not Without Findings of Fact. — Where the trial court simply awarded attorneys' fees in the amount of $250.00, and the court's order contained no findings of fact to support any conclusion that the fees were reasonable, the award would be vacated, since subsection (a)(4) of this rule requires the award of expenses to be reasonable, and the record must contain findings of fact to support the award of any expenses, including attorneys' fees. Such findings should be consistent with the purpose of the subsection, which is not to punish the noncomplying party, but to reimburse the successful movant for his expenses. Benfield v. Benfield, 89 N.C. App. 415, 366 S.E.2d 500 (1988).

Where plaintiff did not produce medical records, defendants were entitled to attorney's fees unless plaintiff proved such an award was unjust under the circumstances. Graham v. Rogers, 121 N.C. App. 460, 466 S.E.2d 290 (1996).

Findings of Fact Required. — Where the Industrial Commission made none of the four required findings before denying sanctions, it abused its discretion. Williams v. North Carolina Dep't of Correction, 120 N.C. App. 356, 462 S.E.2d 545 (1995).

For case holding denial of attorneys' fees for compelling discovery error, see Kent v. Humphries, 50 N.C. App. 580, 275 S.E.2d 176, aff'd and modified, 303 N.C. 675, 281 S.E.2d 43 (1981).

Abuse of Discretion for Failing to Impose Sanctions. — The Industrial Commission abused its discretion by failing to impose sanctions because representation for both parties was publicly funded and plaintiff did not personally incur any additional expense due to the omissions of which he complained. Williams v. North Carolina Dep't of Correction, 120 N.C. App. 356, 462 S.E.2d 545 (1995).

Prohibiting Introduction of Evidence as Sanction. — The sanction provision of this rule permits the court to make such orders as are "just" upon a party's failure to obey an order to provide or permit discovery, including refusing to permit the disobedient party to introduce the matters in question into evidence. Bumgarner v. Reneau, 332 N.C. 624, 422 S.E.2d 686 (1992).

Dismissal as Sanction. — The rule adopted in the federal courts, that dismissal with prejudice is a sanction of last resort, is applicable only in extreme circumstances, and is generally proper where less drastic sanctions are unavailable, has not been adopted by our courts. Indeed, the Court of Appeals' precedent all but expressly rejects the notion of progressive sanctions. Fulton v. East Carolina Trucks, Inc., 88 N.C. App. 274, 362 S.E.2d 868 (1987).

Dismissal Conditioned on Noncompliance Held Void. — Order stating that action would be dismissed if plaintiff failed to comply with discovery order by a certain date was a conditional order and therefore void. Cassidy v. Cheek, 308 N.C. 670, 303 S.E.2d 792 (1983).

Although this rule gives the trial court authority to issue orders to compel discovery and to sanction failure to comply with such orders, where the court below conditioned the sanction, dismissal of plaintiff's case, upon plaintiff's failure to comply with the order to produce certain x-ray film within 30 days, because such order contained a condition to the dismissal of plaintiff's action, the order was not self-executing and was void as a conditional order. McCraw v. Hamrick, 88 N.C. App. 391, 363 S.E.2d 201 (1988).

Ultimate Compliance with Discovery Request Did Not Preclude Sanctions. — Where defendants were properly served with plaintiff's interrogatories about expert testimony, a crucial aspect of medical malpractice case, the fact that plaintiff's interrogatories were ultimately answered did not prevent the court from imposing sanctions under section (d) of this rule on plaintiff's motion. Segrest v. Gillette, 96 N.C. App. 435, 386 S.E.2d 88 (1989), rev'd on other grounds, 331 N.C. 97, 414 S.E.2d 334, reh'g denied, 331 N.C. 384, 417 S.E.2d 791 (1992).

Motion for Sanctions to Preceed Late Discovery Responses. — The untimely service of discovery responses cannot support sanctions if the discovery responses are served prior to the making or service of a motion requesting sanctions. Thus, untimely discovery responses served after the service of a motion seeking sanctions on this basis can support sanctions. Cheek v. Poole, 121 N.C. App. 370, 465 S.E.2d 561 (1996).

Where the plaintiff's untimely responses to discovery requests were served on the same day that the defendants served or made their motion for sanctions, the trial court had authority to enter sanctions for the untimely discovery responses. Cheek v. Poole, 121 N.C. App. 370, 465 S.E.2d 561 (1996).

Motion to Compel Discovery Not Prerequisite to Dismissal. — Motion for an order compelling discovery pursuant to subsection (a)(2) of this rule is not required before a motion to dismiss is granted. Fulton v. East Carolina Trucks, Inc., 88 N.C. App. 274, 362 S.E.2d 868 (1987).

Dismissal Not Proper Remedy for Failure to Pay Expenses Where Time Certain Not Specified. — Where the order entered by the judge did not set a time certain for the payment of the expenses assessed pursuant to subsection (a)(4) of this rule, the drastic remedy of dismissal granted by the judge was improper and would be reversed. Hall v. Carter, 90 N.C. App. 668, 369 S.E.2d 623 (1988).

Dismissal Upheld. — Dismissal of case with prejudice as the first sanction for failure of plaintiffs to answer defendants' interrogatories would be upheld. Fulton v. East Carolina Trucks, Inc., 88 N.C. App. 274, 362 S.E.2d 868 (1987).

Where the plaintiff never objected to discovery requests, obtained one extension of time to comply but failed to respond within the extended time, and failed to request an additional extension and, it was determined that plaintiff had established a pattern of disregarding due dates for responding to discovery, the decision of the trial court to dismiss the complaint was not manifestly unsupported by reason. Cheek v. Poole, 121 N.C. App. 370, 465 S.E.2d 561 (1996).

Review of Sanctions Directed to Outcome of Case. — Impositions of sanctions that are directed to the outcome of the case, such as dismissals, default judgments, or preclusion orders, are reviewed on appeal from final judgment, and while the standard of review is often stated to be abuse of discretion, the most drastic penalties, dismissal or default, are examined in the light of the general purpose of the rules to encourage trial on the merits. American Imports, Inc. v. G.E. Employees W. Region Fed. Credit Union, 37 N.C. App. 121, 245 S.E.2d 798 (1978).

Sanction Overturned Only for Abuse of Discretion. — The choice of sanctions to be imposed in the case of a failure to comply with an order to answer interrogatories having been left by the rule to the court's discretion, the decision will not be overturned unless an abuse of that discretion is shown. Silverthorne v. Coastal Land Co., 42 N.C. App. 134, 256 S.E.2d 397, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 300, 259 S.E.2d 302 (1979).

The choice of sanctions under this rule lies within the court's discretion and will not be overturned on appeal absent a showing of abuse of that discretion. Routh v. Weaver, 67 N.C. App. 426, 313 S.E.2d 793 (1984); Vick v. Davis, 77 N.C. App. 359, 335 S.E.2d 197 (1985), aff'd, 317 N.C. 328, 345 S.E.2d 217 (1986).

The choice of sanctions under this rule cannot be overturned absent a showing of abuse of that discretion. Mount Olive Home Health Care Agency, Inc. v. North Carolina Dep't of Human Resources, 78 N.C. App. 224, 336 S.E.2d 625 (1985).

Although the sanctions imposed were severe, they are among those expressly authorized by statute; absent specific evidence of injustice, the court of appeals could not hold they constitute an abuse of discretion. Roan-Baker v. Southeastern Hosp. Supply Corp., 99 N.C. App. 30, 392 S.E.2d 663 (1990).

Sanctions under this rule are within the sound discretion of the trial court and will not be overturned on appeal absent a showing of abuse of that discretion. Hursey v. Homes By Design, Inc., 121 N.C. App. 175, 464 S.E.2d 504 (1995).

A trial court may be reversed for abuse of discretion only upon a showing that its ruling was so arbitrary that it could not have been the result of a reasoned decision. Hursey v. Homes By Design, Inc., 121 N.C. App. 175, 464 S.E.2d 504 (1995).

The abuse of discretion standard is applied to the imposition and selection of sanctions under this rule. Crutchfield v. Crutchfield, — N.C. App. —, 511 S.E.2d 31 (1999).

Remedy for Errors in Discovery Orders Is Not Open Defiance. — When a party willfully disobeys an order entered with personal and subject matter jurisdiction, a judgment of contempt (a permissible sanction under this rule) is appropriate even if the order was erroneously issued. Such an order is not void and is entitled to respect. The proper remedy for any error therein is not by open defiance, but by appeal. Midgett v. Crystal Dawn Corp., 58 N.C. App. 734, 294 S.E.2d 386 (1982).

Sanctions Where Defendant Attested to Answers Not His Own. — Section (d) of this rule does not come into operation if the responding party meets the requirements of § 1A-1, Rule 33. However, by attesting to answers that were not his, defendant did not meet the requirements of Rule 33. Therefore, the imposition of the sanctions of default against defendant was proper under section (d). Hunter v. Spaulding, 97 N.C. App. 372, 388 S.E.2d 630 (1990).

The imposition of sanctions under this rule for failure to comply with § 1A-1, Rule 26(e) is within the sound discretion of the trial judge. Willoughby v. Wilkins, 65 N.C. App. 626, 310 S.E.2d 90 (1983), cert. denied, 310 N.C. 631, 315 S.E.2d 697, 315 S.E.2d 698 (1984).

In addition to its inherent authority to regulate trial proceedings, the trial court has express authority under this rule to impose sanctions on a party who balks at discovery requests. Green ex rel. Green v. Maness, 69 N.C. App. 292, 316 S.E.2d 917, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 621, 323 S.E.2d 922 (1984).

Burden of Party Seeking to Avoid Sanctions. — A party wishing to avoid court-imposed sanctions for failure to comply with an order compelling discovery bears the burden of showing justification for his noncompliance. McCraw v. Hamrick, 88 N.C. App. 391, 363 S.E.2d 201 (1988).

Award of expenses in malpractice case against defendant was justified under § 1A-1, Rule 26(c) because defendant's motion to quash was denied and under subsection (a)(4) of this rule because plaintiffs' motion to compel was granted. Green ex rel. Green v. Maness, 69 N.C. App. 403, 316 S.E.2d 911, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 621, 323 S.E.2d 922 (1984).

Section (c) of this rule does not require the trial court to make negative findings of fact with respect to the four exceptions therein, and where neither party made such a request of the trial judge, under § 1A-1, Rule 52 it would be presumed that the court on proper evidence found facts to support its judgment. Watkins v. Hellings, 321 N.C. 78, 361 S.E.2d 568 (1987).

Appealability of Orders Denying Discovery. — Orders denying discovery need no sanctions under this rule for enforcement. They are appealable if they affect a substantial right of the party requesting discovery. Walker v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 84 N.C. App. 552, 353 S.E.2d 425 (1987).

Appealability of Sanctions Order. — An order compelling discovery is not a final judgment, nor does it affect a substantial right, and consequently, it is not appealable. However, when the order is enforced by sanctions pursuant to section (b) of this rule, the order is appealable as a final judgment. Walker v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 84 N.C. App. 552, 353 S.E.2d 425 (1987).

Where a party is adjudged to be in contempt for noncompliance with a discovery order or has been assessed with certain other sanctions, the order is immediately appealable since it affects a substantial right under §§ 1-277 and 7A-27(d)(1). Benfield v. Benfield, 89 N.C. App. 415, 366 S.E.2d 500 (1988).

Order holding defendant in contempt of court for his failure to comply with discovery order was appealable and tested the validity both of the original discovery order and the contempt order. Benfield v. Benfield, 89 N.C. App. 415, 366 S.E.2d 500 (1988).

When a discovery order is enforced by sanctions, the order is appealable as a final judgment. Sharpe v. Worland, — N.C. App. —, 511 S.E.2d 35 (1999).

Attempted Appeal from Order Containing No Sanctions as Nullity. — As the order from which defendant first appealed contained no enforcement sanctions, but only ordered defendant to answer questions by a certain date, it was not properly appealable, and the attempted appeal therefrom was a nullity, notwithstanding the fact that the judge signed the appeal entries. Accordingly, such appeal did not divest the trial court of jurisdiction to subsequently enter sanctions against defendant. Benfield v. Benfield, 89 N.C. App. 415, 366 S.E.2d 500 (1988).

Although interlocutory, a party may appeal from order imposing sanctions by striking his defense and entering judgment as to liability. Vick v. Davis, 77 N.C. App. 359, 335 S.E.2d 197 (1985), aff'd, 317 N.C. 328, 345 S.E.2d 217 (1986).

Findings on Motion for Expenses. — With regard to the imposition of discovery sanctions pursuant to section (c) of this rule, it is left to the discretion of the trial judge as to whether to make a finding of fact if a party does not choose to compel a finding through the simple mechanism of so requesting. Watkins v. Hellings, 321 N.C. 78, 361 S.E.2d 568 (1987).

In order to compel the deposition testimony of a nonparty, a subpoena must be issued from the county in which the deposition is to be taken, and a proper subpoena should have been issued from the Clerk of Superior Court of Wake County directing a nonparty in a divorce case to appear in Wake County; therefore, nonparty and her attorney were substantially justified in opposing the discovery sought pursuant to the subpoena issued from Mecklenburg County and the trial court's imposition of attorneys' fees under subsection (a)(4) of this rule was error. Cochran v. Cochran, 93 N.C. App. 574, 378 S.E.2d 580 (1989).

Sufficient Notice of Sanctions. — Defendant corporation had sufficient notice that any or all of the sanctions available under section (d) of this rule could be imposed against it where, although plaintiff did not specify the section of this rule it wished to proceed under, it did state in the motion that plaintiff had served "Plaintiff's First Interrogatories and Requests for Production of Documents" on defendant and that "Defendant has failed to timely respond to the aforesaid discovery requests and has refused, and continues to refuse, to provide responses to said requests." J.D. Dawson Co. v. Robertson Mktg., Inc., 93 N.C. App. 62, 376 S.E.2d 254 (1989).

Sanctions Upheld for Violation of Court Orders. — Sanctions imposed by trial court for violation of discovery order, of the Rules of Civil Procedure and of consent order, without justification, which sanctions included the striking of defenses, the payment of attorneys' fees, and the supplying of further answers to the interrogatories would be upheld in view of the facts. Martin v. Solon Automated Servs., Inc., 84 N.C. App. 197, 352 S.E.2d 278, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 319 N.C. 678, 356 S.E.2d 789 (1987).

Trial court abused its discretion when it decided to remit a portion of the verdict rather than granting the defendants' motion for a new trial based on the plaintiff's failure to comply with discovery requests. Gardner v. Harriss, 122 N.C. App. 697, 471 S.E.2d 447 (1996).

Where plaintiff made a request for costs and asserted that appeal was in violation of Rule 11, but did not make the request in a motion, pursuant to this rule, the court declined to consider the request. Enzor v. North Carolina Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co., 123 N.C. App. 544, 473 S.E.2d 638 (1996).

Applied in Willis v. Duke Power Co., 291 N.C. 19, 229 S.E.2d 191 (1976); Food Town Stores, Inc. v. City of Salisbury, 300 N.C. 21, 265 S.E.2d 123 (1980); FMS Mgt. Sys. v. Thomas, 65 N.C. ## ARTICLE 6.

Trials.

Rule 38. Jury trial of right.

(a) Right preserved. — The right of trial by jury as declared by the Constitution or statutes of North Carolina shall be preserved to the parties inviolate.

(b) Demand. — Any party may demand a trial by jury of any issue triable of right by a jury by serving upon the other parties a demand therefor in writing at any time after commencement of the action and not later than 10 days after the service of the last pleading directed to such issue. Such demand may be made in the pleading of the party or endorsed on the pleading.

(c) Demand — Specification of issues. — In his demand a party may specify the issues which he wishes so tried; otherwise, he shall be deemed to have demanded trial by jury for all the issues so triable. If a party has demanded trial by jury for only some of the issues, any other party within 10 days after service of the last pleading directed to such issues or within 10 days after service of the demand, whichever is later, or such lesser time as the court may order, may serve a demand for trial by jury of any other or all of the issues in the action.

(d) Waiver. — Except in actions wherein jury trial cannot be waived, the failure of a party to serve a demand as required by this rule and file it as required by Rule 5(d) constitutes a waiver by him of trial by jury. A demand for trial by jury as herein provided may not be withdrawn without the consent of the parties who have pleaded or otherwise appear in the action.

(e) Right granted. — The right of trial by jury as to the issue of just compensation shall be granted to the parties involved in any condemnation proceeding brought by bodies politic, corporations or persons which possess the power of eminent domain. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1973, c. 149.)

COMMENT

This rule and Rule 39 provide for the preservation of the right to jury trial and methods for claim and waiver of that right. The principal change effected is that waiver of right to jury trial is accomplished by a failure seasonably to demand jury trial.

North Carolina Const., Art. IV, § 12, specifically provides that jury trial can be waived, and former § 1-184 set up three methods by which there could be such waiver. They were: (1) By failing to appear at the trial; (2) By written consent filed with the clerk; and (3) By oral consent entered in the minutes. All three methods are retained. See Rule 39(a). But a fourth is added which has as its object the early ascertainment of those cases in which there will be no jury. This knowledge is useful in calendaring a case and in counsel's preparation for trial.

The requirement of positive action by a party to preserve the right to jury trial is not at all new in certain areas — references and mandamus for example. In respect to references, see Simmons v. Lee, 230 N.C. 216, 53 S.E. 79 (1949). See also Rule 53 and the accompanying note. In respect to mandamus, see former § 1-513. This statute has been repealed and jury trial in respect to mandamus is now governed by this rule and Rule 39.

The procedure for demanding jury trial is simple. The demand may be within a pleading or endorsed thereon or by separate document. No particular form of words is prescribed. As to the time when the demand must be made, generally it will be "not later than 10 days after the service of the last pleading" directed to the issue in question. But it will be observed that section (c) makes it possible for a party to demand jury trial only for some of the issues. To adjust to the situation where, for example, a plaintiff in a negligence suit might have failed to demand jury trial on any issue and the defendant, at the last moment (on the 10th day after filing his answer), demands jury trial on only the damage issue, the rule allows the plaintiff 10 days after the service of the defendant's demand in which to demand jury trial on other issues.

The reference in section (d) to actions wherein jury trial cannot be waived would include actions for divorce not based on one year's separation. See § 50-10.

In keeping with present law [see J.L. Roper Lumber Co. v. Elizabeth City Lumber Co., 137 N.C. 431, 49 S.E. 946 (1905)], Rule 39(b) authorizes a judge to disregard a waiver of jury trial.

CASE NOTES

Constitutional Right to Demand Jury Trial. — N. C. Const., Art. I, § 25 guarantees to every person the "sacred and inviolable" right to demand a jury trial of issues of fact arising in all controversies at law respecting property. Sykes v. Belk, 278 N.C. 106, 179 S.E.2d 439 (1971); Frissell v. Frissell, 47 N.C. App. 149, 266 S.E.2d 866 (1980).

No Constitutional Right to Jury Trial in Proceeding for Termination of Parental Rights. — The North Carolina constitutional requirement of trial by jury is not applicable to a proceeding for termination of parental rights. In re Ferguson, 50 N.C. App. 681, 274 S.E.2d 879 (1981).

A party may waive his right to jury trial by (1) failing to appear at the trial, (2) written consent filed with the clerk, (3) oral consent entered in the minutes of the court, or (4) failing to demand a jury trial pursuant to section (b) of this rule. Sykes v. Belk, 278 N.C. 106, 179 S.E.2d 439 (1971); Frissell v. Frissell, 47 N.C. App. 149, 266 S.E.2d 866 (1980).

In addition to the waiver of right to jury trial as established by section (d) of this rule and § 1A-1, Rule 39(a), a party may waive his right to jury trial by failing to appear at trial. Frissell v. Frissell, 47 N.C. App. 149, 266 S.E.2d 866 (1980), overruling Heidler v. Heidler, 42 N.C. App. 481, 256 S.E.2d 833 (1979), insofar as it is inconsistent with that opinion; Morris v. Asby, 48 N.C. App. 694, 269 S.E.2d 729 (1980).

Failure of a party to serve demand for trial by jury as required by the Rules of Civil Procedure constitutes a waiver. North Carolina State Bar v. DuMont, 52 N.C. App. 1, 277 S.E.2d 827 (1981), modified on other grounds, 304 N.C. 627, 286 S.E.2d 89 (1982).

Where defendant first requested a jury trial almost eleven months after he served his answer, the last pleading filed in the case, defendant's failure to timely demand a jury trial constituted a waiver by him of jury trial of right. Whitfield v. Todd, 116 N.C. App. 335, 447 S.E.2d 796, cert. denied, 338 N.C. 524, 453 S.E.2d 170 (1994).

Issue of Fact to Be Tried by Jury Unless Right Is Waived. — The credibility of testimony is for the jury, not the court, and a genuine issue of fact must be tried by a jury unless this right is waived. Cutts v. Casey, 278 N.C. 390, 180 S.E.2d 297 (1971).

When Denial of Jury Trial Is Not Error. — Where a demand for jury trial is not made in compliance with this rule and there is no controversy as to any of the facts and therefore no issue of fact to be determined by a jury, the denial of a jury trial is not error. Glover v. Spinks, 12 N.C. App. 380, 183 S.E.2d 262 (1971).

Trial court has discretion to grant a jury trial under § 1A-1, Rule 39(b) even though jury trial has been waived pursuant to section (b) of this rule. Bullard v. North Carolina Nat'l Bank, 31 N.C. App. 312, 229 S.E.2d 245 (1976).

Even though a party has failed to demand a jury trial as prescribed by section (b) of this rule, it is within the discretion of the trial judge to grant a subsequent motion for a jury trial under § 1A-1, Rule 39(b). Wycoff v. Pritchard Paint & Glass Co., 31 N.C. App. 246, 229 S.E.2d 47 (1976).

The denial of a belated demand for a jury trial is within the discretion of the judge. Arney v. Arney, 71 N.C. App. 218, 321 S.E.2d 472 (1984), cert. denied, 313 N.C. 173, 326 S.E.2d 31 (1985).

Oral Request for Jury Trial. — Where the parties did not demand a jury trial in the manner provided by this rule, but all parties orally requested trial by jury, and the clerk noted the request in her order transferring the cause to the civil issue docket of the superior court, the purpose of this rule was accomplished. Shankle v. Shankle, 289 N.C. 473, 223 S.E.2d 380 (1976).

Ten days from the date of the last pleading both parties are precluded from demanding a jury trial. Schoolfield v. Collins, 281 N.C. 604, 189 S.E.2d 208 (1972).

Defendant was denied constitutional right to a jury trial where action was transferred without notice from the superior court division to the district court division, so that defendant made no demand for jury trial in the district court within the 10-day time period formerly allowed by § 7A-196 and the district court subsequently denied his demand for a jury trial. Thermo-Industries of Charlotte, Inc. v. Talton Constr. Co., 9 N.C. App. 55, 175 S.E.2d 370 (1970).

Plaintiff waived right to a jury in a hearing on permanent alimony by failure to appear at the hearing either personally or by counsel. Frissell v. Frissell, 47 N.C. App. 149, 266 S.E.2d 866 (1980).

Action for Alienation of Affection Where Location of Defendant's Acts in Its Issue. — In a tort claim alleging alienation of affection, where there was a question as to whether the defendant's acts of alienation took place in North Carolina or in three other jurisdictions which do not recognize that tort, the issue of where the tort took place should have been submitted to a jury. Darnell v. Rupplin, 91 N.C. App. 349, 371 S.E.2d 743 (1988).

Where, prior to effective date of the rules, the pleadings in an action were closed, and juries had been empaneled to try the case on two previous occasions since that date, the trial court erred in determining that defendant had waived the right to a jury trial under this rule by failing to file a written request therefor. Fishel v. Grifton United Methodist Church, 13 N.C. App. 238, 185 S.E.2d 322 (1971).

In special proceedings for condemnation of land for an airport, the trial judge did not err in denying motion for a jury trial on the issue of ownership of the property, as the issue of ownership was not triable by a jury of right, and moreover, appellant did not demand a trial by jury in writing within the prescribed time. Raleigh-Durham Airport Auth. v. Howard, 88 N.C. App. 207, 363 S.E.2d 184 (1987), cert. denied, 322 N.C. 113, 367 S.E.2d 916 (1988).

Rule 39. Trial by jury or by the court.

(a) By jury. — When trial by jury has been demanded and has not been withdrawn as provided in Rule 38, the action shall be designated upon the docket as a jury action. The trial of all issues so demanded shall be by jury, unless

(1) The parties who have pleaded or otherwise appeared in the action or their attorneys of record, by written stipulation filed with the court or by an oral stipulation made in open court and entered in the minutes, consent to trial by the court sitting without a jury, or

(2) The court upon motion or of its own initiative finds that a right of trial by jury of some or all of those issues does not exist under the Constitution or statutes.

(b) By the court. — Issues not demanded for trial by jury as provided in Rule 38 shall be tried by the court; but, notwithstanding the failure of a party to demand a trial by jury in an action in which such a demand might have been made of right, the court in its discretion upon motion or of its own initiative may order a trial by jury of any or all issues.

(c) Advisory jury and trial by consent. — In all actions not triable of right by a jury the court upon motion or of its own initiative may try any issue or question of fact with an advisory jury or the court, with the consent of the parties, may order a trial with a jury whose verdict has the same effect as if trial by jury had been a matter of right. In either event the jury shall be selected in the manner provided by Rule 47(a). (1967, c. 954, s. 1.)

COMMENT

As indicated in the note to Rule 38, this rule carries forward the essence of former § 1-184 in respect to methods of waiver and the present power of the judge to require trial by jury, even though there has been a waiver. Moreover, provision is made for trial by jury when there is no right to such trial if the judge decides such a course is desirable or if the parties consent.

Waiver of Right to Jury Trial by Failure to Appear. — In addition to the waiver of right to jury trial as established by § 1A-1, Rule 38(d) and section (a) of this rule, a party may waive his right to jury trial by failing to appear at trial. Frissell v. Frissell, 47 N.C. App. 149, 266 S.E.2d 866 (1980), overruling Heidler v. Heidler, 42 N.C. App. 481, 256 S.E.2d 833

Rule 40. Assignment of cases for trial; continuances.

(a) The senior resident superior court judge of any superior court district or set of districts as defined in G.S. 7A-41.1 may provide by rule for the calendaring of actions for trial in the superior court division of the various counties within his district or set of districts. Calendaring of actions for trial in the district court shall be in accordance with G.S. 7A-146. Precedence shall be given to actions entitled thereto by any statute of this State.

(b) No continuance shall be granted except upon application to the court. A continuance may be granted only for good cause shown and upon such terms and conditions as justice may require. Good cause for granting a continuance shall include those instances when a party to the proceeding, a witness, or counsel of record has an obligation of service to the State of North Carolina, including service as a member of the General Assembly or the Rules Review Commission. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1969, c. 895, s. 9; 1985, c. 603, s. 8; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1037, s. 43; 1997-34, s. 10.)

COMMENT

Comment to this Rule as Originally Enacted. — This rule, as does the present Rule of Practice in the Superior Court, provides ultimately for judicial control of the calendar. The reference to the judge "senior in point of continuous service" is merely to designate the responsible judge in those districts having more than one judge.

Comment to the 1969 amendment. — The 1969 amendment added the provision concerning continuances. The previous code contained some detailed provisions on continuances. This brief provision was deemed appropriate out of an abundance of caution.

II. CALENDARING OF ACTIONS.

Local rules adopted pursuant to this rule are rules of court which are adopted to promote the effective administration of justice by ensuring that efficient calendaring procedures are employed. Wide discretion should be afforded in their application, so long as a proper regard is given to their purpose. Forman & Zuckerman v. Schupak, 38 N.C. App. 17, 247 S.E.2d 266 (1978).

The senior Superior Court judge "may provide by rule for the calendaring of actions for trial in the superior court division . . .". Lomax v. Shaw, 101 N.C. App. 560, 400 S.E.2d 97 (1991).

III. CONTINUANCES.

A motion for continuance is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge. State v. Courson, 27 N.C. App. 268, 218 S.E.2d 416, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 732, 220 S.E.2d 352 (1975); Fungaroli v. Fungaroli, 40 N.C. App. 397, 252 S.E.2d 849, appeal dismissed, 297 N.C. 452, 256 S.E.2d 805, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 805, 262 S.E.2d 1 (1979), cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 446 U.S. 930, 100 S. Ct. 2144, 64 L. Ed. 2d 783 (1980); State v. Williams, 51 N.C. App. 613, 277 S.E.2d 546 (1981); Spence v. Jones, 83 N.C. App. 8, 348 S.E.2d 819 (1986).

A motion to continue is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge, who should determine it as the rights of the parties require under the circumstances. Shankle v. Shankle, 289 N.C. 473, 223 S.E.2d 380 (1976); Daniel Boone Complex, Inc. v. Furst, 57 N.C. App. 282, 291 S.E.2d 296, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 555, 294 S.E.2d 369 (1982); Reece v. Reece, 58 N.C. App. 404, 293 S.E.2d 662 (1982).

Granting a motion for a continuance is within the discretion of the trial court. State v. Edwards, 27 N.C. App. 369, 219 S.E.2d 249 (1975).

But continuances are not favored. Shankle v. Shankle, 289 N.C. 473, 223 S.E.2d 380 (1976); Fungaroli v. Fungaroli, 40 N.C. App. 397, 252 S.E.2d 849, appeal dismissed, 297 N.C. 452, 256 S.E.2d 805, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 805, 262 S.E.2d 1 (1979), cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 446 U.S. 930, 100 S. Ct. 2144, 64 L. Ed. 2d 783 (1980); Reece v. Reece, 58 N.C. App. 404, 293 S.E.2d 662 (1982); Spence v. Jones, 83 N.C. App. 8, 348 S.E.2d 819 (1986).

Continuances are not favored and the party seeking a continuance has the burden of showing sufficient grounds for it. The chief consideration is whether granting or denying a continuance will further substantial justice. Doby v. Lowder, 72 N.C. App. 22, 324 S.E.2d 26 (1984).

And May Be Granted Only for Good Cause. — Continuances are addressed to the sound discretion of trial judges and may be granted only for good cause shown and as justice may require. Austin v. Austin, 12 N.C. App. 286, 183 S.E.2d 420 (1971); Wood v. Brown, 25 N.C. App. 241, 212 S.E.2d 690, cert. denied, 287 N.C. 469, 215 S.E.2d 626 (1975).

Judge to Determine Whether Good Cause Is Shown. — This rule makes no attempt to enumerate the myriad circumstances which might be urged as grounds for a continuance, but leaves it to the judge to determine, in each case, whether "good cause" for a continuance has been shown. Shankle v. Shankle, 289 N.C. 473, 223 S.E.2d 380 (1976).

Discretion of the trial judge in ruling on a motion for a continuance is not unlimited, and must not be exercised absolutely, arbitrarily or capriciously, but only in accordance with fixed legal principles. Shankle v. Shankle, 289 N.C. 473, 223 S.E.2d 380 (1976).

But court's ruling on a continuance is not reviewable absent manifest abuse of discretion. Wood v. Brown, 25 N.C. App. 241, 212 S.E.2d 690, cert. denied, 287 N.C. 469, 215 S.E.2d 626 (1975); State v. Courson, 27 N.C. App. 268, 218 S.E.2d 416, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 732, 220 S.E.2d 352 (1975); State v. Mitchell, 27 N.C. App. 313, 219 S.E.2d 295 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 301, 222 S.E.2d 701 (1976); State v. Edwards, 27 N.C. App. 369, 219 S.E.2d 249 (1975); State v. Williams, 51 N.C. App. 613, 277 S.E.2d 546 (1981); Spence v. Jones, 83 N.C. App. 8, 348 S.E.2d 819 (1986).

Denial of motion for continuance is not an abuse of discretion where the evidence introduced is conflicting or insufficient. Shankle v. Shankle, 289 N.C. 473, 223 S.E.2d 380 (1976).

Where a motion for a continuance raises a constitutional issue, the trial court's decision thereon involves a question of law, not fact, which may be reviewed by an examination of the circumstances of each case. State v. Williams, 51 N.C. App. 613, 277 S.E.2d 546 (1981).

Substantial Justice as Chief Consideration. — The chief consideration to be weighed in passing upon the application for a continuance is whether the grant or denial of a continuance will be in furtherance of substantial justice. Shankle v. Shankle, 289 N.C. 473, 223 S.E.2d 380 (1976); Fungaroli v. Fungaroli, 40 N.C. App. 397, 252 S.E.2d 849, appeal dismissed, 297 N.C. 452, 256 S.E.2d 805, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 805, 262 S.E.2d 1 (1979), cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 446 U.S. 930, 100 S. Ct. 2144, 64 L. Ed. 2d 783 (1980).

Before ruling on a motion to continue the judge should hear the evidence pro and con, consider it judicially and then rule with a view to promoting substantial justice. Shankle v. Shankle, 289 N.C. 473, 223 S.E.2d 380 (1976).

Diligence and Good Faith of Movant Should Be Considered. — In considering a motion for continuance, the trial court must pass on the grounds urged in support of it, and also on the question of whether the moving party has acted with diligence and in good faith. Shankle v. Shankle, 289 N.C. 473, 223 S.E.2d 380 (1976).

Party seeking a continuance has the burden of showing sufficient grounds for it. Shankle v. Shankle, 289 N.C. 473, 223 S.E.2d 380 (1976); Fungaroli v. Fungaroli, 40 N.C. App. 397, 252 S.E.2d 849, appeal dismissed, 297 N.C. 452, 256 S.E.2d 805, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 805, 262 S.E.2d 1 (1979), cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 446 U.S. 930, 100 S. Ct. 2144, 64 L. Ed. 2d 783 (1980); Daniel Boone Complex, Inc. v. Furst, 57 N.C. App. 282, 291 S.E.2d 296, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 555, 294 S.E.2d 369 (1982); Reece v. Reece, 58 N.C. App. 404, 293 S.E.2d 662 (1982).

Motion for a continuance should be granted where nothing in the record controverts a sufficient showing made by the moving party. Shankle v. Shankle, 289 N.C. 473, 223 S.E.2d 380 (1976).

Trial court's denial of plaintiff's motion to continue a summary judgment hearing was an abuse of discretion and subject to reversal where the record showed no reason whatever for refusing the continuance and a compelling reason for granting it. Freeman v. Monroe, 92 N.C. App. 99, 373 S.E.2d 443 (1988).

Trial court erred in failing to grant defendant a continuance after allowing withdrawal of defendant's counsel, since nothing in the record indicated that defendant sought to delay or evade trial, since defendant did not know that trial was scheduled, and since defendant's ability to produce witnesses and prove his case was prejudiced thereby. Benton v. Mintz, 97 N.C. App. 583, 389 S.E.2d 410 (1990).

Withdrawal of Attorney Shortly Before Trial. — The decision whether to grant a continuance because the moving party's attorney has withdrawn from the case on the day of trial rests in the trial judge's discretion, to be exercised after he has determined from the facts and circumstances of the particular case whether immediate trial or continuance will best serve the ends of justice. Shankle v. Shankle, 289 N.C. 473, 223 S.E.2d 380 (1976).

Respondents were prima facie entitled to a continuance where respondents' affidavit and statements in open court that their attorney had withdrawn from the case on the day of the trial without warning were uncontroverted by the record. Shankle v. Shankle, 289 N.C. 473, 223 S.E.2d 380 (1976).

Where counsel made efforts on defendant's behalf to secure other counsel, but defendant never signed the necessary documents or even responded to the firm's inquiries, the trial court's denial of a continuance based on removal of counsel the day before trial was a proper exercise of its discretion. Brown v. Rowe Chevrolet-Buick, Inc., 86 N.C. App. 222, 357 S.E.2d 181 (1987).

There was no abuse of discretion in trial court's refusal to grant plaintiff a continuance where plaintiff's attorney's withdrawal on the day before trial had been at plaintiff's request. Pickard Roofing Co. v. Barbour, 94 N.C. App. 688, 381 S.E.2d 341 (1989).

Presence of Attorney Required Elsewhere. — Attorneys, under the guise of having business requiring their presence elsewhere, ought not to be allowed to delay, defeat or prevent a litigant from having his case tried or being heard on a motion at some reasonably suitable and convenient time. Austin v. Austin, 12 N.C. App. 286, 183 S.E.2d 420 (1971).

The superior court judge was well within the bounds of the court's inherent authority to manage the case docket when he struck defendant's answer as a sanction for willful failure to execute agreed settlement because defendants offered no plausible excuse as to why they did not execute the two paragraph consent judgment, saying only that they did not understand it and in addition judge gave notice that failure to file the consent order would result in the imposition of sanctions. Lomax v. Shaw, 101 N.C. App. 560, 400 S.E.2d 97 (1991).

Rule 41. Dismissal of actions.

(a) Voluntary dismissal; effect thereof. —

(1) By Plaintiff; by Stipulation. — Subject to the provisions of Rule 23(c) and of any statute of this State, an action or any claim therein may be dismissed by the plaintiff without order of court (i) by filing a notice of dismissal at any time before the plaintiff rests his case, or; (ii) by filing a stipulation of dismissal signed by all parties who have appeared in the action. Unless otherwise stated in the notice of dismissal or stipulation, the dismissal is without prejudice, except that a notice of dismissal operates as an adjudication upon the merits when filed by a plaintiff who has once dismissed in any court of this or any other state or of the United States, an action based on or including the same claim. If an action commenced within the time prescribed therefor, or any claim therein, is dismissed without prejudice under this subsection, a new action based on the same claim may be commenced within one year after such dismissal unless a stipulation filed under (ii) of this subsection shall specify a shorter time.

(2) By Order of Judge. — Except as provided in subsection (1) of this section, an action or any claim therein shall not be dismissed at the plaintiff's instance save upon order of the judge and upon such terms and conditions as justice requires. Unless otherwise specified in the order, a dismissal under this subsection is without prejudice. If an action commenced within the time prescribed therefor, or any claim therein, is dismissed without prejudice under this subsection, a new action based on the same claim may be commenced within one year after such dismissal unless the judge shall specify in his order a shorter time.

(b) Involuntary dismissal; effect thereof. — For failure of the plaintiff to prosecute or to comply with these rules or any order of court, a defendant may move for dismissal of an action or of any claim therein against him. After the plaintiff, in an action tried by the court without a jury, has completed the presentation of his evidence, the defendant, without waiving his right to offer evidence in the event the motion is not granted, may move for a dismissal on the ground that upon the facts and the law the plaintiff has shown no right to relief. The court as trier of the facts may then determine them and render judgment against the plaintiff or may decline to render any judgment until the close of all the evidence. If the court renders judgment on the merits against the plaintiff, the court shall make findings as provided in Rule 52(a). Unless the court in its order for dismissal otherwise specifies, a dismissal under this section and any dismissal not provided for in this rule, other than a dismissal for lack of jurisdiction, for improper venue, or for failure to join a necessary party, operates as an adjudication upon the merits. If the court specifies that the dismissal of an action commenced within the time prescribed therefor, or any claim therein, is without prejudice, it may also specify in its order that a new action based on the same claim may be commenced within one year or less after such dismissal.

(c) Dismissal of counterclaim; crossclaim, or third-party claim. — The provisions of this rule apply to the dismissal of any counterclaim, crossclaim, or third-party claim.

(d) Costs. — A plaintiff who dismisses an action or claim under section (a) of this rule shall be taxed with the costs of the action unless the action was brought in forma pauperis. If a plaintiff who has once dismissed an action in any court commences an action based upon or including the same claim against the same defendant before the payment of the costs of the action previously dismissed, unless such previous action was brought in forma pauperis, the court, upon motion of the defendant, shall make an order for the payment of such costs by the plaintiff within 30 days and shall stay the proceedings in the action until the plaintiff has complied with the order. If the plaintiff does not comply with the order, the court shall dismiss the action. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1969, c. 895, s. 10; 1977, c. 290.)

COMMENT

Comment to this Rule as Originally Enacted. — Section (a). — The absolute right of a plaintiff to take a voluntary nonsuit for any or no reason at all at any time before verdict is beyond question under present law. Southeastern Fire Ins. Co. v. Walton, 256 N.C. 345, 123 S.E.2d 780 (1962). The vice of such an arrangement appears clearly in the following excerpt from an opinion of a federal judge:

"Before the effective date of [Rule 41] it not infrequently happened . . . that in a case . . . which had come to issue, perhaps after disposition of preliminary motions, which had gone to trial, in the trial of which plaintiff had introduced all his testimony, for the trial of which defendant had called witnesses from great distances and incurred great expense, the plaintiff would dismiss just at the moment the court was about to direct a verdict for defendant. The next day he might bring the same suit again. And the process might be repeated time after time. It was an outrageous imposition not only on the defendant but also on the court. Rule 41 has done much to put an end to that evil.

"The evil aimed at by the rule most largely is manifested in the extreme situation described. To a lesser extent it is present in any instance in which a defendant is damaged by being dragged into court and put to expense with no chance whatever . . . of having the suit determined in his favor." McCann v. Bentley Stores Corp., 34 F. Supp. 234 (W.D. Mo. 1940).

Under the rule, the plaintiff's absolute right of dismissal is confined to the period before answer or a motion for summary judgment — the period before which there has been a heavy expenditure of time and effort by the court and other parties. Thereafter, the plaintiff can dismiss only with the consent of the other parties or with the permission of the judge. This latter provision allowing dismissal with the permission of the judge should be ample to take care of the hardship case where, for quite legitimate reasons, the plaintiff is unable to press his claim. It should be noted, however, that the judge is authorized to condition the dismissal on terms. For the federal practice in respect to terms, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 41.06.

It should also be observed that the first voluntary dismissal will have the same effect as is now accorded a voluntary nonsuit, i.e., it is not a judgment on the merits. But a second dismissal, no matter where the first action was brought, will be a judgment on the merits.

Section (b). — Under this section, whether the action be a nonjury action or a jury action, there may be a motion for a dismissal because of failure of a plaintiff to prosecute or for a failure "to comply with these rules or any order of court." The power of the court to dismiss for failure to prosecute is well established [see Wynne v. Conrad, 220 N.C. 355, 17 S.E.2d 514 (1941)] and the rule merely gives statutory recognition of this power.

In respect to a motion for dismissal because of noncompliance with these rules or an order of court, the propriety of a dismissal will, of course, depend on the rule or order which has not been complied with. The rule does not undertake to say in what circumstances a dismissal will be proper any more than it attempts arbitrarily to declare what is a failure to prosecute.

In an action tried by the court without a jury, the rule provides for a motion similar to the familiar motion for compulsory nonsuit under former § 1-183. It is contemplated that where there is a jury trial, Rule 50 will come into play with its motion for a directed verdict. For a discussion of the interrelation of this rule and Rule 50, see the comment to Rule 50. The practice under section (b) will be much like that under former § 1-183. But there are some changes. The court is empowered to determine that its adjudication shall be on the merits and to find the facts in appropriate cases at the close of the plaintiff's evidence.

Section (c). — This section makes clear that the rule is applicable to all situations in which a claim is capable of being pressed under these rules.

Section (d). — This section makes certain that one, other than a plaintiff suing in forma pauperis, will have paid the costs in the first action before he can maintain a second action on the same claim.

Comment to the 1969 amendment. — The most significant change produced by the 1969 amendments to Rule 41 is that a claimant's unfettered right to a voluntary, nonprejudicial dismissal endures up to the moment he rests his case. But the amended Rule specifies, as did the earlier version, that a second dismissal shall operate as an adjudication upon the merits.

There has been an attempt to make clear that the right to bring a new action within one year, after either a voluntary or an involuntary dismissal, is dependent on the original action having been commenced before the relevant statute of limitations has run. To that end, the last sentences of subsections 41(a)(1) and 41(a)(2) and section 41(b) now speak of "an action commenced within the time prescribed therefor."

Subsection 41(a)(1) has been rewritten to provide that the right to bring a new action within one year applies in the case of a dismissal by stipulation if the parties do not "specify a shorter time." Basically, the rights of the parties have not been affected because a stipulation requires unanimity among the parties. If any party objects to the extension of the statute of limitations, he may refuse to sign the stipulation and thereby compel the claimant to seek the court's permission under subsection 41(a)(2).

Section 41(b) has been rewritten, in conformity with the present federal rule, to make it clear that a motion for involuntary dismissal under Rule 41 is available at the close of the claimant's case only in an action tried by the court without a jury. When there is a jury and a defendant wishes to challenge the sufficiency of the evidence, he must resort to Rule 50.

A second objective in the rewriting of section 41(b) was to make clear that the court's power to dismiss on terms, that is, to condition the dismissal ("Unless the court in its order for dismissal otherwise specifies, . . .") extends to all dismissals other than voluntary dismissals under section 41(a). Thus, if there were a motion to dismiss under Rule 37(b)(2)(iii) for failure to comply with a discovery order, the court, under the amended version of Rule 41(b), could in granting the motion specify that the dismissal was without prejudice.

A. In General.
B. Failure to Prosecute or to Comply with Rules or Orders.
C. Failure to Show Right to Relief.
IV. Costs.

I. IN GENERAL.

Legislative Intent. — The intent of subdivision (a)(1) is to protect a defendant from the harassment of repetitive lawsuits. Richardson v. McCracken Enters., 126 N.C. App. 506, 485 S.E.2d 844 (1997), review denied, 347 N.C. 269, 493 S.E.2d 745 (1997), aff'd, 347 N.C. 660, 496 S.E.2d 380 (1998).

In enacting the two dismissal provision of subdivision (a)(1), the legislature intended that a second dismissal of an action asserting claims based upon the same transaction or occurrence as a previously dismissed action would operate as an adjudication on the merits and bar a third action based upon the same set of facts. Richardson v. McCracken Enters., 126 N.C. App. 506, 485 S.E.2d 844 (1997), review denied, 347 N.C. 269, 493 S.E.2d 745 (1997), aff'd, 347 N.C. 660, 496 S.E.2d 380 (1998).

Motion for Nonsuit Replaced by Motion for Dismissal. — In nonjury trials the motion for nonsuit has been replaced by the motion for a dismissal. Cutts v. Casey, 278 N.C. 390, 180 S.E.2d 297 (1971); Creasman v. First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 279 N.C. 361, 183 S.E.2d 115 (1971), cert. denied, 405 U.S. 977, 92 S. Ct. 1204, 31 L. Ed. 2d 252 (1972); Schafran v. A & H Cleaners, Inc., 19 N.C. App. 365, 198 S.E.2d 734, cert. denied, 284 N.C. 255, 200 S.E.2d 655 (1973); Phillips v. Woxman, 43 N.C. App. 739, 260 S.E.2d 97, cert. denied, 299 N.C. 545, 265

In civil actions tried without a jury, the former motion for nonsuit has been replaced by the motion for dismissal. Whitaker v. Earnhardt, 289 N.C. 260, 221 S.E.2d 316 (1976).

A motion for involuntary dismissal under section (b) of this rule has replaced the motion for nonsuit in civil actions tried without a jury. Joyner v. Thomas, 40 N.C. App. 63, 251 S.E.2d 906 (1979).

A motion for nonsuit is no longer proper in a civil action. In an action tried by the court without a jury, a defendant may move for a dismissal on the ground that upon the facts and the law plaintiff has shown no right to relief. Roberts v. William N. & Kate B. Reynolds Mem. Park, 281 N.C. 48, 187 S.E.2d 721 (1972).

Since January 1, 1970, the former motion for involuntary nonsuit in nonjury trials has been replaced by the motion for dismissal authorized by sections (b) and (c) of this rule. International Harvester Credit Corp. v. Ricks, 16 N.C. App. 491, 192 S.E.2d 707 (1972).

Authority to Determine Whether Plaintiff May Commence New Action. — The authority to determine in which cases it is appropriate to allow the plaintiff to commence a new action has been vested, by this rule, in the trial or hearing judge and is no longer strictly controlled by statute. Gower v. Aetna Ins. Co., 13 N.C. App. 368, 185 S.E.2d 722, aff'd, 281 N.C. 577, 189 S.E.2d 165 (1972).

The authority to determine whether the nonmoving party in any action should be permitted to commence a new action has been vested in the trial judge under section (b) of this rule. The exercise of such power lies within the trial court's sound discretion and will not be disturbed on appeal in the absence of a showing of abuse of discretion. Whedon v. Whedon, 313 N.C. 200, 328 S.E.2d 437 (1985).

Function of the trial judge as trier of the facts is to evaluate the evidence without any limitation as to inferences favorable to plaintiff. Lumbee River Elec. Membership Corp. v. City of Fayetteville, 309 N.C. 726, 309 S.E.2d 209 (1983).

Rule Does Not Contain Old Restrictions. — This rule does not contain the old restrictions that a new action may be brought only when the plaintiff's original action has been nonsuited, or a judgment therein reversed on appeal, or arrested. Gower v. Aetna Ins. Co., 13 N.C. App. 368, 185 S.E.2d 722, aff'd, 281 N.C. 577, 189 S.E.2d 165 (1972).

This motion should be used sparingly. Dubose Steel, Inc. v. Faircloth, 59 N.C. App. 722, 298 S.E.2d 60 (1982).

Review of Judgment Dismissing Action Without Prejudice. — A judgment by a court determining its statutory authority to dismiss an action in such a way as not to bar further litigation on the merits therein may be questioned only by appeal and not collaterally. Gower v. Aetna Ins. Co., 281 N.C. 577, 189 S.E.2d 165 (1972).

A judgment by a court determining its statutory authority to dismiss an action in such a way as not to bar further litigation on the merits therein may be questioned only by appeal. Miller v. Ferree, 84 N.C. App. 135, 351 S.E.2d 845 (1987).

Dismissal Order Binding on Defendant. — Because defendant did not appeal the trial court's dismissal order which allowed plaintiff an additional year in which to refile, he was bound by that order and he could not attack the trial court's dismissal order collaterally by appealing the final judgment entered after plaintiff refiled. Jones v. Summers, 117 N.C. App. 415, 450 S.E.2d 920 (1994).

Dismissal under subsection (a) of this rule strips the trial court of authority to enter further orders in the case, except as provided by subsection (d) of this rule, which authorizes the court to enter specific orders apportioning and taxing costs. Walker Frames v. Shively, 123 N.C. App. 643, 473 S.E.2d 776 (1996).

Adversary Proceedings Terminated. — Where plaintiff's attorney validly took a voluntary dismissal in open court before defendants asserted any counterclaim, plaintiff terminated all adversary proceedings. Walker Frames v. Shively, 123 N.C. App. 643, 473 S.E.2d 776 (1996).

Reluctance to Allow Withdrawal Extends to Counterclaims. — The judicial reluctance to allow a plaintiff to withdraw at the last stages of litigation should extend as well to a defendant who wishes to withdraw its counterclaims. Whitaker's Inc. v. Nicol Arms, 93 N.C. App. 487, 378 S.E.2d 201 (1989).

Requirement of Detailed Findings. — The requirement of appropriately detailed findings is designed to dispose of the issues raised by the pleadings and to allow the appellate courts to perform their proper function in the judicial system. Mashburn v. First Investors Corp., 102 N.C. App. 560, 402 S.E.2d 860 (1991).

Applied in Perry v. Suggs, 9 N.C. App. 128, 175 S.E.2d 696 (1970); First Nat'l Bank v. Black, 10 N.C. App. 270, 178 S.E.2d 108 (1970); Snellings v. Roberts, 12 N.C. App. 476, 183 S.E.2d 872 (1971); Nat Harrison Assocs. v. North Carolina State Ports Auth., 280 N.C. 251, 185 S.E.2d 793 (1972); Hobson Constr. Co. v. Holiday Inns, Inc., 14 N.C. App. 475, 188 S.E.2d 617 (1972); Ramsey v. Ramsey, 16 N.C. App. 614, 192 S.E.2d 664 (1972); Smoky Mt. Enters., Inc. v. Rose, 283 N.C. 373, 196 S.E.2d 189 (1973); Livengood v. Piedmont & N. Ry., 18 N.C. App. 352, 197 S.E.2d 66 (1973); Forbes v.

II. VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL.

Subsection (a)(1) of this rule, as first enacted, was patterned closely upon the cognate federal rule. McCarley v. McCarley, 24 N.C. App. 373, 210 S.E.2d 531 (1975), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 289 N.C. 109, 221 S.E.2d 490 (1976).

How Filing Requirements of Subdivision (a)(1)(i) May Be Met. — No means other than oral notice in open court have been allowed to substitute for the filing requirements of subdivision (a)(1)(i) of this rule. Johnson v. Hutchens, 103 N.C. App. 384, 405 S.E.2d 597 (1991).

Contact with defendant's attorney by telephone or mail concerning voluntary dismissal does not satisfy the filing requirements of subdivision (a)(1)(i) of this rule. Johnson v. Hutchens, 103 N.C. App. 384, 405 S.E.2d 597 (1991).

A plaintiff is free to abandon an alleged or potential claim against another party at any time. Carter v. Clowers, 102 N.C. App. 247, 401 S.E.2d 662 (1991).

Under subdivision (a)(1) of this rule, plaintiff may voluntarily dismiss his suit, without order of the court, by filing a notice of dismissal at any time before resting his case. Carter v. Clowers, 102 N.C. App. 247, 401 S.E.2d 662 (1991).

Under the plain language of subdivision (a)(1), a plaintiff is vested with the authority to dismiss any of its claims prior to close of its case-in-chief. Roberts v. Young, 120 N.C. App. 720, 464 S.E.2d 78 (1995).

Validity of Underlying Complaint. — In order to obtain a one-year extension by way of a voluntary dismissal without prejudice, the underlying complaint must conform in all respects to the rules of pleading. Robinson v. Entwistle, — N.C. App. —, 512 S.E.2d 438 (1999).

There are two elements to the two dismissal rule: (1) plaintiff must have filed the notices to dismiss under subdivision (a)(1)(i) of this rule, since the two dismissal rule does not apply where plaintiff's dismissal is by stipulation or by order of court; and (2) the second suit must have been based on or including the same claim as the first suit. City of Raleigh v. College Campus Apts., Inc., 94 N.C. App. 280, 380 S.E.2d 163 (1989), aff'd, 326 N.C. 360, 388 S.E.2d 768 (1990).

The "same defendant" limitation is absent in the two dismissal rule of subsection (a) (1) of this rule. There is no basis for judicially adding a requirement that the General Assembly intended to leave out, as the statute is clear and unambiguous. City of Raleigh v. College Campus Apts., Inc., 94 N.C. App. 280, 380 S.E.2d 163 (1989), aff'd, 326 N.C. 360, 388 S.E.2d 768 (1990).

The two-dismissal rule applies only when the plaintiff has twice dismissed an action based on or including the same claim, and, as plaintiffs dismissed their first action only once, the two-dismissal rule did not apply; plaintiffs' voluntary dismissal of their own claim against one defendant did not constitute an adjudication on the merits pursuant to subdivision (a)(1) and plaintiffs were not barred from bringing action for crop damage. Hopkins v. Ciba-Geigy Corp., 111 N.C. App. 179, 432 S.E.2d 142 (1993).

As to the effect of 1969 amendment of subsection (a)(1) of this rule, see McCarley v. McCarley, 24 N.C. App. 373, 210 S.E.2d 531 (1975), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 289 N.C. 109, 221 S.E.2d 490 (1976).

A voluntary dismissal is effective whether or not a court has jurisdiction. Carter v. Clowers, 102 N.C. App. 247, 401 S.E.2d 662 (1991).

No Court Action Required. — Subsection (a)(1) of this rule clearly does not require court action, other than ministerial record-keeping functions, to effect a dismissal. Ward v. Taylor, 68 N.C. App. 74, 314 S.E.2d 814, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 769, 321 S.E.2d 157 (1984).

A notice of dismissal pursuant to subdivision (a)(1) of this section is an action taken by the plaintiff ending the suit, and no action of the court is necessary to give the notice its full effect. Carter v. Clowers, 102 N.C. App. 247, 401 S.E.2d 662 (1991).

Amendment Pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 60(b). — A voluntary dismissal under subsection (a)(1) of this rule can be amended pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 60(b). Newberry Metal Masters Fabricators, Inc. v. Mitek Indus., Inc., 333 N.C. 250, 424 S.E.2d 383 (1993).

Applicability of Section (a) to Defendant's Counterclaim. — Although the language of section (a) of this rule refers to plaintiffs, the rule applies with equal force to a defendant's counterclaim. Banner v. Banner, 86 N.C. App. 397, 358 S.E.2d 110, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 790, 361 S.E.2d 70 (1987), overruled on other grounds, Stachlowski v. Stach, 328 N.C. 276, 401 S.E.2d 638 (1991).

Voluntary Dismissal Lies Only Prior to Final Judgment. — A voluntary dismissal under this rule will lie only prior to entry of final judgment. After final judgment, any correction, modification, amendment, or setting aside can only be done by the court. Wood v. Wood, 37 N.C. App. 570, 246 S.E.2d 549 (1978), rev'd on other grounds, 297 N.C. 1, 252 S.E.2d 799 (1979); Banner v. Banner, 86 N.C. App. 397, 358 S.E.2d 110, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 790, 361 S.E.2d 70 (1987), overruled on other grounds, Stachlowski v. Stach, 328 N.C. 276, 401 S.E.2d 638 (1991).

Dismissal After Entry of Final Order Ineffective. — Purported voluntary dismissal of petition for attorney's fees was of no legal efficacy where it came after the clerk entered a final order on the petition. In re Estate of Tucci, 104 N.C. App. 142, 408 S.E.2d 859 (1991), cert. dismissed, 331 N.C. 748, 417 S.E.2d 236 (1992).

Under subsection (a) and existing case law, parties may not voluntarily dismiss a final custody and child support order. Massey v. Massey, 121 N.C. App. 263, 465 S.E.2d 313 (1996).

Order May Not Be Vacated by Stipulation. — Where an order of the trial court awarding plaintiff permanent custody and obligating defendant to pay permanent child support was rendered, nothing in this rule granted authority to the parties to vacate by stipulation the order previously entered in the action. Massey v. Massey, 121 N.C. App. 263, 465 S.E.2d 313 (1996).

Plaintiff May Not Dismiss If Defendant Has Asserted Grounds for Relief. — A plaintiff may not dismiss his action by filing a notice of dismissal if to do so would defeat the rights of a defendant who has theretofore asserted some ground for affirmative relief, even though the plaintiff acts before resting his case. McCarley v. McCarley, 24 N.C. App. 373, 210 S.E.2d 531 (1975), modified on other grounds, 289 N.C. 109, 221 S.E.2d 490 (1976).

Upon defendant's demand for affirmative relief, defendant's right to have his claim adjudicated in the case "has supervened," and plaintiff thereby loses the right to withdraw, without defendant's consent, allegations upon which defendant's claim is based. McCarley v. McCarley, 289 N.C. 109, 221 S.E.2d 490 (1976).

Where defendant sets up a claim for affirmative relief against plaintiffs arising out of the same transactions alleged by plaintiffs, plaintiffs cannot take a voluntary dismissal under this rule without the consent of defendant. Maurice v. Hatterasman Motel Corp., 38 N.C. App. 588, 248 S.E.2d 430 (1978).

As Where Defendant Asserts Counterclaim Arising Out of Same Transaction. — Defendant's assertion of a counterclaim arising out of the same transaction alleged in plaintiff's complaint could effectively deprive plaintiff not only of his ability to escape defendant's claim against him, but also of his right under this rule to dismiss his own claim. Layell v. Baker, 46 N.C. App. 1, 264 S.E.2d 406 (1980).

Where a counterclaim is filed which arises out of the same transaction alleged in the complaint, plaintiff thereby loses the right to withdraw allegations upon which defendant's claim is based by taking a voluntary nonsuit without defendant's consent. Swygert v. Swygert, 46 N.C. App. 173, 264 S.E.2d 902 (1980).

Having filed a counterclaim arising out of the same transaction alleged in plaintiff-husband's complaint, defendant thereby deprived plaintiff of his statutory right under this rule to take a voluntary dismissal without her consent. Gardner v. Gardner, 48 N.C. App. 38, 269 S.E.2d 630 (1980).

When Plaintiff May Voluntarily Dismiss Where Defendant Has Asserted Counterclaim. — Plaintiff may voluntarily dismiss his complaint when defendant asserts a counterclaim arising out of the same transaction alleged in the complaint and defendant's attorney simultaneously voluntarily dismisses the counterclaim. Gillikin v. Pierce, 98 N.C. App. 484, 391 S.E.2d 198, cert. denied, 327 N.C. 427, 395 S.E.2d 677 (1990).

Where plaintiff took a voluntary dismissal of its remaining 26 claims after plaintiff had been granted summary judgment on defendants' counterclaims and after their initial appeal had been dismissed as interlocutory, since plaintiff's claims were still pending at the time the trial court entered judgment on defendants' counterclaims and their appeal was dismissed as interlocutory, defendants' counterclaims were completely adjudicated at the time plaintiff took its voluntary dismissal; plaintiff was entitled to take a voluntary dismissal of their claims and refile them within one year of the voluntary dismissal without defendant's consent. Berkeley Fed. Sav. Bank v. Terra Del Sol, Inc., 119 N.C. App. 249, 457 S.E.2d 736 (1995), discretionary review improvidently allowed, 342 N.C. 639, 466 S.E.2d 276 (1996).

Voluntary Dismissal by Plaintiff After Denial of Summary Judgment by Defendant. — The trial court's denial of summary judgment became moot and was not appealable by the defendant doctor, where the medical malpractice plaintiffs voluntarily dismissed their fraud claim without prejudice after the trial court denied the defendant surgeon's motion for summary judgment. Teague v. Randolph Surgical Assocs., 129 N.C. App. 766, 501 S.E.2d 382 (1998).

Presumption That Attorney Acts for Client. — While subdivision (a)(1)(ii) of this rule requires the consent of the parties to the litigation, there is a presumption that an attorney has authority to act for his client and one challenging the attorney's actions as being unauthorized has the burden of rebutting the presumption. Gillikin v. Pierce, 98 N.C. App. 484, 391 S.E.2d 198, cert. denied, 327 N.C. 427, 395 S.E.2d 677 (1990).

Counterclaim in Divorce Suit as Claim for Affirmative Relief. — Where complaint in a suit for absolute divorce alleged facts entitling either or both of the parties to an absolute divorce, defendant's answer admitting these allegations, together with his prayer for an absolute divorce on the same grounds, was, in effect, a counterclaim seeking affirmative relief and arising out of the same transactions alleged in the complaint. McCarley v. McCarley, 289 N.C. 109, 221 S.E.2d 490 (1976).

Cross-Claim Seeking Contingent Indemnification Not Claim for Affirmative Relief. — Trial court properly allowed voluntary dismissal without prejudice by plaintiff where defendant's cross-claim was an action for indemnification contingent upon the plaintiff's recovery and thus was in no way affirmative relief. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Ryder Truck Rental, Inc., 34 N.C. App. 379, 238 S.E.2d 193 (1977).

Defendant's failure, prior to discharge of jury, to bring to court's attention pendency of counterclaim did not amount to implied consent to the voluntary dismissal by the plaintiff of his complaint. Layell v. Baker, 46 N.C. App. 1, 264 S.E.2d 406 (1980).

Effect on Counterclaim of Consent to Voluntary Dismissal. — Defendant's written "consent" to the voluntary dismissal of plaintiff's claim, which was expressly given "without prejudice to defendant's prosecution of her claim," at most removed the barrier which defendant's counterclaim otherwise presented to plaintiff's right under this rule to dismiss his own claim, but did not effect a dismissal of defendant's counterclaim, nor did it permit plaintiff simply to walk away from the litigation which he had himself begun. Layell v. Baker, 46 N.C. App. 1, 264 S.E.2d 406 (1980).

Voluntary Dismissal Substantially Same as Former Nonsuit. — A voluntary dismissal under the current Rules of Civil Procedure is substantially the same as a voluntary nonsuit under the former procedure. Collins v. Collins, 18 N.C. App. 45, 196 S.E.2d 282 (1973); Banner v. Banner, 86 N.C. App. 397, 358 S.E.2d 110, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 790, 361 S.E.2d 70 (1987), overruled on other grounds, Stachlowski v. Stach, 328 N.C. 276, 401 S.E.2d 638 (1991).

Common-Law Rule as to Time for Voluntary Dismissal Changed. — This State continued up until the present time to follow the common-law rule which permitted the plaintiff to take a nonsuit at any time before the verdict. But this rule of practice has been changed by the adoption of this rule, which provides that an action or any claim therein may be dismissed by the plaintiff without an order of court "by filing a notice of dismissal at any time before the plaintiff rests his case." Clemmons v. Life Ins. Co., 6 N.C. App. 708, 171 S.E.2d 87 (1969).

This rule had the effect of changing former practice only to the extent that the plaintiff desiring to take a voluntary nonsuit (now a voluntary dismissal) must now act before he rests his case, whereas under former practice he could do so at any time before the verdict. McCarley v. McCarley, 289 N.C. 109, 221 S.E.2d 490 (1976).

Subsection (a)(1) of this rule had the effect of changing this State's former practice with respect to voluntary nonsuits only to the extent that the plaintiff desiring to take a voluntary dismissal must now act before he rests his case. In other respects former practice was not expressly changed by the rule. Danielson v. Cummings, 43 N.C. App. 546, 259 S.E.2d 332 (1979), aff'd, 300 N.C. 175, 265 S.E.2d 161 (1980).

Major thrust of subsection (a)(1) of this rule is to limit the time within which plaintiff has an absolute right to dismiss his action without prejudice, which period is now any time before he rests his case. Whitehurst v. Virginia Dare Transp. Co., 19 N.C. App. 352, 198 S.E.2d 741 (1973).

Rule permits one voluntary dismissal, but the right must be exercised before plaintiff rests his case. Cutts v. Casey, 278 N.C. 390, 180 S.E.2d 297 (1971).

Voluntary Dismissal Without Prejudice After Resting Case No Longer a Matter of Right. — Under the new Rules of Civil Procedure a plaintiff can no longer take a voluntary nonsuit as a matter of right or secure a voluntary dismissal without prejudice after he has rested his case. Cutts v. Casey, 278 N.C. 390, 180 S.E.2d 297 (1971).

The clear meaning of section (a) of this rule is that a plaintiff may not bring an action which twice has been dismissed voluntarily; however, where the dismissal of plaintiff's first action was involuntary, section (a) does not apply. Jarman v. Washington, 93 N.C. App. 76, 376 S.E.2d 252 (1989).

When Plaintiff's Case Rested on Summary Judgment Hearing. — Where a party appears at a summary judgment hearing and produces evidence or is given an opportunity to produce evidence and fails to do so, and the question is submitted to the court for decision, he has "rested his case" within the meaning of subdivision (a)(1)(i) of this rule. He cannot thereafter take a voluntary dismissal under subdivision (a)(1)(i). Maurice v. Hatterasman Motel Corp., 38 N.C. App. 588, 248 S.E.2d 430 (1978).

For summary judgment motions, the record must show that plaintiff has been given the opportunity to introduce any evidence relating to the motion and to argue his position, and having done so and submitted the matter to the trial court for determination, plaintiff will then be deemed to have rested his case for the purpose of summary judgment and will be precluded from dismissing his case pursuant to this rule during the pendency of the summary judgment motion. Alston v. Duke Univ., — N.C. App. —, 514 S.E.2d 298 (1999).

Voluntary Dismissal Appropriate When Case Not Rested. — Plaintiff was entitled to take a voluntary dismissal of her medical malpractice action, where her counsel made every effort to have the trial court rule on her motion to amend the discovery scheduling order before hearing the defendant's motion for summary judgment, and immediately moved for dismissal without resting her case once the court denied her motion. Alston v. Duke Univ., — N.C. App. —, 514 S.E.2d 298 (1999).

Plaintiff cannot be made to choose which remedy he will pursue before he takes a voluntary dismissal. Caroon v. Eubank, 30 N.C. App. 244, 226 S.E.2d 691 (1976).

Plaintiff's voluntary dismissal of a prior action is a final termination of that action, and no valid order can be made thereafter in that cause. Collins v. Collins, 18 N.C. App. 45, 196 S.E.2d 282 (1973).

A voluntary dismissal under subsection (a)(1) of this rule terminates the action, and no suit is pending thereafter in which the court can make a valid order. Sutton v. Sutton, 18 N.C. App. 480, 197 S.E.2d 9 (1973); Caroon v. Eubank, 30 N.C. App. 244, 226 S.E.2d 691 (1976).

Where plaintiff takes a voluntary dismissal pursuant to subsection (a)(1) of this rule, no suit is pending thereafter on which the court can make a final order. Ward v. Taylor, 68 N.C. App. 74, 314 S.E.2d 814, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 769, 321 S.E.2d 157 (1984).

This rule provides that dismissal is without prejudice, unless otherwise stated, allowing plaintiff to commence a new action based on the same claim within one year. Carter v. Clowers, 102 N.C. App. 247, 401 S.E.2d 662 (1991).

Order Dismissing Case with Prejudice After Voluntary Dismissal Held Invalid. — Plaintiffs' dismissal was effective upon its announcement, and an order dismissing the case with prejudice, entered after plaintiffs' voluntary dismissal, was invalid and had no effect upon plaintiffs' rights. Lowe v. Bryant, 55 N.C. App. 608, 286 S.E.2d 652 (1982).

Where plaintiff's first voluntarily dismissed suit was based on defective process, his second action, filed after the statute of limitations applicable to the action had expired, was barred by the statute of limitations and the trial court properly entered summary judgment for defendant. Johnson v. City of Raleigh, 98 N.C. App. 147, 389 S.E.2d 849, cert. denied, 327 N.C. 140, 394 S.E.2d 176 (1990), rev'd on other grounds, 328 N.C. 689, 394 S.E.2d 469 (1991).

A voluntary dismissal of negligence action without prejudice did not toll the statute of limitations in a case in which the plaintiff, seeing the statute of limitations about to run, received an order extending the time for filing a complaint but failed to serve defendant with civil summons and the order. The defective service of process discontinued plaintiff's original action, and the trial court properly treated the voluntary dismissal as if it had never been filed and the statute of limitations as if it had not been tolled. Latham v. Cherry, 111 N.C. App. 871, 433 S.E.2d 478 (1993), cert. denied, 335 N.C. 556, 441 S.E.2d 116 (1994).

First Voluntary Dismissal Not Adjudication on Merits. — In an action instituted for temporary and permanent alimony, child custody and support and attorneys' fees, defendant was in no position to complain that the issues raised had been determined in a previous action in which plaintiff had taken a voluntary dismissal, since the first such dismissal was not an adjudication upon the merits. Collins v. Collins, 18 N.C. App. 45, 196 S.E.2d 282 (1973).

Second Voluntary Dismissal Barred Derivative Action. — Plaintiff's second voluntary dismissal against manager of restaurant operated to bar her derivative claims against restaurant itself. Graham v. Hardee's Food Sys., 121 N.C. App. 382, 465 S.E.2d 558 (1996).

Unless Otherwise Specified Voluntary Dismissal Without Prejudice, with One Exception. — Unless otherwise specified, a voluntary dismissal, whether by plaintiff's notice, by stipulation, or by order of the judge, is without prejudice, with one express exception, applicable only to a dismissal effected by plaintiff's notice: namely, that a notice of dismissal operates as an adjudication upon the merits when filed by a plaintiff who has once dismissed an action based on or including the same claim. Parrish v. Uzzell, 41 N.C. App. 479, 255 S.E.2d 219 (1979).

Where plaintiff obtained a voluntary dismissal of first action by electing to dismiss without prejudice and so informing the court, which then ordered the case dismissed without prejudice, and obtained a voluntary dismissal of a second action by making an oral motion to the court to be allowed to take a voluntary dismissal without prejudice, which motion was allowed by an order entered "in the Court's discretion and in the interest of justice," while each dismissal was obtained at plaintiff's instance, neither was effected by the plaintiff filing a notice of dismissal as authorized by subdivision (a)(1)(i) of this rule, to which alone the "second dismissal" rule applies, and therefore she was not barred from maintaining a further action based on the same claim. Parrish v. Uzzell, 41 N.C. App. 479, 255 S.E.2d 219 (1979).

"Second dismissal" rule does not make voluntary dismissals by stipulation or order of court "on the merits," even though preceded by a prior voluntary dismissal, although, of course, the stipulation itself or the order of the judge can provide that the dismissal is with prejudice, whether or not there has been a prior dismissal effected by the filing of a notice. Parrish v. Uzzell, 41 N.C. App. 479, 255 S.E.2d 219 (1979).

The "second dismissal" rule does not apply to make voluntary dismissals by stipulation or by order of court "on the merits," even when they follow a previously filed notice of voluntary dismissal. North Carolina R.R. v. Ferguson Bldrs. Supply, 103 N.C. App. 768, 407 S.E.2d 296 (1991).

Institution of New Claim Allowed Within One Year After Voluntary Dismissal Without Prejudice. — Under this rule, a voluntary dismissal without prejudice allows a new action on the same claim to be instituted within one year. Webb v. Nolan, 361 F. Supp. 418 (M.D.N.C. 1972), aff'd, 484 F.2d 1049 (4th Cir. 1973), appeal dismissed, 415 U.S. 903, 94 S. Ct. 1397, 39 L. Ed. 2d 461 (1974).

When a party properly takes a first voluntary dismissal of an action filed within the statute of limitations, that party then has one year to refile the same action, even though the refiling may be beyond the general statute of limitations. Georgia-Pacific Corp. v. Bondurant, 81 N.C. App. 362, 344 S.E.2d 302 (1986).

The one-year limitation period within which plaintiff might have renewed her claim under subdivision (a)(1) commenced on the date plaintiff's counsel stated in open court that he intended to file notice of voluntary dismissal and not five days later when voluntary dismissal was filed. Baker v. Becan, 123 N.C. App. 551, 473 S.E.2d 413 (1996).

Second Complaint Not Barred by Statute of Limitations. — Where there was no evidence of record that plaintiff's sole intent in filing the first complaint was to dismiss it in order to gain another year in which to file a "sufficient" complaint, plaintiff waited over two months to dismiss his original complaint and there was no judicial admission that plaintiff filed and dismissed his first complaint in bad faith, the "savings" provision of subdivision (a)(1) properly applied to plaintiff's complaint so that his second complaint was not barred by the statute of limitations. Hawkins v. State, 117 N.C. App. 615, 453 S.E.2d 233, cert. dismissed as improvidently granted, 342 N.C. 188, 463 S.E.2d 79 (1995).

Failure to Refer to Rule Inconsequential. — A voluntary dismissal taken by plaintiff in an earlier action without prejudice need not refer to this rule in order to gain the rule's benefit of a one year extension within which to file the same lawsuit. As this rule is the only procedural rule which addresses voluntary dismissals, no confusion as to the effect of the dismissal could possibly result from this omission. Bradley Freight Lines v. Pope, Flynn & Co., 42 N.C. App. 285, 256 S.E.2d 522, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 295, 259 S.E.2d 299 (1979).

Tolling Provisions of Former § 1-25 Incorporated into Section (a). — The tolling provisions of former § 1-25, under which plaintiff had the right to bring an unlimited series of actions based on the same claim provided that he brought each new action within one year of dismissal of the immediately preceding action, was incorporated into section (a) of this rule. Parrish v. Uzzell, 41 N.C. App. 479, 255 S.E.2d 219 (1979).

One-Year Provision Extends Rather Than Restricts Statute of Limitation. — When the General Assembly adopted the provisions of former § 1-25 into subsection (a)(1) of this rule, it adopted also that body of case law interpreting the former section, the effect being that the provision of subsection (a)(1) is an extension of time beyond the general statute of limitation rather than a restriction upon the general statute of limitation. Whitehurst v. Virginia Dare Transp. Co., 19 N.C. App. 352, 198 S.E.2d 741 (1973).

While a party always has the time limit prescribed by the general statute of limitation, and in addition thereto the one year provided in this rule, this rule may not be used to limit the time to one year if the general statute of limitation has not expired. Whitehurst v. Virginia Dare Transp. Co., 19 N.C. App. 352, 198 S.E.2d 741 (1973); Cieszko v. Clark, 92 N.C. App. 290, 374 S.E.2d 456 (1988).

But Party May Not Use Rule to Avoid Statute of Limitations. — This rule does not authorize a party to take a dismissal without prejudice of a previous action barred by the statute of limitations and then to refile the action in order to avoid the statute of limitations. Carl Rose & Sons Ready Mix Concrete, Inc. v. Thorp Sales Corp., 36 N.C. App. 778, 245 S.E.2d 234 (1978).

Voluntary Dismissal as Final Adjudication. — Once the one-year period for refiling an action has elapsed and the action can no longer be resurrected, the voluntary dismissal acts as a final adjudication for purposes of § 1A-1, Rule 60(b). Robinson v. General Mills Restaurants, Inc., 110 N.C. App. 633, 430 S.E.2d 696, cert. granted, 334 N.C. 623, 435 S.E.2d 340, 435 S.E.2d 341 (1993).

Complaint Filed Solely to Toll Statute May Not Be Voluntarily Dismissed Without Prejudice. — A plaintiff may not file a complaint within the time permitted by the statute of limitations for the sole purpose of tolling the statute of limitations, but with no intention of pursuing the prosecution of the action, then voluntarily dismiss the complaint and thereby gain an additional year pursuant to subsection (a)(1) of this rule. Estrada v. Burnham, 316 N.C. 318, 341 S.E.2d 538 (1986).

Nor May Pleading in Violation of § 1A-1, Rule 11(a). — Subsection (a)(1) of this rule and § 1A-1, 11(a) must be construed in pari materia to require that, in order for a timely filed complaint to toll the statute of limitations and provide the basis for a one-year "extension" by way of a voluntary dismissal without prejudice, the complaint must conform in all respects to the rules of pleading, including § 1A-1, Rule 11(a). A pleading filed in violation of § 1A-1, Rule 11(a) should be stricken as "sham and false" and may not be voluntarily dismissed without prejudice in order to give the pleader the benefit of the "saving" provision of subsection (a)(1) of this rule. Estrada v. Burnham, 316 N.C. 318, 341 S.E.2d 538 (1986).

Where an action was discontinued by operation of law under § 1A-1, Rule 4(e), the statute of limitations having thereafter immediately run its remaining course, the judge's subsequent order of voluntary dismissal allowing plaintiff another year within which to refile the action was nugatory. Long v. Fink, 80 N.C. App. 482, 342 S.E.2d 557 (1986).

Limitations Bar Not Avoided by Filing Federal Complaint. — A civil action is commenced in such a manner as to avoid a statute of limitations bar pursuant to this rule if, within the period of limitations prescribed, a plaintiff files "a complaint with the court"; hence, plaintiff's filing of a complaint in federal district court would be unavailing to prevent a statute of limitations bar in action brought in State court. Evans v. Chipps, 56 N.C. App. 232, 287 S.E.2d 426 (1982), overruled on other grounds, Fowler v. Valencourt, 334 N.C. 345, 432 S.E.2d 306 (1993).

When One-Year Period Begins to Run. — When a case has proceeded to trial and both parties are present in court, the one-year period in which a plaintiff is allowed to reinstitute a suit from subsection (a)(1) of this rule begins to run from the time of oral notice of voluntary dismissal given in open court. Danielson v. Cummings, 300 N.C. 175, 265 S.E.2d 161 (1980). But see Thompson v. Newman, 331 N.C. 709, 417 S.E.2d 224 (1992).

The one-year period for commencing another action after the taking of a voluntary dismissal began to run when plaintiff's counsel announced in open court the submission of a voluntary dismissal, the proceedings thereupon being stopped, and not when the written notice of dismissal was thereafter filed. Danielson v. Cummings, 43 N.C. App. 546, 259 S.E.2d 332 (1979), aff'd, 300 N.C. 175, 265 S.E.2d 161 (1980). But see Thompson v. Newman, 331 N.C. 709, 417 S.E.2d 224 (1992).

When a trial court instructs, or expressly permits, a plaintiff who has given oral notice of voluntary dismissal pursuant to subsection (a)(1) of this rule to file written notice to the same effect at a later date during the session of court at which oral notice was given, and plaintiff files written notice accordingly, the one-year period for refiling provided by the rule begins to run when written notice is filed. Thompson v. Newman, 331 N.C. 709, 417 S.E.2d 224 (1992).

Effect of Appeal by Defendant on One-Year Period. — Where plaintiff takes a voluntary dismissal under subsection (a)(2) of this rule and defendant appeals from that dismissal, plaintiff's one-year period to reinstitute his claim does not run from the taking of the dismissal in the trial court, but instead runs from the date of final appellate action. West v. G.D. Reddick, Inc., 302 N.C. 201, 274 S.E.2d 221 (1981).

Fraud Claim Not Exempt from Limitation of § 1-52. — Though a claim of fraud rested upon somewhat the same allegations that were made in support of a negligent misrepresentation claim when action was first filed, where the plaintiffs did not in effect or otherwise also allege that the defendants had defrauded them, this rule did not exempt the fraud claim from the fatal effects of the limitations period under § 1-52. Stanford v. Owens, 76 N.C. App. 284, 332 S.E.2d 730, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 670, 336 S.E.2d 402 (1985).

Adequacy of Oral Notice of Dismissal. — Clearly, when parties confront each other face-to-face in a properly convened session of court where a written record is kept of all proceedings, there is no necessity to file a paper writing in order to take notice of a voluntary dismissal. In such a case, oral notice of dismissal is clearly adequate, and fully satisfies the "filing" requirements of subdivision (a)(1)(i) of this rule. Danielson v. Cummings, 300 N.C. 175, 265 S.E.2d 161 (1980).

While section (a) of this rule requires "filing a notice of dismissal," such notice may also be given orally in open court. Banner v. Banner, 86 N.C. App. 397, 358 S.E.2d 110, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 790, 361 S.E.2d 70 (1987), overruled on other grounds, Stachlowski v. Stach, 328 N.C. 276, 401 S.E.2d 638 (1991).

Oral notice of a voluntary dismissal is effective and satisfies the requirements of this Rule. Gilliam v. First Union Nat'l Bank, 125 N.C. App. 416, 481 S.E.2d 334 (1997).

Attempt at Voluntary Dismissal Ineffectual Where Summons Never Served. — Where plaintiff's prior wrongful death action against defendants was discontinued when the original summons was never served on defendants and no alias or pluries summons was issued or endorsement made within the time specified in § 1A-1, Rule 4(d), plaintiff's attempt to dismiss her prior action voluntarily pursuant to subsection (a)(1) of this rule was ineffectual to bring the provisions of this rule into play. Wheeler v. Roberts, 45 N.C. App. 311, 262 S.E.2d 829 (1980).

The purpose of subsection (a)(2) of this rule is to permit a superior court judge in the exercise of his discretion to dismiss an action without prejudice if in his opinion an adverse judgment with prejudice would defeat justice. King v. Lee, 279 N.C. 100, 181 S.E.2d 400 (1971).

Under subsection (a)(2) of this rule, at the instance of the plaintiff, the court may permit a voluntary dismissal upon such terms and conditions as justice requires. King v. Lee, 279 N.C. 100, 181 S.E.2d 400 (1971).

Discretion of Trial Court Under Subsection (a)(2). — Whether an order granting voluntary dismissal under subsection (a)(2) of this rule should be entered is a matter of trial court discretion. West v. G.D. Reddick, Inc., 38 N.C. App. 370, 248 S.E.2d 112 (1978).

A dismissal under subsection (a)(2) of this rule is granted or denied solely within the discretion of the trial judge, and may be conditionally granted or granted upon such terms as justice requires. Lewis v. Piggott, 16 N.C. App. 395, 192 S.E.2d 128 (1972).

A dismissal without prejudice is permissible under subsection (a)(2) of this rule only when so ordered by the court, in the exercise of its judicial discretion, upon finding that justice so requires. King v. Lee, 279 N.C. 100, 181 S.E.2d 400 (1971).

Dismissals entered pursuant to subsection (a)(2) of this rule are within the discretion of the trial court, which may, in the further exercise of its discretion, dismiss with or without prejudice. Smith v. Williams, 82 N.C. App. 672, 347 S.E.2d 842 (1986).

Consent of Counterclaiming Defendant Not Required Under Subsection (a)(2). — Contrary to the practice under subsection (a)(1) of this rule, and contrary to the language and practice under Federal Rule 41(a)(2), the consent of a counterclaiming defendant is not required for dismissals entered pursuant to subsection (a)(2) of this rule to be without prejudice. Smith v. Williams, 82 N.C. App. 672, 347 S.E.2d 842 (1986).

No Time Limit on Motion Under Subsection (a)(2). — This rule places no time limit on the right of a plaintiff to move for a voluntary dismissal under subsection (a)(2) of this rule. West v. G.D. Reddick, Inc., 38 N.C. App. 370, 248 S.E.2d 112 (1978).

Voluntary Dismissal After Defendant Moves for Directed Verdict. — Prior to granting the motion of the answering defendants for a directed verdict against plaintiffs and the entry of a judgment adverse to plaintiffs, plaintiffs are entitled to move, if so advised, that an order be entered providing for a voluntary dismissal upon such terms and conditions as justice requires. Whether such order should be entered will be addressed to the discretion of the superior court judge. King v. Lee, 279 N.C. 100, 181 S.E.2d 400 (1971).

When a defendant's motion for a directed verdict under § 1A-1, Rule 50(a) is granted, the defendant is entitled to judgment unless the court permits a voluntary dismissal of the action under subsection (a)(2) of this rule. Kelly v. International Harvester Co., 278 N.C. 153, 179 S.E.2d 396 (1971); Cutts v. Casey, 278 N.C. 390, 180 S.E.2d 297 (1971).

Motion Under § 1A-1, Rule 12(f) Not Proper to Challenge Notice of Dismissal Without Prejudice. — A motion to strike "any insufficient defense or any redundant, irrelevant, immaterial, impertinent or scandalous matter" under § 1A-1, Rule 12(f) is not the proper motion by which to challenge a notice of dismissal without prejudice. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Ryder Truck Rental, Inc., 34 N.C. App. 379, 238 S.E.2d 193 (1977).

Federal Rule Does Not Supplant State Rule. — Federal Rule 41 does not purport to control the application of a state statute of limitations, and does not supplant state rule that is an integral part of the state's one-year savings statute. Thus, in a diversity action, plaintiff's complaint was properly dismissed where it was filed approximately one year and four months after leave was sought in open court to dismiss his original complaint, since one-year savings period starts to run when the plaintiff, prior to resting his case, announces in open court that he will seek a voluntary dismissal. Shuford v. K.K. Kawamura Cycle Co., 649 F.2d 261 (4th Cir. 1981).

As to adoption of one-year tolling provision in federal diversity action, see Haislip v. Riggs, 534 F. Supp. 95 (W.D.N.C. 1981).

Application of Standards Governing Dismissals Under Subsection (a)(2) to Mistrials. — The standards governing the granting of dismissals under subsection (a)(2) of this rule should also be applied in ascertaining whether a judge was warranted in declaring a mistrial "to further the ends of justice." Thompson v. Town & Country Constr. Co., 39 N.C. App. 240, 249 S.E.2d 810 (1978).

Plaintiff Held Entitled to Dismissal as No Longer a Real Party in Interest. — Where plaintiff sued a class of defendants pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 23, but thereafter lost her status as a real party in interest by conveying the property that was the subject of the suit and filed a notice of voluntary dismissal under section (a) of this rule, upon which the new owners were joined as plaintiffs, the trial judge should have dismissed the original plaintiff as no longer a real party in interest on that ground alone. Crowell v. Chapman, 306 N.C. 540, 293 S.E.2d 767 (1982).

Plaintiff Deemed Not to Have Rested in Summary Judgment Hearing. — Although the record reflected that plaintiffs submitted affidavits prior to the hearing as evidence in opposition to a summary judgment motion, where the trial court heard argument of counsel for the defendants and plaintiffs' attorney orally took a voluntary dismissal, without receiving an opportunity to present additional evidence or argue his clients' position, plaintiffs had not rested their case and the timing of plaintiffs' motion for a voluntary dismissal was proper under this rule. Wesley v. Bland, 92 N.C. App. 513, 374 S.E.2d 475 (1988).

Appeal De Novo from Magistrate's Judgment. — Subsection (a)(1) of this rule is available in actions in the district court on appeal de novo from a magistrate's judgment. First Union Nat'l Bank v. Richards, 90 N.C. App. 650, 369 S.E.2d 620 (1988).

Subsection (a)(1) Not Subject to Provisions of § 7A-228. — The requirements of § 7A-228 are not inconsistent with those of subsection (a)(1) of this rule. Section 7A-228 sets forth the right to appeal for trial de novo in district court and the procedures to perfect the appeal. Subsection (a)(1) of this rule sets forth the right to a voluntary dismissal and the procedures to effect the dismissal. Section 7A-228 does not address the same phase of the action as subsection (a)(1) of this rule; the rule is therefore not "subject to" the provisions of the statute. First Union Nat'l Bank v. Richards, 90 N.C. App. 650, 369 S.E.2d 620 (1988).

Sections 7A-225 and 7A-226 Do Not Address Effect of Voluntary Dismissal. — Sections 7A-225 and 7A-226 merely establish priority of liens; the statutes do not address the effect of a voluntary dismissal in the district court. Subsection (a)(1) of this rule allows plaintiff to voluntarily dismiss the action without prejudice and §§ 7A-225 and 7A-226 do not alter this right. First Union Nat'l Bank v. Richards, 90 N.C. App. 650, 369 S.E.2d 620 (1988).

Res Judicata Inapplicable to Voluntary Dismissal of Appeal from Magistrate's Judgment. — Magistrate's judgment did not become a final judgment where, after the magistrate's judgment was entered, plaintiff exercised its right to appeal for trial de novo in the district court pursuant to § 7A-228(a), and then took a voluntary dismissal of the action pursuant to section (a) of this rule. Therefore the doctrine of res judicata did not apply. First Union Nat'l Bank v. Richards, 90 N.C. App. 650, 369 S.E.2d 620 (1988).

A stipulation of dismissal does not trigger the two dismissal rule; only a unilateral dismissal by plaintiff has this effect. Thus where defendant could have declined to enter into stipulation, thereby requiring plaintiff to conclude the matter in the first State action or take another voluntary dismissal, which, with regard to 42 U.S.C. § 1983 claim, would indisputably have been the second, but consented to the dismissal of some of these claims without prejudice, it would be inequitable to interpret the two dismissal rule in a fashion that would bar their refiling. Kuhn v. Williamson, 122 F.R.D. 192 (E.D.N.C. 1988).

Application of Two Dismissal Rule in Federal Actions. — North Carolina courts would likely treat causes of action based on 42 U.S.C. § 1983 and negligence as separate claims, arising as they do under different bodies of law and calling for different elements of proof, and would not apply this rule to bar plaintiff from proceeding with his action. Kuhn v. Williamson, 122 F.R.D. 192 (E.D.N.C. 1988).

Where federal pro se action was dismissed on the same day that an agent for defendants was served with complaint, it was likely that the case ended before defendant knew of its existence, and in reality, defendant had faced only two lawsuits, the first State action and this one; since the two dismissal rule is in derogation of previously existing right, and thus is to be strictly construed, dismissal of the action would be inappropriate. Kuhn v. Williamson, 122 F.R.D. 192 (E.D.N.C. 1988).

Applicability of Tolling Provision to Voluntary Dismissal in Federal Court. — Unlike former § 1-25, section (a)(1) of this rule specifically holds that the savings provision applies when voluntary dismissal was granted "under this subsection." Thus a statute of limitations will be tolled when voluntary dismissal is granted pursuant to this rule, regardless of whether or not the dismissal is granted in a State court. Bockweg v. Anderson, 96 N.C. App. 660, 387 S.E.2d 59, cert. denied, 326 N.C. 481, 392 S.E.2d 86 (1990).

As the Fourth Circuit has stated that voluntary dismissal of a federal diversity action arising out of North Carolina will be granted pursuant to this rule because the one-year tolling provision confers a "substantive right" where there is "no countervailing federal interest," dismissal by federal district court would be deemed to have been granted under section (a) of this rule so as to trigger the one-year savings provision of section (a) for the purposes of refiling in State court. Bockweg v. Anderson, 96 N.C. App. 660, 387 S.E.2d 59, cert. denied, 326 N.C. 481, 392 S.E.2d 86 (1990).

Refiling in Federal Court as Tolling of Limitations Period. — Plaintiff's claims for medical malpractice were not barred by the three-year statute of limitations of § 1-15(c), since the refiling of the original State court action in a federal district court invoked the "savings" provision of subsection (a)(1) of this rule, and thereby tolled the limitations period. Porter v. Groat, 713 F. Supp. 893 (M.D.N.C. 1989).

Effect of Voluntary Dismissal of Torrens Proceeding. — Effect of plaintiffs' voluntary dismissal of Torrens proceeding was to toll the limitations period on defendants' adverse claim to the disputed property for the subsequent 12 months; when plaintiffs failed to bring a new action within that period, however, the limitations period continued to run from the point at which it had been tolled. Willis v. Mann, 96 N.C. App. 450, 386 S.E.2d 68 (1989), cert. denied, 326 N.C. 367, 389 S.E.2d 820 (1990).

Later Action to Be Considered Without Reference to Disposition of Prior Action. — Where plaintiff was granted a voluntary dismissal without prejudice to his original action, and then refiled his claim within the one-year time limit established by the statute, such refiling began his case anew for all purposes and was properly considered on its merits without reference to the disposition of the prior action; therefore, judge's ruling in the prior action did not foreclose judge in second proceeding from considering defendant's summary judgment motion in new action. Tompkins v. Log Sys., 96 N.C. App. 333, 385 S.E.2d 545 (1989), cert. denied, 326 N.C. 366, 389 S.E.2d 819 (1990).

Administrative Adjustment of Claims. — Once the conditions of § 136-29(a) (administrative adjustment of claims) were satisfied by the claimant filing its claim within six months of an adverse ruling by the state highway administrator, the trial court was vested with jurisdiction and the claimant was allowed, as a matter of right under subsection (a)(1) of this rule, to take a voluntary dismissal and refile its claim within one year. C.W. Matthews Contracting Co. v. State, 75 N.C. App. 317, 330 S.E.2d 630 (1985).

Defendant Not Granted Voluntary Dismissal Absent Counterclaim. — There is no rule, statute, or case which grants a defendant the right to take a voluntary dismissal, whether with or without prejudice, unless the party defendant taking the dismissal has a pleading which contains a counterclaim, crossclaim, or third-party claim. DOT v. Combs, 71 N.C. App. 372, 322 S.E.2d 602 (1984).

Lien May Not Be Cancelled. — In light of the requirement of § 44A-16(4) that a judgment must be filed to discharge a lien, a lien may not be cancelled by taking a voluntary dismissal without prejudice. Newberry Metal Masters Fabricators, Inc. v. Mitek Indus., Inc., 333 N.C. 250, 424 S.E.2d 383 (1993).

A party may refile an action to perfect a lien after taking a voluntary dismissal without prejudice pursuant to subsection (a)(1) of this rule. Newberry Metal Masters Fabricators, Inc. v. Mitek Indus., Inc., 333 N.C. 250, 424 S.E.2d 383 (1993).

Equitable Distribution Claim. — Where defendant sets up a claim for affirmative relief against a plaintiff arising out of the same transactions alleged by the plaintiff, plaintiff cannot take a voluntary dismissal without the consent of the defendant; however, plaintiff's original claim may be barred by law if the court finds that separation agreements fully disposed of the parties' rights arising out of the marriage, and thus bar an equitable distribution claim. Rabon v. Rabon, 102 N.C. App. 452, 402 S.E.2d 461 (1991).

Trial court did not have authority to reaffirm divorce decree and reserve for future resolution the issue of equitable distribution; since the trial court did not set aside the divorce but rather attempted to nullify the consequences of defendant's failure to assert her claim for equitable distribution prior to the entry of judgment of divorce, the order failed; even if the court effectively set aside, briefly, the divorce decree itself and then immediately reinstated the divorce decree with a reservation of an equitable distribution claim, the reservation of the equitable distribution claim would be a legal nullity because plaintiff voluntarily dismissed his equitable distribution claim and defendant did not, during the time the divorce was arguably set aside, file an answer, counterclaim or separate action requesting equitable distribution. Carter v. Carter, 102 N.C. App. 440, 402 S.E.2d 469 (1991).

Where at the time the plaintiff filed his voluntary dismissal of his claim for equitable distribution, the defendant had filed no pleadings, plaintiff was free to enter his voluntary dismissal of his equitable distribution claim without any notice to the defendant or the defendant's consent. Carter v. Carter, 102 N.C. App. 440, 402 S.E.2d 469 (1991).

Attorneys' Fees. — Where the plaintiffs filed a voluntary dismissal with prejudice pursuant to this rule, the trial court was not deprived of jurisdiction to determine the appropriateness of attorney fees under § 1A-1, Rule 11 or § 6-21.5. Bryson v. Sullivan, 102 N.C. App. 1, 401 S.E.2d 645 (1991), modified on other grounds, 330 N.C. 644, 412 S.E.2d 327 (1992).

Collateral Issues. — Attorneys' fee requests under § 1A-1, Rule 11 raise collateral issues which often require consideration by the trial court after the action has been terminated, and a voluntary dismissal under this rule does not deprive the trial court of jurisdiction to determine these collateral issues. Higgins v. Patton, 102 N.C. App. 301, 401 S.E.2d 854 (1991), overruled on other grounds, Bryson v. Sullivan, 330 N.C. 644, 412 S.E.2d 327 (1992).

Attorneys' fee requests under § 1A-1, Rule 11 and § 6-21.5 raise collateral issues which often require consideration by the trial court after the action has been terminated, and a voluntary dismissal under this rule does not deprive the trial court of jurisdiction to determine these collateral issues. To hold otherwise would allow a litigant or attorney to "purge his violation of § 1A-1, Rule 11 or § 6-211.5 merely by taking a dismissal, and thereby lose all incentive to stop, think and investigate more carefully before serving and filing papers." Bryson v. Sullivan, 102 N.C. App. 1, 401 S.E.2d 645 (1991), modified on other grounds, 330 N.C. 644, 412 S.E.2d 327 (1992).

A voluntary dismissal pursuant to subsection (a) does not deprive the court of jurisdiction to consider collateral issues such as sanctions that require consideration after the action has been terminated. Renner v. Hawk, 125 N.C. App. 483, 481 S.E.2d 370 (1997), cert. denied, 346 N.C. 283, 487 S.E.2d 553 (1997).

Rescission Offer. — Judgment that simply made the bare conclusion that an investment firm tendered a "valid" rescission offer and that, therefore, the investor was barred from bringing suit under the provisions of subdivision (g)(1) of § 78A-56 did not rise to the level of separate findings of fact and conclusions of law; the judgment, therefore, did not comport with the requirements of this rule and § 1A-1, Rule 52(a). Mashburn v. First Investors Corp., 102 N.C. App. 560, 402 S.E.2d 860 (1991).

Court Costs. — Where plaintiff takes a voluntary dismissal pursuant to this rule, no suit is pending thereafter on which the court could make a final order. However, the trial court retains authority to apportion and tax court costs. Bryson v. Sullivan, 102 N.C. App. 1, 401 S.E.2d 645 (1991), modified on other grounds, 330 N.C. 644, 412 S.E.2d 327 (1992).

Sanctions Following Dismissal. — Absent a rule to the contrary, sanctions motions may appropriately be filed after a voluntary dismissal. Renner v. Hawk, 125 N.C. App. 483, 481 S.E.2d 370 (1997), cert. denied, 346 N.C. 283, 487 S.E.2d 553 (1997).

Savings Provision. — The one-year savings provision of subdivision (a)(1) of this rule applies when plaintiffs and defendants stipulate to a voluntary dismissal without prejudice of an action in a federal district court sitting in North Carolina and plaintiffs file the same action within the one-year period in a North Carolina state court. Bockweg v. Anderson, 328 N.C. 436, 402 S.E.2d 627 (1991).

Where plaintiff took a voluntary dismissal and re-filed his personal injury claim within the time permitted by subsection (a), his spouse had the right to join with it her derivative cause of action for loss of consortium. Sloan v. Miller Bldg. Corp., 128 N.C. App. 37, 493 S.E.2d 460 (1997).

Dismissal Not Allowed. — Where plaintiff attempted to dismiss her counterclaim, in action which sought enforcement of the parties' separation agreement after defendant had replied and sought affirmative relief arising out of the same transaction, plaintiff's counterclaim could not be dismissed because plaintiff had not moved to strike parts of defendants reply in 10 years. Lafferty v. Lafferty, 125 N.C. App. 611, 481 S.E.2d 401 (1997), cert. denied, 346 N.C. 280, 487 S.E.2d 549 (1997).

III. INVOLUNTARY DISMISSAL.

A. In General.

Section (b) of this section is identical to the federal rule. Joyner v. Thomas, 40 N.C. App. 63, 251 S.E.2d 906 (1979); Daniels v. Montgomery Mut. Ins. Co., 81 N.C. App. 600, 344 S.E.2d 847 (1986), rev'd in part, aff'd in part, 320 N.C. 669, 360 S.E.2d 772 (1987).

The Savings Provision. — The section (b) language by which the judge may, in his discretion, grant plaintiff an additional one year or less to refile is often referred to as the "savings provision" of Rule 41(b). 84 Lumber Co. v. Barkley, 120 N.C. App. 271, 461 S.E.2d 780 (1995).

Generally, if a plaintiff wishes to take advantage of the savings provision under section (b) it is plaintiff's responsibility to convince the court to include in the order or opinion a statement specifying that plaintiff had additional time to refile. 84 Lumber Co. v. Barkley, 120 N.C. App. 271, 461 S.E.2d 780 (1995).

Section 1A-1, Rule 4(e) and section (b) of this rule are not in conflict, and both can be given effect. Gower v. Aetna Ins. Co., 13 N.C. App. 368, 185 S.E.2d 722, aff'd, 281 N.C. 577, 189 S.E.2d 165 (1972).

Discontinuance under § 1A-1, Rule 4(e) is not analagous to a dismissal under section (b) of this rule. Central Sys. v. General Heating & Air Conditioning Co., 48 N.C. App. 198, 268 S.E.2d 822, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 400, 273 S.E.2d 445 (1980).

The fact that an action was discontinued under § 1A-1, Rule 4(e) for failure to serve defendant with summons within the time allowed after plaintiff had taken a voluntary dismissal under this rule did not bar plaintiff from bringing another action for the same cause. Central Sys. v. General Heating & Air Conditioning Co., 48 N.C. App. 198, 268 S.E.2d 822, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 400, 273 S.E.2d 445 (1980).

Section 1A-1, Rule 50 has no application to trials before the judge without a jury. In actions tried before the judge without a jury a motion to dismiss is made pursuant to section (b) of this rule. Crump v. Coffey, 59 N.C. App. 553, 297 S.E.2d 131 (1982).

Section (b) of this rule means that the court may not dismiss an action ex mero motu for failure to prosecute. Simmons v. Tuttle, 70 N.C. App. 101, 318 S.E.2d 847 (1984).

Involuntary Dismissal May Be Used to Sanction Disobedient Parties. — The power to sanction disobedient parties, even to the point of dismissing their actions or striking their defenses, did not originate with this rule. It is longstanding and inherent. For courts to function properly, it could not be otherwise.

Minor v. Minor, 62 N.C. App. 750, 303 S.E.2d 397 (1983).

Under subsection (b) of this rule, a trial court may enter sanctions for failure to prosecute only where the plaintiff or his attorney "manifests and intention to thwart the progress of the action to its conclusion" or "fails to progress the action towards its conclusion" by engaging in some delaying tactic. Whether a plaintiff or his attorney has manifested an intent to thwart the progress of an action or has engaged in some delaying tactic may be inferred from the facts surrounding the delay in the prosecution of the case. The sanctions may be entered against either the represented party or the attorney, even when the attorney is solely responsible for the delay or violation. Foy v. Hunter, 106 N.C. App. 614, 418 S.E.2d 299 (1992).

As to use of power of dismissal as sanction for violation of provision of § 1A-1, Rule 8(a)(2) as to pleading of malpractice damages, see Schell v. Coleman, 65 N.C. App. 91, 308 S.E.2d 662 (1983), appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 311 N.C. 763, 321 S.E.2d 145 (1984).

Although a dismissal with prejudice pursuant to subsection (b) is available as a sanction for a violation of subdivision (a)(2), it is not the only available sanction and should be imposed only where the trial court determines that less drastic sanctions are insufficient. McLean v. Mechanic, 116 N.C. App. 271, 447 S.E.2d 459 (1994), review denied, 339 N.C. 738, 454 S.E.2d 654, cert. denied, 339 N.C. 738, 454 S.E.2d 653 (1995).

Function of Judge. — Since the court will determine the facts anyway, the function of the judge on a motion to dismiss under subsection (b) of this rule is to evaluate the evidence without any limitations as to inferences in favor of the plaintiff. Holthusen v. Holthusen, 79 N.C. App. 618, 339 S.E.2d 823 (1986); C.F.R. Foods, Inc. v. Randolph Dev. Co., 107 N.C. App. 584, 421 S.E.2d 386, cert. denied,.

When a motion to dismiss pursuant to section (b) of this rule is made, the judge becomes both judge and jury, and he must consider and weigh all competent evidence before him. Progressive Sales, Inc. v. Williams, Willeford, Boger, Grady & Davis, 86 N.C. App. 51, 356 S.E.2d 372 (1987); C.F.R. Foods, Inc. v. Randolph Dev. Co., 107 N.C. App. 584, 421 S.E.2d 386, cert. denied,.

Discretion of Court. — Dismissal under section (b) of this rule is left to the sound discretion of the trial court. Smith v. Quinn, 91 N.C. App. 112, 370 S.E.2d 438 (1988), rev'd on other grounds, 324 N.C. 316, 378 S.E.2d 28 (1989).

Section (b) of this rule provides the basis for concluding that dismissal under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6) is an adjudication on the merits; therefore, dismissal under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6) bars subsequent relitigation of the same claim. Cline v. Teich, 92 N.C. App. 257, 374 S.E.2d 462 (1988).

There is no exception under section (b) of this rule for filing beyond the limitations period for a plaintiff whose prior action was dismissed by an order and judgment which did not specify that a subsequent action could be commenced within one year. Burgess v. Equilink Corp., 652 F. Supp. 1422 (W.D.N.C.), aff'd, 828 F.2d 17 (4th Cir. 1987).

Where the first dismissal order did not specify additional time within which a second action could be commenced, the dismissal under section (b) of this rule did not extend any applicable statute of limitation. Jarman v. Washington, 93 N.C. App. 76, 376 S.E.2d 252 (1989).

The savings provision of subsection (b) did not apply to allow plaintiff an additional year to file in state court when the federal court order dismissing his action did not specify additional time within which to file. Clark v. Velsicol Chem. Corp., 110 N.C. App. 803, 431 S.E.2d 227, cert. granted, 334 N.C. 687, 436 S.E.2d 371 (1993), aff'd per curiam, 336 N.C. 599, 444 S.E.2d 223 (1994).

Dismissals Are Generally with Prejudice Absent Order of Trial Court. — With certain exceptions, section (b) of this rule provides that all dismissals, including those under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6), operate as an adjudication upon the merits unless the trial court specifies that the dismissal is without prejudice. Johnson v. Bollinger, 86 N.C. App. 1, 356 S.E.2d 378 (1987).

Burden of Moving for Dismissal Without Prejudice. — Since a dismissal order operates as an adjudication on the merits unless the order specifically states the contrary, the party whose claim is being dismissed has the burden to convince the court that he deserves a second chance; thus, that party should move the trial court that the dismissal be without prejudice. Johnson v. Bollinger, 86 N.C. App. 1, 356 S.E.2d 378 (1987).

When Involuntary Dismissal Under Section (b) Is Without Prejudice. — Ordinarily, an involuntary dismissal under section (b) of this rule operates as an adjudication upon the merits and ends the lawsuit. However, the rule sets forth specific exceptions to this proposition, and as to these grounds, an order of involuntary dismissal is not rendered on the merits and may not constitute a dismissal with prejudice. Whedon v. Whedon, 313 N.C. 200, 328 S.E.2d 437 (1985).

Dismissal with prejudice under section (b) of this rule cannot be premised on party's failure to comply with erroneous order. In re Will of Parker, 76 N.C. App. 594, 334 S.E.2d 97, cert. denied, 315 N.C. 185, 337 S.E.2d 859 (1985).

Motion to Dismiss Provides Procedure to Render Judgment Against Plaintiff. — A motion for dismissal pursuant to this rule, made at the close of plaintiff's evidence in a non-jury trial, not only tests the sufficiency of plaintiff's proof to show a right to relief, but also provides a procedure whereby the judge may weigh the evidence, determine the facts, and render judgment on the merits against the plaintiff, even though the plaintiff may have made out a prima facie case. McKnight v. Cagle, 76 N.C. App. 59, 331 S.E.2d 707, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 541, 335 S.E.2d 20 (1985).

Dismissal as to One of Several Necessary Defendants Held Error. — Where questions of law and fact were raised by the complaint which were common to all of the named defendants, and a justiciable controversy was asserted between the parties, and the complaint alleged that one of the defendants was a permissive and necessary party in the action, the trial judge committed error in allowing the motion of that defendant to dismiss the action as to her under section (b) of this rule. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Carr, 10 N.C. App. 610, 179 S.E.2d 838, rev'd on other grounds, 279 N.C. 539, 184 S.E.2d 268 (1971).

The words "with prejudice" are plain and should be given their plain meaning. Barnes v. McGee, 21 N.C. App. 287, 204 S.E.2d 203 (1974).

A dismissal "with prejudice" is the converse of a dismissal "without prejudice" and indicates a disposition on the merits. Barnes v. McGee, 21 N.C. App. 287, 204 S.E.2d 203 (1974).

Dismissal with Prejudice Is Subject to Usual Rules of Res Judicata. — Dismissal with prejudice, unless the court has made some other provision, is subject to the usual rules of res judicata and is effective not only on the immediate parties but also on their privies. Barnes v. McGee, 21 N.C. App. 287, 204 S.E.2d 203 (1974).

Dismissal with prejudice pursuant to a motion under section (b) of this rule is a judgment on the merits, subject to the usual rules of res judicata. Progressive Sales, Inc. v. Williams, Willeford, Boger, Grady & Davis, 86 N.C. App. 51, 356 S.E.2d 372 (1987).

A dismissal with prejudice precludes subsequent litigation to the same extent as if the action had been prosecuted to a final adjudication adverse to the plaintiff. Barnes v. McGee, 21 N.C. App. 287, 204 S.E.2d 203 (1974).

Dismissal of plaintiff's claim against defendant employee "with prejudice" barred further prosecution of that claim against the employee and, insofar as he was concerned, was equivalent to a judgment on the merits in his favor; the dismissal would have the same result for the employer whose liability, if any, was derived solely from that of the employee. Barnes v. McGee, 21 N.C. App. 287, 204 S.E.2d 203 (1974).

Where order of the federal district court dismissed plaintiff's action primarily for the failure of his federal question claims, and did not elaborate on his State law claims, and plaintiff, although he had ample opportunity to seek an amendment of the order to specify that the dismissal of the State law claims was without prejudice and that a new action based on those claims could be brought within one year pursuant to section (b) of this rule, did not properly seek amendment of the order to comply with the criterion of section (b) of this rule, his failure to do so took his claims out of the saving clause thereof, so that his State claims were time-barred by the applicable statutes of limitations. Burgess v. Equilink Corp., 652 F. Supp. 1422 (W.D.N.C.), aff'd, 828 F.2d 17 (4th Cir. 1987).

Judge May Consider Motion at Conclusion of Plaintiff's Evidence. — The trial judge may weigh the evidence, find the facts and sustain defendant's motion under section (b) of this rule at the conclusion of plaintiff's evidence even though plaintiff has made out a prima facie case which would have precluded a directed verdict for defendant in a jury trial. Childers v. Hayes, 77 N.C. App. 792, 336 S.E.2d 146 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 375, 342 S.E.2d 892 (1986).

Motion at Close of All Evidence. — Where the court sits as finder of fact, if it allows a motion under section (b) of this rule it must find facts just as it would in entering judgment without allowing the motion. There is therefore little point in making such a motion at the close of all the evidence. Concrete Serv. Corp. v. Investors Group, Inc., 79 N.C. App. 678, 340 S.E.2d 755, cert. denied, 317 N.C. 333, 346 S.E.2d 137 (1986).

Motion to Dismiss Improper. — In a jury trial the defendant's motion to dismiss was improper, as was the court's granting of the motion. Beam v. Kerlee, 120 N.C. App. 203, 461 S.E.2d 911 (1995).

Dismissal at Close of Evidence. — Section (b) of this rule does not specifically provide for involuntary dismissal at the close of all the evidence. However, where such a motion is made and ruled upon and the court has made findings as required by § 1A-1, Rule 52, the judgment entered will be treated as a judgment on the merits. African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church v. Union Chapel A.M.E. Zion Church, 64 N.C. App. 391, 308 S.E.2d 73 (1983), cert. denied, 310 N.C. 308, 312 S.E.2d 649 (1984).

Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law. — As a fact-finder, the trial judge, in ruling on a motion for involuntary dismissal, must find the facts on all issues raised by the pleadings, and state his conclusions of law based thereon, in order that appellate court may determine from the record the basis of his decision. The findings of fact are conclusive on appeal if supported by competent evidence. McKnight v. Cagle, 76 N.C. App. 59, 331 S.E.2d 707, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 541, 335 S.E.2d 20 (1985).

When a motion under section (b) of this rule is made in a nonjury trial, the judge becomes both the judge and the jury and he must consider and weigh all competent evidence before him. Childers v. Hayes, 77 N.C. App. 792, 336 S.E.2d 146 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 375, 342 S.E.2d 892 (1986).

Authority to Dismiss in Absence of Motion. — The trial judge has the authority to dismiss a claim pursuant to section (b) of this rule in the absence of a motion by the defendant to do so. Blackwelder Furn. Co. v. Harris, 75 N.C. App. 625, 331 S.E.2d 274 (1985).

Whether a judge may dismiss a claim pursuant to section (b) of this rule depends on the facts and circumstances surrounding the particular case. Blackwelder Furn. Co. v. Harris, 75 N.C. App. 625, 331 S.E.2d 274 (1985).

Dismissal with Prejudice Upheld. — The trial court did not abuse its discretion in dismissing plaintiff's action with prejudice where the court gave plaintiff an opportunity to amend his complaint or to offer evidence, and plaintiff declined. Mumford v. Hutton & Bourbonnais Co., 47 N.C. App. 440, 267 S.E.2d 511 (1980).

Dismissal for Failure to Join Party Is Not on Merits. — Dismissal for failure to join a necessary party or a proper party which the court, in its discretion, decides should be joined is not a dismissal on the merits and may not be with prejudice. Crosrol Carding Devs., Inc. v. Gunter & Cooke, Inc., 12 N.C. App. 448, 183 S.E.2d 834 (1971).

When Involuntary Dismissal under Section (b) Is Without Prejudice. — Ordinarily, an involuntary dismissal under section (b) of this rule operates as an adjudication upon the merits and ends the lawsuit. However, the rule sets forth specific exceptions to this proposition, and as to these grounds, an order of involuntary dismissal is not rendered on the merits and may not constitute a dismissal with prejudice. Whedon v. Whedon, 313 N.C. 200, 328 S.E.2d 437 (1985).

Power of Trial Judge to Order Dismissal Without Prejudice. — The major exception to the general proposition that an involuntary dismissal under section (b) of this rule operates as a final adjudication is found in the power lodged by section (b) in the trial judge to specifically order that the dismissal is without prejudice and, therefore, not an adjudication on the merits. Whedon v. Whedon, 313 N.C. 200, 328 S.E.2d 437 (1985).

The authority to determine in which cases it is appropriate to allow the nonmovant to commence a new action has been vested by section (b) of this rule in the trial judge and is no longer strictly controlled by statute as it was under former rules of practice. Whedon v. Whedon, 313 N.C. 200, 328 S.E.2d 437 (1985).

Although this rule does not expressly provide an option for the court to examine the quality of the nonmoving party's evidence and then decline to make a ruling on the merits although granting the moving party's motion for involuntary dismissal, this authority is encompassed within the rule's otherwise unqualified grant of authority to the trial court to dismiss an action on terms by specifying that its order of dismissal is "without prejudice." Whedon v. Whedon, 313 N.C. 200, 328 S.E.2d 437 (1985).

Review of Order Authorizing Dismissal Without Prejudice. — The trial court's authority to order an involuntary dismissal without prejudice is exercised in the broad discretion of the trial court and the ruling will not be disturbed on appeal in the absence of a showing of abuse of discretion. Whedon v. Whedon, 313 N.C. 200, 328 S.E.2d 437 (1985).

Petition for Certiorari. — Commencing an action in federal court did not toll negligence statute of limitation and did not keep it tolled until the United States Supreme Court ruled on a petition for certiorari to review an involuntary dismissal of that federal action. Clark v. Velsicol Chem. Corp., 110 N.C. App. 803, 431 S.E.2d 227, cert. granted, 334 N.C. 687, 436 S.E.2d 371 (1993), aff'd per curiam, 336 N.C. 599, 444 S.E.2d 223 (1994).

Error Where Less Drastic Sanctions Were Not Addressed. — Where the trial court made no findings of fact or conclusions of law which addressed whether less drastic sanctions would be effective in ensuring compliance with the court's order or would best serve the interests of justice, the trial court erred in dismissing plaintiff's complaint. Rivenbark v. Southmark Corp., 93 N.C. App. 414, 378 S.E.2d 196 (1989).

Statute of Limitations Applicable. — Order which stated dismissal was without prejudice and contained no specification whatsoever with regard to the time in which plaintiff could commence a new action based on the same claim was subject to the statutory statute of limitations. 84 Lumber Co. v. Barkley, 120 N.C. App. 271, 461 S.E.2d 780 (1995).

Only in an action tried without a jury may the defendant move for an involuntary dismissal on the ground that upon the facts and the law the plaintiff has shown no right to relief. Beam v. Kerlee, 120 N.C. App. 203, 461 S.E.2d 911 (1995).

Time Not Extended. — Assuming that this rule could apply following involuntary dismissal by federal court, as the court did not specify a new action could be brought within one year, the time to file the complaint in state court was not extended for one year. Huang v. Ziko, — N.C. App. —, 511 S.E.2d 305 (1999).

B. Failure to Prosecute or to Comply with Rules or Orders.

When Motion for Involuntary Dismissal May Be Properly Entertained Prior to Trial. — A motion for involuntary dismissal pursuant to this rule and § 1A-1, Rule 60 prior to a trial of the cause is improperly entertained, unless made on the specific grounds that the plaintiff has failed to prosecute or comply with the Rules of Civil Procedure or any order of the court. Smith v. Smith, 17 N.C. App. 416, 194 S.E.2d 568 (1973).

Dismissal for Failure to Prosecute Authorized. — This rule, substantially the same as its federal counterpart, authorizes dismissal with prejudice of a plaintiff's claim for failure to prosecute. Green v. Eure, 18 N.C. App. 671, 197 S.E.2d 599 (1973).

Section (b) of this rule, which is substantially the same as the court's own rule, has been held not to abrogate the inherent power of the court to dismiss a case for want of prosecution, as where plaintiff refuses to proceed at trial. Swygert v. Swygert, 46 N.C. App. 173, 264 S.E.2d 902 (1980).

When Dismissal for Failure to Prosecute Is Proper. — Dismissal for failure to prosecute is proper only where the plaintiff manifests an intention to thwart the progress of the action to its conclusion, or by some delaying tactic plaintiff fails to progress the action toward its conclusion. Green v. Eure, 18 N.C. App. 671, 197 S.E.2d 599 (1973); Jones v. Stone, 52 N.C. App. 502, 279 S.E.2d 13, cert. denied, 304 N.C. 195, 285 S.E.2d 99 (1981).

Where plaintiff's failure to proceed did not arise out of a deliberate attempt to delay, but out of misunderstanding, dismissal was improper. Green v. Eure, 18 N.C. App. 671, 197 S.E.2d 599 (1973).

When Dismissal for Failure to Prosecute Not Proper. — The trial court erred in dismissing plaintiff's action for failure to appear and prosecute his action, where plaintiff's attorney was present and appeared ready to go forward with his case. Terry v. Bob Dunn Ford, Inc., 77 N.C. App. 457, 335 S.E.2d 227 (1985).

Trial Judge May Dismiss Claim Under Section (b) Without Motion by Defendant. — The trial judge has authority to dismiss a claim pursuant to section (b) of this rule, even absent a motion by defendant to do so. However, whether a judge may dismiss a claim pursuant to section (b) depends on the facts and circumstances surrounding the particular case. Blackwelder Furn. Co. v. Harris, 75 N.C. App. 625, 331 S.E.2d 274 (1985), limiting Simmons v. Tuttle, 70 N.C. App. 101, 318 S.E.2d 847 (1984).

A trial judge may, depending upon the facts and circumstances surrounding the particular case, dismiss a claim under section (b) of this rule, for failure to prosecute, without a motion by defendant. Perkins v. Perkins, 88 N.C. App. 568, 364 S.E.2d 166 (1988).

A mere lapse of time does not justify dismissal if the plaintiff has not been lacking in diligence. Jones v. Stone, 52 N.C. App. 502, 279 S.E.2d 13, cert. denied, 304 N.C. 195, 285 S.E.2d 99 (1981).

Defendant may move for dismissal of an action for plaintiff's failure to comply with the Rules of Civil Procedure. The grant of power to make such a motion implies discretionary power to allow it. It equally implies appellate review limited to determination of whether abuse appears in the exercise of that discretion. Jones v. Boyce, 60 N.C. App. 585, 299 S.E.2d 298 (1983).

Failure to Comply with Erroneous Order Not Grounds for Dismissal. — A dismissal under section (b) of this rule may not be premised upon a party's failure to comply with an erroneous order. Thornburg v. Lancaster, 303 N.C. 89, 277 S.E.2d 423 (1981); overruled to extent that it may be read as establishing a rule that dismissal with prejudice may not be premised on a party's refusal to comply with an erroneous order from which there has been no direct appeal by Daniels v. Montgomery Mut. Ins. Co., 320 N.C. 669, 360 S.E.2d 772 (1987).

Imposition of Lesser Sanctions for Noncompliance. — The trial court has the authority, pursuant to section (b) of this rule, to impose lesser sanctions against a party or counsel for failure to comply with a court order. The lesser sanctions imposed may include costs plus attorneys' fees. In considering what sanctions to impose, the trial court must make findings concerning the effectiveness of alternative sanctions and must make findings that the plaintiff is capable of performing the alternative. Daniels v. Montgomery Mut. Ins. Co., 81 N.C. App. 600, 344 S.E.2d 847, rev'd in part and aff'd in part, 320 N.C. 669, 360 S.E.2d 772 (1987).

Use of Less Drastic Sanctions When Sufficient. — A dismissal with prejudice, pursuant to section (b) of this rule, is an available sanction for a plaintiff's violation of § 1A-1, Rule 8(a)(2). It is not, however, the only available sanction and should be applied only when the trial court determines that less drastic sanctions will not suffice. Miller v. Ferree, 84 N.C. App. 135, 351 S.E.2d 845 (1987).

Motion to Have Bankruptcy Trustee Made Party to Action. — Since the plaintiff made a motion to have its trustee in bankruptcy a party to the action, which the court improperly denied, as the trustee appeared to be a necessary party, without making the required findings of fact, and since the trustee was present when the case was called, the court erred in dismissing the plaintiff's claim for failure to prosecute. Blackwelder Furn. Co. v. Harris, 75 N.C. App. 625, 331 S.E.2d 274 (1985).

Dismissal for Failure to Prosecute Held Error. — Where nothing in the record indicated that the plaintiffs failed to assist or cooperate with their attorneys or that they were not diligent in prosecuting their action, the entry of sanctions against either the plaintiffs or their attorney could not be upheld on the ground of the plaintiffs' failure to prosecute. Foy v. Hunter, 106 N.C. App. 614, 418 S.E.2d 299 (1992).

The trial court did not abuse its discretion in ordering dismissal of plaintiff's action pursuant to this rule, given plaintiff's intentional noncompliance and the ineffectiveness of previously imposed sanctions. Daniels v. Montgomery Mut. Ins. Co., 320 N.C. 669, 360 S.E.2d 772 (1987).

Based on the parties' failure to appear, the fact that no pleading had been filed in almost two years, and the fact that the case had been placed on two prior clean-up calendars, dismissal without prejudice was proper. Perkins v. Perkins, 88 N.C. App. 568, 364 S.E.2d 166 (1988).

Where trial court found that corporate officer's failure to account made it impossible for receivers to defend against claims of that officer and his wife against the corporation in liquidation, trial court was authorized, pursuant to section (b) of this rule, to dismiss the claims of the officer and his wife on their receivership in the event that the corporate officer failed to provide an accounting within 30 days of the effective date of the court's order. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 103 N.C. App. 479, 405 S.E.2d 794 (1991).

Dismissal for Failure to Properly Serve Defendant. — Where plaintiff did not deliver endorsed summons to some proper person for service as required by § 1A-1, Rule 4(a), where unconscionable delay was most critical to defendant, and where there was no contention that defendant was unavailable for service, the trial judge properly dismissed plaintiff's action pursuant to section (b) of this rule based upon plaintiff's violation of section (a) of this rule for the purposes of delay and in order to gain an unfair advantage over the defendant. Smith v. Quinn, 324 N.C. 316, 378 S.E.2d 28 (1989).

C. Failure to Show Right to Relief.

Section (b) of this rule is applicable only in an action tried by the court without a jury. Pergerson v. Williams, 9 N.C. App. 512, 176 S.E.2d 885 (1970); Kelly v. International Harvester Co., 278 N.C. 153, 179 S.E.2d 396 (1971); Hamm v. Texaco, Inc., 17 N.C. App. 451, 194 S.E.2d 560 (1973).

And Has No Application to Directed Verdicts in Jury Trials. — Section (b) of this rule has no application when considering a motion for a directed verdict in a jury trial. Kelly v. International Harvester Co., 278 N.C. 153, 179 S.E.2d 396 (1971).

A motion to dismiss under section (b) of this rule is properly made only in cases tried by a judge without a jury, the proper motion in jury cases being for a directed verdict under § 1A-1, Rule 50(a). Nytco Leasing, Inc. v. Southeastern Motels, Inc., 40 N.C. App. 120, 252 S.E.2d 826 (1979).

Motion Treated as for Directed Verdict. — It is permissible for motions made under section (b) of this rule at the close of plaintiff's evidence in jury trials to be treated as motions for directed verdict under § 1A-1, Rule 50(a). Sample v. Morgan, 311 N.C. 717, 319 S.E.2d 607 (1984).

Motion for Involuntary Dismissal Appropriate Test for Sufficiency of Plaintiff's Evidence in Nonjury Trial. — When trial is by the court without a jury, the appropriate motion by which a defendant may test the sufficiency of plaintiff's evidence to show a right to relief is a motion for involuntary dismissal as provided for in section (b) of this rule. Aiken v. Collins, 16 N.C. App. 504, 192 S.E.2d 617 (1972); Ayers v. Tomrich Corp., 17 N.C. App. 263, 193 S.E.2d 764 (1973); Town of Rolesville v. Perry, 21 N.C. App. 354, 204 S.E.2d 719 (1974); Neasham v. Day, 34 N.C. App. 53, 237 S.E.2d 287 (1977); Tanglewood Land Co. v. Wood, 40 N.C. App. 133, 252 S.E.2d 546 (1979); Lumbee River Elec. Membership Corp. v. City of Fayetteville, 60 N.C. App. 534, 299 S.E.2d 305, rev'd on other grounds, 309 N.C. 726, 309 S.E.2d 209 (1983).

A motion for directed verdict under § 1A-1, Rule 50(a) is appropriate only in a case tried before a jury. In nonjury trials, a motion for involuntary dismissal under section (b) of this section provides a procedure whereby, at the close of the plaintiff's evidence, the judge can give judgment against the plaintiff, not only because his proof has failed to make out a case, but also on the basis of facts as the judge may determine them. Goodrich v. Rice, 75 N.C. App. 530, 331 S.E.2d 195 (1985).

In a nonjury trial, when a motion to dismiss pursuant to section (b) of this rule is made, the judge becomes both judge and jury. He must consider and weigh all competent evidence before him, and must pass on the credibility of the witnesses and determine the weight to be accorded their testimony. In re Hughes, 74 N.C. App. 751, 330 S.E.2d 213 (1985).

As Compared with Motion for Directed

Verdict in Jury Trial. — A motion for a directed verdict under § 1A-1, Rule 50(a) is proper when a trial is being held before a jury. Where a case is tried by the judge without a jury, the appropriate motion in such case is for involuntary dismissal under section (b) of this rule. Bryant v. Kelly, 10 N.C. App. 208, 178 S.E.2d 113 (1970), rev'd on other grounds, 279 N.C. 123, 181 S.E.2d 438 (1971).

Where a case is tried before a jury, the appropriate motion by which a defendant tests the sufficiency of plaintiff's evidence to permit a recovery is the motion for a directed verdict under § 1A-1, Rule 50(a). The motion for involuntary dismissal, made under section (b) of this rule, performs a similar function in an action tried by the court without a jury. Duke v. Meisky, 12 N.C. App. 329, 183 S.E.2d 292 (1971).

A motion for a directed verdict is proper only in a jury trial; where the case is tried without a jury the proper motion is for involuntary dismissal under section (b) of this rule. Mills v. Koscot Interplanetary, Inc., 13 N.C. App. 681, 187 S.E.2d 372 (1972).

A motion to dismiss under this rule is not properly available in cases being tried by jury. The proper motion would be a motion for directed verdict under § 1A-1, Rule 50(a). Hamm v. Texaco, Inc., 17 N.C. App. 451, 194 S.E.2d 560 (1973).

A motion for a directed verdict under § 1A-1, Rule 50 and a motion for involuntary dismissal under section (b) of this rule are to be distinguished; the former is proper when the case is tried before a jury, and the latter is appropriate where the court sits as trier of fact. McNeely v. Southern Ry., 19 N.C. App. 502, 199 S.E.2d 164, cert. denied, 284 N.C. 425, 200 S.E.2d 660 (1973).

Treatment of Motion Incorrectly Designated as Motion for Directed Verdict. — Where defendant's motion was incorrectly designated as a motion for a directed verdict, the Court of Appeals could treat it as a motion for involuntary dismissal under section (b) of this rule and pass on the merits of the questions appellant sought to raise. Higgins v. Builders & Fin., Inc., 20 N.C. App. 1, 200 S.E.2d 397 (1973), cert. denied, 284 N.C. 616, 201 S.E.2d 689 (1974).

Treatment of Motion as One for Directed Verdict. — It is permissible for motions made under section (b) of this rule at the close of plaintiff's evidence in jury trials to be treated as motions for directed verdict under § 1A-1, Rule 50(a). Sample v. Morgan, 311 N.C. 717, 319 S.E.2d 607 (1984).

Involuntary Dismissal in Jury Trial Treated as Directed Verdict. — Where judgment of involuntary dismissal in a trial before a jury was improperly entered under section (b) of this rule, which is applicable only in a trial by the court without a jury, it may properly be treated as a motion for directed verdict under § 1A-1, Rule 50(a). Pergerson v. Williams, 9 N.C. App. 512, 176 S.E.2d 885 (1970).

Different Test Applied Under Motions for Directed Verdict and Involuntary Dismissal. — The distinction between a motion for a directed verdict and a motion for an involuntary dismissal is more than one of mere nomenclature, as a different test is to be applied to determine the sufficiency of the evidence to withstand the motion when the case is tried before court and jury than when the court alone is finder of the facts. Neff v. Queen City Coach Co., 16 N.C. App. 466, 192 S.E.2d 587 (1972).

Significance of motion to dismiss under section (b) of this rule is that it may be made at the close of plaintiff's case; there is little point in such a motion at the close of all the evidence, since at that stage the judge will determine the facts in any event. Helms v. Rea, 282 N.C. 610, 194 S.E.2d 1 (1973); Russell v. Taylor, 37 N.C. App. 520, 246 S.E.2d 569 (1978); Newsome v. Newsome, 43 N.C. App. 580, 259 S.E.2d 577 (1979).

In a bench trial, there is little point to a motion to dismiss at the close of all the evidence, since at that point in trial the judge will decide the facts in any event. When the judge decides the case, either on a motion for dismissal or at the close of all the evidence, he must make findings of fact and separate conclusions of law. In re Hughes, 74 N.C. App. 751, 330 S.E.2d 213 (1985).

Court May Determine Facts and Render Judgment on Motion. — If trial judge allows defendant's motion to dismiss made at the close of plaintiff's evidence, on the grounds that upon the facts and the law plaintiff has shown no right to relief, the court, as the trier of the facts, should determine the facts and render judgment against plaintiff. Wells v. Sturdivant Life Ins. Co., 10 N.C. App. 584, 179 S.E.2d 806 (1971).

In a nonjury case, section (b) of this rule provides a procedure whereby, at the close of plaintiff's evidence, the judge can give judgment against plaintiff not only because his proof has failed in some essential aspect to make out a case, but also on the basis of facts as he may then determine them to be from the evidence then before him. Helms v. Rea, 282 N.C. 610, 194 S.E.2d 1 (1973); Fearing v. Westcott, 18 N.C. App. 422, 197 S.E.2d 38 (1973); O'Grady v. First Union Nat'l Bank, 296 N.C. 212, 250 S.E.2d 587 (1978); Lumbee River Elec. Membership Corp. v. City of Fayetteville, 309 N.C. 726, 309 S.E.2d 209 (1983).

When the motion to dismiss is allowed, the trial judge must determine the facts and render judgment against the plaintiff. The trial judge's findings are conclusive on appeal if supported by any competent evidence even though there may be evidence to support findings to the contrary. United Leasing Corp. v. Miller, 60 N.C. App. 40, 298 S.E.2d 409 (1982), cert. denied, 308 N.C. 194, 302 S.E.2d 248 (1983).

Section (b) of this rule permits the trial judge to weigh the evidence, to find facts against the movant, and to sustain respondents' motion at the conclusion of the movant's evidence. In re Foreclosure of Deed of Trust, 63 N.C. App. 744, 306 S.E.2d 475, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 820, 310 S.E.2d 358 (1983).

Despite Plaintiff's Prima Facie Case. — As trier of the facts, the judge may weigh the evidence, find the facts against the plaintiff and sustain the defendant's motion under section (b) of this rule at the conclusion of the plaintiff's evidence even though the plaintiff has made out a prima facie case which would have precluded a directed verdict for the defendant in a jury case. Helms v. Rea, 282 N.C. 610, 194 S.E.2d 1 (1973); Williams v. Liles, 31 N.C. App. 345, 229 S.E.2d 215 (1976); Neasham v. Day, 34 N.C. App. 53, 237 S.E.2d 287 (1977); Newsome v. Newsome, 43 N.C. App. 580, 259 S.E.2d 577 (1979); United Leasing Corp. v. Miller, 60 N.C. App. 40, 298 S.E.2d 409 (1982); Lumbee River Elec. Membership Corp. v. City of Fayetteville, 60 N.C. App. 534, 299 S.E.2d 305 (1983); Thompson v. Wrenn, 61 N.C. App. 582, 301 S.E.2d 103 (1983); Lumbee River Elec. Membership Corp. v. City of Fayetteville, 309 N.C. 726, 309 S.E.2d 209 (1983).

At the close of the movant's evidence, the judge may grant judgment against the movant on the basis of facts as he determines them to be. This is true even where the movant has made out a prima facie case which would withstand a motion for directed verdict for the respondent in a jury trial. In re Foreclosure of Deed of Trust, 63 N.C. App. 744, 306 S.E.2d 475, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 820, 310 S.E.2d 358 (1983).

Unlike Practice on Former Motion for Nonsuit. — The questions presented by a motion under section (b) of this rule and a motion for nonsuit are not the same. The motion for nonsuit asks the court to determine whether the plaintiff's evidence, taken as true, would support a judgment for plaintiff. The motion to dismiss, on the other hand permits the trial judge to weigh the evidence, find facts against plaintiff and sustain defendant's motion at the conclusion of plaintiff's evidence, even though plaintiff may have made out a prima facie case which would have repelled the motion for nonsuit. Joyner v. Thomas, 40 N.C. App. 63, 251 S.E.2d 906 (1979).

Motion to dismiss differs from the former motion for judgment as for nonsuit in that the lodging of a motion to dismiss under section (b) of this rule permits the trial judge to weigh the evidence, find facts against plaintiff and sustain defendant's motion at the conclusion of plaintiff's evidence, even though plaintiff may have made out a prima facie case which would have repelled the motion for nonsuit under the former practice. Whitaker v. Earnhardt, 289 N.C. 260, 221 S.E.2d 316 (1976).

Under former practice the motion for nonsuit presented the question of whether plaintiff's evidence, taken as true, would support findings upon which the trier of facts could properly base a judgment for plaintiff. Helms v. Rea, 282 N.C. 610, 194 S.E.2d 1 (1973).

But Court Is Not Compelled to Pass on Motion. — The judge is not compelled to make determinations of facts and pass upon a motion under section (b) of this rule for involuntary dismissal at the close of plaintiff's evidence. He may decline to render any judgment until the close of all the evidence and, except in the clearest cases, he should defer judgment until the close of all the evidence. Helms v. Rea, 282 N.C. 610, 194 S.E.2d 1 (1973); Russell v. Taylor, 37 N.C. App. 520, 246 S.E.2d 569 (1978); Passmore v. Woodard, 37 N.C. App. 535, 246 S.E.2d 795 (1978).

When a motion under this rule is made at the close of plaintiff's evidence, the judge may decline to render any judgment until the close of all of the evidence. Fearing v. Westcott, 18 N.C. App. 422, 197 S.E.2d 38 (1973).

Under section (b) of this rule, the trial judge may decline to render judgment until all the evidence is in. Neasham v. Day, 34 N.C. App. 53, 237 S.E.2d 287 (1977).

Under section (b) of this rule, the judge is not required to rule on the motion at the close of the plaintiff's evidence and may decline to render any judgment until the close of all the evidence. African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church v. Union Chapel A.M.E. Zion Church, 64 N.C. App. 391, 308 S.E.2d 73 (1983), cert. denied, 310 N.C. 308, 312 S.E.2d 649 (1984).

And except in the clearest of cases, the court should decline to rule on a motion to dismiss until the close of all the evidence. Henderson County v. Osteen, 297 N.C. 113, 254 S.E.2d 160 (1979).

The practice of withholding judgment until all the evidence has been presented is considered the better practice except in the clearest cases. Neasham v. Day, 34 N.C. App. 53, 237 S.E.2d 287 (1977).

It is the better practice for the trial court to decline to render any judgment until the close of all the evidence. Joyner v. Thomas, 40 N.C. App. 63, 251 S.E.2d 906 (1979).

Except in the clearest cases, it is the better practice in the case of a motion to dismiss for the trial judge to decline to render judgment until all the evidence is in. Whitaker v. Earnhardt, 289 N.C. 260, 221 S.E.2d 316 (1976); Joyner v. Thomas, 40 N.C. App. 63, 251 S.E.2d 906 (1979).

The permissive language of section (b) of this rule makes it clear that the court may decline to render judgment until all of the evidence has been presented. In fact, a judge should decline to do so except in the clearest of cases. Esteel Co. v. Goodman, 82 N.C. App. 692, 348 S.E.2d 153 (1986), cert. denied, 318 N.C. 693, 351 S.E.2d 745 (1987).

No Provision Made for Section (b) Motion at Close of All Evidence. — Section (b) of this rule does not provide for a motion for involuntary dismissal made at the close of all the evidence. Castle v. B.H. Yates Co., 18 N.C. App. 632, 197 S.E.2d 611 (1973).

Where the trial judge defers ruling on a motion under section (b) of this rule until the close of all the evidence, there is little point for counsel to renew the motion, for at that stage of a nonjury trial the judge must determine the facts in any event, pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 52. O'Grady v. First Union Nat'l Bank, 296 N.C. 212, 250 S.E.2d 587 (1978).

Section (b) of this rule provides for a motion for dismissal at the close of plaintiff's evidence; it does not provide for such motion at the close of all the evidence. Menzel v. Metrolina Anesthesia Assocs., 66 N.C. App. 53, 310 S.E.2d 400 (1984).

There is little point in a motion for dismissal at the close of all the evidence, since at that stage the judge will determine the facts in any event. Menzel v. Metrolina Anesthesia Assocs., 66 N.C. App. 53, 310 S.E.2d 400 (1984).

Allowance of Motion at Close of All Evidence Held Not to Prejudice Plaintiff. — The fact that defendant made a motion for involuntary dismissal at the close of all the evidence, which motion is not sanctioned under the rules, and that the trial judge inadvertently allowed it, in no way prejudiced plaintiff, where the trial judge thereafter entered a judgment on the merits pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 52. Castle v. B.H. Yates Co., 18 N.C. App. 632, 197 S.E.2d 611 (1973).

Section (b) of this rule does not provide for a motion for involuntary dismissal made at the close of all the evidence, but the fact that the parties made such motions at the close of all the evidence and that the trial judge ruled on those motions was of no consequence where thereafter the court rendered a judgment on the merits by making findings. Reid v. Midgett, 25 N.C. App. 456, 213 S.E.2d 379 (1975); Tanglewood Land Co. v. Wood, 40 N.C. App. 133, 252 S.E.2d 546 (1979).

Defendant's Motion Challenges Sufficiency of Plaintiff's Evidence. — Defendant's motion for an involuntary dismissal in an action tried by the court without a jury challenges the sufficiency of the plaintiff's evidence to establish his right to relief. Wells v. Sturdivant Life Ins. Co., 10 N.C. App. 584, 179 S.E.2d 806 (1971); Pegram-West, Inc. v. Hiatt Homes, Inc., 12 N.C. App. 519, 184 S.E.2d 65 (1971).

A motion for involuntary dismissal under section (b) of this rule serves in part to test the legal sufficiency of all evidence admitted on behalf of the plaintiff in a nonjury case. Harrell v. W.B. Lloyd Constr. Co., 300 N.C. 353, 266 S.E.2d 626 (1980).

A defendant in an action being tried without a jury may test the sufficiency of the plaintiff's evidence by moving at the close of plaintiff's evidence for involuntary dismissal under subsection (b) of this rule on the ground that upon the facts and the law the plaintiff has shown no right to relief. United Carolina Bank v. First Union Nat'l Bank, 109 N.C. App. 201, 426 S.E.2d 462 (1993).

But Does Not Challenge Competence of Evidence to Prove Particular Point Nor Renew Objection to Its Admission. — A motion for involuntary dismissal under section (b) of this rule does not challenge the competence of the evidence to prove a particular point, nor does it renew an objection to its admission in the first place. Harrell v. W.B. Lloyd Constr. Co., 300 N.C. 353, 266 S.E.2d 626 (1980).

Question Raised by Section (b). — A motion under section (b) of this rule does not raise the question of whether the particular findings made by the court are supported by the evidence, but only the question of whether any findings could be made from the evidence which would support a recovery. Pegram-West, Inc. v. Hiatt Homes, Inc., 12 N.C. App. 519, 184 S.E.2d 65 (1971); Gibbs v. Heavlin, 22 N.C. App. 482, 206 S.E.2d 814 (1974); Barnhill v. Barnhill, 68 N.C. App. 697, 315 S.E.2d 548 (1984).

A motion under section (b) of this rule raises the question of whether any findings of fact could be made from the evidence which would support a recovery. Browne v. Catawba County Dep't of Social Servs., 22 N.C. App. 476, 206 S.E.2d 792 (1974); Sanders v. Walker, 39 N.C. App. 355, 250 S.E.2d 84 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Dealers Specialties, Inc. v. Neighborhood Hous. Servs., Inc., 305 N.C. 633, 291 S.E.2d 137 (1982).

The question raised by defendants' motion to dismiss made at the close of all the evidence is whether any findings of fact could be made from the evidence which would support a recovery for plaintiffs. If such findings can be made, the motion to dismiss must be denied. Neasham v. Day, 34 N.C. App. 53, 237 S.E.2d 287 (1977).

The question raised by a motion to dismiss pursuant to section (b) of this rule, made at the close of all the evidence, is whether any findings of fact could be made from the evidence which would support a recovery for the party with the burden of proof. Ayden Tractors, Inc. v. Gaskins, 61 N.C. App. 654, 301 S.E.2d 523 (1983).

Substantially the same question is presented by a motion for dismissal under this rule as was presented by the former motion for nonsuit. Schafran v. A & H Cleaners, Inc., 19 N.C. App. 365, 198 S.E.2d 734, cert. denied, 284 N.C. 255, 200 S.E.2d 655 (1973).

In a nonjury case, after the plaintiff has rested his case, the defendant may move for a dismissal on the ground that upon the facts and the law the plaintiff has shown no right to relief. The question presented is whether the plaintiff's evidence, taken as true, would support findings of fact upon which the trier of fact could properly base a judgment for the plaintiff. Woodlief v. Johnson, 75 N.C. App. 49, 330 S.E.2d 265 (1985).

Court to Pass on Sufficiency, Weight and Credibility of Evidence. — In ruling on a motion to dismiss under section (b) of this rule, the court must pass upon whether the evidence is sufficient as a matter of law to permit a recovery; and, if so, he must pass upon the weight and credibility of the evidence upon which the plaintiff must rely in order to recover. Airport Knitting, Inc. v. King Kotton Yarn Co., 11 N.C. App. 162, 180 S.E.2d 611 (1971); Mills v. Koscot Interplanetary, Inc., 13 N.C. App. 681, 187 S.E.2d 372 (1972); Ayers v. Tomrich Corp., 17 N.C. App. 263, 193 S.E.2d 764 (1973); Schafran v. A & H Cleaners, Inc., 19 N.C. App. 365, 198 S.E.2d 734, cert. denied, 284 N.C. 255, 200 S.E.2d 655 (1973); Town of Rolesville v. Perry, 21 N.C. App. 354, 204 S.E.2d 719 (1974); Phillips v. Woxman, 43 N.C. App. 739, 260 S.E.2d 97 (1979), cert. denied, 299 N.C. 545, 265 S.E.2d 404, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 835, 101 S. Ct. 108, 66 L. Ed. 2d 41 (1980).

On a motion to dismiss defendant's counterclaim under section (b) of this rule, where all the evidence is in, it is incumbent upon the judge to consider and weigh it all, and render judgment on the merits of the claim and counterclaim in the form directed by § 1A-1, Rule 52(a). Helms v. Rea, 282 N.C. 610, 194 S.E.2d 1 (1973).

Principles Applicable in Determining Sufficiency of Evidence. — In determining the sufficiency of the evidence on a motion under this rule, the trial judge is subject to the same principles applicable under the former procedure with respect to the sufficiency of the evidence to withstand the motion for nonsuit. Presson v. Presson, 12 N.C. App. 109, 182 S.E.2d 614 (1971).

Evidence to Be Evaluated Without Limitations as to Inferences to Be Indulged in Plaintiff's Favor. — In a nonjury case, in which all issues of fact are in any event to be determined by the judge, the function of the judge on a motion to dismiss under section (b) of this rule is to evaluate the evidence without any limitations as to the inferences which the court must indulge in favor of the plaintiff's evidence on a similar motion for a directed verdict in a jury case. Bryant v. Kelly, 10 N.C. App. 208, 178 S.E.2d 113 (1970), rev'd on other grounds, 279 N.C. 123, 181 S.E.2d 438 (1971); Rogers v. City of Asheville, 14 N.C. App. 514, 188 S.E.2d 656 (1972); Lineberry v. Carolina Golf & Country Club, Inc., 16 N.C. App. 600, 192 S.E.2d 853 (1972); McNeely v. Southern Ry., 19 N.C. App. 502, 199 S.E.2d 164, cert. denied, 284 N.C. 425, 200 S.E.2d 660 (1973); Bank of N.C. v. Investors Title Ins. Co., 42 N.C. App. 616, 257 S.E.2d 453 (1979); Dealers Specialties, Inc. v. Neighborhood Hous. Servs., Inc., 305 N.C. 633, 291 S.E.2d 137 (1982).

The judge's evaluation of the evidence pursuant to a motion under this rule is to be conducted free of any limitations as to the inferences which a court must indulge in favor of plaintiff's evidence on a motion for a directed verdict in a jury case. Fearing v. Westcott, 18 N.C. App. 422, 197 S.E.2d 38 (1973); Hobson Constr. Co. v. Hajoca Corp., 28 N.C. App. 684, 222 S.E.2d 709 (1976).

Under section (b) of this rule, in a trial without a jury, the trial judge does not consider the evidence in the light most favorable to the plaintiff. Instead, he must consider and weigh all the competent evidence before him, passing upon the credibility of the witnesses, the weight to be given their testimony and the reasonable inferences to be drawn therefrom. Inland Bridge Co. v. North Carolina State Hwy. Comm'n, 30 N.C. App. 535, 227 S.E.2d 648 (1976).

In ruling on a motion for involuntary dismissal at the close of plaintiff's evidence pursuant to section (b) of this rule, the trial judge need not view the evidence in the light most favorable to plaintiff. Dealers Specialties, Inc. v. Neighborhood Hous. Servs., Inc., 305 N.C. 633, 291 S.E.2d 137 (1982).

Previously two different standards had been applied to motions under section (b) of this rule; (1) that the judge is to evaluate the evidence without any limitations as to the inferences which the court must indulge in favor of the plaintiff's evidence on a similar motion for a directed verdict in a jury case, and (2) that the evidence must be viewed in the light most favorable to the plaintiff. The correct rule is that the judge is not obliged to consider plaintiff's evidence in a light most favorable to plaintiff. United Leasing Corp. v. Miller, 60 N.C. App. 40, 298 S.E.2d 409 (1982), cert. denied, 308 N.C. 194, 302 S.E.2d 248 (1983).

Evidence to Be Accorded Full Probative Value. — In ruling on a motion under section (b) of this rule, all relevant evidence admitted by the trial court must be accorded its full probative value, irrespective of whether it was erroneously received. Harrell v. W.B. Lloyd Constr. Co., 300 N.C. 353, 266 S.E.2d 626 (1980).

Exercise of Judicial Discretion. — The determination of whether to dismiss for a violation of § 1A-1, Rule 8(a)(2) and whether such a dismissal should be with prejudice so as to bar a subsequent action involves the exercise of judicial discretion. Miller v. Ferree, 84 N.C. App. 135, 351 S.E.2d 845 (1987).

Deference to Be Accorded to Court's Judgment. — In the context of an involuntary dismissal, the trial court's findings of fact are conclusive on appeal if supported by competent evidence, even if there is evidence to the contrary. The trial court's judgment must be granted the same deference as a jury verdict. Carter v. Foster, 103 N.C. App. 110, 404 S.E.2d 484 (1991).

When Involuntary Dismissal Should Be Granted. — An involuntary dismissal under this rule is to be granted if the plaintiff has shown no right to relief or if she has shown a right to relief but the trial court as trier of fact determines that defendant is entitled to a judgment on the merits. Jones v. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 42 N.C. App. 43, 255 S.E.2d 617 (1979); Ayden Tractors, Inc. v. Gaskins, 61 N.C. App. 654, 301 S.E.2d 523, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 319, 307 S.E.2d 162 (1983); Carter v. Foster, 103 N.C. App. 110, 404 S.E.2d 484 (1991).

Dismissal Properly Denied. — In an action for breach of express and implied warranties and damages arising out of plaintiff's purchase of an automobile from defendant, it was undisputed that defendant informed plaintiffs of a warranty and that the car suffered from several defects. Plaintiffs attempted to have the car repaired within the warranty period, but to no avail. Based on these facts and other evidence, it would have been improper for the trial court to find that plaintiffs had shown "no right to relief" for their breach of warranty claims; therefore, the trial court properly denied defendant's motion to dismiss. Riley v. Ken Wilson Ford, Inc., 109 N.C. App. 163, 426 S.E.2d 717 (1993).

Findings and Conclusions to Be Stated in Granting Motion. — Where the trial court chooses to grant defendant's motion at the close of plaintiff's evidence, he must then find the facts and state his conclusions of law separately. Joyner v. Thomas, 40 N.C. App. 63, 251 S.E.2d 906 (1979).

When the judge decides a case on a motion for dismissal under section (b) of this rule, he must make findings of fact and state separately his conclusions of law. Such findings are intended to aid the appellate court by affording it a clear understanding of the basis of the trial court's decision and to make definite what was decided for purposes of res judicata and estoppel. Helms v. Rea, 282 N.C. 610, 194 S.E.2d 1 (1973).

If the court grants a motion under section (b) of this rule, the rule requires the judge to make findings of fact in accordance with § 1A-1, Rule 52(a). Such findings are intended to aid the appellate court by affording it a clear understanding of the basis of the trial court's decision, and to make definite what was decided for purpose of res judicata and estoppel. Finally, the requirement of findings should evoke care on the part of the trial judge in ascertaining the facts. In re Lowery, 65 N.C. App. 320, 309 S.E.2d 469 (1983).

Failure to Make Findings Is Reversible Error. — The requirement under section (b) of this rule that findings of fact be made is mandatory, and the failure to do so is reversible error. W & H Graphics, Inc. v. Hamby, 48 N.C. App. 82, 268 S.E.2d 567 (1980).

Where the order dismissing plaintiff's claim is not supported by findings of fact as required by section (b) of this rule, the judgment appealed from will be vacated and the cause remanded to the district court. Carteret County Gen. Hosp. Corp. v. Manning, 18 N.C. App. 298, 196 S.E.2d 538 (1973).

In an action to recover the value of general hospital services, the trial court erred in granting defendant's motion for an involuntary dismissal under this rule where the judgment contained no findings of fact but only conclusions of law; moreover, it would have been better for the trial court to delay ruling on defendant's motion for involuntary dismissal until the close of all the evidence rather than at the close of plaintiff's evidence. Memorial Hosp. v. Brown, 50 N.C. App. 526, 274 S.E.2d 277 (1981).

Dismissal for Insufficient Evidence as Adjudication on Merits. — Section (b) of this rule provides that a dismissal for insufficient evidence operates as an adjudication upon the merits unless the trial court specifies otherwise. Phipps v. Paley, 90 N.C. App. 170, 368 S.E.2d 21, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 175, 373 S.E.2d 114 (1988).

Conclusive Effect on Appeal of Facts Found by Judge on Motion to Dismiss. — Where, on a motion to dismiss, the trial court as the trier of the facts has found the facts specially, such findings are conclusive upon appeal if supported by competent evidence, even though there may be evidence which might sustain findings to the contrary. In such case the trial judge becomes both judge and juror, and it is his duty to consider and weigh all the competent evidence before him. He passes upon the credibility of the witnesses and the weight to be given their testimony and the reasonable inferences to be drawn therefrom. If different inferences may be drawn from the evidence, he determines which inferences shall be drawn and which shall be rejected. Bryant v. Kelly, 10 N.C. App. 208, 178 S.E.2d 113 (1970), rev'd on other grounds, 279 N.C. 123, 181 S.E.2d 438 (1971).

In ruling on a motion for involuntary dismissal under section (b) of this rule, where the trial court, as the trier of fact, has found specific facts, such findings are conclusive upon appeal if supported by competent evidence, even though there may be evidence which would sustain findings to the contrary. Williams v. Liles, 31 N.C. App. 345, 229 S.E.2d 215 (1976).

In the context of an involuntary dismissal, the trial court's findings of fact are conclusive if supported by any competent evidence, even though there is evidence to the contrary. State ex rel. Ingram v. North Carolina Farm Bureau Ins. Agency, Inc., 50 N.C. App. 510, 274 S.E.2d 497, modified on other grounds, 303 N.C. 287, 278 S.E.2d 248 (1981).

Where the trial judge's findings are supported by the evidence and those findings in turn support his conclusions of law, they are binding on appeal. Lumbee River Elec. Membership Corp. v. City of Fayetteville, 309 N.C. 726, 309 S.E.2d 209 (1983).

The findings of fact made by the trial judge are conclusive on appeal if supported by competent evidence, even if, arguendo, there is evidence to the contrary. The trial court's judgment therefore must be granted the same deference as a jury verdict. Lumbee River Elec. Membership Corp. v. City of Fayetteville, 309 N.C. 726, 309 S.E.2d 209 (1983).

Remedy Held Unavailable. — In a case not tried by a jury, though the judge's determination that plaintiff was contributorily negligent as a matter of law was error, it was not reversible error. The transcript indicated that the judge made a factual finding from the evidence that plaintiff was contributorily negligent, a finding clearly supported by competent evidence. If the case had been tried to a jury and dismissed before the jury considered it, a new trial would have had to be ordered, but ordering a new trial before a fact-finder who has permissibly found that plaintiff was contributorily negligent and could not prevail in her action would avail her nothing. Church v. Greene, 100 N.C. App. 675, 397 S.E.2d 649 (1990).

Remand for New Trial. — Where a court on appeal reverses a trial court's determination that plaintiff's evidence is legally sufficient, nothing in the Rules of Civil Procedure precludes it from determining in a proper case that plaintiff is nevertheless entitled to a new trial, since, had it not been for the erroneous admission of the incompetent evidence in the first place, plaintiff might well have introduced other, competent evidence of the same import which would have properly withstood defendant's motion for involuntary dismissal or directed verdict; therefore, where the Court of Appeals found plaintiff's evidence at trial legally insufficient to support his quantum meruit claim against defendant, its failure to overrule trial court's denial of defendant's motion for involuntary dismissal and remand of the cause for a new trial was not error. Harrell v. W.B. Lloyd Constr. Co., 300 N.C. 353, 266 S.E.2d 626 (1980).

IV. COSTS.

Purpose of section (d) of this rule, aside from securing the payment of costs, is to prevent vexatious suits made possible by the ease with which a plaintiff may dismiss. Alsup v. Pitman, 98 N.C. App. 389, 390 S.E.2d 750 (1990).

The object of this statutory rule is clearly to provide superior and district courts with authority for the efficient collection of costs in cases in which voluntary dismissals are taken; therefore, the filing of notice of dismissal, while it may terminate adversary proceedings in the case, does not terminate the court's authority to enter orders apportioning and taxing costs. Ward v. Taylor, 68 N.C. App. 74, 314 S.E.2d 814, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 769, 321 S.E.2d 157 (1984).

Section 6-21(6) to Be Considered in Pari Materia with Section (d). — Section 6-21(6) must be considered in pari materia with at least two other statutes, § 1-7 and section (d) of this rule. Thigpen v. Piver, 37 N.C. App. 382, 246 S.E.2d 67, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 653, 248 S.E.2d 257 (1978).

Section (d) of this rule is substantially the same as the federal rule. Alsup v. Pitman, 98 N.C. App. 389, 390 S.E.2d 750 (1990).

Procedure. — Under section (d) of this rule, the trial court or the clerk of the court in the first action shall tax the costs of the action to the plaintiff taking a voluntary dismissal under section (d) of this rule. Then, if the plaintiff commences an action against the same defendant based upon or including the same claim before the costs of the previous action have been paid, the trial court in the second action shall, upon motion of the defendant, order the plaintiff to pay the costs of the first action within 30 days. If the plaintiff does not comply with this order, the court shall dismiss the action. Fields v. Irvin H. Whitehouse & Sons, 98 N.C. App. 395, 390 S.E.2d 725, cert. denied, 327 N.C. 427, 395 S.E.2d 676 (1990).

Federal Rule 41(d) speaks to the same evil but provides far different remedial measures than this rule. Kahn v. Sturgil, 66 F.R.D. 487 (M.D.N.C. 1975).

And Is in Direct Conflict with Section (d). — The remedial measures provided in federal Rule 41 for failure of a plaintiff to pay the costs of a previously dismissed action are in direct conflict with what is set forth in section (d) of this rule. Kahn v. Sturgil, 66 F.R.D. 487 (M.D.N.C. 1975).

The provision for dismissal upon failure to pay costs has no counterpart in the federal rules, and is couched in unambiguous mandatory language. Cheshire v. Bensen Aircraft Corp., 17 N.C. App. 74, 193 S.E.2d 362 (1972).

Although the federal rule might well authorize eventual dismissal of a recalcitrant plaintiff via federal Rule 41(b), perfunctory dismissal as prescribed by section (d) of this rule is clearly not contemplated or authorized. Kahn v. Sturgil, 66 F.R.D. 487 (M.D.N.C. 1975).

The language of section (d) of this rule constitutes a mandatory directive to the trial court. Sims v. Oakwood Trailer Sales Corp., 18 N.C. App. 726, 198 S.E.2d 73, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 754, 198 S.E.2d 723 (1973); Sanford v. Starlite Disco, Inc., 66 N.C. App. 470, 311 S.E.2d 67 (1984).

Payment of costs taxed in the first action is a mandatory condition precedent to the bringing of a second action on the same claim. Plaintiffs are in no position to claim surprise or prejudice for failing to comply with a requirement that conditions their right to reinstate their previous action. Sims v. Oakwood Trailer Sales Corp., 18 N.C. App. 726, 198 S.E.2d 73, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 754, 198 S.E.2d 723 (1973).

Section (d) of this rule is explicit and mandatory in its direction to the court to dismiss an action brought by a plaintiff who has not paid the costs of a previous similar action dismissed pursuant to section (a) of this rule. Kahn v. Sturgil, 66 F.R.D. 487 (M.D.N.C. 1975).

Costs from Earlier Action. — A trial court, in one action, can tax costs incurred in an earlier action that was voluntarily dismissed. Sealey v. Grine, 115 N.C. App. 343, 444 S.E.2d 632 (1994).

The 30-day provision in section (d) of this rule should not be read in conjunction with § 1A-1, Rule 6(b), which provides for an enlargement of the time within which to take a given action, and the court did not err in not considering plaintiff's alleged excusable neglect as an explanation for his late payment of the costs. Sanford v. Starlite Disco, Inc., 66 N.C. App. 470, 311 S.E.2d 67 (1984).

Defendant did not waive its rights under section (d) of this rule by failing to assert them in a responsive pleading. Sims v. Oakwood Trailer Sales Corp., 18 N.C. App. 726, 198 S.E.2d 73, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 754, 198 S.E.2d 723 (1973).

Dismissal of New Action Upheld Where Costs in Original Action Not Paid. — Where a plaintiff took a voluntary nonsuit in original action against defendant, and when new action was instituted, the costs in the original action had not been paid, then nothing else appearing, upon motion of defendant, dismissal was proper on the grounds that this new action was instituted before the costs in the original action had been paid. Galligan v. Smith, 14 N.C. App. 220, 188 S.E.2d 31, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 514, 189 S.E.2d 36 (1972).

Trial court in first action had no authority to order costs paid with 30 days of filing of second action. — The trial court in the first action had the authority only to order that costs be paid by plaintiff. Under section (d) of this rule, the trial court in the first action did not have the authority to order that the costs be paid within 30 days of the filing of a second action. Fields v. Irvin H. Whitehouse & Sons, 98 N.C. App. 395, 390 S.E.2d 725, cert. denied, 327 N.C. 427, 395 S.E.2d 676 (1990).

Provision in cost taxing order in plaintiff's first action against defendant, which plaintiff had voluntarily dismissed, directing plaintiff to pay the costs within 30 days and staying any pending undertaking, of which there was none, was not authorized by section (d) of this rule or any other rule or statute, and its effect, if any, was limited to that action; it could not control second action against same defendant, as section (d) expressly vests that authority in the judge presiding over the second case. Schaffner v. Pantelakos, 98 N.C. App. 399, 391 S.E.2d 41 (1990).

Courts Authority After Dismissal. — The filing of notice of dismissal, while it may terminate adversary proceedings in the case, does not terminate the court's authority to enter orders apportioning and taxing costs. Fields v. Irvin H. Whitehouse & Sons, 98 N.C. App. 395, 390 S.E.2d 725, cert. denied, 327 N.C. 427, 395 S.E.2d 676 (1990).

Correction of Order. — The trial court's failure to allow and tax costs could be considered an oversight or omission in its order, and since the substantive rights of the parties were not affected thereby, the court had authority under § 1A-1, Rule 60(a) to correct such inadvertent omission. Ward v. Taylor, 68 N.C. App. 74, 314 S.E.2d 814, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 769, 321 S.E.2d 157 (1984).

Authority of Superior Court Clerk. — Although a voluntary dismissal is not per se a final judgment, the clerk of superior court has authority to tax costs against a plaintiff who takes a dismissal; in fact, the clerk is ordinarily the proper official to tax such costs. Ward v. Taylor, 68 N.C. App. 74, 314 S.E.2d 814, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 769, 321 S.E.2d 157 (1984).

Clerk Has No Authority to Order Compensation for Survey. — Where in an action involving a boundary dispute a survey has been ordered and made, and the trial judge has failed to order compensation, the clerk has no authority to do so. Ward v. Taylor, 68 N.C. App. 74, 314 S.E.2d 814, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 769, 321 S.E.2d 157 (1984).

Assistant clerk of the superior court had the authority to tax the cost of a deposi- tion against a plaintiff who took a voluntary dismissal of his case before it reached the trial calendar. Thigpen v. Piver, 37 N.C. App. 382, 246 S.E.2d 67, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 653, 248 S.E.2d 257 (1978).

Deposition Expenses. — Trial court had full authority to tax, in its discretion, deposition expenses as costs pursuant to section (d) of this rule and § 6-20. Alsup v. Pitman, 98 N.C. App. 389, 390 S.E.2d 750 (1990).

"Costs" also includes "deposition expenses," unless the depositions were unnecessary, even though an award of deposition expenses is not expressly allowed by statute. Sealey v. Grine, 115 N.C. App. 343, 444 S.E.2d 632 (1994).

Rule 42. Consolidation; separate trials.

(a) Consolidation. — When actions involving a common question of law or fact are pending in one division of the court, the judge may order a joint hearing or trial of any or all the matters in issue in the actions; he may order all the actions consolidated; and he may make such orders concerning proceedings therein as may tend to avoid unnecessary costs or delay. When actions involving a common question of law or fact are pending in both the superior and the district court of the same county, a judge of the superior court in which the action is pending may order all the actions consolidated, and he may make such orders concerning proceedings therein as may tend to avoid unnecessary costs or delay.

(b) Separate trials. — The court may in furtherance of convenience or to avoid prejudice and shall for considerations of venue upon timely motion order a separate trial of any claim, crossclaim, counterclaim, or third-party claim, or of any separate issue or of any number of claims, crossclaims, counterclaims, third-party claims, or issues. (1967, c. 954, s. 1.)

COMMENT

Section (a), providing for consolidation of actions "involving a common question of law or fact," invokes a power that North Carolina courts have long exercised. See McIntosh, North Carolina Practice and Procedure (1st ed.) pp. 536-537, § 506. Section (b) furnishes the court with the contrasting power of severance. With the multisided lawsuit made possible by these rules, it is safe to say that there will be more frequent occasion for the exercise of this power than formerly. Indeed, the power of severance is an indispensable safety valve to guard against the occasion where a suit of unmanageable size is thrust on the court. Whether or not there should be a severance rests in the sound discretion of the judge. For occasions where severance has been thought appropriate, see 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 42.03.

I. IN GENERAL.

Purpose of Rule. — This rule was enacted in view of the multisided lawsuit made possible by these rules for the purpose of guarding against the occasion where a suit of unmanageable size is thrust on the court. Wallace v. Evans, 60 N.C. App. 145, 298 S.E.2d 193 (1982).

Applied in Frances Hosiery Mills, Inc. v. Burlington Indus., Inc., 19 N.C. App. 678, 200 S.E.2d 668 (1973); Whalehead Properties v. Coastland Corp., 299 N.C. 270, 261 S.E.2d 899 (1980); Behr v. Behr, 46 N.C. App. 694, 266 S.E.2d 393 (1980); Braddy v. Nationwide Mut. Liab. Ins. Co., 122 N.C. App. 402, 470 S.E.2d 820 (1996).

App. 445, 337 S.E.2d 158 (1985); Sharp v. Sharp, 84 N.C. App. 128, 351 S.E.2d 799 (1987); Smith v. Starnes, 88 N.C. App. 609, 364 S.E.2d 442 (1988); Stevenson v. Parsons, 96 N.C. App. 93, 384 S.E.2d 291 (1989); Crump v. Board of Educ., 107 N.C. App. 375, 420 S.E.2d 462 (1992); Cagle v. Teachy, 111 N.C. App. 244, 431 S.E.2d 801 (1993); Griffin v. Griffin, 118 N.C.

II. CONSOLIDATION.

Power of Judge to Consolidate Actions. — A trial court has the discretionary power, even ex mero motu, to consolidate actions for trial. He may do so even though the actions are instituted by different plaintiffs against a common defendant, or by the same plaintiff against several defendants, when the causes of action grow out of the same transaction and substantially the same defenses are interposed, provided that such consolidation results in no prejudice or harmful complications to either party. Greenville City Bd. of Educ. v. Evans, 21 N.C. App. 493, 204 S.E.2d 899, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 588, 206 S.E.2d 862 (1974).

Trial court in the exercise of its discretion may consolidate several cases involving different plaintiffs against a common defendant when the causes of action grow out of the same transaction and substantially the same defenses are interposed, if such consolidation does not result in prejudice or harmful complications to either party. Wood v. Brown, 25 N.C. App. 241, 212 S.E.2d 690, cert. denied, 287 N.C. 469, 215 S.E.2d 626 (1975).

Decision as to Consolidation Is Within Discretion of Trial Judge. — Where two cases were properly before the district court, it was within the discretion of the trial judge as to whether consolidation should be allowed. In re Moore, 11 N.C. App. 320, 181 S.E.2d 118 (1971).

And Will Not Be Disturbed Absent Abuse of Discretion and Showing of Prejudice. — An action of the trial judge as to a matter within his judicial discretion will not be disturbed unless a clear abuse of discretion is shown. Moreover, when the consolidation of actions for the purpose of trial is assigned as error, the appellant must show injury or prejudice arising therefrom. In re Moore, 11 N.C. App. 320, 181 S.E.2d 118 (1971).

The trial court did not abuse its discretion by denying defendant's motion to consolidate cases. Markham v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 125 N.C. App. 443, 481 S.E.2d 349 (1997), cert. denied, 346 N.C. 281, 487 S.E.2d 551 (1997).

Judge Who Will Preside Must Make Consolidation Determination. — Where a judge entered an interlocutory order of consolidation under this rule, which order was entered out of term and out of session, and he was not scheduled to preside at the session of court at which he had set the consolidated cases for trial, such consolidation was in error, since the determination whether or not to consolidate actions for trial is left to the sound discretion of the judge who will preside during the trial. Oxendine v. Catawba County Dep't of Social Servs., 49 N.C. App. 571, 272 S.E.2d 417 (1980), modified and aff'd, 303 N.C. 699, 281 S.E.2d 370 (1981).

The discretionary ruling of one superior court judge to consolidate claims for trial may not be forced upon another superior court judge who is to preside at that trial; therefore, the trial court in a child custody hearing erred in granting defendant's motion to consolidate plaintiffs' custody action and petition for adoption for trial in the superior court where the judge had a hearing on defendant's motion and entered his order of consolidation out of term and out of session, but there was no indication that he was scheduled to preside at the session of court during which he set the consolidated cases to be presented for trial. Oxendine v. Catawba County Dep't of Social Servs., 303 N.C. 699, 281 S.E.2d 370 (1981).

III. SEPARATE TRIALS.

Section (b) Confers Same Power as § 1A-1, Rule 20(b). — Section (b) of this rule, which gives to the trial judge general power to sever, confers the same power contemplated by § 1A-1, Rule 20(b). Aetna Ins. Co. v. Carroll's Transf., Inc., 14 N.C. App. 481, 188 S.E.2d 612 (1972).

Severance Authorized. — Although the basic philosophy of the party joinder provisions is to allow relatively unrestricted initial joinder, there are provisions in § 1A-1, Rule 20(b) and section (b) of this rule for the trial judge to sever and order separate trials. Aetna Ins. Co. v. Carroll's Transf., Inc., 14 N.C. App. 481, 188 S.E.2d 612 (1972); Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Smith, 44 N.C. App. 685, 262 S.E.2d 646, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 379, 267 S.E.2d 685 (1980), overruled on other grounds, Marshall v. Miller, 302 N.C. 539, 276 S.E.2d 397 (1981).

The trial judge has discretion to sever issues for trial in order to further convenience or avoid prejudice. On remand, if the trial judge exercises such discretion, it is recommended that he enter findings and conclusions that will establish the appropriateness of severance. Vance Trucking Co. v. Phillips, 66 N.C. App. 269, 311 S.E.2d 318, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 309, 317 S.E.2d 907 (1984).

Within Discretion of Trial Judge. — Whether or not there should be severance rests in the sound discretion of the trial judge. Aetna Ins. Co. v. Carroll's Transf., Inc., 14 N.C. App. 481, 188 S.E.2d 612 (1972); Wallace v. Evans, 60 N.C. App. 145, 298 S.E.2d 193 (1982).

Severance is not a matter of right, but lies within the court's discretion. Board of Transp. v. Royster, 40 N.C. App. 1, 251 S.E.2d 921 (1979).

The decision to sever issues is in the discretion of the trial judge. Pinner v. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co., 60 N.C. App. 257, 298 S.E.2d

749, cert. denied, 308 N.C. 387, 302 S.E.2d 253 (1983).

While severance is discretionary, this rule provides for exercise of that discretion only in furtherance of convenience or to avoid prejudice. Wallace v. Evans, 60 N.C. App. 145, 298 S.E.2d 193 (1982).

The plain language of subsection (b) vests in the trial court broad discretionary authority to determine when bifurcation is appropriate. Roberts v. Young, 120 N.C. App. 720, 464 S.E.2d 78 (1995).

When Bifurcation Is Appropriate. — A bifurcated trial is particularly appropriate where separate submission of issues avoids confusion and promotes a logical presentation to the jury, and where resolution of a separated issue will potentially dispose of the entire case. In re Will of Hester, 320 N.C. 738, 360 S.E.2d 801, rehearing denied, 321 N.C. 300, 362 S.E.2d 780 (1987).

Separation Held Proper. — Claim against one of several defendants arose from circumstances totally different from those that gave rise to the other claims involved and trying that issue separately was a comparatively simple process that had the advantage of possibly making it unnecessary to try the other issues; therefore, severance of that claim was proper. Hoots v. Toms & Bazzle, 100 N.C. App. 412, 396 S.E.2d 820 (1990).

No Error Where Sound Grounds for Separation Exist. — Since subsection (b) of this rule authorizes the trial judge to order a separate trial of any claim or issue "in furtherance of convenience or to avoid prejudice," the severance of the claim against one of several defendants was within the court's discretion, and was not error since sound grounds therefor existed. Hoots v. Toms & Bazzle, 100 N.C. App. 412, 396 S.E.2d 820 (1990).

Bifurcation of Caveat Proceedings. — Although this rule has most frequently been applied in complicated tort proceedings, there is no reason why bifurcation of a caveat proceeding may not be approached in the same fashion as in other civil litigation. In re Will of Hester, 320 N.C. 738, 360 S.E.2d 801, rehearing denied, 321 N.C. 300, 362 S.E.2d 780 (1987).

Rule 43. Evidence.

(a) Form. — In all trials the testimony of witnesses shall be taken orally in open court, unless otherwise provided by these rules.

(b) Examination of hostile witnesses and adverse parties. — A party may interrogate any unwilling or hostile witness by leading questions and may contradict and impeach him in all respects as if he had been called by the adverse party. A party may call an adverse party or an agent or employee of an adverse party, or an officer, director, or employee of a public or private corporation or of a partnership or association which is an adverse party, or an officer, agent or employee of a state, county or municipal government or agency thereof which is an adverse party, and interrogate him by leading questions and contradict and impeach him in all respects as if he had been called by the adverse party.

(c) Record of excluded evidence. — In an action tried before a jury, if an objection to a question propounded to a witness is sustained by the court, the court on request of the examining attorney shall order a record made of the answer the witness would have given. The court may add such other or further statement as clearly shows the character of the evidence, the form in which it was offered, the objection made and the ruling thereon. In actions tried without a jury the same procedure may be followed, except that the court upon request shall take and report the evidence in full, unless it clearly appears that the evidence is not admissible on any grounds or that the witness is privileged.

(d) Affirmation in lieu of oath. — Whenever under these rules an oath is required to be taken, a solemn affirmation may be accepted in lieu thereof.

(e) Evidence on motions. — When a motion is based on facts not appearing of record the court may hear the matter on affidavits presented by the respective parties, but the court may direct that the matter be heard wholly or partly on oral testimony or depositions. (1967, c. 954, s. 1.)

COMMENT

While these rules do not deal extensively with questions of evidence, matters dealt with by the federal rules have been considered.

Section (a). — This section continues the usual practice of testimony being taken orally in open court. The "unless" clause refers principally to the provisions for the use of depositions in Rule 26(d).

Section (b). — This section deals with the situation where a party is forced to call his adversary as a witness. Under former provisions of § 8-50, one was permitted in this situation to cross-examine the witness and to contradict him but not to impeach him. This latter restriction is removed on the theory that a party who is so desperate as to be forced to call his adversary as a witness should be allowed the greatest latitude in refuting his adversary's testimony, should that be desirable. Section (b) also enlarges and spells out in greater detail the category of witnesses to whom its special provisions apply. The former provisions of § 8-50 said only that where a corporation is a party, its "officers or agents" are within its scope.

Section (c). — This section continues present practice.

Section (d). — This section makes available to all the privilege of using an affirmation instead of an oath. Under § 11-4, only Quakers, Moravians, Dunkers and Mennonites are so privileged.

Section (e). — This section continues present practice.

II. FORM OF EVIDENCE.

Affidavits Preferred for Pretrial Motions. — For pretrial motion hearings it is affidavits and not oral testimony that is the preferred form of evidence. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 60 N.C. App. 699, 300 S.E.2d 241 (1983).

Use of Deposition at Trial Limited. — Although the Rules of Civil Procedure provide extensive rights of discovery to any party, the use of a deposition in a civil case at the trial stage is sharply limited. Maness v. Bullins, 11 N.C. App. 567, 181 S.E.2d 750, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 395, 183 S.E.2d 242 (1971). See also Rule 32.

Oral Testimony in Equitable Distribution Trial. — The trial court may not by rule or otherwise deprive the parties in an equitable distribution trial of the opportunity to present oral testimony in open court. Murrow v. Murrow, 87 N.C. App. 174, 359 S.E.2d 811 (1987).

III. EXAMINATION OF HOSTILE WITNESSES AND ADVERSE PARTIES.

Section (b) of this rule changed the established law of the State applicable to civil cases, while the rule against impeachment of one's own witnesses in criminal cases remains unchanged. State v. Anderson, 283 N.C. 218, 195 S.E.2d 561 (1973).

And Is Counterpart to § 1A-1, Rule 26(e). — See Bowen v. Constructors Equip. Rental Co., 283 N.C. 395, 196 S.E.2d 789 (1973).

Section (b) of this rule is applicable when plaintiff calls defendant as an adverse witness to testify at trial, instead of introducing the adverse examination of the defendant. Bowen v. Constructors Equip. Rental Co., 283 N.C. 395, 196 S.E.2d 789 (1973).

Applicability of Section (b) to Adverse Party's Testimony Under § 1A-1, Rule 26(e). — The rule applicable to the testimony at trial of an adverse party under section (b) of this rule is equally applicable to the adverse party's testimony under adverse examination under § 1A-1, Rule 26(e). Bowen v. Constructors Equip. Rental Co., 283 N.C. 395, 196 S.E.2d 789 (1973).

A party calling his adversary as a witness is not concluded by his uncontradicted testimony, but may rely on such portion of his testimony as is favorable to him, and is not bound by his adverse testimony. Bowen v. Constructors Equip. Rental Co., 283 N.C. 395, 196 S.E.2d 789 (1973).

Right to Elicit Facts Showing Hostility of Witness. — A party to either a civil or criminal proceeding may elicit from an opposing witness on cross-examination particular facts having a logical tendency to show that the witness is biased against him, hostile to his cause or interested adversely to him in the outcome of the litigation. State v. White, 286 N.C. 395, 211 S.E.2d 445 (1975).

Use of Leading Questions on Cross-Examination. — Leading questions may be asked on cross-examination, but the cross-examiner may be barred from doing so when the witness is not in fact unwilling or hostile. Fisher v. Thompson, 50 N.C. App. 724, 275 S.E.2d 507 (1981).

The rulings of the judge on the use of leading questions are discretionary and may not be reversed absent an abuse of that discretion. Fisher v. Thompson, 50 N.C. App. 724, 275 S.E.2d 507 (1981).

Termination of Parental Rights. — A respondent in a proceeding to terminate her parental rights is a party to the proceeding, and may be called to testify as an adverse party when she appeared at the proceeding, and a subpoena was not required. In re Davis, 116 N.C. App. 409, 448 S.E.2d 303, cert. denied, 338 N.C. 516, 452 S.E.2d 808 (1994).

IV. RECORD OF EXCLUDED EVIDENCE.

Right of Counsel to Make Trial Record. — While it is fundamental that trial counsel be allowed to make a trial record sufficient for appellate review, not every failure by the trial court to comply with the rule will be deemed prejudicial error. State v. Rudd, 60 N.C. App. 425, 299 S.E.2d 251 (1983).

Efforts by trial counsel to make a record should rarely occasion threats by the trial judge to incarcerate counsel, lest not only should a good trial record fail to be made, but also that such actions by the trial court may amount to such manifest abuse of the trial court's discretion in the conduct of the trial as to prejudice the outcome. State v. Rudd, 60 N.C. App. 425, 299 S.E.2d 251 (1983).

When attempts to make a record by trial counsel are met by not mere failure or refusal of the trial court to make such a record, but are met also by overt hostility of the trial judge to such efforts, the risks that a good trial record will not be made are significantly increased. State v. Rudd, 60 N.C. App. 425, 299 S.E.2d 251 (1983).

While recognizing that the balancing of the needs of judicial efficiency against lawyer exuberance will often be difficult for the trial judge, the risk of regrettable judicial mistakes will be less likely if trial judges avoid overt hostile reactions to create a record by trial counsel. State v. Rudd, 60 N.C. App. 425, 299 S.E.2d 251 (1983).

The trial judge should be loath to deny an attorney his right to have an excluded answer placed in the record, because the appellate division may not concur in his judgment that the proffered testimony is clearly inadmissible. Nix v. Allstate Ins. Co., 68 N.C. App. 280, 314 S.E.2d 562 (1984).

Exclusion Based on Claim of Privilege. — Normally, excluded evidence must be placed in the record if offered, "unless it clearly appears . . . that the witness is privileged." If the exclusion is based upon a claim of privilege, disclosure of the answer should not be required, as it would in some sense destroy the very privilege ostensibly recognized. Stone v. Martin, 69 N.C. App. 650, 318 S.E.2d 108 (1984).

Section (c) of this rule does not state time to be of the essence in making a motion to let the record show the answers that would have been given to questions to which objections were sustained. State v. Willis, 20 N.C. App. 43, 200 S.E.2d 408 (1973), aff'd, 285 N.C. 195, 204 S.E.2d 33 (1974).

An offer of proof under section (c) of this rule must be specific and must indicate what testimony the excluded witness would give. Currence v. Hardin, 296 N.C. 95, 249 S.E.2d 387 (1978).

Showing of Essential Content of Excluded Testimony Required. — A simple indication or assertion that excluded testimony will concern a physician's diagnosis of a party's condition, although it indicates the general subject of the testimony, is not sufficiently specific for purposes of review. A showing of the essential content or substance of the witness' testimony is required before the court can determine whether the error in excluding the evidence is prejudicial. Currence v. Hardin, 296 N.C. 95, 249 S.E.2d 387 (1978).

Significance of the Excluded Evidence Must Be Shown. — Whether an objection is to the admissibility of testimony or to the competency of a witness to testify, the significance of the excluded evidence must be made to appear in the record if the matter is to be heard on review. Unless the significance of the evidence is obvious from the record, counsel offering the evidence must make a specific offer of what he expects to prove by the answer of the witness. Currence v. Hardin, 296 N.C. 95, 249 S.E.2d 387 (1978).

Exclusion of testimony cannot be held prejudicial on appeal unless appellant shows what witness would have testified if permitted to do so. Spinella v. Pearce, 12 N.C. App. 121, 182 S.E.2d 620 (1971); Gibbs v. Duke, 32 N.C. App. 439, 232 S.E.2d 484, cert. denied, 292 N.C. 640, 235 S.E.2d 61 (1977); Love v. Pressley, 34 N.C. App. 503, 239 S.E.2d 574 (1977), cert. denied, 294 N.C. 441, 241 S.E.2d 843 (1978).

Judge's Refusal to Allow Preservation of Answer Not Prejudicial Error Where Immateriality Is Demonstrated. — While section (c) of this rule specifically requires the judge to preserve the offer of evidence in the record in a civil case, where the witness has already answered the question sufficiently to demonstrate the immateriality of the inquiry, the judge's refusal to allow the preservation of the answer will not be held prejudicial error. State v. Chapman, 294 N.C. 407, 241 S.E.2d 667 (1978).

Or Where Evidence Is Clearly Not Prejudicial. — In actions tried without a jury, answers to questions to which objections have been properly sustained need not be placed into the record by the trial court if the evidence is clearly not admissible on any grounds. Sheppard v. Sheppard, 38 N.C. App. 712, 248 S.E.2d 871 (1978), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 586, 254 S.E.2d 34 (1979).

While section (c) of this rule requires the trial court, upon request, to allow the insertion of excluded evidence in the record, the trial judge is not required to allow insertion of an answer in the record if it clearly appears that the proffered testimony is not admissible on any grounds. Nix v. Allstate Ins. Co., 68 N.C. App. 280, 314 S.E.2d 562 (1984).

V. EVIDENCE ON MOTIONS.

Requirements of § 1A-1, Rule 56(e) Read into Section (e) of this Rule. — To the extent that section (e) of this rule applies to a motion to dismiss, the requirement of § 1A-1, Rule 56(e) that affidavits on motions for summary judgment shall be made on personal knowledge, shall set forth such facts as would be admissible in evidence, and shall show affirmatively that the affiant is competent to testify to the matters stated therein should be read into section (e) of this rule. Moreover, as a motion to dismiss can result in termination of a lawsuit just as much as a motion for summary judgment, the judge should rely only on material that would be admissible at trial in ruling on such a motion. Hankins v. Somers, 39 N.C. App. 617, 251 S.E.2d 640, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 300, 254 S.E.2d 920 (1979).

Evidence as to Motions for Fees. — Since a court may hear motions for fees on affidavits, it is not improper for court to allow fees without giving appellants a chance to cross-examine the receivers, attorneys and accountants as to the services rendered. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 60 N.C. App. 275, 300 S.E.2d 230, aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 309 N.C. 695, 309 S.E.2d 193 (1983).

Oral testimony at a hearing on a motion for summary judgment is admissible by virtue of section (e) of this rule. Walton v. Meir, 14 N.C. App. 183, 188 S.E.2d 56, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 515, 189 S.E.2d 35 (1972).

While under section (e) of this rule oral testimony is permissible on a motion for summary judgment, the admission of such testimony is in the court's discretion. Hillman v. United States Liab. Ins. Co., 59 N.C. App. 145, 296 S.E.2d 302 (1982), cert. denied, 307 N.C. 468, 299 S.E.2d 221 (1983).

For Use in Supplementary Capacity. — Under section (e) of this rule, oral testimony offered at a hearing on a motion under § 1A-1, Rule 56 for summary judgment should be used only in a supplementary capacity, to provide a small link of required evidence, and not as the main evidentiary body of the hearing. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Chantos, 21 N.C. App. 129, 203 S.E.2d 421 (1974).

Although section (e) of this rule does permit the court to hear oral testimony in ruling upon a motion for summary judgment, this procedure should normally be utilized only if a small link of evidence is needed, and not for a long drawn out hearing to determine whether there is to be a trial. Chandler v. Cleveland Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 24 N.C. App. 455, 211 S.E.2d 484 (1975).

Within Discretion of the Court. — While oral testimony is permissible on a motion for summary judgment, the admission of such testimony is in the court's discretion. Pearce Young Angel Co. v. Don Becker Enters., Inc., 43 N.C. App. 690, 260 S.E.2d 104 (1979).

As to propriety of considering affidavits in show cause hearings for injunctions, see State ex rel. Morgan v. Dare to Be Great, Inc., 15 N.C. App. 275, 189 S.E.2d 802 (1972).

For case upholding court's direction that evidentiary hearing on motion for relief from default judgment should be heard wholly on oral testimony, see Webb v. James, 46 N.C. App. 551, 265 S.E.2d 642 (1980).

Rule 44. Proof of official record.

(a) Authentication of copy. — An official record or an entry therein, when admissible for any purpose, may be evidence by an official publication thereof or by a copy attested by the officer having the legal custody of the record, or by his deputy, and accompanied with a certificate that such officer has the custody. If the office in which the record is kept is without the State of North Carolina but within the United States or within a territory or insular possession subject to the dominion of the United States, the certificate may be made by a judge of a court of record of the political subdivision in which the record is kept, authenticated by the seal of the court, or may be made by any public officer having a seal of office and having official duties in the political subdivision in which the record is kept, authenticated by the seal of his office. If the office in which the record is kept is in a foreign state or country, the certificate may be made by a secretary of embassy or legation, consul general, consul, vice-consul, or consular agent or by any officer in the foreign service of the United States stationed in the foreign state or country in which the record is kept, and authenticated by the seal of his office.

(b) Proof of lack of record. — A written statement signed by an officer having the custody of an official record or by his deputy that after diligent search no record or entry of a specified tenor is found to exist in the records of his office, accompanied by a certificate as above provided, is admissible as evidence that the records of his office contain no such record or entry.

(c) Other proof. — This rule does not prevent the proof of official records specified in Title 28, U.S.C. §§ 1738 and 1739 in the manner therein provided; nor of entry or lack of entry in official records by any method authorized by any other applicable statute or by the rules of evidence at common law. (1967, c. 954, s. 1.)

COMMENT

North Carolina had no general statute, applying to all official custodians of records, in respect to the proof of official records. Section (a) supplies this omission and makes unnecessary reliance on statutes applicable to particular custodians and to particular situations. For reference to and discussion of the North Carolina statutes, see Stansbury, North Carolina Evidence, § 154.

Section (b) provides a simple method for producing evidence of nonexistence of a record.

Section (c), out of an abundance of caution, leaves as alternative methods of proof any methods now existing. For various statutes, see Chapter 8 of the General Statutes, Article 2 and Article 3. 28 U.S.C., §§ 1738 and 1739 have to do with proof of records in other states and in territories and possessions of the United States. In addition, the two sections prescribe the "faith and credit" these records are to have when duly authenticated.

CASE NOTES

Authentication of Copy. — Minutes of a meeting of the Joint Appropriations Expansion Budget Committee on Education were properly admitted although they were not admitted into evidence through the legislative librarian, where the minutes were introduced through an administrative officer for the General Assembly and custodian of materials contained in the legislative library and the minutes were testified to be a true and accurate copy of the original of the minutes. This was sufficient authentication of the official minutes. Morgan v. Polk County Bd. of Educ., 74 N.C. App. 169, 328 S.E.2d 320 (1985).

Presumption of Validity. — Once a judgment creditor was entitled to a presumption that an out of state judgment was entitled to full faith and credit, the plaintiff was not required to bring forth evidence that none of the defenses available to defendants were valid; rather the defendants were required to bring forth evidence to rebut the presumption of validity, and, as the defendants offered no such evidence, the trial court correctly ordered that the plaintiff's motion to enforce the judgment be allowed and ordered that the out of state judgment be given full faith and credit. Lust v. Fountain of Life, Inc., 110 N.C. App. 298, 429 S.E.2d 435 (1993).

Applied in Neff v. Queen City Coach Co., 16 N.C. App. 466, 192 S.E.2d 587 (1972); Downey v. Downey, 29 N.C. App. 375, 224 S.E.2d 255 (1976); Moye v. Thrifty Gas Co., 40 N.C. App. 310, 252 S.E.2d 837 (1979); Thelen v. Thelen, 53 N.C. App. 684, 281 S.E.2d 737 (1981).

Rule 44.1. Determination of foreign law.

A party who intends to raise an issue concerning the law of a foreign country shall give notice by pleadings or by other reasonable written notice. The court, in determining foreign law, may consider any relevant material or source, including testimony, whether or not submitted by a party or admissible under Chapter 8 of the General Statutes and State law. The court's determination shall be treated as a ruling on a question of law. (1995, c. 389, s. 5.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1995, c. 389, s. 6, provides that this rule is effective October 1, 1995, and applicable to civil actions filed on or after that date.

Rule 45. Subpoena.

(a) For attendance of witnesses; issuances; form. — A subpoena for the purpose of obtaining the testimony of a witness in a pending cause shall, except as hereinafter provided, be issued at the request of any party by the clerk of superior court for the county in which the hearing or trial is to be held. A subpoena shall be directed to the witness, shall state the name of the court and the title of the action, the name of the party at whose instance the witness is summoned, and shall command the person to whom it is directed to attend and give testimony at a time and place therein specified. The clerk shall issue a subpoena, or a subpoena for the production of documentary evidence, signed but otherwise in blank, to a party requesting it, who shall fill it in before service. A subpoena for a witness or witnesses need not be signed by the clerk, and is sufficient if signed by the party or his attorney. A subpoena for the production of documentary evidence need not be signed by the clerk, and is sufficient if signed by the attorney requesting the same.

(b) Issuance by a judge. — Such subpoena may also be issued by any judge of the superior court, judge of the district court, or magistrate.

(c) For production of documentary evidence. — A subpoena may also command the person to whom it is directed to produce the records, books, papers, documents, or tangible things designated therein. Where the subpoena commands any custodian of public records to appear for the sole purpose of producing certain records in his custody, the custodian subpoenaed may, in lieu of a personal appearance, tender to the court by registered mail certified copies of the records requested, together with an affidavit by the custodian as to the authentication of the record tendered or, if no such records are in his custody, an affidavit to that effect. Any original or certified copy or affidavit delivered under the provisions of this rule, unless otherwise objectionable, shall be admissible in any action or proceeding without further certification or authentication. Where the subpoena commands any custodian of hospital medical records (as defined in G.S. 8-44.1) to appear for the sole purpose of producing certain records in his custody, the custodian subpoenaed may, in lieu of a personal appearance, tender to the presiding judge or designee by registered mail or by personal delivery at no cost certified copies of the records requested, on or before the time specified in the subpoena, together with a copy of the subpoena and an affidavit by the custodian testifying to the identity and authenticity of the records, that they are true and correct copies, and as appropriate, that the records were made and kept in the regular course of business at or near the time of the acts, conditions, or events recorded, and that they were made by persons having knowledge of the information set forth; or if no such records are in his custody, an affidavit to that effect. When the copies of medical records are personally delivered, a receipt shall be obtained from the person receiving the records. Any original or certified copy of medical records, or affidavit, delivered according to the provisions of this rule shall not be held inadmissible in any action or proceeding on the grounds that it lacks certification, identification, or authentication, and it shall be received as evidence if otherwise admissible. The copies of the medical records so tendered shall not be open to inspection or copy by any persons, except to the parties to the case or proceeding and their attorneys in depositions, until ordered published by the judge at the time of the hearing or trial. Nothing contained herein shall be construed to waive the physician-patient privilege or to require any privileged communications under law to be disclosed. The judge, upon motion to quash or modify made promptly and in any event at or before the time specified in the subpoena for compliance therewith, may

(1) Quash or modify the subpoena if it is unreasonable and oppressive and in such case may order the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued to pay the person to whom the subpoena is directed part or all of his reasonable expenses including attorneys' fees or

(2) Grant the motion unless the party in whose behalf the subpoena is issued advances the reasonable cost of producing the records, books, papers, documents, or tangible things.

(d) Subpoena for taking depositions. —

(1) Proof of service of a notice to take a deposition as provided in Rules 30(a) and 31(a) constitutes a sufficient authorization for the issuance by the clerk of the superior court for the county in which the deposition is to be taken of subpoenas for the persons named or described therein. The subpoena may command the person to whom it is directed to produce designated records, books, papers, documents, or tangible things which constitute or contain evidence relating to any of the matters within the scope of the examination permitted by Rule 26(b), but in that event the subpoena will be subject to the provisions of section (c) of Rule 26 and section (c) of this rule.

The person to whom the subpoena is directed may, within 10 days after the service thereof or on or before the time specified in the subpoena for compliance if such time is less than 10 days after service, serve upon the attorney designated in the subpoena written objection to inspection or copying of any or all of the designated materials. If objection is made, the party serving the subpoena shall not be entitled to inspect and copy the materials except pursuant to an order of the court from which the subpoena was issued. The party serving the subpoena may, if objection has been made, move upon notice to the deponent for an order at any time before or during the taking of the deposition.

(2) Repealed by Session Laws 1975, c. 762, s. 3.

(e) Service. — All subpoenas may be served by the sheriff, by his deputy, by a coroner or by any other person not less than 18 years of age, who is not a party. Service of a subpoena for the production of documentary evidence may be made only by the delivery of a copy to the person named therein or by registered or certified mail, return receipt requested. Service of a subpoena for the attendance of a witness may be made by telephone communication with the person named therein only by an authorized server who shall be a sheriff, his designee who is not less than 18 years of age and not a party, or coroner, or by delivery of a copy to the person named therein or by registered or certified mail, return receipt requested, by any person authorized by this section to serve subpoenas. Personal service shall be proved by return of a sheriff, his deputy, or a coroner making service and by return under oath of any other person making service. Service by telephone communication shall be proved by return of the authorized process server, noting the method of service. Service by registered or certified mail shall be proved by filing the return receipt with the return.

(f) Punishment for failure to obey. — Failure by any person without adequate cause to obey a subpoena served upon him may be deemed a contempt of the court from which the subpoena issued. Failure by a party without adequate cause to obey a subpoena served upon him shall also subject such party to the sanctions provided in Rule 37(d). (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1969, c. 886, s. 1; 1971, c. 159; 1975, c. 762, s. 3; 1983, c. 665, s. 1; c. 722; 1989, c. 262, s. 1.)

COMMENT

Comment to this Rule as Originally Enacted. — This rule would seem to be largely self-explanatory. An effort has been made to provide a convenient and highly flexible practice in respect to subpoenas. It will be noted that the subpoena is to be directed to the witness rather than to the sheriff as our present statute provides. The party obtaining the subpoena will deliver it to the appropriate sheriff or other proper person for service.

The differences between sections (a) and (c) on the one hand, and section (d) on the other should also be noted. In sections (a) and (c), it is contemplated that the subpoena will issue from the court where the action is to be tried wherever the witness is likely to be found, while in section (d) the idea is that the subpoena shall issue from the court of the county where the deposition is to be taken. The limitations of section (d) in no way affect where the subpoena may be served nor do they in any way apply to sections (a) and (c).

Comment to the 1975 Amendment. — Section (d). — The reference in subsection (d)(1) is amended to conform to the relocation of the section to which it refers. The second paragraph of subsection (d)(1) is borrowed from the federal rule. Former subsection (d)(2) is relocated to Rule 30(b)(1) where, as modified, it applies to all deponents, and not just those whose presence can be compelled only by subpoena.

Section (e). — This provision is amended to require service of a copy of a subpoena duces tecum by delivery or by registered or certified mail and to allow a person other than a sheriff, his deputy or a coroner to serve a subpoena for the attendance of a witness by registered or certified mail. The amendment also requires the server to be of legal age.

By extension, then, the Superior Courts of North Carolina continue to possess such power where the interests of justice so require. In re Superior Court Order Dated April 8, 1983, 70 N.C. App. 63, 318 S.E.2d 843 (1984), rev'd on other grounds, 315 N.C. 378, 338 S.E.2d 307 (1986).

In order to compel the deposition testimony of a nonparty, a subpoena must be issued from the county in which the deposition is to be taken, and a proper subpoena should have been issued from the Clerk of Superior Court of Wake County directing a nonparty in a divorce case to appear in Wake County; therefore, nonparty and her attorney were substantially justified in opposing the discovery sought pursuant to the subpoena issued from Mecklenburg County, and the trial court's imposition of attorneys' fees under § 1A-1, Rule 37(a)(4) was error. Cochran v. Cochran, 93 N.C. App. 574, 378 S.E.2d 580 (1989).

Where it was evident that plaintiffs waited until the last minute to serve an extremely broad subpoena, the court properly found that the subpoena was unreasonable and oppressive and did not abuse its discretion in quashing it. Ward v. Taylor, 68 N.C. App. 74, 314 S.E.2d 814, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 769, 321 S.E.2d 157 (1984).

Applied in State v. Neely, 26 N.C. App. 707, 217 S.E.2d 94 (1975); State v. Wells, 290 N.C. 485, 226 S.E.2d 325 (1976); Wilson v. Wilson, 124 N.C. App. 371, 477 S.E.2d 254 (1996).

Rule 46. Objections and exceptions.

(a) Rulings on admissibility of evidence. —

(1) When there is objection to the admission of evidence on the ground that the witness is for a specified reason incompetent or not qualified or disqualified, it shall be deemed that a like objection has been made to any subsequent admission of evidence from the witness in question. Similarly, when there is objection to the admission of evidence involving a specified line of questioning, it shall be deemed that a like objection has been taken to any subsequent admission of evidence involving the same line of questioning.

(2) If there is proper objection to the admission of evidence and the objection is overruled, the ruling of the court shall be deemed excepted to by the party making the objection. If an objection to the admission of evidence is sustained or if the court for any reason excludes evidence offered by a party, the ruling of the court shall be deemed excepted to by the party offering the evidence.

(3) No objections are necessary with respect to questions propounded to a witness by the court or a juror but it shall be deemed that each such question has been properly objected to and that the objection has been overruled and that an exception has been taken to the ruling of the court by all parties to the action.

(b) Rulings and orders not directed to the admissibility of evidence. — With respect to rulings and orders of the court not directed to the admissibility of evidence, formal objections and exceptions are unnecessary. In order to preserve an exception to any such ruling or order or to the court's failure to make any such ruling or order, it shall be sufficient if a party, at the time the ruling or order is made or sought, makes known to the court his objection to the action of the court or makes known the action which he desires the court to take and his ground therefor; and if a party has no opportunity to object or except to a ruling or order at the time it is made, the absence of an objection or exception does not thereafter prejudice him.

(c) Instruction. — If there is error, either in the refusal of the judge to grant a prayer for instructions, or in granting a prayer, or in his instructions generally, the same is deemed excepted to without the filing of any formal objections. (1967, c. 954, s. 1.)

COMMENT

Section (a)(1) is aimed at situations where repeated objections in respect to the admission of evidence have been necessary in order to assure review. In Shelton v. Southern Ry., 193 N.C. 670, 139 S.E. 232 (1927), the court declared:

"It is thoroughly established in this State that, if incompetent evidence is admitted over objection, but the same evidence has theretofore or thereafter been given in other parts of the examination, the benefit of the exception is ordinarily lost."

This proposition has recently been reaffirmed in Dunes Club, Inc. v. Cherokee Ins. Co., 259 N.C. 293, 130 S.E.2d 625 (1963). Thus, apparently the only course of safety for counsel to follow under prior practice would be to object at every opportunity. It would seem that a single objection should suffice in either of the two situations specified in subsection (a)(1).

Section (a)(2) continues the present practice.

Section (a)(3) continues the present practice of making unnecessary objection or exception with respect to questions propounded by a juror or the judge. See former § 1-206(d).

Section (b), it will be noted, applies to all nonevidentiary rulings and orders. In this respect, it is new. However, the general principle of the section has been in North Carolina practice for some time in respect to rulings on motions for nonsuit. See former § 1-183.

Section (c) continues present practice. See former § 1-206, subsection (b), and the note to Rule 51.

CASE NOTES

I. In General.
II. Decisions under Prior Law.

I. IN GENERAL.

Subsection (a)(1) of this rule operates to preserve the continued effect of a specific objection, once made, to a particular line of questioning. It eliminates, therefore, the burdens and tactical disadvantages which would otherwise result to objecting counsel from the necessity for repeated statements of essentially the same objection. Duke Power Co. v. Winebarger, 300 N.C. 57, 265 S.E.2d 227 (1980).

But subsection (a)(1) of this rule does not modify the general principle that the benefit of an objection, seasonably made, is lost if thereafter substantially the same evidence is admitted without any objection. Duke Power Co. v. Winebarger, 300 N.C. 57, 265 S.E.2d 227 (1980).

General Objection Insufficient Under Subsection (a)(1). — A general objection will not suffice to afford counsel the benefits of subsection (a)(1) of this rule. Rather, objecting counsel must alert the trial judge to the specific legal infirmities which may inhere in a "specified line of questioning." If at that point counsel's objection is overruled, he is entitled to assume that the court will continue to make the same ruling in response to subsequent objections to the same line of questioning. Duke Power Co. v. Winebarger, 300 N.C. 57, 265 S.E.2d 227 (1980).

A general objection will not enable a party to take advantage of subsection (a)(1) of this rule. Butler & Sidbury, Inc. v. Green St. Baptist Church, 90 N.C. App. 65, 367 S.E.2d 380 (1988).

In order to obtain the benefit of subsection (a)(1) of this rule, either the objecting party must precisely define the objectionable line of questioning, or the line of questioning objected to must be apparent to the court and the parties. Butler & Sidbury, Inc. v. Green St. Baptist Church, 90 N.C. App. 65, 367 S.E.2d 380 (1988).

Requirement of subsection (a)(1) of this rule that counsel object to a "specified" line of questioning was obviously satisfied where the "line" of questioning objected to was apparent to the court and the parties. Duke Power Co. v. Winebarger, 300 N.C. 57, 265 S.E.2d 227 (1980); McKay v. Parham, 63 N.C. App. 349, 304 S.E.2d 784 (1983), cert. denied, 310 N.C. 477, 312 S.E.2d 885 (1984).

Section (b) of this rule only requires a statement of the grounds for an objection, not the case law in support thereof. Doby v. Fowler, 49 N.C. App. 162, 270 S.E.2d 532 (1980).

Where no proper exception was made, but the transcript showed that the plaintiff informed the court of his opposition to the directed verdict and the grounds for his opposition, the exception was properly preserved pursuant to section (b) of this rule. McKay v. Parham, 63 N.C. App. 349, 304 S.E.2d 784 (1983), cert. denied, 310 N.C. 477, 312 S.E.2d 885 (1984).

Preserving Matters Underlying a Motion in Limine. — It is not sufficient to simply file a pretrial motion in limine to exclude evidence which the trial judge has not heard; to preserve for appeal matters underlying a motion in limine, the movant must make at least general objection when the evidence is offered at trial. Beaver v. Hampton, 106 N.C. App. 172, 416 S.E.2d 8 (1992), rev'd in part and aff'd in part, 333 N.C. 455, 427 S.E.2d 317 (1993).

Right of Court to Exclude Evidence on Its Own Motion. — In the exercise of its right to control and regulate the conduct of a trial, a trial court may, of its own motion, exclude or strike evidence which is wholly incompetent or inadmissible for any purpose, even though no objection is interposed to such evidence; the exercise of such right must be kept within proper bounds. Worrell v. Hennis Credit Union, 12 N.C. App. 275, 182 S.E.2d 874 (1971).

Failure to Object to Discussion Between Court and Jurors. — Plaintiff who did not object or otherwise voice a concern during a discussion between the court and jurors regarding court's procedure for correcting jury's failure to deliberate on the issues, failed to preserve an exception to that procedure. Tin Originals, Inc. v. Colonial Tin Works, Inc., 98 N.C. App. 663, 391 S.E.2d 831 (1990).

Applied in State v. Hunter, 290 N.C. 556, 227 S.E.2d 535 (1976); Nicholson v. Hugh Chatham Mem. Hosp., 43 N.C. App. 615, 259 S.E.2d 586 (1979); Ingle v. Allen, 71 N.C. App. 20, 321 S.E.2d 588 (1984); State v. McGill, 73 N.C. App. 206, 326 S.E.2d 345 (1985); State v. Bright, 78 N.C. App. 239, 337 S.E.2d 87 (1985); In re Brenner, 83 N.C. App. 242, 350 S.E.2d 140 (1986); Holley v. Hercules, Inc., 86 N.C. App. 624, 359 S.E.2d 47 (1987); Badgett v. Davis, 104 N.C. App. 760, 411 S.E.2d 200 (1991); State v. Moore, 107 N.C. App. 388, 420 S.E.2d 691 (1992).

Stated in Barbour v. Little, 37 N.C. App. 686, 247 S.E.2d 252 (1978); Skvarla v. Park, 62 N.C. App. 482, 303 S.E.2d 354 (1983).

II. DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW.

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former § 1-206.

Exceptions taken upon the trial should be as specific as possible and should point out the nature of the error complained of. Williams v. Johnston, 94 N.C. 633 (1886); State v. English, 164 N.C. 497, 80 S.E. 72 (1913). See Streator v. Streator, 145 N.C. 337, 59 S.E. 112 (1907); Hendricks v. Ireland, 162 N.C. 523, 77 S.E. 1011 (1913).

A "broadside" exception cannot be entertained on appeal. Kelly v. Johnson, 135 N.C. 650, 47 S.E. 672 (1904); Jackson v. Williams, 152 N.C. 203, 67 S.E. 755 (1910).

Formal Objections to Charge Not Required. — Errors in charge of the court, or the granting or refusing to grant prayers for instruction, shall be deemed excepted to without the filing of any formal objections, if specifically raised and properly presented in the case on appeal, and prepared and tendered in proper time; and when exceptions are taken, they should be considered and passed upon by the trial court, and upon being overruled, should be made to appear in the record on the appeal. Paul v. Burton, 180 N.C. 45, 104 S.E. 37 (1920). See also, Rice v. Swannanoa-Berkeley Hotel Co., 209 N.C. 519, 184 S.E. 3 (1936).

Omitted Charge Not Error Absent Request Therefor. — An omission to give a charge to which a party would have been entitled is not error, unless the same was requested on the trial and refused. Fry v. Currie, 91 N.C. 436 (1884), rehearing denied, 103 N.C. 203, 9 S.E. 393 (1889).

Exception to Charge Held Sufficient. — Where the judge below, in instructing the jury, submitted a phase of a question which there was no evidence to support, an oral exception to the question immediately taken, noted, and assigned as error for the case on appeal was sufficient to present the matter on appeal, even though no written instruction on the subject was prayed for by the excepting counsel. Lee v. Williams, 112 N.C. 510, 17 S.E. 165 (1893).

Exceptions to Instructions May be Raised on Appeal. — In regard to the trial court's instructions as to applicable law and as to the contentions of the parties with respect to such law, a party is not required to except at the trial, but may set out exceptions for the first time in his case on appeal. State v. Lambe, 232 N.C. 570, 61 S.E.2d 608 (1950). See also, Cherry v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 186 N.C. 263, 119 S.E. 361 (1923).

Rule 47. Jurors.

Inquiry as to the fitness and competency of any person to serve as a juror and the challenging of such person shall be as provided in Chapter 9 of the General Statutes. (1967, c. 954, s. 1.)

Rule 48. Juries of less than twelve — majority verdict.

Except in actions in which a jury is required by statute, the parties may stipulate that the jury will consist of any number less than 12 or that a verdict or a finding of a stated majority of the jurors shall be taken as the verdict or finding of the jury. (1967, c. 954, s. 1.)

COMMENT

Since jury trial may be waived entirely, it is certainly appropriate with the consent of the parties that trial be by a jury of less than 12 and that the usual rule of unanimity not prevail. The rule recognizes the exception in actions for divorce provided by § 50-10. Under the rule therefore, if there is a jury trial in a divorce action (there may not be; § 50-10 provides for waiver when the ground alleged is one year's separation) it will be by a jury of 12 and the rule of unanimity will prevail.

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1980 law on civil procedure, see 59 N.C.L. Rev. 1047 (1981).

CASE NOTES

When Agreement Pursuant to Rule May Be Made. — An agreement, made pursuant to this rule, that a verdict of a majority of the jurors will be accepted as the verdict, need not be made before the jury begins its deliberations, but may be made at any time, and defendant who agreed to accept a verdict of less than 12 could not complain when the verdict ultimately rendered was 11 to one, and the court accepted it as the verdict. U.S. Indus., Inc. v. Tharpe, 47 N.C. App. 754, 268 S.E.2d 824, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 90, 273 S.E.2d 311 (1980).

Rule 49. Verdicts.

(a) General and special verdicts. — The judge may require a jury to return either a general or a special verdict and in all cases may instruct the jury, if it renders a general verdict, to find upon particular questions of fact, to be stated in writing, and may direct a written finding thereon. A general verdict is that by which the jury pronounces generally upon all or any of the issues, either in favor of the plaintiff or defendant. A special verdict is that by which the jury finds the facts only.

(b) Framing of issues. — Issues shall be framed in concise and direct terms, and prolixity and confusion must be avoided by not having too many issues. The issues, material to be tried, must be made up by the attorneys appearing in the action, or by the judge presiding, and reducing to writing, before or during the trial.

(c) Waiver of jury trial on issue. — If, in submitting the issues to the jury, the judge omits any issue of fact raised by the pleadings or by the evidence, each party waives his right to a trial by jury of the issue so omitted unless before the jury retires he demands its submission to the jury. As to an issue omitted without such demand the judge may make a finding; or, if he fails to do so, he shall be deemed to have made a finding in accord with the judgment entered.

(d) Special finding inconsistent with general verdict. — Where a special finding of facts is inconsistent with the general verdict, the former controls, and the judge shall give judgment accordingly. (1967, c. 954, s. 1.)

COMMENT

A distinguished scholar has said that the North Carolina verdict practice "has enabled, more than any other factor perhaps, a very small judiciary to care for the litigation of one of the larger states." Green, A New Development in Jury Trial, 13 ABAJ 715, at p. 716 (1927). The Commission shares this high opinion of the North Carolina practice and, in its more essential respects, the Commission proposed its retention. It will be observed that sections (a), (b) and (d) are practically drawn verbatim from former §§ 1-200 [section (b) of this rule]; 1-201 [the last two sentences of section (a)]; § 1-202 [section (d)]; former § 1-203 [the first sentence of section (a)].

There are some changes produced by the rule. Former § 1-203 permitted the jury "in their discretion" to return either a general or special verdict "in every action for the recovery of money only or specific real property." No instances of an exercise of this discretion were known to the Commission, and it saw no purpose in not allowing the judge to control the form of verdict. Accordingly, it omitted any reference to the jury's discretion in this respect.

Section (c) changes the law in respect to issues omitted by the judge in submitting a case to the jury. The right to jury trial on such issues would be lost in the absence of a demand for such submission and the judge would be empowered to make a finding on the issue in question. The idea is that the inadvertent omission of an issue ought not to jeopardize a whole trial when an impartial fact finder is on hand to make the requisite finding. Ample means for a party to protect his right to jury trial on all issues are clearly available. All he has to do is demand their submission "before the jury retires."

Section (c) also employs, in the case of an omitted issue and an omitted finding by the judge, a presumption of a finding in accord with the judgment. Formerly, in this situation, nothing was presumed in support of the judgment in jury cases. Tucker v. Satterthwaite, 120 N.C. 118, 27 S.E. 45 (1897).

Finally, it will be observed that the rule speaks of issues "raised in the pleadings or by the evidence." Normally, the issues will be raised by the pleadings but under Rule 15(b) provision is made for regarding the pleadings as amended whenever an issue outside the pleadings is tried with consent of the parties, express or implied. Thus, it will not be essential for the pleadings to reflect, on every occasion, all the issues.

CASE NOTES

I. In General.
II. Decisions under Prior Law.

I. IN GENERAL.

Purpose. — This rule was designed to prevent otherwise proper trials from being jeopardized through the inadvertent omission of an issue. Vernon v. Crist, 291 N.C. 646, 231 S.E.2d 591 (1977).

Section (b) of this rule contains substantially the same language as former § 1-200. Brant v. Compton, 16 N.C. App. 184, 191 S.E.2d 383, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 672, 196 S.E.2d 809 (1972).

Issues in a case arise only upon the controverted material facts raised by the pleadings and supported by the evidence. Crowder v. Jenkins, 11 N.C. App. 57, 180 S.E.2d 482 (1971).

The judge is required to submit such issues as are necessary to settle the material controversies arising on the pleadings. Harrison v. McLear, 49 N.C. App. 121, 270 S.E.2d 577 (1980).

It is the duty of the judge, either of his own motion or at the suggestion of counsel, to submit such issues as are necessary to settle the material controversies arising on the pleadings. Howell v. Howell, 24 N.C. App. 127, 210 S.E.2d 216 (1974).

It is the duty of the trial judge to submit to the jury such issues as are necessary to settle the material controversies raised in the pleadings. Link v. Link, 278 N.C. 181, 179 S.E.2d 697 (1971); Rental Towel & Uniform Serv. v. Bynum Int'l, Inc., 304 N.C. 174, 282 S.E.2d 426 (1981).

It is the duty of the trial judge to submit to the jury issues which are raised by the evidence, and which, when answered, will resolve all material controversies between the parties. Wooten v. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 60 N.C. App. 268, 298 S.E.2d 727, cert. denied, 308 N.C. 392, 302 S.E.2d 258 (1983); La Notte, Inc. v. New Way Gourmet, Inc., 83 N.C. App. 480, 350 S.E.2d 889 (1986), appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 319 N.C. 459, 354 S.E.2d 888 (1987).

The trial judge must submit to the jury all issues which are necessary to settle the material controversies arising out of the pleadings. Winston-Salem Joint Venture v. City of Winston-Salem, 65 N.C. App. 532, 310 S.E.2d 58 (1983).

The issues to be submitted to the jury are those raised by the pleadings and supported by the evidence. Johnson v. Massengill, 280 N.C. 376, 186 S.E.2d 168 (1972).

Form and number of issues submitted is a matter which rests in the sound discretion of the trial judge, assuming that the issue is raised by the pleadings, liberally construed. Link v. Link, 278 N.C. 181, 179 S.E.2d 697 (1971).

Ordinarily it is within the sound discretion of the trial judge as to the form of the issues. Brant v. Compton, 16 N.C. App. 184, 191 S.E.2d 383, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 672, 196 S.E.2d 809 (1972).

The number, form and phraseology of the issues lie within the sound discretion of the trial court, and the issues will not be held for error if they are sufficiently comprehensive to resolve all factual controversies and to enable the court to render a judgment fully determining the cause. Rental Towel & Uniform Serv. v. Bynum Int'l, Inc., 304 N.C. 174, 282 S.E.2d 426 (1981).

The form and number of issues to be submitted is a matter which rests in the sound discretion of the trial judge, assuming that the issue is raised by the pleadings, liberally construed. Lenins v. K-Mart Corp., 98 N.C. App. 590, 391 S.E.2d 843 (1990).

The trial judge must explain and apply the law to the specific facts pertinent to the issue involved. Harrison v. McLear, 49 N.C. App. 121, 270 S.E.2d 577 (1980).

Separate Submission of Related Issues Upheld. — Where the allegations of the complaint were sufficient to justify submission to the jury of the questions of fraud, duress and undue influence, which are not synonymous although they overlap to some degree, submission of these several possibilities in a single issue would have been confusing and would have necessitated an exceedingly complicated charge; thus there was no abuse of the trial court's discretion in their submission as three separate issues. Link v. Link, 278 N.C. 181, 179 S.E.2d 697 (1971).

In a will caveat proceeding, the parties may not waive, either by consent or by implication, jury resolution of an issue upon which the evidence is in conflict and material facts are in controversy and, therefore, the provisions of subsection (c) cannot apply and the trial judge cannot resolve disputed factual issues in such proceeding. In re Will of Dunn, 129 N.C. App. 321, 500 S.E.2d 99 (1998), review dismissed and review denied, 348 N.C. 693, 511 S.E.2d 645 (1998).

Failure to Submit Issue Held Error. — Where the evidence presented was ample to allow the jury to make a finding on an issue, the trial court erred by not submitting the issue requested. Brewer v. Harris, 279 N.C. 288, 182 S.E.2d 345 (1971).

Trial court did not err in failing to submit an issue as to whether the parties had entered into a contract as alleged in the complaint, where defendant did not deny plaintiff's allegations as to the making of the contract or the terms thereof and did not allege a different contract, and where defendant made no demand for the submission of such an issue. Johnson v. Massengill, 280 N.C. 376, 186 S.E.2d 168 (1972).

The trial judge may vacate the answer to a particular issue when to do so does not affect or alter the import of the answers to the other issues. Southern Nat'l Bank v. Pocock, 29 N.C. App. 52, 223 S.E.2d 518, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 94, 225 S.E.2d 324 (1976).

Waiver of issue by failure to object. — By application of section (c) of this rule, where the defendants failed to object to the first issue submitted to the jury, they waived their right to appeal on the ground that it was erroneous. Barnett v. Security Ins. Co., 84 N.C. App. 376, 352 S.E.2d 855 (1987).

Right to have an issue of fact determined by the jury is waived unless a party demands its submission before the jury retires. Superior Foods, Inc. v. Harris-Teeter Super Mkts., Inc., 288 N.C. 213, 217 S.E.2d 566 (1975).

Assuming the plaintiff's evidence warranted the submission of an issue of punitive damages, plaintiff waived his right to have this issue submitted when he tendered to the court the issues which were submitted and failed to request the submission of an issue of punitive damages. Frazier v. Glasgow, 24 N.C. App. 641, 211 S.E.2d 852, cert. denied, 286 N.C. 722, 213 S.E.2d 721 (1975).

When defendants neither objected to an issue which was submitted to the jury nor requested the court to submit the issue, they waived their right to have such issue passed upon by the jury. Van Poole v. Masser, 25 N.C. App. 203, 212 S.E.2d 548 (1975).

If the parties consent to the issues submitted or do not object at the time or ask for different or additional issues, the objection cannot be made later. Brant v. Compton, 16 N.C. App. 184, 191 S.E.2d 383, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 672, 196 S.E.2d 809 (1972).

Where the jury's findings are indefinite or inconsistent, the presiding judge may give additional instructions and direct the jury to retire again to bring in a proper verdict, but he may not tell them what their verdict shall be. Southern Nat'l Bank v. Pocock, 29 N.C. App. 52, 223 S.E.2d 518, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 94, 225 S.E.2d 324 (1976).

Resubmission of Issues for Inconsistency. — In an action to recover on a written contract of guaranty, where the trial judge noted inconsistency in the jury's answers to the third and fourth issues, which related only to the amount of damages, it was within the court's sound discretion to either resubmit all issues or resubmit only on issues as to damages. Southern Nat'l Bank v. Pocock, 29 N.C. App. 52, 223 S.E.2d 518, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 94, 225 S.E.2d 324 (1976).

Finding Deemed Made in Accord with Judgment Entered. — Where an alleged usage of trade was not in writing, the question of its existence was not submitted to the jury as an issue of fact, plaintiff made no demand for its submission before the jury retired, and the trial judge himself made no finding on the issue, the judge was "deemed to have made a finding in accord with the judgment entered." Superior Foods, Inc. v. Harris-Teeter Super Mkts., Inc., 288 N.C. 213, 217 S.E.2d 566 (1975).

Before a verdict is complete it must be accepted by the court. Southern Nat'l Bank v. Pocock, 29 N.C. App. 52, 223 S.E.2d 518, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 94, 225 S.E.2d 324 (1976).

It is the duty of the presiding judge, before accepting a verdict, to scrutinize its form and substance to prevent insufficient or inconsistent findings from becoming a record of the court. Southern Nat'l Bank v. Pocock, 29 N.C. App. 52, 223 S.E.2d 518, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 94, 225 S.E.2d 324 (1976).

Applied in Streeter v. Streeter, 33 N.C. App. 679, 236 S.E.2d 185 (1977); Saintsing v. Taylor, 57 N.C. App. 467, 291 S.E.2d 880 (1982); Stiles v. Charles M. Morgan Co., 64 N.C. App. 328, 307 S.E.2d 409 (1983); Fallston Finishing, Inc. v. First Union Nat'l Bank, 76 N.C. App. 347, 333 S.E.2d 321 (1985); Dobruck v. Lineback, 77 N.C. App. 233, 334 S.E.2d 455 (1985); Petty v. City of Charlotte, 85 N.C. App. 391, 355 S.E.2d 210 (1987); Morris v. Bailey, 86 N.C. App. 378, 358 S.E.2d 120 (1987); Northwestern Bank v. NCF Fin. Corp., 88 N.C. App. 614, 365 S.E.2d 14 (1988); Stimpson Hosiery Mills, Inc. v. Pam Trading Corp., 98 N.C. App. 543, 392 S.E.2d 128 (1990).

Stated in Deal v. Christenbury, 50 N.C. App. 600, 274 S.E.2d 867 (1981).

Cited in Rental Towel & Uniform Serv. v. Bynum Int'l, Inc., 51 N.C. App. 203, 281 S.E.2d 664 (1981); Shreve v. Combs, 54 N.C. App. 18, 282 S.E.2d 568 (1981); Davis v. Davis, 58 N.C. ## II. DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW.

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former §§ 1-196, 1-198, 1-200 and 1-201.

The object of pleading is to produce proper issues of law and fact, so that justice may be administered between the parties litigant with regularity and certainty. Parsley v. Nicholson, 65 N.C. 207 (1871). See also, Braswell v. Johnston, 108 N.C. 150, 12 S.E. 911 (1891); Tucker v. Satterthwaite, 120 N.C. 118, 27 S.E. 45 (1897).

Submission of issues is not a mere matter within the discretion of the court, but is a mandatory requirement of the law, and a failure to observe this requirement will entitle the party who has not in some way lost the right to have the error of the court corrected. East Coast Oil Co. v. Fair, 3 N.C. App. 175, 164 S.E.2d 482 (1968).

Former § 1-200 was mandatory, and where no issues were tendered by either party, it was the duty of the judge either to compel counsel to prepare the proper issues or to prepare them himself and submit them to the jury. Such an adherence to the requirements was absolutely essential, not only to the fair trial of the case, but to an intelligent appreciation of its merits upon appeal. Denmark v. Atlantic & N.C.R.R., 107 N.C. 185, 12 S.E. 54 (1890); Burton v. Rosemary Mfg. Co., 132 N.C. 17, 43 S.E. 480 (1903); Griffin v. United Servs. Life Ins. Co., 225 N.C. 684, 36 S.E.2d 225 (1945). See also, Stanback v. Haywood, 209 N.C. 798, 184 S.E. 831 (1936), citing Tucker v. Satterthwaite, 120 N.C. 118, 27 S.E. 45 (1897).

Former provisions were mandatory. It was the duty of the judge, either of his own motion or at the suggestion of counsel, to submit such issues as were necessary to settle the material controversies arising on the pleadings. Wheeler v. Wheeler, 239 N.C. 646, 80 S.E.2d 755 (1954); Nebel v. Nebel, 241 N.C. 491, 85 S.E.2d 876 (1955). See also, Coulbourn v. Armstrong, 243 N.C. 663, 91 S.E.2d 912 (1956); General Tire & Rubber Co. v. Distributors, Inc., 253 N.C. 459, 117 S.E.2d 479 (1960); Johnson v. Lamb, 273 N.C. 701, 161 S.E.2d 131 (1968).

But ordinarily the form and number of issues in a civil action are left to the sound discretion of the judge, and a party cannot complain because a particular issue was not submitted to jury in the form tendered. Griffin v. United Servs. Life Ins. Co., 225 N.C. 684, 36 S.E.2d 225 (1945); Durham Lumber Co. v. Wrenn-Wilson Constr. Co., 249 N.C. 680, 107 S.E.2d 538 (1959); General Tire & Rubber Co. v. Distributors, Inc., 253 N.C. 459, 117 S.E.2d 479 (1960).

Ordinarily it is within the sound discretion of the trial judge as to what issues shall be submitted to the jury and the form thereof. East Coast Oil Co. v. Fair, 3 N.C. App. 175, 164 S.E.2d 482 (1968).

It is within the sound discretion of the trial judge to determine what issues shall be submitted, and to frame them subject to the restrictions that the verdict must constitute a sufficient basis for a judgment, and that a party may not be debarred, for want of an additional issue or issues, of the opportunity to present to the jury some view of the law arising out of the evidence. Stanback v. Haywood, 209 N.C. 798, 184 S.E. 831 (1936).

The form and number of issues to be submitted is a matter which rests in the sound discretion of the trial judge, it being sufficient that the issues be framed so as to present the material matters in dispute, to enable each party to have the full benefit of his contentions before the jury, and to enable the court, when the issues are answered, to determine the rights of the parties under the law. Johnson v. Lamb, 273 N.C. 701, 161 S.E.2d 131 (1968).

The court need not submit issues in any particular form. If they are framed in such a way as to present the material matters in dispute and so as to enable each of the parties to have the full benefit of his contention before the jury and a fair chance to develop his case, and if, when answered, the issues are sufficient to determine the rights of the parties and to support the judgment, the statutory requirements are fully met. O'Briant v. O'Briant, 239 N.C. 101, 79 S.E.2d 252 (1953).

Of the issues raised by the pleadings, the judge may in his discretion submit one or many, provided that neither of the parties to the action is denied the opportunity to present to the jury any view of the law arising out of the evidence through the medium of pertinent instructions on some issue passed upon. East Coast Oil Co. v. Fair, 3 N.C. App. 175, 164 S.E.2d 482 (1968).

It was not error for the court to submit only an issue involving the question whether plaintiff had been injured and had sustained damage through the negligence of a defendant, even where contributory negligence was set up as a defense. McAdoo v. Richmond & D.R.R., 105 N.C. 140, 11 S.E. 316 (1890); People ex rel. Boyer v. Teague, 106 N.C. 576, 11 S.E. 665 (1890).

The judge is required to submit such issues as are necessary to settle the material controversies arising on the pleadings. East Coast Oil Co. v. Fair, 3 N.C. App. 175, 164 S.E.2d 482 (1968).

It is the duty of the judge to submit such issues as are necessary to settle the material controversies in the pleadings. In the absence of such issues, without admissions of record sufficient to justify the judgment rendered, the Supreme Court will remand the case for a new trial. Rural Plumbing & Heating, Inc. v. H.C. Jones Constr. Co., 268 N.C. 23, 149 S.E.2d 625 (1966).

It is the duty of the judge, either of his own motion or at the suggestion of counsel, to submit such issues as are necessary to settle the material controversies arising on the pleadings. Wheeler v. Wheeler, 239 N.C. 646, 80 S.E.2d 755 (1954); Nebel v. Nebel, 241 N.C. 491, 85

S.E.2d 876 (1955). See also, Coulbourn v. Armstrong, 243 N.C. 663, 91 S.E.2d 912 (1956); General Tire & Rubber Co. v. Distributors, Inc., 253 N.C. 459, 117 S.E.2d 479 (1960).

But it is not contemplated that an issue be submitted as to every important material fact controverted by the pleadings, nor is it necessary, expedient, or proper to do so. Patton v. Western N.C.R.R., 96 N.C. 455, 1 S.E. 863 (1887).

Issues of fact raised by the pleadings must be submitted to the jury. Baker v. Malan Constr. Corp., 255 N.C. 302, 121 S.E.2d 731 (1961).

When They Are Material and Determinative of Parties' Rights. — Even though the facts relating to a particular issue are controverted in the pleadings, when such issue is not "material to be tried" and is not determinative of the rights of the parties, it is error to submit such issue. Henry Vann Co. v. Barefoot, 249 N.C. 22, 105 S.E.2d 104 (1958).

It is necessary to submit to the jury only such issues as arise upon the pleadings and are material to be tried. Johnson v. Lamb, 273 N.C. 701, 161 S.E.2d 131 (1968).

What Is Material Fact. — A material fact is one which constitutes a part of plaintiff's cause of action or defendant's defense. Wells v. Clayton, 236 N.C. 102, 72 S.E.2d 16 (1952); In re Estate of Wallace, 267 N.C. 204, 147 S.E.2d 922 (1966); Johnson v. Lamb, 273 N.C. 701, 161 S.E.2d 131 (1968).

Material Fact Not Denied Is Taken as True. — If a material fact alleged in the complaint is not denied by the answer, such allegation, for the purpose of the action, is taken as true, and no issue arises therefrom. Johnson v. Lamb, 273 N.C. 701, 161 S.E.2d 131 (1968).

Evidential Issues Need Not Be Submitted. — The only issues proper to be submitted to the jury are those raised by the constitutive facts alleged on the one side and denied on the other; and those issues which are merely evidential and which, when found by the jury, only furnish facts which would be evidence to prove the main issue, should never be submitted. Patton v. Western N.C.R.R., 96 N.C. 455, 1 S.E. 863 (1887).

When Issue Is Raised for Jury. — An issue of fact is raised for the determination of the jury whenever a material fact, which is one constituting a part of plaintiff's cause of action or defendant's defense, is alleged by one party and denied by the other. Sullivan v. Johnson, 3 N.C. App. 581, 165 S.E.2d 507 (1969).

An issue of fact arises on the pleadings whenever a material fact is maintained by one part and controverted by the other. Wells v. Clayton, 236 N.C. 102, 72 S.E.2d 16 (1952); In re Estate of Wallace, 267 N.C. 204, 147 S.E.2d 922 (1966).

An issue of fact arises when the answer controverts a material allegation of the complaint. Baker v. Malan Constr. Corp., 255 N.C. 302, 121 S.E.2d 731 (1961).

Issues Presenting All Phases of Controversy Sufficient. — If the issues submitted by the court are sufficient in form and substance to present all phases of the controversy, there is no ground for exception to the same. Bailey v. Hassell, 184 N.C. 450, 115 S.E. 166 (1922).

Issues and Answers Must Support Judgment Disposing of Whole Case. — The issues submitted, together with the answers thereto, must be sufficient to support a judgment disposing of the whole case. Griffin v. United Servs. Life Ins. Co., 225 N.C. 684, 36 S.E.2d 225 (1945), citing Tucker v. Satterthwaite, 120 N.C. 118, 27 S.E. 45 (1897); Coulbourn v. Armstrong, 243 N.C. 663, 91 S.E.2d 912 (1956).

Separate Issues as to Separate Causes of Action. — Where plaintiff brings a single suit on two distinct causes of action, a separate issue should be submitted as to the damages arising on each separate cause of action. Kelley v. Durham Traction Co., 133 N.C. 418, 45 S.E. 826 (1903).

Submission of Single Issue on Inconsistent Causes of Action Held Error. — Where plaintiff alleged inconsistent causes of action in different counts of his complaint, it was error for the court to submit the case on a single issue as to whether plaintiff was injured by defendant's negligence, as alleged in the complaint. Griffin v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 134 N.C. 101, 46 S.E. 7 (1903), rehearing denied, 137 N.C. 247, 49 S.E. 212 (1904).

Submission of Issues Held Insufficient. — Where, in an action for damages, defendant tendered the issues: (1) Were plaintiff's injuries caused by the defendant's negligence, (2) was there contributory negligence on the part of the plaintiff, and (3) what damage was the plaintiff entitled to recover, and the court declined to submit these, but substituted instead a single issue as to what damages, if any, the plaintiff was entitled to recover, this was error. Denmark v. Atlantic & N.C.R.R., 107 N.C. 185, 12 S.E. 54 (1980).

In an action to recover on a policy of life insurance, where there were issues squarely raised by the pleadings and supported by evidence as to valid delivery and payment of the first premium, but the court declined to submit such issues or others of similar import which would be determinative of questions presented, the appellate court would remand for a new trial. Griffin v. United Servs. Life Ins. Co., 225 N.C. 684, 36 S.E.2d 225 (1945).

Addition of Issue of Contributory Negligence. — Where plaintiff brought suit against two defendants as joint tort-feasors, and one defendant answered alleging contributory negligence while the other defendant did not file an answer, upon which plaintiff tendered issues of negligence of the answering defendant and the court added the issue of contributory negligence arising upon the pleading of this defendant, it was held that, as a rule, the court must submit the issue arising on the pleadings, but the plaintiff waived this by tendering only one issue as to the answering defendant and allowing the case to be tried on that theory. Ammons v. Fisher, 208 N.C. 712, 182 S.E. 479 (1935).

Where a contract alleged in the complaint was different from that submitted in the issue, an instruction that if the contract was as alleged the issue should be answered in the affirmative was error. Dickens v. Perkins, 134 N.C. 220, 46 S.E. 490 (1904).

Verdict, whether in response to one or many issues, must establish sufficient facts to enable the court to proceed to judgment. East Coast Oil Co. v. Fair, 3 N.C. App. 175, 164 S.E.2d 482 (1968).

Distinct findings are contemplated upon material issues. These should be submitted where this can be done without repetition or confusion. Emery v. Raleigh & G.R.R., 102 N.C. 209, 9 S.E. 139, rehearing denied, 102 N.C. 234, 10 S.E. 141 (1889).

Judgment Based on Nondeterminative Issues Error. — A judgment upon the verdict of the jury upon issues raised by the pleadings which were not determinative of the controversy between the parties was erroneously entered. Merchants Nat'l Bank v. Carolina Broom Co., 188 N.C. 508, 125 S.E. 12 (1924).

Courts look with favor on stipulations designed to simplify, shorten, or settle litigation and save cost to the parties, and such practice will be encouraged. Rural Plumbing & Heating, Inc. v. H.C. Jones Constr. Co., 268 N.C. 23, 149 S.E.2d 625 (1966).

Stipulations May Eliminate Necessity of Submitting Issues. — Although the parties may not agree upon improper issues, they may, by stipulation or judicial admission, establish any material fact which has been in controversy between them, and thereby eliminate the necessity of submitting an issue to the jury with reference to it. Rural Plumbing & Heating, Inc. v. H.C. Jones Constr. Co., 268 N.C. 23, 149 S.E.2d 625 (1966).

But stipulations do not dispense with necessity that pleadings support proof. Rural Plumbing & Heating, Inc. v. H.C. Jones Constr. Co., 268 N.C. 23, 149 S.E.2d 625 (1966).

It is contemplated that issues shall be drawn before introduction of testimony. Beasley v. Surles, 140 N.C. 5, 140 N.C. 605, 53 S.E. 360, 53 S.E. 360 (1906).

Issues May Not Be Tendered or Objected to on Appeal. — If defendant has not tendered issues or otherwise objected to trial on the issues submitted, it cannot do so on appeal. East Coast Oil Co. v. Fair, 3 N.C. App. 175, 164 S.E.2d 482 (1968).

If the parties consent to the issues submitted, or do not object at the time or ask for different or additional issues, the objection cannot be made later. East Coast Oil Co. v. Fair, 3 N.C. App. 175, 164 S.E.2d 482 (1968).

General Verdict Defined. — The verdict is general when the jury, under appropriate instructions from the court as to the applicable law, simply responds affirmatively or negatively to the issues submitted. Morrison v. Watson, 95 N.C. 479 (1886); Porter v. Western N.C.R.R., 97 N.C. 63, 97 N.C. 66, 2 S.E. 580, 2 S.E. 580 (1887).

A party has the right to be present upon the rendition of the verdict. State v. Jones, 91 N.C. 654 (1884).

Right to be present at the rendition of the verdict is personal to the parties themselves, and the absence of counsel at the rendition is not a ground for a new trial. Barger Bros. v. Alley, 167 N.C. 362, 83 S.E. 612 (1914).

Entry of a verdict against a plaintiff who is not present either in person or by attorney is irregular. Graham v. Tate, 77 N.C. 120 (1877).

Waiver of Right to Be Present. — The right of the parties to be present when the verdict is returned in a civil case is waivable. Barger Bros. v. Alley, 167 N.C. 362, 83 S.E. 612 (1914).

Right to Have Jury Polled. — The right of a party to have the jury polled after the rendition of its verdict exists in civil as well as criminal cases. State v. Young, 77 N.C. 498 (1877); State v. Toole, 106 N.C. 736, 11 S.E. 168 (1890); Smith v. Paul, 133 N.C. 66, 45 S.E. 348 (1903).

But it is not essential to validity of proceedings that the jury be polled; this is merely a privilege which may be asked for by either party. State v. Toole, 106 N.C. 736, 11 S.E. 168 (1890); Smith v. Paul, 133 N.C. 66, 45 S.E. 348 (1903).

On a poll of the jury, dissent of one juror renders the verdict invalid. Owens v. Southern Ry., 123 N.C. 183, 31 S.E. 383 (1898).

But mere reluctance on the part of one juror will not be fatal to the verdict. Lowe v. Dorsett, 125 N.C. 301, 34 S.E. 442 (1899).

New Trial Where Findings of Jury Conflict. — If there is an irreconcilable conflict in the findings of the jury upon the issues submitted, or between the verdict and the judgment, a new trial will be awarded. Morrison v. Watson, 95 N.C. 479 (1886). See also, Porter v. Western N.C.R.R., 97 N.C. 63, 97 N.C. 66, 2 S.E. 580, 2 S.E. 580 (1887).

For discussion of the provisions and requirements of former § 1-200, see Piedmont Wagon Co. v. Byrd, 119 N.C. 460, 26 S.E. 144 (1896).

When the facts constituting a waiver do not appear in the pleadings, the party relying thereon must specially plead the defense, and it must be pleaded with certainty and particularity and established by the greater weight of the evidence. Rural Plumbing & Heating, Inc. v. H.C. Jones Constr. Co., 268 N.C. 23, 149 S.E.2d 625 (1966).

Rule 50. Motion for a directed verdict and for judgment notwithstanding the verdict.

(a) When made; effect. — A party who moves for a directed verdict at the close of the evidence offered by an opponent may offer evidence in the event that the motion is not granted, without having reserved the right so to do and to the same extent as if the motion had not been made. A motion for a directed verdict which is not granted is not a waiver of trial by jury even though all parties to the action have moved for directed verdicts. A motion for a directed verdict shall state the specific grounds therefor. The order granting a motion for a directed verdict shall be effective without any assent of the jury.

(b) Motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. —

(1) Whenever a motion for a directed verdict made at the close of all the evidence is denied or for any reason is not granted, the submission of the action to the jury shall be deemed to be subject to a later determination of the legal questions raised by the motion. Not later than 10 days after entry of judgment, a party who has moved for a directed verdict may move to have the verdict and any judgment entered thereon set aside and to have judgment entered in accordance with his motion for a directed verdict; or if a verdict was not returned such party, within 10 days after the jury has been discharged, may move for judgment in accordance with his motion for a directed verdict. In either case the motion shall be granted if it appears that the motion for directed verdict could properly have been granted. A motion for a new trial may be joined with this motion, or a new trial may be prayed for in the alternative. If a verdict was returned the judge may allow the judgment to stand or may set aside the judgment and either order a new trial or direct the entry of judgment as if the requested verdict had been directed. If no verdict was returned the judge may direct the entry of judgment as if the requested verdict had been directed or may order a new trial. Not later than ten (10) days after entry of judgment or the discharge of the jury if a verdict was not returned, the judge on his own motion may, with or without further notice and hearing, grant, deny, or redeny a motion for directed verdict made at the close of all the evidence that was denied or for any reason was not granted.

(2) An appellate court, on finding that a trial judge should have granted a motion for directed verdict made at the close of all the evidence, may not direct entry of judgment in accordance with the motion unless the party who made the motion for a directed verdict also moved for judgment in accordance with Rule 50(b)(1) or the trial judge on his own motion granted, denied or redenied the motion for a directed verdict in accordance with Rule 50(b)(1).

(c) Motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict — Conditional rulings on grant of motion. —

(1) If the motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, provided for in section (b) of this rule, is granted, the court shall also rule on the motion for new trial, if any, by determining whether it should be granted if the judgment is thereafter vacated or reversed, and shall specify the grounds for granting or denying the motion for the new trial. If the motion for new trial is thus conditionally granted, the order thereon does not affect the finality of the judgment. In case the motion for new trial has been conditionally granted and the judgment is reversed on appeal, the new trial shall proceed unless the appellate division has otherwise ordered. In case the motion for new trial has been conditionally denied, the appellee on appeal may assert error in that denial; and if the judgment is reversed on appeal, subsequent proceedings shall be in accordance with the order of the appellate division.

(2) The party whose verdict has been set aside on motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict may serve a motion for a new trial pursuant to Rule 59 not later than 10 days after entry of the judgment notwithstanding the verdict.

(d) Motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict — Denial of motion. — If the motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict is denied, the party who prevailed on that motion may, as appellee, assert grounds entitling him to a new trial in the event the appellate division concludes that the trial court erred in denying the motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. If the appellate division reverses the judgment, nothing in this rule precludes it from determining that the appellee is entitled to a new trial, or from directing the trial court to determine whether a new trial shall be granted. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1969, c. 895, s. 11.)

COMMENT

Comment to this Rule as Originally Enacted. — It will be recalled that Rule 41(b) provides the procedure in those cases tried to the court where the party defending believes the evidence of his adversary is insufficient to permit a recovery. Section (a) of this rule provides the procedure in comparable circumstances in those cases tried by jury. It further provides a procedure whereby a claimant in a jury trial may urge that he is entitled to a recovery as a matter of law.

The rule contemplates that a party defending may move for a directed verdict at the close of his adversary's evidence or at the close of all the evidence whether or not he has made a prior motion. The rule further contemplates that any party may move for a directed verdict at the close of all the evidence.

Some important changes are effected by Rules 41(a) and 50(a) taken together. Formerly, a party defending had available the motion for nonsuit provided by former § 1-183. Judgment pursuant to a grant of the motion was not a judgment on the merits. In addition, any party had available the common-law motion for a directed verdict which does, if granted, result in a judgment on the merits. Everett v. Williams, 152 N.C. 117, 67 S.E. 265 (1910). Despite the greater potential of the directed verdict, the motion was infrequently employed because the claimant could always, under prior practice, forestall the directed verdict by taking a voluntary nonsuit.

Under the rules, at the close of the claimant's evidence, the party defending in a jury trial will be restricted to the directed verdict motion — a motion that if granted will result in a judgment on the merits disposing of the case finally in the absence of reversal on appeal. But it should be remembered that the judge will have power under Rule 41(a)(2) on the claimant's motion to allow a dismissal that is not on the merits.

The last sentence in section (a) is simply for the purpose of avoiding a useless formality. When a judge decides that a directed verdict is appropriate, actually he is deciding that the question has become one exclusively of law and that the jury has no function to serve. In these circumstances, it is an idle gesture to require the jury to go through the motions of returning the verdict directed.

Section (b), providing for a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict or, as it is commonly called "a judgment NOV" (an abbreviation for non obstante veredicto) introduces an entirely new procedure to North Carolina practice. It is true that North Carolina had a judgment NOV of sorts — for use in a situation where the party against whom a verdict is rendered would have been entitled to a judgment on the pleadings. See McIntosh, North Carolina Practice and Procedure (1st ed.), § 612. The judgment NOV in this rule is an altogether different affair. In essence, it involves allowing a judge to consider the question of the sufficiency of the evidence after the jury has returned a verdict.

This power has been sought — unsuccessfully it must be said — by superior court judges on more than one occasion. See, e.g., Batson v. City Laundry Co., 202 N.C. 560, 163 S.E. 600 (1932); Jones v. Dixie Fire Ins. Co., 210 N.C. 559, 187 S.E. 769 (1936). A moment's reflection will show why. A motion challenging the sufficiency of the evidence will often present a close question of great difficulty. A jury verdict for the movant eliminates this question and an appeal based on the ruling on the motion. But under prior practice, the judge was not permitted to consider the question raised by the motion after submitting the case to the jury. He was required to rule, finally, before the case was submitted.

If the motion was granted, there would likely be an appeal. If the trial judge was affirmed, it was quite possible that the appeal was unnecessary since the jury, had it been allowed to consider the evidence, might well have found for the movant. If the trial judge was reversed, there would have to be a new trial, repeating much of the expenditure in time and effort that was put into the first trial because there was no verdict on which judgment could be entered.

Under the rule, whenever a motion for a directed verdict made at the close of all the evidence is not granted, it will be deemed that the judge submitted the case to the jury having reserved for later determination the legal question raised by the motion. Thus, if there is a verdict for the nonmovant or if for some reason a verdict is not returned, the judge can reconsider the sufficiency of the evidence and, if convinced that it is insufficient, can grant the motion. If, on appeal it should prove that the judge was correct, that is, that he properly granted the motion, then the appellate court can affirm and, in appropriate cases, order judgment entered for the movant. On the other hand, if it should prove that the trial judge improperly granted the motion, the appellate court is not restricted to granting a new trial, as under the prior practice, but can order judgment entered on the verdict.

The utility of the judgment NOV must be obvious. It will certainly eliminate some appeals and it will certainly eliminate some second trials.

Turning now to the procedure for employing the motion for judgment NOV, it will be observed that making an appropriate motion for a directed verdict is an absolute prerequisite for the motion for judgment NOV. 5 Moore's Federal Practice, § 50.08 and cases cited.

Second, it will be observed that the motion can, but need not be, coupled with a motion for a new trial. If it is joined with a motion for a new trial, the proper procedure, as laid down by the Supreme Court in Montgomery Ward & Co. v. Duncan, 311 U.S. 243, 61 S. Ct. 189, 85 L. Ed. 147 (1940) and as spelled out in sections (c) and (d) is for the court to rule on both motions. If the motion for judgment is granted and this is approved on appeal, the lower court's ruling on the movant's (verdict loser's) motion for new trial becomes irrelevant. Final judgment for the movant is affirmed. If, however, the lower court is reversed on appeal as to the motion for judgment, then its ruling on the new trial motion becomes a matter of importance. If the movant (verdict loser) was granted a new trial, "the new trial shall proceed unless the appellate court has otherwise ordered." Of course, the appellate court might very well "otherwise order" since the nonmovant (verdict winner) could assert on appeal not only error in the grant of the motion for judgment but error in the grant of the new trial. If the movant was denied a new trial although granted a judgment NOV, he can, under section (c), "assert error in that denial" on appeal.

Section (d) deals with the situation where the motion for judgment is denied. The movant may have coupled with his motion a motion for new trial. If the new trial motion was also denied, then the movant could appeal in respect to both motions. If the appellate court reverses as to the motion for judgment, it can order judgment for the movant or a new trial as the case may be. If the appellate court affirms in respect to the motion for judgment, it may of course reverse or affirm in respect to the new trial motion.

Comment to the 1969 Amendment. — Rule 50, both in its old version and in the new, contemplates that when a party moves for a directed verdict and his motion is denied or for any reason is not granted, that party may, after an adverse verdict or the failure of the jury to return a verdict, move for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. When the movant for a directed verdict who is not immediately successful later moves for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict and his motion is granted or denied, and there is an appeal, the powers of the appellate court are reasonably clear, as outlined in section 50(c) and (d). But when the movant for a directed verdict later fails to move for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict, there has been in the federal courts uncertainty about the powers of an appellate court. See 5 Moore's Federal Practice, §§ 2365-2374. The uncertainty revolves around the question of whether an appellate court can direct entry of judgment for a party who was erroneously denied a directed verdict but who later failed to move, as the rule contemplates, for a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. The Supreme Court ruled in Cone v. West Virginia Pulp & Paper Co., 330 U.S. 212, 67 S. Ct. 752, 91 L. Ed. 849 (1947), that in the circumstances outlined the appellate court was limited to directing a new trial.

It might be said that the rationale of the court's ruling in the Cone case rests on a desire that no final conclusive judgment be rendered against a party unless the trial judge has had an opportunity to consider whether the loser should be given another chance. The trial judge would not have this opportunity in the absence of some such rule as that enunciated in Cone.

The Commission has from the first embraced the Cone result. The Commission has gone further and attempted to meet some of the problems spawned by the Cone decision.

Its first effort was the rather clumsy one comprised in the last two sentences of Rule 50(b) as it was originally enacted. These two sentences have now been deleted and they should be forgotten.

In their stead, the General Assembly has added a new final sentence to what is now section 50(b)(1) and a new section 50(b)(2). These additions make clear the power of a trial judge, once there has been a motion for a directed verdict, to consider on his own motion, after entry of judgment (see Rule 58 as to when judgment is deemed to be entered), entry of judgment in accordance with the directed verdict motion. The additions also make clear that without some post-verdict consideration of a motion for judgment or the reserved motion for a directed verdict, the appellate court cannot, if it should find erroneous the failure to grant the motion for directed verdict, direct entry of judgment for the appellant but can only order a new trial.

CASE NOTES

I. In General.
II. Directed Verdict.
A. In General.
B. Statement of Specific Grounds.
III. Judgment Notwithstanding the Verdict and New Trial.

I. IN GENERAL.

Right to Jury Trial. — N.C. Const., Art. I, § 25 has been construed to guarantee trial by jury in all civil actions where the parties have not waived the right. Cutts v. Casey, 278 N.C. 390, 180 S.E.2d 297 (1971).

Use of Federal Interpretations to Supplement Caselaw. — Since North Carolina and Federal Rules 50 are substantially similar, federal interpretations are instructive to supplement the North Carolina decisions. Love v. Pressley, 34 N.C. App. 503, 239 S.E.2d 574 (1977), cert. denied, 294 N.C. 441, 241 S.E.2d 843 (1978).

When Motions Granted. — A defendant is not entitled to a directed verdict or a judgment notwithstanding the verdict unless the evidence, viewed in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, establishes its defense as a matter of law. Goodwin v. Investors Life Ins. Co. of N. Am., 332 N.C. 326, 419 S.E.2d 766 (1992).

Motions under this rule apply only to issues tried by a jury, not a judge. Holthusen v. Holthusen, 79 N.C. App. 618, 339 S.E.2d 823 (1986).

Attorneys' Fees. — Section 6-21.5 provides in part that the entry of judgment pursuant to this rule or § 1A-1, Rule 56 may be some evidence that an attorneys' fee may be warranted. The statute's reference to these rules, which are applicable only if evidence in addition to the pleadings is before the court, thus implies that when deciding whether to grant a motion under § 6-21.5 the trial court may consider evidence developed after the pleadings have been filed. Sunamerica Fin. Corp. v. Bonham, 328 N.C. 254, 400 S.E.2d 435 (1991).

II. DIRECTED VERDICT.

A. In General.

Purpose of This Rule. — Settled principles establish that the purpose of a motion under section (a) of this rule for directed verdict is to test the legal sufficiency of the evidence to take the case to the jury and to support a verdict for plaintiffs. Wallace v. Evans, 60 N.C. App. 145, 298 S.E.2d 193 (1982); Southern Ry. v. O'Boyle Tank Lines, 70 N.C. App. 1, 318 S.E.2d 872 (1984); Burris v. Shumate, 77 N.C. App. 209, 334 S.E.2d 514 (1985); Rice v. Wood, 82 N.C. App. 318, 346 S.E.2d 205, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 417, 349 S.E.2d 599 (1986); Hitchcock v. Cullerton, 82 N.C. App. 296, 346 S.E.2d 215 (1986); Britt v. Britt, 82 N.C. App. 303, 346 S.E.2d 259 (1986), modified on other grounds, 320 N.C. 573, 359 S.E.2d 467 (1987); Wellmon v. Hickory Constr. Co., 88 N.C. App. 76, 362 S.E.2d 591 (1987).

A motion for directed verdict is to test the legal sufficiency of the evidence to take the case to the jury. DeHart v. R/S Fin. Corp., 78 N.C. App. 93, 337 S.E.2d 94 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 376, 342 S.E.2d 893 (1986).

The purpose of a motion for a directed verdict is to test the legal sufficiency of the evidence. Allison v. Food Lion, Inc., 84 N.C. App. 251, 352 S.E.2d 256 (1987).

As to the difference between directed verdicts in criminal and civil cases, see State v. Riley, 113 N.C. 648, 18 S.E. 168 (1893); Cutts v. Casey, 278 N.C. 390, 180 S.E.2d 297 (1971).

A motion for directed verdict is appropriate only to a case tried before a jury. In nonjury trials, a motion for involuntary dismissal under § 1A-1, Rule 41(b) provides a procedure whereby, at the close of the plaintiff's evidence, the judge can give judgment against the plaintiff, not only because his proof has failed to make out a case, but also on the basis of facts as the judge may determine them. Goodrich v. Rice, 75 N.C. App. 530, 331 S.E.2d 195 (1985).

Plaintiff must make out his case by proving the facts essential to his cause of action or by proving facts permitting an inference of the material facts as a fair and logical conclusion. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co. v. West, 100 N.C. App. 668, 397 S.E.2d 765 (1990), aff'd, 328 N.C. 566, 402 S.E.2d 409 (1991).

Degree of Probability Must Exist with Issue of Causation. — Some degree of probability, however small, must exist to provide the jury with a question of causation to resolve, not just mere possibility. Hinson v. National Starch & Chem. Corp., 99 N.C. App. 198, 392 S.E.2d 657 (1990).

Peremptory Instruction in Favor of Party with Burden of Proof Contrasted with Directed Verdict. — When there is no conflict in the evidence and but one inference is permissible from it, the court may give a peremptory instruction in favor of the party having the burden of proof. Such an instruction directs the jury to answer the issue in favor of the plaintiff if it finds the facts to be as all the evidence tends to show; otherwise not. A peremptory instruction does not deprive the jury of its right to reject the evidence because of lack of faith in its credibility. Such an instruction differs from a directed verdict. Cutts v. Casey, 278 N.C. 390, 180 S.E.2d 297 (1971).

For case comparing motions for summary judgment and for directed verdict, see Edwards v. Northwestern Bank, 53 N.C. App. 492, 281 S.E.2d 86, cert. denied, 304 N.C. 389, 285 S.E.2d 831 (1981).

Denial of Summary Judgment No Bar to Directed Verdict. — The earlier denial of a motion for summary judgment should not, in any way, be considered a barrier to later consideration of a motion for directed verdict. Edwards v. Northwestern Bank, 53 N.C. App. 492, 281 S.E.2d 86, cert. denied, 304 N.C. 389, 285 S.E.2d 831 (1981).

Denial of a motion for summary judgment, based upon only a forecast of evidence, should not operate to bar the granting of a directed verdict or a judgment notwithstanding the verdict based on the evidence actually presented at trial. Whittaker Gen. Medical Corp. v. Daniel, 87 N.C. App. 659, 362 S.E.2d 302 (1987), rev'd on other grounds, 324 N.C. 523, 379 S.E.2d 824 (1989).

Nonsuit Replaced by Motion for Directed Verdict. — In jury trials the motion for nonsuit has been replaced by the motion for a directed verdict. Creasman v. First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 279 N.C. 361, 183 S.E.2d 115 (1971), cert. denied, 405 U.S. 977, 92 S. Ct. 1204, 31 L. Ed. 2d 252 (1972).

Treatment of Motion for "Judgment of Nonsuit" as Motion for Directed Verdict. — Defendant's motion for "judgment of nonsuit," made at the close of plaintiff's evidence and again at the close of all the evidence, was treated as a motion for a directed verdict under this rule. The new rules contemplate that the name of the motion is not as important as the substance. Wheeler v. Denton, 9 N.C. App. 167, 175 S.E.2d 769 (1970).

Classes of cases not subject to nonsuit would not be ordinarily subject to directed verdict under the new rules. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. v. Lumbermen's Mut. Cas. Co., 11 N.C. App. 490, 181 S.E.2d 727 (1971).

The words "without any assent of the jury" are used to dispel any apprehension that the jury is required to perform a perfunctory act in connection with the verdict in a case which is not submitted to it for determination. Kelly v. International Harvester Co., 278 N.C. 153, 179 S.E.2d 396 (1971).

Directed Verdict Not Proper in Processioning Proceedings. — A directed verdict is never proper when the question is for the jury, and in processioning proceedings the determination of the boundary is for the jury. Beal v. Dellinger, 38 N.C. App. 732, 248 S.E.2d 775 (1978).

The primary purpose of a processioning proceeding is to establish the correct location of the disputed dividing line. Such a proceeding may not be dismissed by a directed verdict. A plaintiff instituting a true processioning proceeding has the legal right to have the line ascertained and fixed by judicial decree, regardless of the sufficiency of his evidence to establish the line as contended for by him. Sipe v. Blankenship, 37 N.C. App. 499, 246 S.E.2d 527 (1978), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 411, 251 S.E.2d 470 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Walls v. Grohman, 315 N.C. 239, 337 S.E.2d 556 (1985).

Motion for directed verdict is the only procedure by which a party can challenge the sufficiency of his adversary's evidence to go to the jury. Creasman v. First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 279 N.C. 361, 183 S.E.2d 115 (1971), cert. denied, 405 U.S. 977, 92 S. Ct. 1204, 31 L. Ed. 2d 252 (1972).

In a jury trial, the motion for a directed verdict is the only device by which the adverse party can challenge the sufficiency of the evidence to go to the jury. Cutts v. Casey, 278 N.C. 390, 180 S.E.2d 297 (1971); Yeargin v. Spurr, 78 N.C. App. 243, 336 S.E.2d 680 (1985).

In a case tried to a jury, after a plaintiff has put on evidence and rested, a defendant who asserts that the evidence of the plaintiff is insufficient to permit a recovery is restricted to making a motion for a directed verdict under section (a) of this rule. Creasman v. First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 10 N.C. App. 182, 177 S.E.2d 770 (1970), aff'd, 279 N.C. 361, 183 S.E.2d 115 (1971), cert. denied, 405 U.S. 977, 92 S. Ct. 1204, 31 L. Ed. 2d 252 (1972).

When a case is tried by a jury a defendant may move for a directed verdict to test the sufficiency of the evidence to go to the jury. Roberts v. William N. & Kate B. Reynolds Mem. Park, 281 N.C. 48, 187 S.E.2d 721 (1972).

Directed verdicts are appropriate only in jury cases. Bryant v. Kelly, 279 N.C. 123, 181 S.E.2d 438 (1971); Town of Rolesville v. Perry, 21 N.C. App. 354, 204 S.E.2d 719 (1974); Hasty v. Carpenter, 51 N.C. App. 333, 276 S.E.2d 513 (1981).

A motion for directed verdict under section (a) of this rule is appropriate when trial is held before a jury. Aiken v. Collins, 16 N.C. App. 504, 192 S.E.2d 617 (1972); Whitaker v. Earnhardt, 289 N.C. 260, 221 S.E.2d 316 (1976).

A motion for directed verdict and a directed verdict are not proper where the trial is before the judge sitting without a jury. Porter Bros. v. Jones, 11 N.C. App. 215, 181 S.E.2d 177 (1971).

This rule has no application to trials before the judge without a jury. In actions tried before the judge without a jury a motion to dismiss is made pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 41(b). Crump v. Coffey, 59 N.C. App. 553, 297 S.E.2d 131 (1982).

Directed verdicts are appropriate only in jury cases. In nonjury civil cases the appropriate motion by which a defendant may test the sufficiency of the plaintiff's evidence to show a right to relief is a motion for involuntary dismissal under § 1A-1, Rule 41(b). The distinction is more than one of mere nomenclature, as a different test is to be applied to determine the sufficiency of the evidence to withstand the motion when the case is tried before the court and jury than when the court alone is finder of facts. Mayo v. Mayo, 73 N.C. App. 406, 326 S.E.2d 283 (1985).

The purpose of a motion for directed verdict, made pursuant to section (a) of this rule, is to test the legal sufficiency of the evidence to take the case to the jury and to support a verdict for the nonmoving party. In passing upon the motion, the court must consider the evidence in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party, taking all evidence which tends to support his position as true, resolving all contradictions, conflicts and inconsistencies in his favor and giving him the benefit of all reasonable inferences. The motion may be granted only if the evidence is insufficient, as a matter of law, to support a verdict for the nonmoving party. The same test is apposite whether considering a section (a) motion directed at the plaintiff's claim or at the defendant's counterclaim. Eatman v. Bunn, 72 N.C. App. 504, 325 S.E.2d 50 (1985).

A motion for a directed verdict under section (a) of this rule presents substantially the same question as was formerly presented by motion for judgment of nonsuit. Harrell v. Clarke, 72 N.C. App. 516, 325 S.E.2d 33 (1985).

While Motions for Involuntary Dismissal Are Proper in Nonjury Cases. — A motion for a directed verdict under section (a) of this rule is proper when a trial is being held before a jury. Where a case is tried by the judge without a jury, the appropriate motion in such case is for involuntary dismissal under § 1A-1, Rule 41(b). Bryant v. Kelly, 10 N.C. App. 208, 178 S.E.2d 113 (1970), rev'd on other grounds, 279 N.C. 123, 181 S.E.2d 438 (1971); Neff v. Queen City Coach Co., 16 N.C. App. 466, 192 S.E.2d 587 (1972).

Directed verdicts are appropriate only in jury cases. In nonjury civil cases the appropriate motion by which a defendant may test the sufficiency of the plaintiff's evidence to show a right to relief is a motion for involuntary dismissal under § 1A-1, Rule 41(b). Higgins v. Builders & Fin., Inc., 20 N.C. App. 1, 200 S.E.2d 397 (1973), cert. denied, 284 N.C. 616, 201 S.E.2d 689 (1974); Tanglewood Land Co. v. Wood, 40 N.C. App. 133, 252 S.E.2d 546 (1979).

Motion for directed verdict under this rule and motion for involuntary dismissal under § 1A-1, Rule 41(b) are to be distinguished; the former is proper when the case is tried before a jury, and the latter is appropriate where the court sits as trier of fact. McNeely v. Southern Ry., 19 N.C. App. 502, 199 S.E.2d 164, cert. denied, 284 N.C. 425, 200 S.E.2d 660 (1973).

Where a case is tried before a jury, the appropriate motion by which a defendant tests the sufficiency of plaintiff's evidence to permit a recovery is the motion for a directed verdict under section (a) of this rule. The motion for involuntary dismissal, made under § 1A-1, Rule 41(b), performs a similar function in an action tried by the court without a jury. Duke v. Meisky, 12 N.C. App. 329, 183 S.E.2d 292 (1971).

A motion to dismiss under § 1A-1, Rule 41(b) is properly made only in cases tried by a judge without a jury, while the proper motion in jury cases is for a directed verdict under section (a) of this rule. Hamm v. Texaco, Inc., 17 N.C. App. 451, 194 S.E.2d 560 (1973); Nytco Leasing, Inc. v. Southeastern Motels, Inc., 40 N.C. App. 120, 252 S.E.2d 826 (1979).

Different Tests for Sufficiency on Motions for Directed Verdict and Involuntary Dismissal. — The distinction between a motion for a directed verdict and a motion for an involuntary dismissal is more than one of mere nomenclature, as a different test is to be applied to determine the sufficiency of the evidence to withstand the motion when the case is tried before court and jury than when the court alone is finder of the facts. Neff v. Queen City Coach Co., 16 N.C. App. 466, 192 S.E.2d 587 (1972).

Treatment of Involuntary Dismissal in Jury Trial as Directed Verdict. — Where judgment of involuntary dismissal in a trial before a jury was improperly entered under § 1A-1, Rule 41(b), which is applicable only in a trial by the court without a jury, it may properly be treated as a motion for a directed verdict under this rule. Pergerson v. Williams, 9 N.C. App. 512, 176 S.E.2d 885 (1970).

Where a motion for dismissal is made pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 41(b) in a jury case, it may properly be treated as a motion for directed verdict. Creasman v. First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 279 N.C. 361, 183 S.E.2d 115 (1971), cert. denied, 405 U.S. 977, 92 S. Ct. 1204, 31 L. Ed. 2d 252 (1972).

It is permissible for motions made under § 1A-1, Rule 41(b) at the close of plaintiff's evidence in jury trials to be treated as motions for directed verdict under section (a) of this rule. Sample v. Morgan, 311 N.C. 717, 319 S.E.2d 607 (1984).

Judgment entered upon a directed verdict is a final judgment on the merits. Taylor v. Tri-County Elec. Membership Corp., 17 N.C. App. 143, 193 S.E.2d 402 (1972).

A judgment entered upon a directed verdict is a judgment on the merits for res judicata purposes. Phipps v. Paley, 90 N.C. App. 170, 368 S.E.2d 21, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 175, 373 S.E.2d 114 (1988).

And Defendant Is Entitled to Judgment on Merits When Motion for Directed Verdict Is Granted. — When a motion for a directed verdict under this rule is granted, the defendant is entitled to a judgment on the merits. Kelly v. International Harvester Co., 278 N.C. 153, 179 S.E.2d 396 (1971); Cutts v. Casey, 278 N.C. 390, 180 S.E.2d 297 (1971).

Unless Court Permits Voluntary Dismissal Under § 1A-1, Rule 41(a)(2). — When a motion for a directed verdict under this rule is granted, the defendant is entitled to a judgment on the merits unless the court permits a voluntary dismissal of the action under § 1A-1, Rule 41(a)(2). Kelly v. International Harvester Co., 278 N.C. 153, 179 S.E.2d 396 (1971); Cutts v. Casey, 278 N.C. 390, 180 S.E.2d 297 (1971); Taylor v. Tri-County Elec. Membership Corp., 17 N.C. App. 143, 193 S.E.2d 402 (1972).

Section 1A-1, Rule 41(b) has no application when considering a motion for a directed verdict in a jury trial. Kelly v. International Harvester Co., 278 N.C. 153, 179 S.E.2d 396 (1971).

By offering evidence, defendant waives motion for directed verdict made at the close of plaintiff's evidence. Woodard v. Marshall, 14 N.C. App. 67, 187 S.E.2d 430 (1972); Overman v. Gibson Prods. Co. of Thomasville, Inc., 30 N.C. App. 516, 227 S.E.2d 159 (1976).

However, he may renew the motion at the close of all the evidence. Overman v. Gibson Prods. Co. of Thomasville, Inc., 30 N.C. App. 516, 227 S.E.2d 159 (1976).

Power of Judge to Grant, Deny or Redeny Directed Verdict on Own Motion. — The trial judge on his own motion, within the time prescribed in subsection (b)(1) of this rule, may grant, deny, or redeny the motion for a directed verdict. Hensley v. Ramsey, 283 N.C. 714, 199 S.E.2d 1 (1973).

Under subsection (b)(1) of this rule a trial judge, on his own motion, may enter a directed verdict within 10 days after the jury is discharged for failing to reach a verdict. Odell v. Lipscomb, 12 N.C. App. 318, 183 S.E.2d 299 (1971).

Any party may move for a directed verdict at the close of all the evidence. Snipes v. Snipes, 55 N.C. App. 498, 286 S.E.2d 591, aff'd, 306 N.C. 373, 293 S.E.2d 187 (1982).

Directed verdict is appealable, and operates with full res judicata effect. Taylor v. Tri-County Elec. Membership Corp., 17 N.C. App. 143, 193 S.E.2d 402 (1972).

As Considered in the Light Most Favorable to Nonmovant. — A motion under this rule is directed to the sufficiency of the evidence to justify a verdict for the plaintiff when considered in the light most favorable to him. Evans v. Carney, 29 N.C. App. 611, 225 S.E.2d 157 (1976); Oliver v. Royall, 36 N.C. App. 239, 243 S.E.2d 436 (1978).

In considering a motion for a directed verdict, the evidence must be viewed in the light most favorable to plaintiff. Naylor v. Naylor, 11 N.C. App. 384, 181 S.E.2d 222 (1971); Bowen v. Constructors Equip. Rental Co., 283 N.C. 395, 196 S.E.2d 789 (1973); Brooks v. Boucher, 22 N.C. App. 676, 207 S.E.2d 282, cert. denied, 286 N.C. 211, 209 S.E.2d 319 (1974); Prevatte v. Cabble, 24 N.C. App. 524, 211 S.E.2d 528 (1975); Brewer v. Majors, 48 N.C. App. 202, 268 S.E.2d 229, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 400, 273 S.E.2d 445 (1980); Crisp v. Benfield, 64 N.C. App. 357, 307 S.E.2d 179 (1983); Douglas v. Parks, 68 N.C. App. 496, 315 S.E.2d 84, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 754, 321 S.E.2d 131 (1984); Allison v. Food Lion, Inc., 84 N.C. App. 251, 352 S.E.2d 256 (1987).

In passing upon a motion for a directed verdict, the court must consider the evidence in the light most favorable to the nonmovant. Summey v. Cauthen, 283 N.C. 640, 197 S.E.2d 549 (1973); Snider v. Dickens, 293 N.C. 356, 237 S.E.2d 832 (1977); Loy v. Lorm Corp., 52 N.C. App. 428, 278 S.E.2d 897 (1981); In re Allen, 58 N.C. App. 322, 293 S.E.2d 607 (1982); Myers v. Myers, 62 N.C. App. 291, 302 S.E.2d 476 (1983); Rice v. Wood, 82 N.C. App. 318, 346 S.E.2d 205, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 417, 349 S.E.2d 599 (1986); Britt v. Britt, 82 N.C. App. 303, 346 S.E.2d 259 (1986), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 320 N.C. 573, 359 S.E.2d 467 (1987).

On a motion by a defendant for a directed verdict at the close of plaintiff's evidence in a jury case, the evidence must be taken as true and considered in the light most favorable to plaintiff. Farmer v. Chaney, 292 N.C. 451, 233 S.E.2d 582 (1977); Brown v. Brown, 38 N.C. App. 607, 248 S.E.2d 397 (1978); Tuttle v. Tuttle, 38 N.C. App. 651, 248 S.E.2d 896 (1978),

In considering the sufficiency of the evidence to withstand a motion for directed verdict, the appellate court must consider the evidence in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party. Wilson v. Bob Robinson's Auto Serv., Inc., 20 N.C. App. 47, 200 S.E.2d 393 (1973); McDonald v. Trustees of Fayetteville Technical Inst., 46 N.C. App. 77, 264 S.E.2d 123 (1980).

On a defendant's motion for a directed verdict, plaintiff's evidence must be taken as true and all the evidence must be considered in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, giving him the benefit of every reasonable inference to be drawn therefrom. Atlantic Tobacco Co. v. Honeycutt, 101 N.C. App. 160, 398 S.E.2d 641 (1990), discretionary review denied, 328 N.C. 569, 403 S.E.2d 506 (1991).

With Contradictions, Conflicts and Inconsistencies Resolved in Nonmovant's Favor. — Contradictions, conflicts and inconsistencies in the evidence must be resolved in plaintiff's favor in determining the sufficiency of the evidence to withstand a motion for directed verdict. Tripp v. Pate, 49 N.C. App. 329, 271 S.E.2d 407 (1980); Southern Ry. v. O'Boyle Tank Lines, 70 N.C. App. 1, 318 S.E.2d 872 (1984); Allison v. Food Lion, Inc., 49 N.C. App. 329, 352 S.E.2d 256 (1987).

On a motion by a defendant for directed verdict, any conflict in the evidence must be resolved in the plaintiff's favor. McAdams v. Union Sec. Life Ins. Co., 36 N.C. App. 463, 244 S.E.2d 692 (1978).

In ruling on a motion for directed verdict, the court must resolve any discrepancies in the evidence in favor of the party against whom the motion is made, and must give that party the benefit of every legitimate inference which may be reasonably drawn from the evidence. Odell v. Lipscomb, 12 N.C. App. 318, 183 S.E.2d 299 (1971).

In passing on plaintiff's motion for a directed verdict, insofar as the defendant's testimony creates a conflict in his testimony, it must be resolved in his favor. Coppley v. Carter, 10 N.C. App. 512, 179 S.E.2d 118 (1971).

In determining whether the evidence is sufficient to withstand a motion for directed verdict, plaintiff's evidence must be taken as true and all the evidence must be viewed in the light most favorable to him, giving him the benefit of every reasonable inference which may legitimately be drawn therefrom, with conflicts, contradictions and inconsistencies being resolved in plaintiff's favor. Hornby v. Pennsylvania Nat'l Mut. Cas. Ins. Co., 62 N.C. App. 419, 303 S.E.2d 332, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 461, 307 S.E.2d 364, 307 S.E.2d 365 (1983).

On defendants' motion for directed verdict, plaintiff's evidence is taken as true, along with all reasonable inferences therefrom, resolving all conflicts and inconsistencies in plaintiff's favor, and disregarding defendant's evidence unless favorable to plaintiff or tending to clarify plaintiff's case. Forsyth County v. Shelton, 74 N.C. App. 674, 329 S.E.2d 730, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 314 N.C. 328, 333 S.E.2d 484 (1985).

In considering a motion for directed verdict, the nonmovant's evidence must be taken as true, and contradictions, inconsistencies and conflicts in the evidence must be resolved in favor of the nonmovant. Morris v. Bruney, 78 N.C. App. 668, 338 S.E.2d 561 (1986).

And Giving Nonmovant the Benefit of Every Reasonable Inference. — When a motion for directed verdict is made under this rule at the conclusion of the plaintiff's evidence, the trial judge must determine whether the evidence, taken in the light most favorable to the plaintiff and giving to it the benefit of every reasonable inference which can be drawn therefrom was sufficient to withstand defendant's motion for a directed verdict. Sawyer v. Shackleford, 8 N.C. App. 631, 175 S.E.2d 305 (1970); Riddick v. Whitaker, 13 N.C. App. 416, 185 S.E.2d 602, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 154, 187 S.E.2d 585 (1972); Cook v. Export Leaf Tobacco Co., 50 N.C. App. 89, 272 S.E.2d 883 (1980), cert. denied, 302 N.C. 396, 279 S.E.2d 350 (1981); Scott v. Kiker, 59 N.C. App. 458, 297 S.E.2d 142 (1982); Southern Ry. v. O'Boyle Tank Lines, 70 N.C. App. 1, 318 S.E.2d 872 (1984).

Upon a motion for a directed verdict, all evidence which supports plaintiff's claim must be taken as true and considered in the light most favorable to plaintiff, giving to plaintiff the benefit of every reasonable inference which may legitimately be drawn therefrom, and with contradictions, conflicts and inconsistencies being resolved in plaintiff's favor. Pergerson v. Williams, 9 N.C. App. 512, 176 S.E.2d 885 (1970); Maness v. Fowler-Jones Constr. Co., 10 N.C. App. 592, 179 S.E.2d 816, cert. denied, 278 N.C. 522, 180 S.E.2d 610 (1971); Ingold v. Carolina Power & Light Co., 11 N.C. App. 253, 181 S.E.2d 173 (1971); Kinston Bldg. Supply Co. v. Murphy, 13 N.C. App. 351, 185 S.E.2d 440 (1971); Raynor v. Foster, 12 N.C. App. 193, 182 S.E.2d 806, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 512, 183 S.E.2d 688 (1971); Jenkins v. Starrett Corp., 13 N.C. App. 437, 186 S.E.2d 198 (1972); Rogers v. City of Asheville, 14 N.C. App. 514, 188 S.E.2d 656 (1972); Teachey v. Woolard, 16 N.C. App. 249, 191 S.E.2d 903, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 430, 192 S.E.2d 840 (1972); Love v. Pressley, 34 N.C. App. 503, 239 S.E.2d 574 (1977), cert. denied, 294 N.C. 441, 241 S.E.2d 843 (1978); Oliver v. Royall, 36 N.C. App. 239, 243 S.E.2d 436 (1978); Lyvere v. Ingles Mkts., Inc., 36 N.C. App. 560, 244 S.E.2d 437 (1978); Murphy v. Edwards & Warren, 36 N.C. App. 653, 245 S.E.2d 212, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 551, 248 S.E.2d 728 (1978); Weyerhaeuser Co. v. Godwin

Bldg. Supply Co., 40 N.C. App. 743, 253 S.E.2d 625 (1979); Thompson v. Soles, 42 N.C. App. 462, 257 S.E.2d 59 (1979), aff'd in part and modified in part, 299 N.C. 484, 263 S.E.2d 599 (1980); Hart v. Warren, 46 N.C. App. 672, 266 S.E.2d 53, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 89, 273 S.E.2d 297 (1980); Sessoms v. Roberson, 47 N.C. App. 573, 268 S.E.2d 24 (1980); Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Smith, 44 N.C. App. 685, 262 S.E.2d 646, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 379, 267 S.E.2d 685 (1980), overruled on other grounds, Marshall v. Miller, 302 N.C. 539, 276 S.E.2d 397 (1981); Bone Int'l, Inc. v. Brooks, 51 N.C. App. 183, 275 S.E.2d 556, rev'd on other grounds, 304 N.C. 371, 283 S.E.2d 518 (1981); Bryant v. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 313 N.C. 362, 329 S.E.2d 333 (1985); Chastain v. Wall, 78 N.C. App. 350, 337 S.E.2d 150 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 375, 342 S.E.2d 891 (1986); Woodruff v. Shuford, 82 N.C. App. 260, 346 S.E.2d 173 (1986); Harshbarger v. Murphy, 90 N.C. App. 393, 368 S.E.2d 450 (1988).

In considering defendant's motion for a directed verdict, the court must view the evidence in the light most favorable to plaintiff, resolving all conflicts in his favor and giving the plaintiff the benefit of every inference that reasonably can be drawn in his favor. Husketh v. Convenient Sys., 295 N.C. 459, 245 S.E.2d 507 (1978), overruled on other grounds, Nelson v. Freeland, 349 N.C. 615, 507 S.E.2d 882 (1998); Cantey v. Barnes, 51 N.C. App. 356, 276 S.E.2d 490 (1981); Sharpe v. Wyse, 317 N.C. 694, 346 S.E.2d 485 (1986); United Labs., Inc. v. Kuykendall, 322 N.C. 643, 370 S.E.2d 375 (1988).

Upon defendant's motion for a directed verdict, all of plaintiff's evidence must be taken as true and considered in the light most favorable to plaintiff, giving him the benefit of all reasonable inferences and resolving all inconsistencies in his favor. Jones v. Satterfield Dev. Co., 16 N.C. App. 80, 191 S.E.2d 435, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 304, 192 S.E.2d 194 (1972).

On defendant's motion for a directed verdict, plaintiff's evidence must be taken as true and all the evidence must be considered in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, giving him the benefit of every reasonable inference to be drawn therefrom. Clark v. Bodycombe, 289 N.C. 246, 221 S.E.2d 506 (1976); Manganello v. Permastone, Inc., 291 N.C. 666, 231 S.E.2d 678 (1977); Mintz v. Foster, 35 N.C. App. 638, 242 S.E.2d 181 (1978); McAdams v. Union Sec. Life Ins. Co., 36 N.C. App. 463, 244 S.E.2d 692 (1978); Southern Ry. v. Jeffco Fibres, Inc., 41 N.C. App. 694, 255 S.E.2d 749, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 299, 259 S.E.2d 302 (1979); American Home Prods. Corp. v. Howell's Motor Freight, Inc., 46 N.C. Hutton & Co. v. Sexton, 48 N.C. App. 413, 269 S.E.2d 257 (1980); Norman v. Royal Crown Bottling Co., 49 N.C. App. 661, 272 S.E.2d 355 (1980); Jones v. Allred, 52 N.C. App. 38, 278 S.E.2d 521, aff'd, 304 N.C. 387, 283 S.E.2d 517 (1981); Koonce v. May, 59 N.C. App. 633, 298 S.E.2d 69 (1982); Phelps v. Duke Power Co., 78 N.C. App. 222, 332 S.E.2d 715, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 668, 336 S.E.2d 401 (1985); Hall v. Mabe, 77 N.C. App. 758, 336 S.E.2d 427 (1985).

On a motion for directed verdict, plaintiff's evidence is to be taken as true and all of the evidence must be considered in the light most favorable to plaintiff, giving him the benefit of every fact and inference of fact pertaining to the issues which may be reasonably deduced from the evidence. Anderson v. Butler, 284 N.C. 723, 202 S.E.2d 585 (1974), overruled on other grounds, Nelson v. Freeland, 349 N.C. 615, 507 S.E.2d 882 (1998).

In considering defendant's motion for a directed verdict, the evidence is to be considered in the light most favorable to plaintiff, and plaintiff is entitled to all reasonable inferences that can be drawn from that evidence. Tan v. Tan, 49 N.C. App. 516, 272 S.E.2d 11 (1980), cert. denied, 302 N.C. 402, 279 S.E.2d 356 (1981); Everhart v. LeBrun, 52 N.C. App. 139, 277 S.E.2d 816 (1981); Clark v. Moore, 65 N.C. App. 609, 309 S.E.2d 579 (1983); Henderson v. Traditional Log Homes, Inc., 70 N.C. App. 303, 319 S.E.2d 290, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 623, 323 S.E.2d 923 (1984).

On motion for a directed verdict all the evidence which tends to support the nonmovant's case against it must be taken as true and considered in the light most favorable to the nonmovant, which is entitled to the benefit of every reasonable inference which may legitimately be drawn from the evidence. Mann v. Virginia Dare Transp. Co., 283 N.C. 734, 198 S.E.2d 558 (1973).

On passing on a motion for a directed verdict, the evidence is to be taken in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party, and he is entitled to all reasonable inferences that can be drawn from it. Murray v. Murray, 296 N.C. 405, 250 S.E.2d 276 (1979).

In passing on a motion under section (a) of this rule, the trial judge must consider the evidence in the light most favorable to the nonmovant, and conflicts in the evidence together with inferences which may be drawn from it must be resolved in favor of the nonmovant. Arnold v. Sharpe, 296 N.C. 533, 251 S.E.2d 452 (1979); Stallings v. Purvis, 42 N.C. App. 690, 257 S.E.2d 664 (1979); Aarhus v. Wake Forest Univ., 57 N.C. App. 405, 291 S.E.2d 837 (1982); Davis v. Davis, 58 N.C. App. 25, 293 S.E.2d 268, cert. denied, 307 N.C. 127, 297 S.E.2d 399 (1982); DeHart v. R/S Fin. Corp., 78 N.C. App. 93, 337 S.E.2d 94 (1985),

The court must consider the evidence in the light most favorable to the nonmovant, deeming all evidence which tends to support his position to be true, resolving all evidentiary conflicts favorably to him and giving the nonmovant the benefit of all inferences reasonably to be drawn in his favor. Daughtry v. Turnage, 295 N.C. 543, 246 S.E.2d 788 (1978); McCollum v. Grove Mfg. Co., 58 N.C. App. 283, 293 S.E.2d 632, aff'd, 307 N.C. 695, 300 S.E.2d 374 (1983); Cameron v. New Hanover Mem. Hosp., 58 N.C. App. 414, 293 S.E.2d 901, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 307 N.C. 127, 297 S.E.2d 399 (1982); Wilkie v. Wilkie, 58 N.C. App. 624, 294 S.E.2d 230, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 752, 295 S.E.2d 764 (1982).

The evidence in favor of the nonmovant must be deemed true, all conflicts in the evidence must be resolved in his favor and he is entitled to the benefit of every inference reasonably to be drawn in his favor. Summey v. Cauthen, 283 N.C. 640, 197 S.E.2d 549 (1973); Snider v. Dickens, 293 N.C. 356, 237 S.E.2d 832 (1977); Snow v. Duke Power Co., 297 N.C. 591, 256 S.E.2d 227 (1979); Nytco Leasing, Inc. v. Southeastern Motels, Inc., 40 N.C. App. 120, 252 S.E.2d 826 (1979); Loy v. Lorm Corp., 52 N.C. App. 428, 278 S.E.2d 897 (1981); Bruegge v. Mastertemp, Inc., 83 N.C. App. 508, 350 S.E.2d 918 (1986); Atwater v. Castlebury, 84 N.C. App. 512, 353 S.E.2d 263 (1987).

The evidence must be considered in the light most favorable to the party opposing the motion, and the opponent is entitled to the benefit of every reasonable inference which may legitimately be drawn from the evidence, and all conflicts in the evidence are resolved in favor of the opponent. Morrison v. Concord Kiwanis Club, 52 N.C. App. 454, 279 S.E.2d 96, cert. denied, 304 N.C. 196, 285 S.E.2d 100 (1981).

On appeal from the granting of a motion for directed verdict against the plaintiff, all the evidence tending to support plaintiff's claim must be taken as true and considered in the light most favorable to him, giving him the benefit of every reasonable inference which legitimately may be drawn therefrom, with contradictions, conflicts and inconsistencies therein being resolved in plaintiff's favor. Musgrave v. Mutual Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 8 N.C. App. 385, 174 S.E.2d 820 (1970); Adler v. Lumber Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 10 N.C. App. 720, 179 S.E.2d 786, aff'd, 280 N.C. 146, 185 S.E.2d 144 (1971); Tate v. Bryant, 16 N.C. App. 132, 191 S.E.2d 433 (1972); Hawkins v. State Capital Ins. Co., 74 N.C. App. 499, 328 S.E.2d 793 (1985).

On a motion by a defendant for a directed verdict in a jury case, the court must consider all the evidence in the light most favorable to the plaintiff and may grant the motion only if, as a matter of law, the evidence is insufficient to justify a verdict for the plaintiff. The same factors are considered in determining if a judgment notwithstanding the verdict should be granted as in the directed verdict decision. Colony Assocs. v. Fred L. Clapp & Co., 60 N.C. App. 634, 300 S.E.2d 37 (1983).

In ruling on a motion for directed verdict, plaintiff's evidence must be taken as true and considered in the light most favorable to him. All conflicts must be resolved in plaintiff's favor, and he must be given the benefit of every reasonable inference. The same standard applies to a motion for judgment n.o.v. Shields v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 61 N.C. App. 365, 301 S.E.2d 439 (1983).

Upon a motion for a directed verdict, the court must view the evidence in the light most favorable to the nonmovant, resolving all conflicts in his favor and giving him the benefit of every inference that could reasonably be drawn from the evidence in his favor. It is only where the evidence, when so considered, is insufficient to support a verdict in the nonmovant's favor that the motion for directed verdict should be granted. West v. Slick, 313 N.C. 33, 326 S.E.2d 601 (1985).

When passing on a motion for a directed verdict, the plaintiff should be given the benefit of all reasonable inferences; the motion should be denied if there is a scintilla of evidence to support plaintiffs' prima facie case in all its constituent elements. These principles are equally applicable to defendants' counterclaim. Burris v. Shumate, 77 N.C. App. 209, 334 S.E.2d 514 (1985).

On a directed verdict motion, the record is viewed in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party, resolving all conflicts in its favor and giving it the benefit of every favorable inference. Broyhill v. Coppage, 79 N.C. App. 221, 339 S.E.2d 32 (1986).

On a motion for directed verdict, the evidence in favor of the nonmovant must be taken as true, resolving all conflicts in the nonmovant's favor and entitling him to the benefit of all reasonable inferences. Rice v. Wood, 82 N.C. App. 318, 346 S.E.2d 205, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 417, 349 S.E.2d 599 (1986).

Motion for a directed verdict under section (a) of this rule tests the legal sufficiency of the evidence to take the case to the jury and support a verdict for the plaintiff. Manganello v. Permastone, Inc., 291 N.C. 666, 231 S.E.2d 678 (1977); Byerly v. Byerly, 38 N.C. App. 551, 248 S.E.2d 433 (1978); McCollum v. Grove Mfg. Co., 58 N.C. App. 283, 293 S.E.2d 632, aff'd, 307 N.C. 695, 300 S.E.2d 374 (1983); Koonce v. May, 59 N.C. App. 633, 298 S.E.2d 69 (1982); Harshbarger v. Murphy, 90 N.C. App. 393, 368 S.E.2d 450 (1988).

On a motion for a directed verdict, the trial court must consider whether the evidence presented is sufficient to go to the jury. Wilkie v. Wilkie, 58 N.C. App. 624, 294 S.E.2d 230, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 752, 295 S.E.2d 764 (1982).

A motion for directed verdict by a defendant tests the legal sufficiency of the evidence to go to the jury. Hall v. Mabe, 77 N.C. App. 758, 336 S.E.2d 427 (1985).

Question Presented by Motion for Directed Verdict. — The question presented by the defendant's motion for a directed verdict is whether the evidence, when considered in the light most favorable to plaintiff, is sufficient for submission to the jury. Kelly v. International Harvester Co., 278 N.C. 153, 179 S.E.2d 396 (1971); Investment Properties of Asheville, Inc. v. Allen, 283 N.C. 277, 196 S.E.2d 262 (1973); Stone v. Paradise Park Homes, Inc., 37 N.C. App. 97, 245 S.E.2d 801, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 653, 248 S.E.2d 257 (1978); Nytco Leasing, Inc. v. Southeastern Motels, Inc., 40 N.C. App. 120, 252 S.E.2d 826 (1979); Southern Ry. v. Jeffco Fibres, Inc., 41 N.C. App. 694, 255 S.E.2d 749, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 299, 259 S.E.2d 302 (1979); Hunt v. Montgomery Ward & Co., 49 N.C. App. 642, 272 S.E.2d 357 (1980); Helvy v. Sweat, 58 N.C. App. 197, 292 S.E.2d 733, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 741, 295 S.E.2d 477 (1982); Horne v. Trivette, 58 N.C. App. 77, 293 S.E.2d 290, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 741, 295 S.E.2d 759 (1982); Hong v. George Goodyear Co., 63 N.C. App. 741, 306 S.E.2d 157 (1983); Northern Nat'l Life Ins. Co. v. Lacy J. Miller Mach. Co., 311 N.C. 62, 316 S.E.2d 256 (1984); Allison v. Food Lion, Inc., 84 N.C. App. 251, 352 S.E.2d 256 (1987).

A motion for a directed verdict under this rule presents the same question for both trial and appellate courts: Whether the evidence, taken in the light most favorable to plaintiff, was sufficient for submission to the jury. Helvy v. Sweat, 58 N.C. App. 197, 292 S.E.2d 733 (1982).

A motion for a directed verdict presents the question of whether, as a matter of law, the evidence offered by plaintiff, when considered in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, is sufficient to be submitted to the jury. Roberts v. William N. & Kate B. Reynolds Mem. Park, 281 N.C. 48, 187 S.E.2d 721 (1972); Penney v. Carpenter, 32 N.C. App. 147, 231 S.E.2d 171 (1977).

The defendant's motion for a directed verdict under this rule presents a question of law for decision by the court, namely, whether the evidence is sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to have the jury pass on it. Kelly v. International Harvester Co., 278 N.C. 153, 179 S.E.2d 396 (1971); Odell v. Lipscomb, 12 N.C. App. 318, 183 S.E.2d 299 (1971); Bowen v. Constructors Equip. Rental Co., 283 N.C. 395, 196 S.E.2d 789 (1973); Hunt v. Montgomery Ward & Co., 49 N.C. App. 642, 272 S.E.2d 357 (1980).

The question of law presented by defendant's motion for a directed verdict is whether plaintiff's evidence was sufficient for submission to the jury. Stewart v. Nation-Wide Check Corp., 279 N.C. 278, 182 S.E.2d 410 (1971); Cameron v. New Hanover Mem. Hosp., 58 N.C. App. 414, 293 S.E.2d 901, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 307 N.C. 127, 297 S.E.2d 399 (1982).

A defendant's motion for a directed verdict presents the question whether the evidence is sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to have the jury pass on it. Maness v. Fowler-Jones Constr. Co., 10 N.C. App. 592, 179 S.E.2d 816, cert. denied, 278 N.C. 522, 180 S.E.2d 610 (1971); United Labs., Inc. v. Kuykendall, 322 N.C. 643, 370 S.E.2d 375 (1988).

A motion for directed verdict raises the question whether the evidence, considered in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, will justify a verdict in his favor. Rayfield v. Clark, 283 N.C. 362, 196 S.E.2d 197 (1973); Snow v. Duke Power Co., 297 N.C. 591, 256 S.E.2d 227 (1979); Colson v. Shaw, 46 N.C. App. 402, 265 S.E.2d 407 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 301 N.C. 677, 273 S.E.2d 243 (1981); Thompson & Little, Inc. v. Colvin, 46 N.C. App. 774, 266 S.E.2d 46 (1980).

The question presented by a defendant's motion for a directed verdict is whether all the evidence which supports the plaintiff's claim, when taken as true, considered in the light most favorable to the plaintiff and given the benefit of every reasonable inference in the plaintiff's favor which may legitimately be drawn therefrom, is sufficient for submission to the jury. Tripp v. Pate, 49 N.C. App. 329, 271 S.E.2d 407 (1980).

The motion for a directed verdict in a jury trial presents the question whether the evidence, when considered in the light most favorable to the party against whom the motion is made, is sufficient for submission to the jury. Sink v. Sink, 11 N.C. App. 549, 181 S.E.2d 721 (1971); Thompson v. Soles, 42 N.C. App. 462, 257 S.E.2d 59 (1979), aff'd in part and modified in part, 299 N.C. 484, 263 S.E.2d 599 (1980); Sessoms v. Roberson, 47 N.C. App. 573, 268 S.E.2d 24 (1980).

A motion for a directed verdict presents the question of whether the evidence is sufficient to carry the case to the jury. Hasty v. Carpenter, 51 N.C. App. 333, 276 S.E.2d 513 (1981); Vance Trucking Co. v. Phillips, 51 N.C. App. 85, 275 S.E.2d 497, cert. denied, 303 N.C. 320, 281 S.E.2d 659, petition for reconsideration denied, 303 N.C. 550, 281 S.E.2d 661 (1981); Aarhus v. Wake Forest Univ., 57 N.C. App. 405, 291 S.E.2d 837 (1982).

A motion for directed verdict under this rule presents the question whether the evidence is sufficient to entitle the party against whom the motion is made to have a jury pass on it. Paccar Fin. Corp. v. Harnett Transf., Inc., 51 N.C. App.

A motion for a directed verdict pursuant to section (a) of this rule presents the question of whether the evidence presented is sufficient to carry the case to the jury. In passing on this motion, the trial judge must consider the evidence in the light most favorable to the nonmovant, and conflicts in the evidence together with inferences which may be drawn from it must be resolved in favor of the nonmovant. The motion may be granted only if the evidence is insufficient to justify a verdict for the nonmovant as a matter of law. Satterfield v. Pappas, 67 N.C. App. 28, 312 S.E.2d 511, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 403, 319 S.E.2d 274 (1984).

A motion for a directed verdict presents the same question for both the trial and appellate courts: Whether the evidence, taken in the light most favorable to the nonmovant, and giving the nonmovant the benefit of every reasonable inference arising from the evidence, is sufficient for submission to the jury. Alston v. Herrick, 76 N.C. App. 246, 332 S.E.2d 720 (1985), aff'd, 315 N.C. 386, 337 S.E.2d 851 (1986).

The court may grant a motion for directed verdict only if, as a matter of law, the evidence is insufficient to justify a verdict for the plaintiff. Cates v. Wilson, 83 N.C. App. 448, 350 S.E.2d 898 (1986), modified on other grounds, 321 N.C. 1, 361 S.E.2d 734 (1987).

Where Question Is Close, Better Practice Is to Reserve Decision and Submit Case to Jury. — Where the question of granting a directed verdict is a close one, the better practice is for the trial judge to reserve his decision on the motion and allow the case to be submitted to the jury. If the jury returns a verdict in favor of the moving party, no decision on the motion is necessary and an appeal may be avoided. If the jury finds for the nonmoving party, the judge may reconsider the motion and enter a judgment notwithstanding the verdict, provided he is convinced the evidence was insufficient. On appeal, if the motion proves to have been improperly granted, the appellate court then has the option of ordering entry of the judgment on the verdict, thereby eliminating the expense and delay involved in a retrial. Koonce v. May, 59 N.C. App. 633, 298 S.E.2d 69 (1982); Tice v. Hall, 63 N.C. App. 27, 303 S.E.2d 832 (1983), aff'd, 310 N.C. 589, 313 S.E.2d 565 (1984).

Where the question of granting a directed verdict is a close one, the better practice is for the trial judge to reserve his decision on the motion and allow the case to be submitted to the jury. Wallace v. Evans, 60 N.C. App. 145, 298 S.E.2d 193 (1982).

If There Is More Than a Scintilla of Evidence, Motion Should Be Denied. — The court should deny a motion for directed verdict when it finds any evidence more than a scintilla to support plaintiff's prima facie case in all its constituent elements. Clark v. Moore, 65 N.C. App. 609, 309 S.E.2d 579 (1983).

The court should deny motion for directed verdict if there is more than a scintilla of evidence to support the plaintiff's prima facie case. Southern Ry. v. O'Boyle Tank Lines, 70 N.C. App. 1, 318 S.E.2d 872 (1984); Rice v. Wood, 82 N.C. App. 318, 346 S.E.2d 205, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 417, 349 S.E.2d 599 (1986).

If there is more than a scintilla of evidence supporting each element of nonmovant's case, the motion for directed verdict should be denied. Broyhill v. Coppage, 79 N.C. App. 221, 339 S.E.2d 32 (1986).

More than a scintilla of evidence existed from which the jury could find that defendant's trespass was accompanied by a reckless disregard for plaintiffs' rights and an element of intent after defendant discovered he had trespassed on plaintiffs' property and continued to trespass; therefore, the trial court properly denied defendant's motions for directed verdict and judgment notwithstanding the verdict on the issue of punitive damages. Lee v. Bir, 116 N.C. App. 584, 449 S.E.2d 34 (1994), cert. denied, 340 N.C. 113, 454 S.E.2d 652 (1995).

On motion by plaintiff for a directed verdict on a counterclaim of defendant, the trial court must determine the preliminary question of whether all of the evidence which tends to support defendant's case on the counterclaim, taken as true and considered in the light most favorable to the defendant, giving him the benefit of every fact and inference of fact pertaining to the issue which may be reasonably deduced from the evidence, is sufficient to submit to the jury. Sloan v. Wells, 37 N.C. App. 177, 245 S.E.2d 529 (1978), rev'd on other grounds, 296 N.C. 570, 251 S.E.2d 449 (1979).

Motion for a directed verdict presents substantially the same question for sufficiency as did a motion for an involuntary nonsuit. Investment Properties of Asheville, Inc. v. Allen, 281 N.C. 174, 188 S.E.2d 441 (1972), vacated on other grounds on rehearing, 283 N.C. 277, 196 S.E.2d 262 (1973); Younts v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 281 N.C. 582, 189 S.E.2d 137 (1972); McCoy v. Dowdy, 16 N.C. App. 242, 192 S.E.2d 81 (1972); Robinson v. Whitley Moving & Storage, Inc., 37 N.C. App. 638, 246 S.E.2d 839 (1978).

A motion for a directed verdict presents substantially the same question as did a motion for judgment as of nonsuit. Jenkins v. Starrett Corp., 13 N.C. App. 437, 186 S.E.2d 198 (1972); City of Winston-Salem v. Rice, 16 N.C. App. 294, 192 S.E.2d 9, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 425, 192 S.E.2d 835 (1972); Dickinson v. Pake, 284 N.C. 576, 201 S.E.2d 897 (1974); Anderson v.

Butler, 284 N.C. 723, 202 S.E.2d 585 (1974), overruled on other grounds, Nelson v. Freeland, 349 N.C. 615, 507 S.E.2d 882 (1998); Daughtry v. Turnage, 295 N.C. 543, 246 S.E.2d 788 (1978).

A motion for a directed verdict pursuant to section (a) of this rule presents the same question as did a motion for nonsuit prior to adoption of the new Rules of Civil Procedure. The question is whether the evidence presented is sufficient to carry the case to the jury. Arnold v. Sharpe, 296 N.C. 533, 251 S.E.2d 452 (1979); Stallings v. Purvis, 42 N.C. App. 690, 257 S.E.2d 664 (1979).

A defendant's motion made in a jury trial for a directed verdict presents substantially the same question as that formerly presented by a motion for judgment of involuntary nonsuit, namely, whether the evidence was sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to have the jury pass on it. Raynor v. Foster, 12 N.C. App. 193, 182 S.E.2d 806, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 512, 183 S.E.2d 688 (1971); Sadler v. Purser, 12 N.C. App. 206, 182 S.E.2d 850 (1971); Summey v. Cauthen, 283 N.C. 640, 197 S.E.2d 549 (1973).

Motion for a directed verdict presents substantially the same question formerly presented by the motion for nonsuit, that is, whether the evidence considered in the light most favorable to the claimant will justify a verdict in his favor. Cutts v. Casey, 278 N.C. 390, 180 S.E.2d 297 (1971); American Personnel, Inc. v. Harbolick, 16 N.C. App. 107, 191 S.E.2d 412 (1972).

And Will Ordinarily Be Treated the Same. — A motion directed verdict produces virtually the same effect and ordinarily will be treated the same as a motion for nonsuit under the old rules in determining whether the evidence should be submitted to the jury. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. v. Lumbermen's Mut. Cas. Co., 11 N.C. App. 490, 181 S.E.2d 727 (1971).

Applicability of Same Principles as Those Used on Motion for Nonsuit. — In determining the sufficiency of a plaintiff's evidence to withstand a defendant's motion for a directed verdict in a jury case, the trial court and the appellate court are guided by the same principles that prevailed under the former procedure with respect to the sufficiency of evidence to withstand a motion for nonsuit under former § 1-183. Musgrave v. Mutual Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 8 N.C. App. 385, 174 S.E.2d 820 (1970); Pergerson v. Williams, 9 N.C. App. 512, 176 S.E.2d 885 (1970); Naylor v. Naylor, 11 N.C. App. 384, 181 S.E.2d 222 (1971); Byrd v. Potts, 12 N.C. App. 262, 182 S.E.2d 837 (1971); Jones v. Satterfield Dev. Co., 16 N.C. App. 80, 191 S.E.2d 435, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 304, 192 S.E.2d 194 (1972); Tate v. Bryant, 16 N.C. App. 132, 191 S.E.2d 433 (1972).

Determination of the sufficiency of the evidence to withstand a motion for a directed verdict made by a defendant under the provisions of this rule is guided by the same principles that prevailed under the former procedure with respect to motion for nonsuit. Ingold v. Carolina Power & Light Co., 11 N.C. App. 253, 181 S.E.2d 173 (1971).

Objections Not Equivalent to Directed Verdict. — Plaintiff's objections to the issue of contributory negligence made at the conference on the jury instructions were not the equivalent of a motion for directed verdict made pursuant to subdivision (a) of this rule, as plaintiff could have made a proper motion at the close of evidence and plaintiff's objection during the jury instruction conference would not allow defendant a proper chance to correct any errors in its proof of contributory negligence. Thus, the trial court erred in holding that plaintiff's objection to the contributory negligence issue was the equivalent of a directed verdict. Enns v. Zayre Corp., 116 N.C. App. 687, 449 S.E.2d 478 (1994), cert. denied, 339 N.C. 737, 454 S.E.2d 649, aff'd, per curiam, 342 N.C. 406, 464 S.E.2d 298 (1995).

A verdict may never be directed when the facts are in dispute. Cutts v. Casey, 278 N.C. 390, 180 S.E.2d 297 (1971); Jones v. Satterfield Dev. Co., 16 N.C. App. 80, 191 S.E.2d 435, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 304, 192 S.E.2d 194 (1972); Bone Int'l, Inc. v. Brooks, 51 N.C. App. 183, 275 S.E.2d 556, rev'd on other grounds, 304 N.C. 371, 283 S.E.2d 518 (1981).

On the motion of a defendant for a directed verdict, if the evidence is of such character that reasonable men may form divergent opinions of its import, the issue is for the jury. Brewer v. Majors, 48 N.C. App. 202, 268 S.E.2d 229, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 400, 273 S.E.2d 445 (1980).

A verdict may not be directed when the facts are in dispute, and the credibility of testimony is for the jury, not the trial judge. Population Planning Assocs. v. Mews, 65 N.C. App. 96, 308 S.E.2d 739 (1983).

A verdict may never be directed when there is conflicting evidence on contested issues of fact. Northern Nat'l Life Ins. Co. v. Lacy J. Miller Mach. Co., 311 N.C. 62, 316 S.E.2d 256 (1984); DeHart v. R/S Fin. Corp., 78 N.C. App. 93, 337 S.E.2d 94 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 376, 342 S.E.2d 893 (1986).

The judge may direct a verdict only when the issue submitted presents a question of law based on admitted facts. Cutts v. Casey, 278 N.C. 390, 180 S.E.2d 297 (1971); Jones v. Satterfield Dev. Co., 16 N.C. App. 80, 191 S.E.2d 435, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 304, 192 S.E.2d 194 (1972).

Trial Court Should Not Make Findings of Fact or State Conclusions of Law. — In resolving the question presented by a motion for directed verdict, it is neither required nor appropriate that the trial court make "findings of fact" and state "conclusions of law." Kelly v.

International Harvester Co., 278 N.C. 153, 179 S.E.2d 396 (1971); Sink v. Sink, 11 N.C. App. 549, 181 S.E.2d 721 (1971).

Jury to Determine Issue Where More Than One Conclusion Possible. — Where more than one conclusion can reasonably be drawn, determination of the issue is properly for the jury. Maness v. Fowler-Jones Constr. Co., 10 N.C. App. 592, 179 S.E.2d 816, cert. denied, 278 N.C. 522, 180 S.E.2d 610 (1971).

Discrepancies and contradictions in the evidence are to be resolved by the jury and not by the court. Naylor v. Naylor, 11 N.C. App. 384, 181 S.E.2d 222 (1971).

Contradictions or discrepancies in the evidence on a motion for a directed verdict, even when arising from plaintiff's evidence, must be resolved by the jury rather than the trial judge. Clark v. Bodycombe, 289 N.C. 246, 221 S.E.2d 506 (1976).

Discrepancies and contradictions in the evidence, even though such occur in the evidence offered on behalf of the nonmovant, are to be resolved by the jury, not by the court. Murray v. Murray, 296 N.C. 405, 250 S.E.2d 276 (1979).

If there is conflicting testimony that permits different inferences, one of which is favorable to the nonmoving party, a directed verdict in favor of the party with the burden of proof is improper. United Labs., Inc. v. Kuykendall, 322 N.C. 643, 370 S.E.2d 375 (1988).

Defendant's denial of an alleged fact raises an issue as to its existence, even though he offers no evidence tending to contradict that offered by plaintiff. Cutts v. Casey, 278 N.C. 390, 180 S.E.2d 297 (1971); Weeks Motor Co. v. Daniels, 18 N.C. App. 442, 197 S.E.2d 29 (1973).

Ordinarily Credibility Is a Jury Question. — The credibility of testimony is for the jury, not the court, and a genuine issue of fact must be tried by a jury unless this right is waived. Cutts v. Casey, 278 N.C. 390, 180 S.E.2d 297 (1971); Price v. Conley, 21 N.C. App. 326, 204 S.E.2d 178 (1974).

The jury and not the judge passes on credibility. Hinson v. Sparrow, 21 N.C. App. 554, 204 S.E.2d 925 (1974).

Contributory Negligence Should Have Been a Jury Question. — Where evidence did not establish plaintiff's contributory negligence as a matter of law, that issue should have been resolved by the jury, and the directed verdict in favor of defendant was reversed. Crane v. Caldwell, 113 N.C. App. 362, 438 S.E.2d 449 (1994).

Whether "Genuine Issue of Fact" Exists Is Preliminary Question for Judge. Price v. Conley, 21 N.C. App. 326, 204 S.E.2d 178 (1974).

Sufficiency of evidence is a question of law to be determined by the court. Booker v. Everhart, 33 N.C. App. 1, 234 S.E.2d 46 (1977), rev'd on other grounds, 294 N.C. 146, 240 S.E.2d 360 (1978).

When the defendant has moved for a directed verdict, and the trial court considers all the evidence in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, whether this evidence is sufficient to create an issue of fact for the jury is solely a question of law to be determined by the court. Prevatte v. Cabble, 24 N.C. App. 524, 211 S.E.2d 528 (1975).

Motion for directed verdict may be granted only if the evidence is insufficient to justify a verdict for the nonmovant as a matter of law. Arnold v. Sharpe, 296 N.C. 533, 251 S.E.2d 452 (1979); Bost v. Riley, 44 N.C. App. 638, 262 S.E.2d 391, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 194, 269 S.E.2d 621 (1980); Cameron v. New Hanover Mem. Hosp., 58 N.C. App. 414, 293 S.E.2d 901, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 307 N.C. 127, 297 S.E.2d 399 (1982); Colony Assocs. v. Fred L. Clapp & Co., 60 N.C. App. 634, 300 S.E.2d 37 (1983); Homeland, Inc. v. Backer, 78 N.C. App. 477, 337 S.E.2d 114 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 377, 342 S.E.2d 896 (1986).

A motion for a directed verdict may be granted only if the evidence is insufficient, as a matter of law, to support a verdict for the plaintiff. Husketh v. Convenient Sys., 295 N.C. 459, 245 S.E.2d 507 (1978), overruled on other grounds, Nelson v. Freeland, 349 N.C. 615, 507 S.E.2d 882 (1998); Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Smith, 44 N.C. App. 685, 262 S.E.2d 646, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 379, 267 S.E.2d 685 (1980), overruled on other grounds, Marshall v. Miller, 302 N.C. 539, 276 S.E.2d 397 (1981); Russell v. Sam Solomon Co., 49 N.C. App. 126, 270 S.E.2d 518 (1980), cert. denied, 301 N.C. 722, 274 S.E.2d 231 (1981); Bone Int'l, Inc. v. Brooks, 51 N.C. App. 183, 275 S.E.2d 556, rev'd on other grounds, 304 N.C. 371, 283 S.E.2d 518 (1981); Cantey v. Barnes, 51 N.C. App. 356, 276 S.E.2d 490 (1981); Aarhus v. Wake Forest Univ., 57 N.C. App. 405, 291 S.E.2d 837 (1982); Davis v. Davis, 58 N.C. App. 25, 293 S.E.2d 268, cert. denied, 307 N.C. 127, 297 S.E.2d 399 (1982); Henderson v. Traditional Log Homes, Inc., 70 N.C. App. 303, 319 S.E.2d 290 (1984), cert. denied, 312 N.C. 622, 323 S.E.2d 923 (1984); Morris v. Bruney, 78 N.C. App. 668, 338 S.E.2d 561 (1986); Woodruff v. Shuford, 82 N.C. App. 260, 346 S.E.2d 173 (1986); Moore v. North Carolina Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co., 82 N.C. App. 616, 347 S.E.2d 489 (1986), cert. denied, 318 N.C. 696, 351 S.E.2d 749 (1987).

On a motion by a defendant for a directed verdict in a jury case, the court must consider all the evidence in the light most favorable to the plaintiff and may grant the motion only if, as a matter of law, the evidence is insufficient to justify a verdict for the plaintiff. Kelly v. International Harvester Co., 278 N.C. 153, 179 S.E.2d 396 (1971); Creasman v. First Fed. Sav.

& Loan Ass'n, 279 N.C. 361, 183 S.E.2d 115 (1971), cert. denied, 405 U.S. 977, 92 S. Ct. 1204, 31 L. Ed. 2d 252 (1972); Stewart v. Nation-Wide Check Corp., 279 N.C. 278, 182 S.E.2d 410 (1971); Odell v. Lipscomb, 12 N.C. App. 318, 183 S.E.2d 299 (1971); Younts v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 281 N.C. 582, 189 S.E.2d 137 (1972); McCoy v. Dowdy, 16 N.C. App. 242, 192 S.E.2d 81 (1972); Dickinson v. Pake, 284 N.C. 576, 201 S.E.2d 897 (1974); Ward v. Thompson Heights Swimming Club, Inc., 27 N.C. App. 218, 219 S.E.2d 73 (1975); Denning v. Lee, 35 N.C. App. 565, 241 S.E.2d 706 (1978); Pearce v. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co., 41 N.C. App. 62, 254 S.E.2d 243 (1979), rev'd on other grounds, 299 N.C. 64, 261 S.E.2d 176 (1980); Hecht Realty, Inc. v. Whisnant, 41 N.C. App. 702, 255 S.E.2d 647, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 299, 259 S.E.2d 912 (1979); American Home Prods. Corp. v. Howell's Motor Freight, Inc., 46 N.C. App. 276, 264 S.E.2d 774, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 556, 270 S.E.2d 105 (1980); Vickery v. Olin Hill Constr. Co., 47 N.C. App. 98, 266 S.E.2d 711, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 106, 273 S.E.2d 312 (1980); Wesley v. Greyhound Lines, 47 N.C. App. 680, 268 S.E.2d 855, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 239, 283 S.E.2d 136 (1980); Brewer v. Majors, 48 N.C. App. 202, 268 S.E.2d 229, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 400, 273 S.E.2d 445 (1980); E.F. Hutton & Co. v. Sexton, 48 N.C. App. 413, 269 S.E.2d 257 (1980); Burnett v. First Citizens Bank & Trust Co., 48 N.C. App. 585, 269 S.E.2d 317 (1980); Ward v. City of Charlotte, 48 N.C. App. 463, 269 S.E.2d 663, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 531, 273 S.E.2d 463 (1980); Dorsey v. Buchanan, 52 N.C. App. 597, 279 S.E.2d 92 (1981); Cooper v. Henderson, 55 N.C. App. 234, 284 S.E.2d 756 (1981); Meacham v. Montgomery County Bd. of Educ., 59 N.C. App. 381, 297 S.E.2d 192 (1982), cert. denied, 307 N.C. 577, 299 S.E.2d 651 (1983); John D. Latimer & Assocs. v. Housing Auth., 59 N.C. App. 638, 297 S.E.2d 779 (1982); Colony Assocs. v. Fred L. Clapp & Co., 60 N.C. App. 634, 300 S.E.2d 37 (1983).

It is only when the evidence is insufficient to support a verdict in the nonmovant's favor that the motion should be granted. Snow v. Duke Power Co., 297 N.C. 591, 256 S.E.2d 227 (1979); Northern Nat'l Life Ins. Co. v. Lacy J. Miller Mach. Co., 311 N.C. 62, 316 S.E.2d 256 (1984).

The standard for entry of a directed verdict is that the evidence, when viewed in the light most favorable to the nonmovant, must be insufficient as a matter of law to support a verdict in favor of the nonmovant. Oakley v. Oakley, 54 N.C. App. 161, 282 S.E.2d 589 (1981).

A directed verdict in favor of the party with the burden of proof is proper only when the proponent has established a clear and uncontradicted prima facie case and the credibility of his evidence is manifest as a matter of law. Homeland, Inc. v. Backer, 78 N.C. App. 477, 337 S.E.2d 114 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 377, 342 S.E.2d 896 (1986).

Appellate Review of Motion. — Because defendant failed to assert the insufficiency of the evidence to support plaintiffs' action for trespass or an award of actual damages as grounds for his motion for a directed verdict, defendant waived his right to appellate review of these issues. Lee v. Bir, 116 N.C. App. 584, 449 S.E.2d 34 (1994), cert. denied, 340 N.C. 113, 454 S.E.2d 652 (1995).

And If Plaintiff Shows No Right to Relief. — When it is clear that the plaintiff has shown no right to relief, the judge will direct a verdict for the defendant at the close of plaintiff's evidence, just as he could formerly grant a motion for compulsory nonsuit. Cutts v. Casey, 278 N.C. 390, 180 S.E.2d 297 (1971).

A directed verdict for defendant is not properly allowed unless it appears, as a matter of law, that a recovery cannot be had by the plaintiff upon any view of the facts which the evidence reasonably tends to establish. Manganello v. Permastone, Inc., 291 N.C. 666, 231 S.E.2d 678 (1977); Everhart v. LeBrun, 52 N.C. App. 139, 277 S.E.2d 816 (1981); Koonce v. May, 59 N.C. App. 633, 298 S.E.2d 69 (1982); Mitchell v. Parker, 68 N.C. App. 458, 315 S.E.2d 76, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 760, 321 S.E.2d 140, 321 S.E.2d 141 (1984); Willis v. Russell, 68 N.C. App. 424, 315 S.E.2d 91, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 770, 321 S.E.2d 159 (1984).

The scope of review of a trial court's decision granting the defendant's motion for a directed verdict is whether the evidence, when considered in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, is sufficient for submission to the jury; if the plaintiff fails to make a prima facie showing for relief, it is not entitled to have its case sent to the jury and the judge may rule on the issue as a matter of law. Air Traffic Conference of Am. v. Marina Travel, Inc., 69 N.C. App. 179, 316 S.E.2d 642 (1984).

A directed verdict is proper only if it appears that the nonmovant failed to show a right to recover upon any view of the facts which the evidence reasonably tends to establish. West v. Slick, 313 N.C. 33, 326 S.E.2d 601 (1985).

Only if plaintiff's uncontradicted evidence shows that physical facts irreconcilably conflict with plaintiff's evidence is a trial judge warranted in taking the case from the jury on a motion for directed verdict against plaintiff. McFetters v. McFetters, 98 N.C. App. 187, 390 S.E.2d 348, cert. denied, 327 N.C. 140, 394 S.E.2d 177 (1990).

Evidence which does no more than raise a possibility or conjecture of fact is not sufficient to withstand a motion by defendant for a directed verdict. Ingold v. Carolina Power & Light Co., 11 N.C. App. 253, 181 S.E.2d 173 (1971); Bruegge v. Mastertemp, Inc., 83 N.C.

App. 508, 350 S.E.2d 918 (1986).

The court must consider even "incompetent" evidence in ruling on a motion for a directed verdict. Hart v. Warren, 46 N.C. App. 672, 266 S.E.2d 53, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 89 (1980).

The court must consider even incompetent evidence in ruling on a motion for a directed verdict. The reason for this rule is that the admission of incompetent evidence may have caused the plaintiff to omit competent evidence of the same import. Haney v. Alexander, 71 N.C. App. 731, 323 S.E.2d 430 (1984).

As to entry of directed verdict on basis of adverse testimony in deposition, see Woods v. Smith, 297 N.C. 363, 255 S.E.2d 174 (1979).

What Evidence of Movant May Be Considered on Motion for Directed Verdict. — In passing upon motion for directed verdict made at the close of all the evidence, a defendant's evidence that tends to contradict or refute the plaintiff's evidence is not considered, but the other evidence presented by a defendant may be considered to the extent that it clarifies the plaintiff's case. Jenkins v. Starrett Corp., 13 N.C. App. 437, 186 S.E.2d 198 (1972); American Home Prods. Corp. v. Howell's Motor Freight, Inc., 46 N.C. App. 276, 264 S.E.2d 774, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 556, 270 S.E.2d 105 (1980); John D. Latimer & Assocs. v. Housing Auth., 59 N.C. App. 638, 297 S.E.2d 779 (1982); Koonce v. May, 59 N.C. App. 633, 298 S.E.2d 69 (1982); Henderson v. Traditional Log Homes, Inc., 70 N.C. App. 303, 319 S.E.2d 290, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 623, 323 S.E.2d 923 (1984).

In passing upon a motion for directed verdict made at the close of all the evidence, a defendant's evidence that tends to contradict or refute the plaintiff's evidence is not considered, but other evidence presented by a defendant which is not in conflict with that of the plaintiff may be considered in ascertaining whether the evidence is sufficient to raise an issue for the jury. Murphy v. Edwards & Warren, 36 N.C. App. 653, 245 S.E.2d 212, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 551, 248 S.E.2d 728 (1978).

Upon defendant's motion under this rule, his own evidence may not be considered unless it is favorable to the plaintiff or unless it is not in conflict with the plaintiff's evidence and explains or makes clear that which has been ordered by the plaintiff. Tate v. Bryant, 16 N.C. App. 132, 191 S.E.2d 433 (1972).

Affirmative Defenses. — Where a defendant establishes an affirmative defense as a matter of law, there are no issues to submit to a jury and a plaintiff has no right to recover. Directing a verdict for the defendant in such instance is appropriate. Goodwin v. Investors Life Ins. Co. of N. Am., 332 N.C. 326, 419 S.E.2d 766 (1992).

Normally the motion for a directed verdict is made against the party who has the burden of proof. Paccar Fin. Corp. v. Harnett Transf., Inc., 51 N.C. App. 1, 275 S.E.2d 243, cert. denied, 302 N.C. 629, 280 S.E.2d 441 (1981).

And the court can direct a verdict against the party with the burden of proof if there is no evidence in his favor. Cutts v. Casey, 278 N.C. 390, 180 S.E.2d 297 (1971); Roberts v. William N. & Kate B. Reynolds Mem. Park, 281 N.C. 48, 187 S.E.2d 721 (1972).

Or Where Evidence is Insufficient to Go to the Jury. — A directed verdict becomes proper against the defendants who have the burden on affirmative defenses if their evidence is insufficient to carry those defenses to the jury. Booker v. Everhart, 33 N.C. App. 1, 234 S.E.2d 46 (1977), rev'd on other grounds, 294 N.C. 146, 240 S.E.2d 360 (1978).

It is rarely appropriate to grant a directed verdict for a party bearing the burden of proof. Looney v. Community Bible Holiness Church, 103 N.C. App. 469, 405 S.E.2d 811 (1991).

Ordinarily, it is not permissible to direct a verdict in favor of a litigant on whom rests the burden of proof. Smith v. Burleson, 9 N.C. App. 611, 177 S.E.2d 451 (1970); Austin v. R.W. Raines Enters., Inc., 45 N.C. App. 709, 264 S.E.2d 121 (1980); Stutts v. Green Ford, Inc., 47 N.C. App. 503, 267 S.E.2d 919 (1980).

The party having the burden of proof on all the issues is not entitled to a directed verdict. Mull v. Mull, 13 N.C. App. 154, 185 S.E.2d 14 (1971).

Judge cannot direct a verdict upon any controverted issue in favor of the party having the burden of proof, even though the evidence is uncontradicted. Cutts v. Casey, 278 N.C. 390, 180 S.E.2d 297 (1971); Little v. Poole, 11 N.C. App. 597, 182 S.E.2d 206 (1971).

As Where His Right to Recover Depends on Credibility. — Under this rule, the trial judge cannot direct a verdict in favor of the party having the burden of proof when his right to recover depends upon the credibility of his witnesses. Cutts v. Casey, 278 N.C. 390, 180 S.E.2d 297 (1971); Schell v. Rice, 37 N.C. App. 377, 246 S.E.2d 61, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 648, 248 S.E.2d 253 (1978); Paccar Fin. Corp. v. Harnett Transf., Inc., 51 N.C. App. 1, 275 S.E.2d 243, cert. denied, 302 N.C. 629, 280 S.E.2d 441 (1981).

The trial court cannot direct a verdict under this rule in favor of the party having the burden of proof when his right to recover depends upon the credibility of his witnesses, since it is the established policy of this State, declared in both the Constitution and the statutes, that the credibility of testimony is for the jury, not the court, and that a genuine issue of fact must be tried by the jury unless the right is waived. Fowler-Barham Ford, Inc. v. Indiana Lumber-mens Mut. Ins. Co., 45 N.C. App. 625, 263 S.E.2d 825, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 372, 267 S.E.2d 675 (1980).

Direction of Verdict in Favor of Party with Burden Permissible When Facts Are Not Subject to Inquiry. — When facts are judicially admitted and are no longer a subject of inquiry, then directing a verdict in favor of a litigant on whom rests the burden of proof is not only permissible, but it is the duty of the judge to answer the issue. Smith v. Burleson, 9 N.C. App. 611, 177 S.E.2d 451 (1970).

A directed verdict for the party with the burden of proof is not improper where his right to recover does not depend on the credibility of his witnesses and the pleadings, evidence, and stipulations show that there is no issue of genuine fact for jury consideration. Paccar Fin. Corp. v. Harnett Transf., Inc., 51 N.C. App. 1, 275 S.E.2d 243, cert. denied, 302 N.C. 629, 280 S.E.2d 441 (1981).

There is no constitutional or procedural impediment to granting a directed verdict in favor of the party with the burden of proof when the credibility of the movant's witnesses is manifest as a matter of law. Smith v. Price, 74 N.C. App. 413, 328 S.E.2d 811 (1985), rev'd in part on other grounds, 315 N.C. 523, 340 S.E.2d 408 (1986).

And Where No Other Reasonable Conclusion Is Possible. — After looking at all of the evidence, if no other reasonable conclusion is possible, then a directed verdict would be proper, even though such directed verdict is in favor of the litigant upon whom rests the burden of proof. Smith v. Burleson, 9 N.C. App. 611, 177 S.E.2d 451 (1970).

As Where Credibility of Movants' Evidence Is Manifest. — There are neither constitutional nor procedural impediments to directing a verdict for the party with the burden of proof where the credibility of movant's evidence is manifest as a matter of law. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Burnette, 297 N.C. 524, 256 S.E.2d 388 (1979); Snipes v. Snipes, 55 N.C. App. 498, 286 S.E.2d 591, aff'd, 306 N.C. 373, 293 S.E.2d 187 (1982).

Where, in view of facts which were stipulated before trial and admitted by defendant at trial, the issue presented only a question of law for the court, the general rule that the court cannot direct a verdict in favor of a party having the burden of proof does not apply. American Personnel, Inc. v. Harbolick, 16 N.C. App. 107, 191 S.E.2d 412 (1972).

A directed verdict cannot be granted for the party with the burden of proof when his right to recover depends on the credibility of his witnesses. However, there may be rare occasions in which credibility seems compelled as a matter of law. Murray v. Murray, 296 N.C. 405, 250 S.E.2d 276 (1979).

Where the moving party has the burden of proof, the courts generally will not direct a verdict if credibility remains an issue unless the evidence so clearly establishes the fact in issue that no reasonable inferences to the contrary can be drawn. Snipes v. Snipes, 55 N.C. App. 498, 286 S.E.2d 591, aff'd, 306 N.C. 373, 293 S.E.2d 187 (1982).

A directed verdict or judgment n.o.v. can be granted for the party having the burden of proof only where the credibility of movant's evidence is manifest as a matter of law. Johnson v. Robert Dunlap & Racing, Inc., 53 N.C. App. 312, 280 S.E.2d 759 (1981), cert. denied, 305 N.C. 153, 289 S.E.2d 380 (1982).

The granting of a directed verdict for the party with the burden of proof is permissible when the only evidence is plaintiff's own evidence and defendant's burden is met for him by the plaintiff. Alligood v. Seaboard Coastline R.R., 21 N.C. App. 419, 204 S.E.2d 706 (1974).

A directed verdict or a judgment notwithstanding the verdict may be entered in favor of the party with the burden of proof where credibility is manifest as a matter of law. Smith v. Price, 315 N.C. 523, 340 S.E.2d 408 (1986).

Situations Where Credibility Is Manifest. — Review of the modern cases indicates three recurrent situations where credibility is manifest: (1) Where nonmovant establishes proponent's case by admitting the truth of the basic facts upon which the claim of proponent rests; (2) Where the controlling evidence is documentary and nonmovant does not deny the authenticity or correctness of the documents; (3) Where there are only latent doubts as to the credibility of oral testimony and the opposing party has failed to point to specific areas of impeachment and contradictions. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Burnette, 297 N.C. 524, 256 S.E.2d 388 (1979); Snipes v. Snipes, 55 N.C. App. 498, 286 S.E.2d 591, aff'd, 306 N.C. 373, 293 S.E.2d 187 (1982).

There are rare instances in which credibility may be established as a matter of law, as where the nonmovant admits the truth of the facts upon which movant's claim rests, where the controlling evidence is documentary and the nonmovant does not deny the authenticity of or correctness of the document, or where there are only latent doubts as to the credibility of oral testimony. Stutts v. Green Ford, Inc., 47 N.C. App. 503, 267 S.E.2d 919 (1980).

Where the plaintiffs fail to make a prima facie showing for relief, they are not entitled to have their case sent to the jury and the trial judge may rule on the issue as a matter of law. Hong v. George Goodyear Co., 63 N.C. App. 741, 306 S.E.2d 157 (1983).

Directed Verdict Not Necessarily Prevented by Prima Facie Case. — Nonmoving party's establishment of a prima facie case did not necessarily prevent the granting of a directed verdict in the moving party's favor.

Goodwin v. Investors Life Ins. Co. of N. Am., 332 N.C. 326, 419 S.E.2d 766 (1992).

Directed Verdict Granted Despite Establishment of Prima Facie Case. — Where insurer showed that the insured made representations which were material and false and, by so doing, fully overcame plaintiff's prima facie case, insurer was entitled to a directed verdict as a matter of law. Goodwin v. Investors Life Ins. Co. of N. Am., 332 N.C. 326, 419 S.E.2d 766 (1992).

The granting of a directed verdict in favor of the party with the burden of proof will be more closely scrutinized than otherwise. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Burnette, 38 N.C. App. 120, 247 S.E.2d 648 (1978), rev'd on other grounds, 297 N.C. 524, 256 S.E.2d 388 (1979).

A directed verdict is seldom appropriate in a negligence case. Alva v. Cloninger, 51 N.C. App. 602, 277 S.E.2d 535 (1981).

When Defendant Entitled to Directed Verdict in a Negligence Action. — Defendant was not entitled to a directed verdict or to judgment notwithstanding the verdict unless plaintiff failed as a matter of law to establish the elements of actionable negligence or unless the evidence, viewed in the light most favorable to plaintiff, showed contributory negligence as a matter of law. Everhart v. LeBrun, 52 N.C. App. 139, 277 S.E.2d 816 (1981); Thomas v. Dixson, 88 N.C. App. 337, 363 S.E.2d 209 (1988).

A defendant in a negligence action is not entitled to a directed verdict unless the plaintiff has failed, as matter of law to establish the elements of actionable negligence. McMurray v. Surety Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 82 N.C. App. 729, 348 S.E.2d 162 (1986), cert. denied, 318 N.C. 695, 351 S.E.2d 748 (1987).

A defendant is not entitled to a directed verdict in a negligence action unless the plaintiff has not established the elements of negligence as a matter of law. Felts v. Liberty Emergency Serv., 97 N.C. App. 381, 388 S.E.2d 619 (1990).

When a defendant moves for a directed verdict in a medical malpractice case, the question raised is whether plaintiff has offered evidence of each of the following elements of his claim for relief: (1) the standard of care; (2) breach of the standard of care; (3) proximate causation; and (4) damages. Mitchell v. Parker, 68 N.C. App. 458, 315 S.E.2d 76, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 760, 321 S.E.2d 140, 321 S.E.2d 141 (1984).

A directed verdict for defendant is improper unless it appears as a matter of law that a recovery cannot be had by the plaintiff upon any view of the facts which the evidence reasonably tends to establish. Felts v. Liberty Emergency Serv., 97 N.C. App. 381, 388 S.E.2d 619 (1990).

Directed Verdict in Personal Injury Actions. — To overcome a motion for a directed verdict in a personal injury action the plaintiff is required to offer evidence sufficient to establish, beyond mere speculation or conjecture, every essential element of negligence. Upon his failure to do so, a motion for a directed verdict is properly granted. Oliver v. Royall, 36 N.C. App. 239, 243 S.E.2d 436 (1978).

In an action for personal injury arising out of an automobile accident, the defendants' motion for a directed verdict should be allowed if the jury could draw no conclusion from the evidence but that either the collision was not proximately caused by the negligence of defendant, or that the contributory negligence of the plaintiff was a proximate cause of the collision. Shay v. Nixon, 45 N.C. App. 108, 262 S.E.2d 294 (1980).

If the facts proved establish the more reasonable probability that the defendant has been guilty of actionable negligence, the case cannot be withdrawn from the jury, even though the possibility of accident may arise on the evidence. Bruegge v. Mastertemp, Inc., 83 N.C. App. 508, 350 S.E.2d 918 (1986).

Evidence which raises only a conjecture of negligence may not properly be submitted to the jury. To hold that evidence that a defendant could have been negligent is sufficient to go to a jury, in the absence of any evidence, direct or circumstantial, that such a defendant actually was negligent, is to allow the jury to indulge in speculation and guesswork. Jenkins v. Starrett Corp., 13 N.C. App. 437, 186 S.E.2d 198 (1972).

Medical evidence which merely shows it possible for the fact in issue to be as alleged, or which raises a mere conjecture that it was so, is an insufficient foundation for a verdict and should not be left to the jury. Sharpe v. Pugh, 21 N.C. App. 110, 203 S.E.2d 330, aff'd, 286 N.C. 209, 209 S.E.2d 456 (1974).

Determination of Validity of Will. — Where appropriate, a trial court may direct a verdict for propounders of a will in a caveat proceeding at the close of all evidence. In re Will of Jarvis, 107 N.C. App. 34, 418 S.E.2d 520 (1992), aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 334 N.C. 140, 430 S.E.2d 922 (1993).

Only in exceptional cases is it proper to enter a directed verdict or a judgment n.o.v. against a plaintiff in a negligence case, since issues arising in negligence cases are ordinarily not susceptible of summary adjudication, because application of the prudent man test, or any other applicable standard of care, is generally for the jury. Taylor v. Walker, 320 N.C. 729, 360 S.E.2d 796 (1987).

Only in exceptional cases is it proper to enter a directed verdict against a plaintiff in a negligence case. Wiggins v. Paramount Motor Sales, Inc., 89 N.C. App. 119, 365 S.E.2d 192 (1988).

Directed Verdict When Plaintiff's Evidence Shows Contributory Negligence. — A directed verdict on the ground that plaintiff's evidence reveals contributory negligence as a matter of law is proper only when contributory negligence is so clearly established that no other conclusion can reasonably be reached. Naylor v. Naylor, 11 N.C. App. 384, 181 S.E.2d 222 (1971); Riddick v. Whitaker, 13 N.C. App. 416, 185 S.E.2d 602, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 154, 187 S.E.2d 585 (1972); Seaman v. McQueen, 51 N.C. App. 500, 277 S.E.2d 118 (1981).

A motion for directed verdict upon the ground of contributory negligence should be allowed only when plaintiff's evidence, considered in the light most favorable to him, together with inferences favorable to him that may be reasonably drawn therefrom, so clearly establishes the defense of contributory negligence that no other conclusion can reasonably be drawn. Peeler v. Southern Ry., 32 N.C. App. 759, 233 S.E.2d 685 (1977).

Directed verdict for a defendant on the ground of contributory negligence may only be granted when the evidence, taken in the light most favorable to plaintiff, establishes contributory negligence so clearly that no other reasonable inference or conclusion may be drawn therefrom. Bowen v. Constructors Equip. Rental Co., 283 N.C. 395, 196 S.E.2d 789 (1973); Clary v. Alexander County Bd. of Educ., 286 N.C. 525, 212 S.E.2d 160 (1975); Clark v. Bodycombe, 289 N.C. 246, 221 S.E.2d 506 (1976); Rappaport v. Days Inn of Am., Inc., 296 N.C. 382, 250 S.E.2d 245 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Nelson v. Freeland, 349 N.C. 615, 507 S.E.2d 882 (1998); Flexlon Fabrics, Inc. v. Wicker Pick-Up & Delivery Serv., Inc., 39 N.C. App. 443, 250 S.E.2d 723 (1979); Harrington v. Collins, 40 N.C. App. 530, 253 S.E.2d 288, aff'd, 298 N.C. 535, 259 S.E.2d 275 (1979); Thomas v. Deloatch, 45 N.C. App. 322, 263 S.E.2d 615, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 379, 267 S.E.2d 685 (1980); Taylor v. Hudson, 49 N.C. App. 296, 271 S.E.2d 70 (1980); Hunt v. Montgomery Ward & Co., 49 N.C. App. 642, 272 S.E.2d 357 (1980); Davis v. Gamble, 55 N.C. App. 617, 286 S.E.2d 629 (1982); Helvy v. Sweat, 58 N.C. App. 197, 292 S.E.2d 733, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 741, 295 S.E.2d 477 (1982); Horne v. Trivette, 58 N.C. App. 77, 293 S.E.2d 290, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 741, 295 S.E.2d 759 (1982).

In order for a directed verdict to be granted for a defendant on the grounds of contributory negligence, it is required that the plaintiff establish his own negligence so clearly by his own evidence that no other reasonable inference or conclusion can be drawn therefrom. Beatty v. H.B. Owsley & Sons, 53 N.C. App. 178, 280 S.E.2d 484, cert. denied, 304 N.C. 192, 285 S.E.2d 95 (1981).

A directed verdict on the ground of contributory negligence should be granted only when this defense is so clearly established that no other reasonable inference can be drawn from the evidence. Daughtry v. Turnage, 295 N.C. 543, 246 S.E.2d 788 (1978); Clark v. Moore, 65 N.C. App. 609, 309 S.E.2d 579 (1983).

A trial court should grant a directed verdict on the ground of contributory negligence when the evidence establishes the nonmovant's contributory negligence so clearly that no other reasonable inference or conclusion may be drawn therefrom. Frye v. Anderson, 86 N.C. App. 94, 356 S.E.2d 370, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 791, 361 S.E.2d 74 (1987).

A directed verdict on the ground of contributory negligence should be granted only when this defense is so clearly established that no other reasonable inference can be drawn from the evidence. Williams v. Hall, 100 N.C. App. 655, 397 S.E.2d 767 (1990).

Ordinarily, the question of contributory negligence of a guest in an automobile is for the jury to determine in the light of the facts and circumstances of the case. Thus, whether a passenger's failure to take affirmative action for his own safety constitutes contributory negligence is for the jury where conflicting inferences may be drawn from the circumstances. Harrington v. Collins, 40 N.C. App. 530, 253 S.E.2d 288, aff'd, 298 N.C. 535, 259 S.E.2d 275 (1979).

As Is Question of Contributory Negligence of Child Between 7 and 14. — Whether the rebuttable presumption that a child between the ages of 7 and 14 is incapable of contributory negligence has been rebutted in a particular case is a question for the jury, and a directed verdict on the basis that a child between 7 and 14 was contributorily negligent is not proper. Johnson v. Clay, 38 N.C. App. 542, 248 S.E.2d 382 (1978).

Contributory Negligence Not Sufficient for Directed Verdict Where Defendant's Conduct Willful. — Although a plaintiff in a personal injury action may have been contributorily negligent as a matter of law, this is not a sufficient basis on which to direct a verdict against plaintiff where defendant's conduct is willful or wanton as a matter of law, or where there is sufficient evidence to submit the issue of whether his conduct was willful or wanton to the jury. Harrington v. Collins, 40 N.C. App. 530, 253 S.E.2d 288, aff'd, 298 N.C. 535, 259 S.E.2d 275 (1979).

When a defendant pleads as a defense the plaintiff's contributory negligence, the defendant has the burden of proof on the issue, and if the defendant offers no evidence, a directed verdict for the defendant based on plaintiff's contributory negligence is appropriate only when there are no genuine issues of fact, and the non-movant's contributory negligence is so clearly established that no other reasonable inference or conclusion may be drawn therefrom. Price v. Jack Eckerd Corp., 100 N.C. App. 732, 398 S.E.2d 49 (1990).

Directed verdict on issue of contributory negligence was improper where the plaintiff testified that he was not completely blinded by the oncoming headlights as he approached the tractor-trailer, the plaintiff could see much more than the edge of the road, and the plaintiff may have been keeping a proper lookout without realizing that he was partially blinded only as to the area beyond the tractor-trailer's headlights. In such a deceptive visual situation, the plaintiff may not have been knowingly driving into a blinded area, for it would have appeared as though he could see into the distant darkness. From the evidence there was insufficient evidence to establish that plaintiff was contributorily negligent as a matter of law. Williams v. Hall, 100 N.C. App. 655, 397 S.E.2d 767 (1990).

Trial court erred in directing verdict on issue of contributory negligence. — See Alston v. Herrick, 76 N.C. App. 246, 332 S.E.2d 720 (1985), aff'd, 315 N.C. 386, 337 S.E.2d 851 (1986).

Advisability of Reserving Ruling on Motion in Contributory Negligence Cases. — In light of the trend by the Supreme Court to place on a defendant in a negligence action a heavier burden in establishing contributory negligence as a matter of law, it may be advisable for the trial court, in cases where the line is not clear, to reserve its ruling on a motion for directed verdict until the jury has returned a verdict and then allow or deny a motion for a judgment notwithstanding that verdict under section (b) of this rule, which on appeal may obviate the need for a new trial if the appellate court reverses the judgment notwithstanding the verdict. Partin v. Carolina Power & Light Co., 40 N.C. App. 630, 253 S.E.2d 605, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 611, 257 S.E.2d 219 (1979).

Withholding of Ruling Until Return of Verdict Disapproved. — Procedure whereby trial judge withheld his ruling on a motion for a directed verdict until after the jury had returned its verdict is disapproved. It is preferable to rule upon a motion for a directed verdict prior to submission of a case to the jury. Hamel v. Young Spring & Wire Corp., 12 N.C. App. 199, 182 S.E.2d 839, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 511, 183 S.E.2d 687 (1971).

Movant for a motion under section (b) of this rule must make a motion for a directed verdict at the close of all evidence. Penley v. Penley, 314 N.C. 1, 332 S.E.2d 51 (1985).

By introducing evidence, defendants waived their motion for directed verdict made at the close of plaintiffs' evidence. Rice v. Wood, 82 N.C. App. 318, 346 S.E.2d 205, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 417, 349 S.E.2d 599 (1986).

Preservation of Motion in Record Necessary. — Having failed to preserve the record of any motion for directed verdict at the close of all evidence, defendant waived his right to assign error to either the trial judge's purported ruling on that motion or the ruling on the motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. Jansen v. Collins, 92 N.C. App. 516, 374 S.E.2d 641 (1988).

Failure to Show One Cause of Damages More Likely than Others. — Directed verdict was proper where plaintiff did not offer any testimony suggesting that one cause of his damages was more likely than the others. Such testimony as to causation, being speculative in nature, would have resulted in a verdict founded upon a series of mere possibilities; and reliance upon a choice of possibilities amounts to nothing more than guesswork. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co. v. West, 100 N.C. App. 668, 397 S.E.2d 765 (1990).

Denial of Directed Verdict. — If there is more than a scintilla of evidence supporting each element of the nonmovant's case, the motion for directed verdict should be denied. Snead v. Holloman, 101 N.C. App. 462, 400 S.E.2d 91 (1991).

A directed verdict for the defendant is not properly allowed unless it appears as a matter of law that a recovery cannot be had by the plaintiff upon any view of the facts which the evidence reasonably tends to establish; a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict is essentially a renewal of a motion for directed verdict and the rules regarding the sufficiency of the evidence to go to the jury are equally applicable. Kremer v. Food Lion, Inc., 102 N.C. App. 291, 401 S.E.2d 837 (1991).

Directed Verdict Improper Where Defendant Had Not Offered All His Evidence. — Trial judge erred in determining as a matter of law that a separation/property settlement agreement was unconscionable before defendant had the opportunity to offer all of his evidence concerning the validity of the agreement. Garris v. Garris, 92 N.C. App. 467, 374 S.E.2d 638 (1988).

Or His Evidence Is Sufficient to Survive Motion. — Plaintiffs' evidence tending to establish a prescriptive easement was sufficient to survive defendants' motions for directed verdict and for judgment notwithstanding the verdict and the trial court properly dismissed defendants' counterclaim. Mecimore v. Cothren, 109 N.C. App. 650, 428 S.E.2d 470, cert. denied, 334 N.C. 621, 435 S.E.2d 336 (1993).

Testimony by clinical psychologist which indicated that conduct violated the standard of care as it related to clinical assistants in substance abuse hospitals in similar communities and which indicated that victim suffered severe emotional distress as a result was sufficient to withstand a directed verdict. Johnson v. Amethyst Corp., 120 N.C. App. 529, 463 S.E.2d 397 (1995), cert. granted, — N.C. —, 467 S.E.2d 713 (1996).

Question Presented on Appeal of Directed Verdict. — On appeal of a motion granting directed verdict, the reviewing court is confronted with the identical task as the trial court, that is, to determine whether the evidence, when considered in the light most favorable to the nonmovant, was sufficient to have been submitted to the jury. Harshbarger v. Murphy, 90 N.C. App. 393, 368 S.E.2d 450 (1988).

Trial judge was held to have authority to direct verdict of his own initiative; however, mindful of the low evidentiary threshold necessary to take a case to the jury, and also of the detailed procedure outlined in this rule, which presumes the use of a motion before a verdict is directed, the court of appeals did not encourage the frequent use of this practice, and cautioned trial judges to use it sparingly. L. Harvey & Son Co. v. Jarman, 76 N.C. App. 191, 333 S.E.2d 47 (1985).

Motion for Directed Verdict Properly Granted. — Defendant presented ample evidence of plaintiffs' breach of fiduciary duty; accordingly, the trial court did not err in denying plaintiffs' motion for a directed verdict at the close of defendant's evidence. Powell v. Omli, 110 N.C. App. 336, 429 S.E.2d 774 (1993), cert. denied, 334 N.C. 621, 435 S.E.2d 338 (1993).

Motion for Directed Verdict Improperly Granted. — See Calhoun v. Calhoun, 76 N.C. App. 305, 332 S.E.2d 734 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 586, 341 S.E.2d 23 (1986).

Even though defendant had pled guilty to manslaughter, evidence of his plea was only some evidence in civil proceeding, and did not justify a directed verdict for plaintiff on the issue of defendant's negligence. Young v. Warren, 95 N.C. App. 585, 383 S.E.2d 381 (1989).

An order denying a motion for directed verdict following a mistrial is not appealable based on the reasoning that such orders are interlocutory and do not affect a substantial right of the movant. Samia v. A.J. Ballard, Jr. Tire & Oil Co., 25 N.C. App. 601, 214 S.E.2d 222 (1975).

Raising of Issues on Appeal. — When a specific ground for a directed verdict is not stated in the original motion, it cannot be raised on appeal; even the sufficiency of the evidence cannot be raised for the first time on appeal. Lee v. Keck, 68 N.C. App. 320, 315 S.E.2d 323, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 401, 319 S.E.2d 271 (1984).

Scope of Review on Appeal. — On review of a directed verdict, appellate review is usually limited to those grounds asserted by the movant upon making his motion before the trial judge. Warren v. Canal Indus., Inc., 61 N.C. App. 211, 300 S.E.2d 557 (1983).

Where a party moves for a directed verdict, the trial court must determine whether the evidence, when considered in the light most favorable to the nonmovant, is sufficient to take the case to the jury. Upon appeal, the scope of review is limited to those grounds asserted by the moving party before the trial court. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co. v. West, 100 N.C. App. 668, 397 S.E.2d 765 (1990).

The question presented on appeal of the granting of a motion for a directed verdict is whether the evidence, taken in the light most favorable to the appellant, is sufficient for submission of the case to the jury. Hitchcock v. Cullerton, 82 N.C. App. 296, 346 S.E.2d 215 (1986).

Appellate Court to Consider All Relevant Evidence. — All relevant evidence admitted by the trial court, whether competent or not, must be accorded its full probative force in determining the correctness of its ruling upon a motion for judgment as of nonsuit. Jenkins v. Starrett Corp., 13 N.C. App. 437, 186 S.E.2d 198 (1972); Beal v. K.H. Stephenson Supply Co., 36 N.C. App. 505, 244 S.E.2d 463 (1978).

Without Regard to Trial Court's Purported "Findings" and "Conclusions." — To pass upon the single question of law presented, namely, the sufficiency of plaintiff's evidence to withstand defendant's motion for a directed verdict, the appellate court must look to the evidence and base its decision thereon, without regard to the trial court's "findings of fact" and "conclusions of law." Sink v. Sink, 11 N.C. App. 549, 181 S.E.2d 721 (1971).

But Must Accept Testimony of Plaintiff's Witnesses at Face Value. — In passing upon a motion for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict based upon it, the testimony of plaintiff's witnesses must be accepted as face value by the appellate court. Rayfield v. Clark, 283 N.C. 362, 196 S.E.2d 197 (1973); McCollum v. Grove Mfg. Co., 58 N.C. App. 283, 293 S.E.2d 632 (1982), aff'd, 307 N.C. 695, 300 S.E.2d 374 (1983).

On defendant's motion for directed verdict, the testimony of the plaintiff's witnesses must be accepted at face value. McCollum v. Grove Mfg. Co., 58 N.C. App. 283, 293 S.E.2d 632 (1982), aff'd, 307 N.C. 695, 300 S.E.2d 374 (1983).

All Evidence Given Full Probative Force. — On a motion for directed verdict, all evidence admitted, whether competent or not, must be given full probative force. McCollum v. Grove Mfg. Co., 58 N.C. App. 283, 293 S.E.2d 632 (1982), aff'd, 307 N.C. 695, 300 S.E.2d 374 (1983).

B. Statement of Specific Grounds.

Subsection (a) requires that a motion for directed verdict state specific grounds for the motion; failure to state such grounds is not a basis for an automatic reversal of the directed verdict on appeal. In re Will of Jones, 114 N.C. App. 782, 443 S.E.2d 363, cert. denied, 337 N.C. 693, 448 S.E.2d 526 (1994).

A motion for directed verdict must state the grounds therefor; otherwise, error may not be urged on appeal. Hall v. Mabe, 77 N.C. App. 758, 336 S.E.2d 427 (1985).

Requirement That Specific Grounds Be Stated in Motion for Directed Verdict Is Mandatory. — The provision of this rule which requires that "specific grounds" shall be stated in a motion for a directed verdict is mandatory. Wheeler v. Denton, 9 N.C. App. 167, 175 S.E.2d 769 (1970); Turner v. Turner, 9 N.C. App. 336, 176 S.E.2d 24 (1970); Worrell v. Hennis Credit Union, 12 N.C. App. 275, 182 S.E.2d 874 (1971); Hensley v. Ramsey, 283 N.C. 714, 199 S.E.2d 1 (1973); Anderson v. Butler, 284 N.C. 723, 202 S.E.2d 585 (1974), overruled on other grounds, Nelson v. Freeland, 349 N.C. 615, 507 S.E.2d 882 (1998); Clary v. Alexander County Bd. of Educ., 286 N.C. 525, 212 S.E.2d 160 (1975); Love v. Pressley, 34 N.C. App. 503, 239 S.E.2d 574 (1977), cert. denied, 294 N.C. 441, 241 S.E.2d 843 (1978); Byerly v. Byerly, 38 N.C. App. 551, 248 S.E.2d 433 (1978); Lindsey v. Clinic for Women, 40 N.C. App. 456, 253 S.E.2d 304 (1979); Jones v. Allred, 52 N.C. App. 38, 278 S.E.2d 521, aff'd, 304 N.C. 387, 283 S.E.2d 517 (1981).

Purpose of the rule that specific grounds for the motion be stated is to apprise the court and the adverse parties of movants' grounds for the motion. Anderson v. Butler, 284 N.C. 723, 202 S.E.2d 585 (1974), overruled on other grounds, Nelson v. Freeland, 349 N.C. 615, 507 S.E.2d 882 (1998); Feibus & Co. v. Godley Constr. Co., 301 N.C. 294, 271 S.E.2d 385 (1980), rehearing denied, 301 N.C. 727, 274 S.E.2d 228 (1981).

The courts need not inflexibly enforce the rule as to stating specific grounds when the grounds for the motion are apparent to the court and the parties. Anderson v. Butler, 284 N.C. 723, 202 S.E.2d 585 (1974), overruled on other grounds, Nelson v. Freeland, 349 N.C. 615, 507 S.E.2d 882 (1998); Hodges v. Hodges, 37 N.C. App. 459, 246 S.E.2d 812 (1978); Lindsey v. Clinic for Women, 40 N.C. App. 456, 253 S.E.2d 304 (1979); Heist v. Heist, 46 N.C. App. 521, 265 S.E.2d 434 (1980); Humphrey v. Hill, 55 N.C. App. 359, 285 S.E.2d 293 (1982).

While the better practice is to state specific grounds for a motion for directed verdict, it is not necessary where the issue is identified and the grounds for the motion are apparent to the court and the parties. Smith v. Price, 74 N.C. App. 413, 328 S.E.2d 811 (1985), rev'd in part on other grounds, 315 N.C. 523, 340 S.E.2d 408 (1986).

The purpose of the "specific grounds" requirement of section (a) of this rule is to allow the adverse party to meet any defects with further proof and avoid the entry of a judgment notwithstanding the verdict at the close of the trial on a ground that could have been met with proof had it been suggested earlier. Byerly v. Byerly, 38 N.C. App. 551, 248 S.E.2d 433 (1978); Nelson v. Chin Yung Chang, 78 N.C. App. 471, 337 S.E.2d 650 (1985), cert. denied, 317 N.C. 335, 346 S.E.2d 501 (1986).

The better practice is to set forth the specific grounds in a written motion. If the movant relies upon an oral statement for such specific grounds, a transcript thereof must be incorporated in the case on appeal. Hensley v. Ramsey, 283 N.C. 714, 199 S.E.2d 1 (1973); Burden Pallet Co. v. Ryder Truck Rental, Inc., 49 N.C. App. 286, 271 S.E.2d 96 (1980), cert. denied, 301 N.C. 722, 276 S.E.2d 282 (1981).

Citation to Earlier Case Not Approved Method of Complying with Requirement. — A motion for a directed verdict, "citing the case of Blake v. Mallard, decided by Justice Sharp in 1964," is certainly not an approved method of complying with the requirement that "a motion for a directed verdict shall state the specific grounds therefor." Grant v. Greene, 11 N.C. App. 537, 181 S.E.2d 770 (1971).

Failure to State Grounds as Sufficient Basis for Overruling Motion. — A defendant's failure to state the grounds for his motions for a directed verdict is sufficient basis for the court's overruling them. Dixon v. Shelton, 9 N.C. App. 392, 176 S.E.2d 390 (1970); Byerly v. Byerly, 38 N.C. App. 551, 248 S.E.2d 433 (1978).

Defendants' failure to restate specific grounds for their motion at the close of all the evidence would not be deemed fatal where it must have been apparent to the court and to the plaintiff that their motion was a renewal of the motion previously made, this time challenging the sufficiency of all the evidence on the grounds previously stated. Hodges v. Hodges, 37 N.C. App. 459, 246 S.E.2d 812 (1978).

Failure to Renew Motion Following Opponent's Additional Evidence Held Fatal to Appeal. — Where defendant failed to renew a motion for a directed verdict following plaintiff's additional evidence, the Court of Appeals would not pass upon the sufficiency of the evidence to survive a motion for a directed verdict. Gragg v. Burns, 9 N.C. App. 240, 175 S.E.2d 774 (1970).

Grounds Should Be Included in Record on Appeal. — Litigants would be well advised to include in the record the specific grounds stated in the motion for a directed verdict. A failure to do so could result in a dismissal of the appeal. Davis v. Peacock, 10 N.C. App. 256, 178

Appellant who fails to state specific grounds is not entitled upon appeal to question the insufficiency of the evidence to support the verdict. Wheeler v. Denton, 9 N.C. App. 167, 175 S.E.2d 769 (1970); Builders Supplies Co. v. Gainey, 10 N.C. App. 364, 178 S.E.2d 794, cert. denied, 278 N.C. 300, 180 S.E.2d 178 (1971).

If the court denies a motion for a directed verdict which fails to state the specific grounds for the motion, the moving party may not complain of the denial on appeal. Pergerson v. Williams, 9 N.C. App. 512, 176 S.E.2d 885 (1970).

A motion for directed verdict must state the grounds therefor, and grounds not asserted in the trial court may not be asserted on appeal. Broyhill v. Coppage, 79 N.C. App. 221, 339 S.E.2d 32 (1986).

Party Not Objecting Below to Failure to State Grounds Precluded from Objecting on Appeal. — If the court grants a motion for a directed verdict which fails to state the specific grounds for the motion, the adverse party who did not object to failure of the motion to state specific grounds therefor cannot raise such objection in the appellate court. Pergerson v. Williams, 9 N.C. App. 512, 176 S.E.2d 885 (1970); Builders Supplies Co. v. Gainey, 10 N.C. App. 364, 178 S.E.2d 794, cert. denied, 278 N.C. 300, 180 S.E.2d 178 (1971); Byerly v. Byerly, 38 N.C. App. 551, 248 S.E.2d 433 (1978); Snipes v. Snipes, 55 N.C. App. 498, 286 S.E.2d 591, aff'd, 306 N.C. 373, 293 S.E.2d 187 (1982).

Upholding of Directed Verdict by Court of Appeals on Different Ground Improper. — The Court of Appeals erred in upholding a directed verdict for defendants on a ground different from that upon which the trial court reached its decision when the ground relied upon by the Court of Appeals was not stated in defendant's motion or argument on the motion in the trial court. Feibus & Co. v. Godley Constr. Co., 301 N.C. 294, 271 S.E.2d 385 (1980), rehearing denied, 301 N.C. 727, 274 S.E.2d 228 (1981).

III. JUDGMENT NOTWITHSTANDING THE VERDICT AND NEW TRIAL.

What Is Motion for Judgment N.O.V. — The motion for judgment n.o.v. is a motion that judgment be entered in accordance with the movant's earlier motion for a directed verdict, notwithstanding the contrary verdict actually returned by the jury. Summey v. Cauthen, 283 N.C. 640, 197 S.E.2d 549 (1973); Dickinson v. Pake, 284 N.C. 576, 201 S.E.2d 897 (1974); Kaperonis v. Underwriters at Lloyd's, London, 25 N.C. App. 119, 212 S.E.2d 532 (1975); Nytco Leasing, Inc. v. Southeastern Motels, Inc., 40 N.C. App. 120, 252 S.E.2d 826 (1979); Johnson v. Robert Dunlap & Racing, Inc., 53 N.C. App. 312, 280 S.E.2d 759 (1981), cert. denied, 305 N.C. 153, 289 S.E.2d 380 (1982); Northern Nat'l Life Ins. Co. v. Lacy J. Miller Mach. Co., 311 N.C. 62, 316 S.E.2d 256 (1984); DeHart v. R/S Fin. Corp., 78 N.C. App. 93, 337 S.E.2d 94 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 376, 342 S.E.2d 893 (1986); Streeter v. Cotton, — N.C. App. —, 514 S.E.2d 539 (1999).

A motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict is technically a renewal of the motion for a directed verdict. Harvey v. Norfolk S. Ry., 60 N.C. App. 554, 299 S.E.2d 664 (1983); Northern Nat'l Life Ins. Co. v. Lacy J. Miller Mach. Co., 311 N.C. 62, 316 S.E.2d 256 (1984); Penley v. Penley, 314 N.C. 1, 332 S.E.2d 51 (1985).

A motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict is essentially the renewal of prior motion for a directed verdict. Therefore, rules regarding the sufficiency of the evidence to go to the jury are equally applicable to a motion that judgment be entered in accordance with the movant's earlier motion for a directed verdict, notwithstanding the contrary verdict reached by the jury. Henderson v. Traditional Log Homes, Inc., 70 N.C. App. 303, 319 S.E.2d 290, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 623, 323 S.E.2d 923 (1984).

A motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, or judgment N.O.V., is in effect a directed verdict granted after the jury verdict. Bryant v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 67 N.C. App. 616, 313 S.E.2d 803, aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 313 N.C. 362, 329 S.E.2d 333 (1985).

A motion under section (b) of this rule is essentially a renewal of an earlier motion for a directed verdict. Bryant v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 313 N.C. 362, 329 S.E.2d 333 (1985).

A motion for judgment pursuant to subdivision (b)(1) is essentially a renewal of an earlier motion for a directed verdict. Cook v. Wake County Hosp. Sys., 125 N.C. App. 618, 482 S.E.2d 546 (1997); Couch v. Private Diagnostic Clinic, — N.C. App. —, 515 S.E.2d 30 (1999).

The purpose of the rule which makes a specific directed verdict motion a prerequisite for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict is to allow the adverse party to meet any defects in his case with further proof and thus avoid the entry of a judgment n.o.v. at the close of the trial on a ground that could have been met with proof had it been suggested earlier. Garrison v. Garrison, 87 N.C. App. 591, 361 S.E.2d 921 (1987).

The availability of a motion for a judg- ment notwithstanding the verdict constitutes an innovation in the civil procedure of this State. Formerly, a motion for nonsuit made under the provisions of former § 1-183 could not be allowed after verdict for insufficiency of the evidence. Musgrave v. Mutual Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 8 N.C. App. 385, 174 S.E.2d 820 (1970).

When Subsection (b)(1) Is Applicable. — The language of subsection (b)(1) of this rule presupposes that its provisions are applicable only to situations in which the party moving for a directed verdict has his motion denied and the verdict of the jury is adverse to his position. Hathcock v. Lowder, 16 N.C. App. 255, 192 S.E.2d 124, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 426, 192 S.E.2d 836 (1972).

This rule contemplates that any party may move for a directed verdict at the close of all the evidence. When such motion is made by any party and denied, or for any reason not granted, and the jury returns a verdict for the nonmovant, the movant may make a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Burnette, 297 N.C. 524, 256 S.E.2d 388 (1979).

Subsection (b)(1) of this rule allows the grant of a judgment notwithstanding the verdict in favor of a party who has previously moved for a directed verdict. Colony Assocs. v. Fred L. Clapp & Co., 60 N.C. App. 634, 300 S.E.2d 37 (1983).

Section (b) of this rule authorizes a "reserved directed verdict" motion practice. Hensley v. Ramsey, 283 N.C. 714, 199 S.E.2d 1 (1973); Dickinson v. Pake, 284 N.C. 576, 201 S.E.2d 897 (1974).

If the judge denies, or simply does not grant, a motion for directed verdict made at the conclusion of all the evidence and a verdict is then either not returned or is returned against the movant, the judge may then entertain a motion by him for judgment "in accordance with his motion for directed verdict." Dickinson v. Pake, 284 N.C. 576, 201 S.E.2d 897 (1974).

Reservation of final ruling on a motion for directed verdict affords the basis for the post-verdict motion for judgment n.o.v. Hensley v. Ramsey, 283 N.C. 714, 199 S.E.2d 1 (1973).

Motion for Judgment N.O.V. Proper After Submission of Case to Jury. — After a case has been submitted to a jury, the proper motion to be ruled upon at that time is a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. Hamel v. Young Spring & Wire Corp., 12 N.C. App. 199, 182 S.E.2d 839, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 511, 183 S.E.2d 687 (1971).

Denial of a motion for directed verdict is not a bar to a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. Investment Properties of Asheville, Inc. v. Allen, 281 N.C. 174, 188 S.E.2d 441 (1972), vacated on other grounds on rehearing, 283 N.C. 277, 196 S.E.2d 262 (1973).

Where intervenor did not make a motion for directed verdict at the close of all the evidence, she could not make a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict under section (b) of this rule. State ex rel. Thornburg v. Tavern & Other Bldgs. & Lots at 1907 N. Main St., 96 N.C. App. 84, 384 S.E.2d 585 (1989).

Motion for Directed Verdict Prerequisite to Motion for Judgment N.O.V. — The language of this rule is almost identical to the language of FRCP, Rule 50, and the well-recognized interpretation of this rule is that the making of an appropriate motion for a directed verdict is an absolute prerequisite for the motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. Glen Forest Corp. v. Bensch, 9 N.C. App. 587, 176 S.E.2d 851 (1970).

Motion for judgment n.o.v. must be preceded by a motion for a directed verdict. Whitaker v. Earnhardt, 289 N.C. 260, 221 S.E.2d 316 (1976).

A motion for judgment n.o.v. may be entertained only if the movant has made a motion for a directed verdict at the close of all the evidence. Gibbs v. Duke, 32 N.C. App. 439, 232 S.E.2d 484, cert. denied, 292 N.C. 640, 235 S.E.2d 61 (1977); Smith v. Price, 74 N.C. App. 413, 328 S.E.2d 811 (1985), rev'd in part on other grounds, 315 N.C. 523, 340 S.E.2d 408 (1986); Bryant v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 313 N.C. 362, 329 S.E.2d 333 (1985).

Plaintiffs have no standing after the verdict to move for judgment n.o.v. where they did not move for directed verdict at the close of their evidence or at the close of all the evidence. Graves v. Walston, 302 N.C. 332, 275 S.E.2d 485 (1981).

Where a party failed to move for a directed verdict at the close of all the evidence, the motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict did not meet the requirement of subsection (b)(1) of this rule that a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict be supported by a timely motion for directed verdict. Dean v. Nash, 12 N.C. App. 661, 184 S.E.2d 521 (1971).

Where intervenor did not make a motion for directed verdict at the close of all the evidence, she could not make a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict under section (b) of this rule. State ex rel. Thornburg v. Tavern & Other Bldgs. & Lots at 1907 N. Main St., 96 N.C. App. 84, 384 S.E.2d 585 (1989).

Where basis of plaintiff's motion for JNOV was that evidence clearly established that defendant's negligence was the proximate cause of his injuries, as proximate cause was not specifically raised by the plaintiff to support the directed verdict motion, JNOV on that basis would not be proper. Lassiter v. English, 126 N.C. App. 489, 485 S.E.2d 840 (1997).

Motion for Directed Verdict After Jury

Has Returned Verdict Is Too Late. — A litigant's motion for directed verdict nunc pro tunc, which is made after the jury has returned its verdict in a case, comes too late to preserve right to move for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. Glen Forest Corp. v. Bensch, 9 N.C. App. 587, 176 S.E.2d 851 (1970).

This rule provides for a motion for a directed verdict at the close of plaintiff's evidence or at the close of all the evidence. It does not give a litigant the option of waiting until after the verdict is in to make the motion for a directed verdict to attempt to preserve his right to move for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. Glen Forest Corp. v. Bensch, 9 N.C. App. 587, 176 S.E.2d 851 (1970).

Grounds Not Asserted on Motion for Directed Verdict Not Available. — The motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict is technically only a renewal of the motion for a directed verdict made at the close of all the evidence, and thus the movant cannot assert grounds not included in the motion for directed verdict. Love v. Pressley, 34 N.C. App. 503, 239 S.E.2d 574 (1977), cert. denied, 294 N.C. 441, 241 S.E.2d 843 (1978); Couch v. Private Diagnostic Clinic, — N.C. App. —, 515 S.E.2d 30 (1999).

A motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict is cautiously and sparingly granted. Bryant v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 313 N.C. 362, 329 S.E.2d 333 (1985).

Standards for granting a motion for judgment n.o.v. are the same as those for granting a directed verdict. Investment Properties of Asheville, Inc. v. Allen, 281 N.C. 174, 188 S.E.2d 441 (1972), vacated on other grounds on rehearing, 283 N.C. 277, 196 S.E.2d 262 (1973); Kaperonis v. Underwriters at Lloyd's, London, 25 N.C. App. 119, 212 S.E.2d 532 (1975); Brokers, Inc. v. High Point City Bd. of Educ., 33 N.C. App. 24, 234 S.E.2d 56, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 159, 236 S.E.2d 702 (1977); North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Burnette, 38 N.C. App. 120, 247 S.E.2d 648 (1978), rev'd on other grounds, 297 N.C. 524, 256 S.E.2d 388 (1979); Nytco Leasing, Inc. v. Southeastern Motels, Inc., 40 N.C. App. 120, 252 S.E.2d 826 (1979); Weyerhaeuser Co. v. Godwin Bldg. Supply Co., 40 N.C. App. 743, 253 S.E.2d 625 (1979); State v. Moore, 315 N.C. 738, 340 S.E.2d 401 (1986).

The same test is to be applied on a motion under subsection (b)(1) of this rule for judgment notwithstanding the verdict as is applied on a motion under section (a) of this rule for a directed verdict. Snellings v. Roberts, 12 N.C. App. 476, 183 S.E.2d 872, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 727, 184 S.E.2d 886 (1971); DeHart v. R/S Fin. Corp., 78 N.C. App. 93, 337 S.E.2d 94 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 376, 342 S.E.2d 893 (1986).

The same standard of sufficiency of evidence as that under the directed verdict motion is applied. Dickinson v. Pake, 284 N.C. 576, 201 S.E.2d 897 (1974).

The propriety of granting a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict is determined by the same considerations as that of a motion for a directed verdict. Investment Properties of Asheville, Inc. v. Allen, 281 N.C. 174, 188 S.E.2d 441 (1972), vacated on other grounds on rehearing, 283 N.C. 277, 196 S.E.2d 262 (1973); Summey v. Cauthen, 283 N.C. 640, 197 S.E.2d 549 (1973); Dickinson v. Pake, 284 N.C. 576, 201 S.E.2d 897 (1974); North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Burnette, 297 N.C. 524, 256 S.E.2d 388 (1979).

Since the motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict under this rule is simply a motion that judgment be entered in accordance with the movant's earlier motion for a directed verdict, notwithstanding the contrary verdict reached by the jury, the same standard of sufficiency of the evidence must be utilized in reviewing both motions. Snider v. Dickens, 293 N.C. 356, 237 S.E.2d 832 (1977).

The test for determining the sufficiency of the evidence when ruling on a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict is the same as that applied when ruling on a motion for directed verdict. Northern Nat'l Life Ins. Co. v. Lacy J. Miller Mach. Co., 311 N.C. 62, 316 S.E.2d 256 (1984).

A motion for judgment non obstante veredicto is essentially a renewal of a motion for directed verdict, and the same standards govern the trial court's consideration of it as govern a directed verdict motion. Smith v. Price, 74 N.C. App. 413, 328 S.E.2d 811 (1985), rev'd in part on other grounds, 315 N.C. 523, 340 S.E.2d 408 (1986).

If the motion for directed verdict could have been properly granted, then the subsequent motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict should also be granted. Bryant v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 313 N.C. 362, 329 S.E.2d 333 (1985).

The same rules by which the sufficiency of the evidence is tested upon motion for a directed verdict pursuant to section (a) of this rule apply to the determination of a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. Allen v. Pullen, 82 N.C. App. 61, 345 S.E.2d 469 (1986), cert. denied, 318 N.C. 691, 351 S.E.2d 738 (1987).

A motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, like a motion for a directed verdict, tests the legal sufficiency of the evidence to take the case to the jury. Taylor v. Walker, 84 N.C. App. 507, 353 S.E.2d 239, rev'd on other grounds, 320 N.C. 729, 360 S.E.2d 796 (1987).

The test for determining the sufficiency of the evidence when ruling on a motion for judgment is identical to that applied when ruling on a motion for directed verdict. Cook v. Wake County Hosp. Sys., 125 N.C. App. 618, 482 S.E.2d 546 (1997).

Applicability of Principles Formerly Prevailing on Motion for Nonsuit. — In determining the sufficiency of the evidence upon a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, the courts are guided by the same principles that prevailed under former procedure with respect to the sufficiency of evidence to withstand a motion for nonsuit. Snellings v. Roberts, 12 N.C. App. 476, 183 S.E.2d 872, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 727, 184 S.E.2d 886 (1971).

A motion for judgment non obstante veredicto presents substantially the same question as that presented by a motion for nonsuit under former § 1-183. City of Winston-Salem v. Rice, 16 N.C. App. 294, 192 S.E.2d 9, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 425, 192 S.E.2d 835 (1972); Anderson v. Butler, 284 N.C. 723, 202 S.E.2d 585 (1974), overruled on other grounds, Nelson v. Freeland, 349 N.C. 615, 507 S.E.2d 882 (1998).

Sufficiency of Evidence Questioned on Motion for Judgment N.O.V. — Upon a motion for judgment non obstante veredicto, the sufficiency of the evidence upon which the jury based its verdict is drawn into question. Horton v. Iowa Mut. Ins. Co., 9 N.C. App. 140, 175 S.E.2d 725 (1970); Coppley v. Carter, 10 N.C. App. 512, 179 S.E.2d 118 (1971).

A motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict permits the judge to consider the sufficiency of the evidence after the jury has returned a verdict. Investment Properties of Asheville, Inc. v. Allen, 281 N.C. 174, 188 S.E.2d 441 (1972), vacated on other grounds on rehearing, 283 N.C. 277, 196 S.E.2d 262 (1973).

A motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict presents the question of whether the evidence was sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to have a jury pass on it. Morrison v. Concord Kiwanis Club, 52 N.C. App. 454, 279 S.E.2d 96, cert. denied, 304 N.C. 196, 285 S.E.2d 100 (1981).

Evidence Must Be Viewed in Light Most Favorable to Nonmovant. — When passing on a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, the court must view the evidence in the light most favorable to the nonmovant. Investment Properties of Asheville, Inc. v. Allen, 281 N.C. 174, 188 S.E.2d 441 (1972), vacated on other grounds on rehearing, 283 N.C. 277, 196 S.E.2d 262 (1973); Summey v. Cauthen, 283 N.C. 640, 197 S.E.2d 549 (1973); Kaperonis v. Underwriters at Lloyd's, London, 25 N.C. App. 119, 212 S.E.2d 532 (1975).

Insofar as the defendant's testimony creates a conflict in his testimony, it must be resolved in his favor in passing on the plaintiff's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. Coppley v. Carter, 10 N.C. App. 512, 179 S.E.2d 118 (1971).

In resolving the question of whether the evidence is sufficient to support the verdict, the evidence, of course, must be viewed in the light most favorable to the party who won the verdict. Dailey v. Integon Gen. Ins. Corp., 75 N.C. App. 387, 331 S.E.2d 148, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 664, 336 S.E.2d 399 (1985); Couch v. Private Diagnostic Clinic, — N.C. App. —, 515 S.E.2d 30 (1999).

Giving Nonmovant the Benefit of Every Inference and Resolving Contradictions in His Favor. — Upon defendant's motion for judgment non obstante veredicto, all the evidence which supports plaintiffs' claim must be taken as true and considered in the light most favorable to plaintiffs, giving them the benefit of every reasonable inference which may legitimately be drawn therefrom, with contradictions, conflicts and inconsistencies being resolved in plaintiffs' favor. Horton v. Iowa Mut. Ins. Co., 9 N.C. App. 140, 175 S.E.2d 725 (1970); Dickinson v. Pake, 19 N.C. App. 287, 198 S.E.2d 467 (1973), rev'd on other grounds, 284 N.C. 576, 201 S.E.2d 897 (1974); Wilson v. Miller, 20 N.C. App. 156, 201 S.E.2d 55 (1973); Love v. Pressley, 34 N.C. App. 503, 239 S.E.2d 574 (1977), cert. denied, 294 N.C. 441, 241 S.E.2d 843 (1978); North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Burnette, 38 N.C. App. 120, 247 S.E.2d 648 (1978), rev'd on other grounds, 297 N.C. 524, 256 S.E.2d 388 (1979); Hart v. Warren, 46 N.C. App. 672, 266 S.E.2d 53, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 89 (1980); Seaman v. McQueen, 51 N.C. App. 500, 277 S.E.2d 118 (1981).

All of the evidence which supports the claim of the party opposing the motion must be taken as true and considered in the light most favorable to him, giving him the benefit of every reasonable inference which may legitimately be drawn therefrom, and with contradictions, conflicts and inconsistencies being resolved in his favor. Coppley v. Carter, 10 N.C. App. 512, 179 S.E.2d 118 (1971); Nytco Leasing, Inc. v. Southeastern Motels, Inc., 40 N.C. App. 120, 252 S.E.2d 826 (1979); Penley v. Penley, 314 N.C. 1, 332 S.E.2d 51 (1985); Allen v. Pullen, 82 N.C. App. 61, 345 S.E.2d 469 (1986), cert. denied, 318 N.C. 691, 351 S.E.2d 738 (1987); Taylor v. Walker, 84 N.C. App. 507, 353 S.E.2d 239, rev'd on other grounds, 320 N.C. 729, 360 S.E.2d 796 (1987).

In passing on a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, the evidence is to be taken in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party, and he is entitled to all reasonable inferences that can be drawn from it. Murray v. Murray, 296 N.C. 405, 250 S.E.2d 276 (1979).

A motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict presents the question of whether the evidence was sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to have a jury pass on it. The evidence must be considered in the light most favorable to the party opposing the motion, and the opponent is entitled to the benefit of every reasonable inference which may legitimately be drawn from the evidence, and all conflicts in the evidence are resolved in favor of the opponent. Smith v. Price, 74 N.C. App. 413, 328 S.E.2d 811 (1985), rev'd in part on other grounds, 315 N.C. 523, 340 S.E.2d 408 (1986).

In considering a motion for judgment n.o.v., the trial court is to consider all evidence in the light most favorable to the party opposing the motion. The nonmovant is to be given the benefit of every reasonable inference that legitimately may be drawn from the evidence, and contradictions must be resolved in the nonmovant's favor. Smith v. Price, 315 N.C. 523, 340 S.E.2d 408 (1986).

Motion for Judgment N.O.V. Proper Where Evidence Insufficient to Support Verdict. — When passing on a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, the court must consider the evidence in the light most favorable to the plaintiff and may grant the motion only if, as a matter of law, the evidence is insufficient to support a verdict for plaintiff. Brokers, Inc. v. High Point City Bd. of Educ., 33 N.C. App. 24, 234 S.E.2d 56, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 159, 236 S.E.2d 702 (1977).

Judgment notwithstanding the verdict should be granted only when the evidence is insufficient as a matter of law to support the verdict. Where the evidence admitted at trial, taken in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party with all reasonable inferences drawn in his favor, is sufficient to support the verdict, it should not be set aside. Harvey v. Norfolk S. Ry., 60 N.C. App. 554, 299 S.E.2d 664 (1983).

A motion for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict, like a motion for a directed verdict, will be granted only if the evidence, considered in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, is insufficient as a matter of law to justify a verdict for the plaintiff. Perry v. Williams, 84 N.C. App. 527, 353 S.E.2d 226 (1987).

And Where Defendants Were Entitled to Judgment as a Matter of Law. — Where defendants were entitled to a judgment as a matter of law and a motion for directed verdict was made at the close of all the evidence, the judge's entry of a judgment notwithstanding the verdict was proper under subsection (b)(1) of this rule. Wolfe v. Eaker, 50 N.C. App. 144, 272 S.E.2d 781 (1980), cert. denied, 302 N.C. 222, 277 S.E.2d 69 (1981).

Grant of Judgment N.O.V. Erroneous Where Case Was Sufficient to Go to Jury. — If the plaintiffs have made out a case sufficient to go to the jury, then it is error to enter a judgment setting aside the verdict and granting a judgment for the defendant notwithstanding the verdict. Horton v. Iowa Mut. Ins. Co., 9 N.C. App. 140, 175 S.E.2d 725 (1970); Bryant v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 313 N.C. 362, 329 S.E.2d 333 (1985); Kron Medical Corp. v. Collier Cobb & Assocs., 107 N.C. App. 331, 420 S.E.2d 192, cert. denied,, appeal dismissed,.

Where the evidence admitted at trial, taken in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party with all reasonable inferences drawn in his favor, is sufficient to support the verdict, it should not be set aside. Beal v. K.H. Stephenson Supply Co., 36 N.C. App. 505, 244 S.E.2d 463 (1978).

If More Than Scintilla of Evidence, Motion Should Be Denied. — The court should deny a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict when it finds any evidence more than a scintilla to support plaintiff's prima facie case in all its constituent elements. Clark v. Moore, 65 N.C. App. 609, 309 S.E.2d 579 (1983); Couch v. Private Diagnostic Clinic, — N.C. App. —, 515 S.E.2d 30 (1999).

Where defendant has the burden of proof on an affirmative defense, the granting of a directed verdict or judgment notwithstanding the verdict in his favor will be more closely scrutinized. Bryant v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 313 N.C. 362, 329 S.E.2d 333 (1985).

Trial tactics employed by defendant were not sufficient reason to order a new trial. Booe v. Shadrick, 322 N.C. 567, 369 S.E.2d 554, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 370, 373 S.E.2d 540 (1988).

Contributory Negligence as Grounds for Judgment N.O.V. — Judgment notwithstanding the verdict on the grounds of contributory negligence should be granted only when the evidence establishes plaintiff's negligence so clearly that no other reasonable inference can be drawn from the evidence. Clark v. Moore, 65 N.C. App. 609, 309 S.E.2d 579 (1983); Taylor v. Walker, 84 N.C. App. 507, 353 S.E.2d 239, rev'd on other grounds, 320 N.C. 729, 360 S.E.2d 796 (1987).

Failure of Jury to Reach Verdict Irrelevant in Deciding Whether Evidence Was Sufficient. — In deciding whether the evidence was sufficient to entitle a plaintiff to have the jury pass on it, the court should give no consideration to the fact that the jury may have failed to reach a verdict, but should consider only the evidence in the case. Odell v. Lipscomb, 12 N.C. App. 318, 183 S.E.2d 299 (1971).

Entry of Judgment N.O.V. After Adjournment of Term. — The legislature, in delineating the precise time periods of section (b) of this rule and § 1A-1, Rule 59(e), did not intend for these specific periods to be curtailed by the adjournment of the term of court at which judgment was rendered, as to attribute any such intent to the legislature would vitiate the purpose of both rules; thus a trial court may alter or amend a judgment pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 59 and a trial court may enter judgment n.o.v. pursuant to this rule (including the alteration of a judgment entered upon such a verdict) after the adjournment of the term during which the judgment was entered. Housing, Inc. v. Weaver, 305 N.C. 428, 290 S.E.2d 642 (1982).

Grant of a motion for judgment n.o.v. constitutes an adjudication on the merits of a case. Musgrave v. Mutual Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 8 N.C. App. 385, 174 S.E.2d 820 (1970).

Motion to Be Decided as Question of Law. — A motion to set a verdict aside and for a new trial pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 59 is directed to the discretion of the trial judge, while a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict pursuant to this rule is to be decided as a question of law. Penley v. Penley, 314 N.C. 1, 332 S.E.2d 51 (1985).

Trial Judge to Rule on Alternative Motion for New Trial. — Where defendant makes a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict and joins with this motion an alternative motion for a new trial, in granting the motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict the trial judge should also rule on the alternative motion for a new trial. Hoots v. Calaway, 282 N.C. 477, 193 S.E.2d 709 (1973).

When a motion for judgment n.o.v. is joined with a motion for a new trial, it is the duty of the trial court to rule on both motions. Graves v. Walston, 302 N.C. 332, 275 S.E.2d 485 (1981); Bryant v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 313 N.C. 362, 329 S.E.2d 333 (1985).

Denial of a motion in the alternative for a new trial lies within the discretion of the trial judge, and an action of the trial judge as to a matter within his judicial discretion will not be disturbed unless a clear abuse of discretion is shown. Coppley v. Carter, 10 N.C. App. 512, 179 S.E.2d 118 (1971).

The trial judge's discretionary ruling either granting or denying a motion to set aside a verdict and order a new trial is strictly limited to the determination of whether the record affirmatively demonstrates a manifest abuse of discretion by the judge. Bryant v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 313 N.C. 362, 329 S.E.2d 333 (1985).

A party must appeal conditionally from an adverse ruling on an alternative motion for a new trial. Hoots v. Calaway, 282 N.C. 477, 193 S.E.2d 709 (1973).

Motion to Set Aside Verdict Addressed to Discretion of Trial Court. — A motion to set aside the verdict as being contrary to the greater weight of the evidence is addressed to the discretion of the trial court. Anderson v. Smith, 29 N.C. App. 72, 223 S.E.2d 402 (1976).

And Is Not Reviewable Absent Abuse. — The motion to set aside the verdict as being against the greater weight of the evidence is directed to the sound discretion of the presiding judge, whose ruling is not reviewable on appeal in the absence of abuse of discretion. Nytco Leasing, Inc. v. Southeastern Motels, Inc., 40 N.C. App. 120, 252 S.E.2d 826 (1979).

The trial court's ruling on a motion to set aside the verdict as being contrary to the weight of the evidence will not be reviewed in the absence of a showing of abuse. Anderson v. Smith, 29 N.C. App. 72, 223 S.E.2d 402 (1976).

Scope of Review. — A motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict involves the same legal questions raised by the motion for directed verdict, and is therefore equally restricted as a basis for asserting error on appeal. Mobley v. Hill, 80 N.C. App. 79, 341 S.E.2d 46 (1986).

Appellate review of the trial court's ruling on a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict is the same as that for a motion for directed verdict, i.e., whether the evidence, taken as true and considered in the light most favorable to non-movant, is sufficient to take the case to the jury and to support a verdict for the non-movant. Streeter v. Cotton, — N.C. App. —, 514 S.E.2d 539 (1999).

Exceptions to Denial of Directed Verdict Preserved by Motion for Judgment N.O.V. — By proceeding after verdict under subsection (b)(1) of this rule with a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, a party preserves for appellate review his exceptions to the denial of his motion for directed verdict made at the close of all the evidence. Woodard v. Marshall, 14 N.C. App. 67, 187 S.E.2d 430 (1972).

Questions Other Than Sufficiency of Evidence Preserved by Motion for New Trial by Party Gaining Judgment N.O.V. — A party gaining judgment notwithstanding the verdict should also ask for a ruling pursuant to subsection (c)(1) of this rule on the motion for a new trial if he wishes to allege any error in the trial or to preserve any question other than the sufficiency of the evidence for appellate review. Beal v. K.H. Stephenson Supply Co., 36 N.C. App. 505, 244 S.E.2d 463 (1978).

Testimony of plaintiff's witnesses must be accepted at face value by the appellate court in passing on a motion for a directed verdict. Rayfield v. Clark, 283 N.C. 362, 196 S.E.2d 197 (1973).

But Not by the Trial Court. — In passing upon a motion to set aside a verdict as being against the greater weight of the evidence, the trial judge is not required to take the testimony of any witness at face value; if at any time he is convinced that the jury has been misled by unreliable testimony into returning an erroneous verdict, his is the responsibility for awarding a new trial for that reason. Rayfield v. Clark, 283 N.C. 362, 196 S.E.2d 197 (1973).

Subsection (b)(2) of this rule has no counterpart in FRCP, Rule 50(b). Hensley v. Ramsey, 283 N.C. 714, 199 S.E.2d 1 (1973).

Question presented to the reviewing court is whether the evidence, considered in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, was sufficient for submission to the jury. Meacham v. Montgomery County Bd. of Educ., 59 N.C.

App. 381, 297 S.E.2d 192 (1982), cert. denied, 307 N.C. 577, 299 S.E.2d 651 (1983).

When Appellate Court May Direct Entry of Judgment. — Upon deciding that the trial court should have granted appellant's motion for a directed verdict made at the close of all the evidence, the Court of Appeals may appropriately direct entry of judgment in accordance with the appellant's motion, but only when the appellant also in apt time moved for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. Nichols v. C.J. Moss Real Estate, Inc., 10 N.C. App. 66, 177 S.E.2d 750 (1970).

Where the defendant made no post-verdict motion and where the trial judge after verdict did not of his own motion consider whether a directed verdict should have been entered, the Supreme Court may not direct entry of judgment in accordance with the motion by reason of the express terms of subsection (b)(2) of this rule. Hensley v. Ramsey, 283 N.C. 714, 199 S.E.2d 1 (1973).

A motion for directed verdict is appropriate only to a case tried before a jury. In non-jury trials, a motion for involuntary dismissal under § 1A-1, Rule 41(b) provides a procedure whereby, at the close of the plaintiff's evidence, the judge can give judgment against the plaintiff, not only because his proof has failed to make out a case, but also on the basis of facts as the judge may determine them. Goodrich v. Rice, 75 N.C. App. 530, 331 S.E.2d 195 (1985).

Reinstatement of Verdict upon Failure to Move for New Trial. — Where a judgment entered for defendant notwithstanding the verdict was reversed, and defendant had not moved in the alternative for a new trial pursuant to subsection (c)(1) of this rule, it was ordered that the jury verdict be reinstated and that judgment be entered thereon. Snellings v. Roberts, 12 N.C. App. 476, 183 S.E.2d 872, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 727, 184 S.E.2d 886 (1971).

Reinstatement of Verdict upon Reversal of Grant of New Trial. — Where appellate court reverses grant of judgment n.o.v., and does nothing more, the new trial will proceed upon remand. But where the appellate court also reverses the grant of new trial, the judgment of the verdict winner must be reinstated. Dickinson v. Pake, 284 N.C. 576, 201 S.E.2d 897 (1974).

Reinstatement of Verdict on Reversal of Judgment N.O.V. — Where plaintiff and third party defendant moved, alternatively to their motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, for a new trial, which motion was denied, and neither of them excepted to or brought forward as a cross-assignment of error the denial of the motion, on reversal of the judgment n.o.v. entered by the trial court, the verdict of the jury would be reinstated and judgment entered in accordance therewith. Allen v. Pullen, 82 N.C. App. 61, 345 S.E.2d 469 (1986), cert. denied, 318 N.C. 691, 351 S.E.2d 738 (1987).

When the trial court fails to comply with § 1A-1, Rule 59 and this rule in ordering a new trial, the general course is to reverse and remand for reinstatement of the verdict. Barnett v. Security Ins. Co., 84 N.C. App. 376, 352 S.E.2d 855 (1987).

In a personal injury case in which defendant was found negligent by the jury, defendant was not entitled to judgment notwithstanding the verdict unless plaintiff had failed as a matter of law to establish the elements of negligence, or unless the evidence established plaintiff's contributory negligence so clearly that no other reasonable inference could be drawn. Moon v. Bostian Heights Volunteer Fire Dep't, 97 N.C. App. 110, 387 S.E.2d 225 (1990).

Timely Filing of Motions Tolls Time for Appeal. — Under NCRAP Rule 3, timely filing of a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict or for a new trial pursuant to subsection (b) of this rule and § 1A-1 Rule 59 tolls the period for filing and serving written notice of appeal in civil actions. The full time for appeal commences to run and is to be computed from the entry of the order granting or denying the motions under subsection (b) of this rule or § 1A-1 Rule 59. Middleton v. Middleton, 98 N.C. App. 217, 390 S.E.2d 453, cert. denied, 327 N.C. 637, 399 S.E.2d 124 (1990).

But Written Motions Following Denial of Oral Motions Would Not Toll Time for Appeal. — Plaintiffs, who entered their written notice of appeal within 10 days after the entry of a June 6 order denying their April 22 written motions for judgment notwithstanding the verdict and for a new trial, were not entitled to make these written motions or to a hearing on these motions, because they had previously made oral motions for judgment notwithstanding the verdict and for a new trial in open court on April 14, and were afforded an opportunity to be heard, which they declined. Their motions under section (b) of this rule and under § 1A-1, Rule 59 having been denied in open court at that time, plaintiffs were not entitled to file written motions requesting the same relief and thereby toll the period for filing written notice of appeal. Since the June 13 written notice of appeal was not filed within 10 days of entry of judgment, which by the terms of the judgment was April 14, their appeal was untimely. Middleton v. Middleton, 98 N.C. App. 217, 390 S.E.2d 453, cert. denied, 327 N.C. 637, 399 S.E.2d 124 (1990).

Failure to Present Underlying Judgment. — Where, in notice of appeal, defendant designated only the order denying the motion for judgment n.o.v., but did not give notice of appeal from the judgment itself, the notice of appeal failed to properly present the underlying judgment for the court's review. Boger v. Gatton, 123 N.C. App. 635, 473 S.E.2d 672 (1996).

Grant of Motions for Judgement N.O.V. and New Trial Inconsistent. — The trial court's grant of the plaintiff's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict as well as plaintiff's motion for a new trial was inconsistent, where the Judgement N.O.V. for the plaintiff after the jury returned a verdict for the defendant in a rear-end collision suit determined the defendant's negligence as a matter of law, while the new trial reinstated the issue for a jury. Streeter v. Cotton, — N.C. App. —, 514 S.E.2d 539 (1999).

Rule 51. Instructions to jury.

(a) Judge to explain law but give no opinion on facts. — In charging the jury in any action governed by these rules, a judge shall not give an opinion as to whether or not a fact is fully or sufficiently proved and shall not be required to state, summarize or recapitulate the evidence, or to explain the application of the law to the evidence. If the judge undertakes to state the contentions of the parties, he shall give equal stress to the contentions of each party.

(b) Requests for special instructions. — Requests for special instructions must be in writing, entitled in the cause, and signed by the counsel or party submitting them. Such requests for special instructions must be submitted to the judge before the judge's charge to the jury is begun. The judge may, in his discretion, consider such requests regardless of the time they are made. Written requests for special instructions shall, after their submission to the judge, be filed with the clerk as a part of the record.

(c) Judge not to comment on verdict. — The judge shall make no comment on any verdict in open court in the presence or hearing of any member of the jury panel; and if any judge shall make any comment as herein prohibited or shall praise or criticize any jury on account of its verdict, whether such praise, criticism or comment be made inadvertently or intentionally, such praise, criticism or comment by the judge shall for any party to any other action remaining to be tried constitute valid grounds as a matter of right for a continuance of any action to a time when all members of the jury panel are no longer serving. The provisions of this section shall not be applicable upon the hearing of motions for a new trial or for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1985, c. 537, s. 2.)

COMMENT

The effort here, except for minor changes, has been to carry forward the substance of the present law. The prohibition on comment by the judge has been retained. His duty to charge has been retained. The automatic exception to any errors in respect to the charge, formerly contained in § 1-206, subsection (c), has been retained in Rule 46.

I. IN GENERAL.

Appellate Review of Improper Remark. — Where plaintiff alleges that he has been deprived of right to a fair trial by improper remarks in the hearing of the jury, court will first determine whether the trial judge's remarks, in light of the circumstances under which they were made, were improper and then determine whether such remarks were prejudicial. Ward v. McDonald, 100 N.C. App. 359, 396 S.E.2d 337 (1990).

Remark Regarding Need to Shorten Trial. — Trial judge did not commit prejudicial error in remarking to jury about need to shorten length of trial, which was not a statement of opinion. Ward v. McDonald, 100 N.C. App. 359, 396 S.E.2d 337 (1990).

II. CHARGE TO THE JURY.

A. Generally.

The purpose of instructing the jury is to clarify the issues, summarize the relevant evidence, and state the law applicable thereto. McNeill v. Durham County ABC Bd., 87 N.C. App. 50, 359 S.E.2d 500 (1987), rev'd in part on other grounds, 322 N.C. 425, 368 S.E.2d 619, rehearing denied, 322 N.C. 838, 371 S.E.2d 278 (1988).

It is the duty of the trial judge, without any special requests, to instruct the jury on the law as it applies to the substantive features of the case arising on the evidence. Millis Constr. Co. v. Fairfield Sapphire Valley, Inc., 86 N.C. App. 506, 358 S.E.2d 566 (1987).

Instruction as to Every Substantial Feature Required. — Though the trial court is no longer required to explain the application of the law to the evidence, it remains the duty of the court to instruct the jury upon the law with respect to every substantial feature of the case. Mosley & Mosley Bldrs., Inc. v. Landin Ltd., 87 N.C. App. 438, 361 S.E.2d 608 (1987).

Duty of Judge Who Undertakes to Apply Law to Evidence. — Although the trial judge is no longer required to apply the law to the evidence, if the judge undertakes to do so he must instruct completely and without omission. York v. Northern Hosp. Dist., 88 N.C. App. 183, 362 S.E.2d 859 (1987).

Form and Number of Issues Submitted Are Within Discretion of Judge. — While the judge must submit to the jury such issues raised by the pleadings and evidence as are necessary to fairly adjudicate the controversy at bar, the form and number of the issues submitted is within the sound discretion of the trial judge. McNeill v. Durham County ABC Bd., 87 N.C. App. 50, 359 S.E.2d 500 (1987), rev'd in part on other grounds, 322 N.C. 425, 368 S.E.2d 619, rehearing denied, 322 N.C. 838, 371 S.E.2d 278 (1988).

Failure of the trial court to declare and explain the law with respect to a substantial feature of the case was prejudicial error, entitling defendants to a new trial. Mosley & Mosley Bldrs., Inc. v. Landin Ltd., 87 N.C. App. 438, 361 S.E.2d 608 (1987), appeal dismissed, 322 N.C. 607, 370 S.E.2d 416 (1988).

Peremptory Instruction Properly Denied. — Defendant's evidence regarding the composition of the roadway, the absence of warning signs, the locking of the wheel, the car's tendency to overturn, and evidence that he drove at or below the speed limit, all permitted more than the single inference that defendant was negligent; therefore, trial judge properly refused to give peremptory instruction on negligence. Hinnant v. Holland, 92 N.C. App. 142, 374 S.E.2d 152 (1988), cert. denied, 324 N.C. 335, 378 S.E.2d 792 (1989).

In a personal injury action where plaintiff failed to allege permanent injuries in her pleadings and did not amend her complaint to include permanent injuries, the trial court did not err by allowing testimony that plaintiff's injuries were permanent, nor by instructing the jury on the issue of permanency; defendant's objections were all general and failed to avail themselves of the opportunity to demonstrate prejudice or to obtain a continuance as provided by this rule. Smith v. Buckhram, 91 N.C. App. 355, 372 S.E.2d 90 (1988), cert. denied, 324 N.C. 113, 377 S.E.2d 236 (1989).

Court improperly instructed the jury on the aggravation of plaintiff's pre-existing condition where the evidence showed no aggravation of a pre-existing condition. Smith v. Buckhram, 91 N.C. App. 355, 372 S.E.2d 90 (1988), cert. denied, 324 N.C. 113, 377 S.E.2d 236 (1989).

Denial of Requested Instruction Upheld. — Trial court's denial of plaintiffs' request that the jury be instructed that collision furnished some evidence of negligence was not an abuse of discretion, since plaintiffs' requested instruction amounted to an application of the law to the evidence, which is not required. Smith v. Bohlen, 95 N.C. App. 347, 382 S.E.2d 812 (1989), aff'd sub nom. State v. Brewer, 328 N.C. 515, 402 S.E.2d 380 (1991).

B. Decisions Under Prior Law.

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided prior to the 1985 amendment rewriting section (a) of this rule, which formerly provided that the judge should declare and explain the law arising on the evidence, but give no opinion on whether a fact had been proved.

Requirement of Former § 1-180 Continued by This Rule. — The requirement of this rule that the judge "shall declare and explain the law arising on the evidence given in the case" is a continuation of the requirement contained in former § 1-180. Terry v. Jim Walter Corp., 8 N.C. App. 637, 175 S.E.2d 354 (1970).

Civil cases are governed by section (a) of this rule, which incorporates the substance of former § 1-180. Atkins v. Moye, 277 N.C. 179, 176 S.E.2d 789 (1970).

The provisions of section (a) are identical to those of former § 1-180, which formerly governed the trial of civil cases as well as criminal cases. Little v. Poole, 11 N.C. App. 597, 182 S.E.2d 206 (1971).

Former § 1-180 is now embodied in substance within section (a) of this rule. Heath v. Swift Wings, Inc., 40 N.C. App. 158, 252 S.E.2d 526, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 453, 256 S.E.2d 806 (1979).

Although the provisions of § 1-180 have been repealed and are now embodied in subsection (a) of this rule, the law remains, for all practical purposes, unchanged. Consolidated Sys. v. Granville Steel Corp., 63 N.C. App. 485, 305 S.E.2d 57 (1983).

This rule confers a substantial legal right, and imposes upon the trial judge a positive duty, so that his failure to charge on the substantial features of the case arising on the evidence is prejudicial error, even without a prayer for special instruction. Clay v. Garner, 16 N.C. App. 510, 192 S.E.2d 672 (1972).

Not Dependent on Request for Special Instructions. — This rule confers a substantial legal right, not dependent on a request for special instructions, and failure to charge on the material features of a case is prejudicial error. Horne v. Wall, 27 N.C. App. 373, 219 S.E.2d 288 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 297, 222 S.E.2d 697 (1976).

The trial court has a duty, without a request for special instruction, to explain the law and apply it to the evidence on all substantial features of the case. The failure to do so constitutes prejudicial error and entitles the aggrieved party to a new trial. Stiles v. Charles M. Morgan Co., 64 N.C. App. 328, 307 S.E.2d 409 (1983).

This rule requires the trial judge to perform two positive acts: (1) To declare and explain the law arising on the evidence presented in the case; and (2) to review such evidence to the extent necessary to explain the application of that law to the particular facts and circumstances of the case. Bodenheimer v. Bodenheimer, 17 N.C. App. 434, 194 S.E.2d 375, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 392, 196 S.E.2d 274 (1973); Horne v. Wall, 27 N.C. App. 373, 219 S.E.2d 288 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 297, 222 S.E.2d 697 (1976); Brown v. Scism, 50 N.C. App. 619, 274 S.E.2d 897, cert. denied, 302 N.C. 396, 276 S.E.2d 919 (1981).

The chief purpose of a charge is to aid the jury to clearly understand the case and arrive at a correct verdict. Turner v. Turner, 9 N.C. App. 336, 176 S.E.2d 24 (1970); Warren v. Parks, 31 N.C. App. 609, 230 S.E.2d 684 (1976), cert. denied, 292 N.C. 269, 233 S.E.2d 396 (1977); Burns v. McElroy, 57 N.C. App. 299, 291 S.E.2d 278 (1982).

And to Eliminate Irrelevant Matters. — The purpose of the court's charge is to eliminate irrelevant matters so that the jury may understand and appreciate the facts which determine the case. Brown v. Scism, 50 N.C. App. 619, 274 S.E.2d 897, cert. denied, 302 N.C. 396, 276 S.E.2d 919 (1981).

In applying the law to the evidence the jury must be given guidance as to what facts, if found by them to be true, would justify them in answering the issues submitted to them in the affirmative or the negative. Broadnax v. Deloatch, 20 N.C. App. 430, 201 S.E.2d 525, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 85, 203 S.E.2d 57 (1974).

Where the jury is given no guidance as to what facts, if found by them to be true, would justify them in answering the sole issue submitted to them either in the affirmative or the negative, the trial judge has failed to comply with the mandate of section (a) of this rule. American Credit Co. v. Brown, 10 N.C. App. 382, 178 S.E.2d 649 (1971).

Judge Must Declare and Explain the Law Arising on the Evidence. — It is incumbent upon the judge to declare and explain the law arising on the evidence as to all substantial features of the case, without any special prayer for instructions to that effect. Terry v. Jim Walter Corp., 8 N.C. App. 637, 175 S.E.2d 354 (1970); Link v. Link, 9 N.C. App. 135, 175 S.E.2d 735 (1970), rev'd on other grounds, 278 N.C. 181, 179 S.E.2d 697 (1971); Investment Properties of Asheville, Inc. v. Norburn, 281 N.C. 191, 188 S.E.2d 342 (1972); Warren v. Parks, 31 N.C. App. 609, 230 S.E.2d 684 (1976), cert. denied, 292 N.C. 269, 233 S.E.2d 396 (1977); Penley v. Penley, 314 N.C. 1, 332 S.E.2d 51 (1985).

The duty of the judge is to declare the law arising on the evidence and to explain the application of the law thereto. Link v. Link, 278 N.C. 181, 179 S.E.2d 697 (1971).

In charging the jury in any civil action, the judge shall declare and explain the law arising on the evidence given in the case. Watson v. White, 60 N.C. App. 106, 298 S.E.2d 174 (1982), rev'd on other grounds, 309 N.C. 498, 308 S.E.2d 268 (1983).

The provisions of this rule require that the trial judge in his charge to the jury shall declare and explain the law arising on the evidence in the case, and unless this mandatory provision of the statute is observed, there can be no assurance that the verdict represents a finding by the jury under the law and on the evidence presented. Redding v. F.W. Woolworth Co., 14 N.C. App. 12, 187 S.E.2d 445 (1972).

It is the duty of the court to charge the law applicable to the substantive features of the case arising on the evidence, without special request, and to apply the law to the various factual situations presented by the conflicting evidence. Panhorst v. Panhorst, 277 N.C. 664, 178 S.E.2d 387 (1971); Investment Properties of Asheville, Inc. v. Norburn, 281 N.C. 191, 188 S.E.2d 342 (1972); Howell v. Howell, 24 N.C. App. 127, 210 S.E.2d 216 (1974); Martin v. Amusements of Am., Inc., 38 N.C. App. 130, 247 S.E.2d 639, cert. denied, 296 N.C. 106, 249 S.E.2d 804 (1978); Harris v. Bridges, 59 N.C. App. 195, 296 S.E.2d 299 (1982).

In every case the court has the duty to instruct the jury correctly on all substantive features of the case. Duke v. Mutual Life Ins. Co., 22 N.C. App. 392, 206 S.E.2d 796, rev'd on other grounds, 286 N.C. 244, 210 S.E.2d 187 (1974).

The law must be declared, explained and applied to the evidence bearing on the substantial and essential features of a case. Coble v. Martin Fireproofing Ga., Inc., 25 N.C. App. 671, 214 S.E.2d 239 (1975).

When charging the jury in a civil case it is the duty of the trial court to explain the law and to apply it to the evidence on the substantial issues of the action. Cockrell v. Cromartie Transp. Co., 295 N.C. 444, 245 S.E.2d 497 (1978).

This rule imposes upon the trial judge a duty to explain the law and to apply it to the evidence on all substantial features of the case. Federated Mut. Ins. Co. v. Hardin, 67 N.C. App. 487, 313 S.E.2d 801 (1984); Penley v. Penley, 314 N.C. 1, 332 S.E.2d 51 (1985).

This rule imposes a positive duty on the trial judge to charge on the substantial features of the case as the evidence dictates. Hord v. Atkinson, 68 N.C. App. 346, 315 S.E.2d 339 (1984).

The trial court has a duty to explain the law and apply it to the evidence on all substantial features of the case. Failure to do so constitutes prejudicial error and entitles the aggrieved party to a new trial. Scher v. Antonucci, 77 N.C. App. 810, 336 S.E.2d 434 (1985).

The trial court has wide discretion in presenting the issues to the jury, and no abuse of discretion will be found where the issues are sufficiently comprehensive to resolve all factual controversies and to enable the court to render judgment fully determining the cause. Murrow v. Daniels, 321 N.C. 494, 364 S.E.2d 392 (1988), overruled on other grounds, Nelson v. Freeland, 349 N.C. 615, 507 S.E.2d 882 (1998), decided under rule as it read prior to amendment.

A mere declaration of the law in general terms and a statement of the contentions of the parties is insufficient. Terry v. Jim Walter Corp., 8 N.C. App. 637, 175 S.E.2d 354 (1970); Link v. Link, 9 N.C. App. 135, 175 S.E.2d 735 (1970), rev'd on other grounds, 278 N.C. 181, 179 S.E.2d 697 (1971); Jones v. Bess, 26 N.C. App. 1, 214 S.E.2d 599 (1975).

This rule imposes upon the trial judge the positive duty of declaring and explaining the law arising on the evidence as to all the substantial features of the case; a mere declaration of the law in general terms and a statement of the contentions of the parties is not sufficient to satisfy the requirements of this rule. Redding v. F.W. Woolworth Co., 14 N.C. App. 12, 187 S.E.2d 445 (1972); Hunt v. Montgomery Ward & Co., 49 N.C. App. 642, 272 S.E.2d 357 (1980).

Charge given by trial court that merely recapitulated the evidence, stated the parties' contentions and recited certain general principles of contract law would not suffice. Coble v. Martin Fireproofing Ga., Inc., 25 N.C. App. 671, 214 S.E.2d 239 (1975).

As Is a Charge Which Fails to Apply the Law to the Evidence. — A charge which contains a general explanation of the law but fails to apply the law to the evidence given in the case then being tried is insufficient. Campbell v. Campbell, 18 N.C. App. 665, 197 S.E.2d 804 (1973).

Judge's duty is not to charge the jury by implication, but to declare and explain the law arising on the evidence given in the case. Harris v. Bridges, 59 N.C. App. 195, 296 S.E.2d 299 (1982).

What Issues to Be Submitted to Jury. — The judge must submit to the jury such issues as when answered by them will resolve all material controversies between the parties, as raised by the pleadings. Harrison v. McLear, 49 N.C. App. 121, 270 S.E.2d 577 (1980); Davis v. Davis, 58 N.C. App. 25, 293 S.E.2d 268, cert. denied, 307 N.C. 127, 297 S.E.2d 399 (1982).

The judge must bring into view the relations of the particular evidence adduced to the particular issues involved. This is what is meant by the expression that the judge must apply the facts to the law for the enlightenment of the jury. Link v. Link, 9 N.C. App. 135, 175 S.E.2d 735 (1970), rev'd on other grounds, 278 N.C. 181, 179 S.E.2d 697 (1971).

Section (a) of this rule requires the judge to explain the law of the case, to point out the essentials to be proved on the one side or the other, and to bring into view the relations of the particular evidence adduced to the particular issues involved. Panhorst v. Panhorst, 277 N.C. 664, 178 S.E.2d 387 (1971); Redding v. F.W. Woolworth Co., 14 N.C. App. 12, 187 S.E.2d 445 (1972); Howell v. Howell, 24 N.C. App. 127, 210 S.E.2d 216 (1974).

In order for the trial court to discharge its duty under this rule, the court must give the jury a clear mandate as to what facts, for which there was support in the evidence, it would have to find in order to answer the issue either in the affirmative or in the negative. Deep Run Milling Co. v. Williams, 60 N.C. App. 160, 298 S.E.2d 205 (1982).

The trial judge must explain and apply the law to the specific facts pertinent to the issue involved. Harrison v. McLear, 49 N.C. App. 121, 270 S.E.2d 577 (1980); Davis v. Davis, 58 N.C. App. 25, 293 S.E.2d 268, cert. denied, 307 N.C. 127, 297 S.E.2d 399 (1982).

And Relate the Law to the Variant Factual Situations Presented. — When charging the jury in a civil action the trial judge shall declare and explain the law arising on the evidence. He must relate and apply the law to the variant factual situations presented by some reasonable view of the evidence. Superior Foods, Inc. v. Harris-Teeter Super Mkts., Inc., 288 N.C. 213, 217 S.E.2d 566 (1975).

The trial judge is not required to review all of the evidence. Maynard v. Pigford, 17 N.C. App. 129, 193 S.E.2d 293 (1972).

But he must summarize it sufficiently to permit him to explain the application of the law thereto. Maynard v. Pigford, 17 N.C. App. 129, 193 S.E.2d 293 (1972).

The judge is not required to state the evidence except to the extent necessary to explain how the law applies to the evidence presented in the case being tried. Redding v. F.W. Woolworth Co., 14 N.C. App. 12, 187 S.E.2d 445 (1972).

Summary of the material aspects of the evidence sufficient to bring into focus controlling legal principles is all that is required with respect to stating the evidence. Clay v. Garner, 16 N.C. App. 510, 192 S.E.2d 672 (1972).

The judge is not required to declare and explain the law on a set of hypothetical facts. Terrell v. H. & N. Chevrolet Co., 11 N.C. App. 310, 181 S.E.2d 124 (1971).

Trial court is not required to read technical statutory language to the jury. Tuttle v. Tuttle, 38 N.C. App. 651, 248 S.E.2d 896 (1978), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 589, 254 S.E.2d 32 (1979).

Fact that some language of the complaint was used in declaring the law of the case is not error so long as the judge explains all the law arising from the evidence. Broadnax v. Deloatch, 20 N.C. App. 430, 201 S.E.2d 525, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 85, 203 S.E.2d 57 (1974).

Where the trial court adequately instructs the jury as to the law on every material aspect of the case arising from the evidence and applies the law fairly to variant factual situations presented by the evidence, the charge is sufficient. Murrow v. Daniels, 321 N.C. 494, 364 S.E.2d 392 (1988), overruled on other grounds, Nelson v. Freeland, 349 N.C. 615, 507 S.E.2d 882 (1998), decided under rule as it read prior to amendment.

It is error for the trial court to charge the jury upon an abstract principle of law which is not presented by the allegations and evidence. Huggins v. Kye, 10 N.C. App. 221, 178 S.E.2d 127 (1970).

Instructions on elements of damages are not proper if the evidence does not reveal a basis for such an award. Spears v. Service Distrib. Co., 27 N.C. App. 646, 219 S.E.2d 817 (1975).

Failure to explain the law and apply it to the evidence on all substantial features of the case constitutes prejudicial error for which the aggrieved party is entitled to a new trial. Investment Properties of Asheville, Inc. v. Norburn, 281 N.C. 191, 188 S.E.2d 342 (1972); Clifford v. River Bend Plantation, Inc., 55 N.C. App. 514, 286 S.E.2d 352 (1982).

Where the jury was left to determine for itself, without adequate explanation from the court, what law arose on the evidence in the case and how that law should be applied to the evidence, defendant was entitled to a new trial. Turner v. Turner, 9 N.C. App. 336, 176 S.E.2d 24 (1970).

Although defendant's trial counsel made no objection to the form of the issues which were submitted to the jury, defendant was entitled to have the issues decided by the jury under a charge from the court which correctly declared and explained the law arising on the evidence, and for errors in the charge there must be a new trial. Price v. Conley, 12 N.C. App. 636, 184 S.E.2d 405 (1971).

The trial judge's failure to charge the law on the substantial features of the case arising on the evidence is prejudicial error. Turner v. Turner, 9 N.C. App. 336, 176 S.E.2d 24 (1970); Price v. Conley, 12 N.C. App. 636, 184 S.E.2d 405 (1971); Clay v. Garner, 16 N.C. App. 510, 192 S.E.2d 672 (1972).

As Does Failure to Explain the Law as Applied to Evidence Susceptible of Several Interpretations. — When the evidence is susceptible of several interpretations, a failure to give instructions which declare and explain the law in its application to the several phases of the evidence is held for reversible error. Superior Foods, Inc. v. Harris-Teeter Super Mkts., Inc., 288 N.C. 213, 217 S.E.2d 566 (1975); Williamson v. Vann, 42 N.C. App. 569, 257 S.E.2d 102 (1979).

The jury charge must be considered contextually as a whole, and when so considered, if it presents the law of the case in such manner as to leave no reasonable cause to believe the jury was misled or misinformed, an exception that the instruction might have been better stated will not be sustained. Jones v. Satterfield Dev. Co., 16 N.C. App. 80, 191 S.E.2d 435, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 304, 192 S.E.2d 194 (1972);

Hanks v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 47 N.C. App. 393, 267 S.E.2d 409 (1980).

In reviewing the charge of a trial court, the Court of Appeals must read and consider the charge as a whole. When a charge presents the law fairly and clearly to the jury, it will afford no ground for reversing the judgment, though some of the expressions, when standing alone, might be regarded as erroneous. State v. Wade, 49 N.C. App. 257, 271 S.E.2d 77 (1980), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 596, 341 S.E.2d 37 (1986).

But erroneous instructions on the burden of proof are not cured by contextual construction. Starkey Paint Co. v. Springfield Life Ins. Co., 24 N.C. App. 507, 211 S.E.2d 498 (1975).

Conflicting instructions on a material aspect of the case must be held prejudicial error, since it cannot be determined that the jury was not influenced by the incorrect portion of the charge. Cross v. Beckwith, 16 N.C. App. 361, 192 S.E.2d 64 (1972), rev'd on other grounds, 293 N.C. 224, 238 S.E.2d 130 (1977).

Conflicting instructions on the applicable law or on a substantive feature of the case, particularly on the burden of proof, entitle defendant to a new trial, since it must be assumed on appeal that the jury was influenced in coming to a verdict by that portion of the charge which was erroneous. State v. Jones, 20 N.C. App. 454, 201 S.E.2d 552 (1974).

When there are conflicting instructions to the jury upon a material point, the one correct and the other incorrect, a new trial must be granted because it will not be assumed that the jurors possessed such discriminating knowledge of the law as would enable them to disregard the erroneous and to accept the correct statement of the law as their guide. Starkey Paint Co. v. Springfield Life Ins. Co., 24 N.C. App. 507, 211 S.E.2d 498 (1975).

An instruction relating to a factual situation not properly supported by the evidence is erroneous. Superior Foods, Inc. v. Harris-Teeter Super Mkts., Inc., 288 N.C. 213, 217 S.E.2d 566 (1975).

Where the instructions of the court are based upon an assumption of facts which are not in evidence, they must be held for error. Clark v. Barber, 20 N.C. App. 603, 202 S.E.2d 347 (1974).

No Error in Failure to Instruct as to Contention Not Supported by Evidence. — There being no evidence to support a finding of ratification, there was no error prejudicial to the defendant in the failure of the trial court to instruct the jury as to the defendant's contention with respect thereto. Link v. Link, 278 N.C. 181, 179 S.E.2d 697 (1971).

While it is the general rule that in a civil case the trial judge must declare and explain the law arising in the evidence, even in the absence of a special request such rule has certain accepted limits. The instruction must be based on evidence which, when viewed in the light most favorable to the proponent, will support a reasonable inference of each essential element of the claim or defense asserted. In re Will of Cooley, 66 N.C. App. 411, 311 S.E.2d 613 (1984).

Submission of Defense. — When a party contends that certain acts constitute a defense, the trial court must submit the issue to the jury with appropriate instructions if there is evidence which, when viewed in the light most favorable to the proponent, will support a reasonable inference of each essential element of the defense asserted. Plymouth Pallet Co. v. Wood, 51 N.C. App. 702, 277 S.E.2d 462, cert. denied, 303 N.C. 545, 281 S.E.2d 393 (1981).

Specific Acts or Omissions Which Could Constitute Negligence or Contributory Negligence Must Be Stated. — Under this section the trial court must relate to the jury the specific acts or omissions which, under the pleadings and evidence, could constitute negligence or contributory negligence. Everhart v. LeBrun, 52 N.C. App. 139, 277 S.E.2d 816 (1981); Zach v. Surry-Yadkin Elec. Membership Corp., 57 N.C. App. 326, 291 S.E.2d 290 (1982).

In a personal injury action arising out of a collision, it is error for the court to fail to instruct the jury as to what effect a finding of plaintiff's intoxication at the time of the collision would have upon the issue of plaintiff's contributory negligence. Atkins v. Moye, 277 N.C. 179, 176 S.E.2d 789 (1970).

Where the judge failed to explain to the jury what bearing their findings as to the facts would have on the issue of defendant's negligence and the instructions gave the jury unlimited authority to find the defendant generally negligent for any reason the evidence might suggest to them, there was error. Redding v. F.W. Woolworth Co., 14 N.C. App. 12, 187 S.E.2d 445 (1972).

Where trial judge defined burden of proof, negligence, and proximate cause in general terms and then recapitulated the evidence and the contentions of the parties, and instructed as to the measure of damages, but failed to instruct the jury as to what facts if found by them to be true would constitute negligence, there was reversible error. Brady v. Smith, 18 N.C. App. 293, 196 S.E.2d 580 (1973).

Where the instructions to the jury on the issue of defendant's negligence consisted merely of a brief summary of the evidence, a statement of the issue, a statement on the burden of proof, and general definitions of negligence and proximate cause, and where the trial court failed to relate the principles of law set forth in its instructions to the evidence in this personal injury action, failed to specify the duties owed by defendant to plaintiff's decedent and the acts or omissions by defendant established by the evidence from which the jury could find a breach of those duties, and failed to relate the contentions of negligence supported by the evidence, such failure was inherently prejudicial under section (a) of this rule. Hunt v. Montgomery Ward & Co., 49 N.C. App. 642, 272 S.E.2d 357 (1980).

Where the court reviewed in detail evidence of plaintiff's injuries, the failure of the court to repeat such evidence in enunciating the rule for the measurement of damages for personal injury was not error. Love v. Hunt, 17 N.C. App. 673, 195 S.E.2d 135 (1973).

By alleging the existence of a pertinent city ordinance, introducing it in evidence and presenting testimony tending to show its violation by defendants, plaintiffs made the ordinance a substantial feature of the case, thereby imposing on the trial judge a positive duty to give appropriate jury instructions with respect to the ordinance. Pharo v. Pearson, 28 N.C. App. 171, 220 S.E.2d 359 (1975).

Where the question of whether time was of the essence was a substantial feature of a case, the trial judge was required, without a request, to declare and explain the law with respect thereto. Gelder & Assocs. v. Continental Ins. Co., 15 N.C. App. 686, 190 S.E.2d 674 (1972).

Paraphrase of Law in Condemnation Action Held Insufficient. — Where, in a highway condemnation action, plaintiff's witness, an expert real estate appraiser, testified that the value of defendant's land was increased by the taking because a roadway fronting the property was paved, a paraphrase of the law of benefits contained in the trial court's statement to the jury of the plaintiff's contentions was not adequate to satisfy the mandate of section (a) of this rule. North Carolina Bd. of Transp. v. Rand, 299 N.C. 476, 263 S.E.2d 565 (1980).

Trial judge properly refused to submit instruction on "proper control" of automobile. See Dunn v. Herring, 75 N.C. App. 308, 330 S.E.2d 834, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 538, 335 S.E.2d 16 (1985).

Instruction for Following Too Closely. — Where violation of § 20-152(a) bore directly on the issue of defendant's negligence, which was a substantial feature of the case, the court should have declared and explained the section in its charge to the jury, and should also have explained that violation of this section was negligence per se. It has this duty irrespective of plaintiff's request for special instructions. Scher v. Antonucci, 77 N.C. App. 810, 336 S.E.2d 434 (1985).

Instruction on Permanent Injury. — Where doctor testified that in his expert opinion plaintiff had an impairment rating to her neck of four percent (4%) as a result of her injury, an impairment rating to her "low" back of five percent (5%), and to her head (for headaches) of three percent (3%), resulting in a 12 percent (12%) impairment of her physical being, this evidence was sufficient to support an instruction on permanent injury. Wooten v. Warren ex rel. Gilmer, 117 N.C. App. 350, 451 S.E.2d 342 (1994).

The credibility of the witnesses and conflicts in the evidence are for the jury, not the court. Atkins v. Moye, 277 N.C. 179, 176 S.E.2d 789 (1970); Cutts v. Casey, 278 N.C. 390, 180 S.E.2d 297 (1971).

Peremptory Instructions Not Abolished. — The new Rules of Civil Procedure have not abolished peremptory instructions in proper cases. Terrell v. H. & N. Chevrolet Co., 11 N.C. App. 310, 181 S.E.2d 124 (1971).

Peremptory instruction does not deprive the jury of right to reject evidence because of lack of credibility. Terrell v. H. & N. Chevrolet Co., 11 N.C. App. 310, 181 S.E.2d 124 (1971).

When Peremptory Instruction May Be Given. — When all the evidence offered suffices, if true, to establish the controverted fact, the court may give a peremptory instruction to the effect that if the jury finds the facts to be as all the evidence tends to show, it will answer the inquiry in an indicated manner. Defendant's denial of an alleged fact raises an issue as to its existence even though he offers no evidence tending to contradict that offered by plaintiff. Terrell v. H. & N. Chevrolet Co., 11 N.C. App. 310, 181 S.E.2d 124 (1971).

The correct form of a peremptory instruction is that the jury should answer the issue as specified if the jury should find from the greater weight of the evidence that the facts are as all the evidence tends to show. The court should also charge that if the jury does not so find they should answer the issue in the opposite manner. In other words, the court must leave it to the jury to decide the issue. Terrell v. H. & N. Chevrolet Co., 11 N.C. App. 310, 181 S.E.2d 124 (1971).

Duty of Counsel to Point Out Misstatement of the Evidence. — When the court's statement of the evidence in condensed form does not correctly reflect the testimony of the witnesses in any particular respect, it is the duty of counsel to call attention thereto and request a correction. Clay v. Garner, 16 N.C. App. 510, 192 S.E.2d 672 (1972).

When Inadvertent Misstatement of Evidence Is Reversible Error. — An inadvertence by the court in recapitulating the evidence will not be grounds for reversible error unless it is called to the attention of the court in time for correction. Sims v. Virginia Homes Mfg. Corp., 32 N.C. App. 193, 231 S.E.2d 287 (1977).

A broadside assignment of error to the charge as a whole is ineffective to bring up any portion of the charge for review. Investment Properties of Asheville, Inc. v. Allen, 281 N.C. 174, 188 S.E.2d 441 (1972), vacated on other grounds, 283 N.C. 277, 196 S.E.2d 262 (1973).

Reversal Where Instruction Is Patently Erroneous. — Although where there is no evidence in the record on appeal the trial court's charge will be sustained, it is also true that where an instruction is patently or inherently erroneous to the prejudice of the appellant, the judgment will be reversed for new trial. Bodenheimer v. Bodenheimer, 17 N.C. App. 434, 194 S.E.2d 375, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 392, 196 S.E.2d 274 (1973).

III. CONTENTIONS OF THE PARTIES.

The trial court is not required to state the contentions of the parties, nor is it required that the court state the evidence or explain the application of the law thereto. York v. Northern Hosp. Dist., 88 N.C. App. 183, 362 S.E.2d 859 (1987), cert. denied, 322 N.C. 116, 367 S.E.2d 922 (1988).

Contentions of the Parties Must Be Given Equal Stress. — Section (a) of this rule requires that the judge give equal stress to the contentions of the various parties in recapitulating the evidence presented at the trial. He may not set forth one side's evidence fully and in detail while briefly glancing over the evidence produced by the other party. Searcy v. Justice, 20 N.C. App. 559, 202 S.E.2d 314, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 235, 204 S.E.2d 25 (1974).

The trial court is not required to state the contentions of the parties, but when it undertakes to state the contentions of one party upon a particular phase of the case, it is incumbent upon the court to give the opposing contentions of the adverse party upon the same aspect. Comer v. Cain, 8 N.C. App. 670, 175 S.E.2d 337 (1970); Rector v. James, 41 N.C. App. 267, 254 S.E.2d 633 (1979); Daniels v. Jones, 42 N.C. App. 555, 257 S.E.2d 120, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 567, 261 S.E.2d 120 (1979).

But Need Not Be Stated at Equal Length. — It is not required that the statement of contentions of the parties as stated by the court be of equal length. Comer v. Cain, 8 N.C. App. 670, 175 S.E.2d 337 (1970); Daniels v. Jones, 42 N.C. App. 555, 257 S.E.2d 120, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 567, 261 S.E.2d 120 (1979).

Nor Follow Any Precise Sequence. — Just as the length of the statement of contentions does not have to be exactly equal, the order of stating the contentions of each party does not have to follow any precise sequence. Rector v. James, 41 N.C. App. 267, 254 S.E.2d 633 (1979).

Contentions That Acts or Omissions Constitute Claims or Defenses. — If a party contends that certain acts or omissions constitute a claim for relief or a defense against another, the trial court must submit the issue with appropriate instructions if there is evidence which, when viewed in the light most favorable to the proponent, will support a reasonable inference of each essential element of the claim or defense asserted. Cockrell v. Cromartie Transp. Co., 295 N.C. 444, 245 S.E.2d 497 (1978).

Objections to the statement of contentions must ordinarily be brought to the attention of the court before verdict; otherwise they are deemed to be waived. Rector v. James, 41 N.C. App. 267, 254 S.E.2d 633 (1979).

But exceptions to an expression of opinion within the context of the summary of the contentions may be raised on appeal. Heath v. Swift Wings, Inc., 40 N.C. App. 158, 252 S.E.2d 526, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 453, 256 S.E.2d 806 (1979).

IV. SPECIAL INSTRUCTIONS.

Duty to Request Greater Elaboration or Instructions on Subordinate Features. — Where the court adequately charges the law on every material aspect of the case arising on the evidence and applies the law fairly to the various factual situations presented by the evidence, the charge is sufficient and will not be held error for failure of the court to give instructions on subordinate features of the case, since it is the duty of a party desiring instructions on a subordinate feature, or greater elaboration, to aptly tender a request therefor. Koutsis v. Waddel, 10 N.C. App. 731, 179 S.E.2d 797 (1971).

It is the duty of the party desiring instructions on a subordinate feature of the case or greater elaboration on a particular point to aptly tender request for special instructions. Hanks v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 47 N.C. App. 393, 267 S.E.2d 409 (1980).

If a more thorough or more detailed charge is desired it is incumbent to request it. Prevette v. Bullis, 12 N.C. App. 552, 183 S.E.2d 810 (1971).

When the court has sufficiently instructed the jury, if the instructions are not as full as a party desires, he should submit a request for special instructions. Broadnax v. Deloatch, 20 N.C. App. 430, 201 S.E.2d 525, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 85, 203 S.E.2d 57 (1974).

Any party may make a written request for special jury instructions. Alston v. Monk, 92 N.C. App. 59, 373 S.E.2d 463 (1988), cert. denied, 324 N.C. 246, 378 S.E.2d 420 (1989).

Objection to Issues Submitted Precluded on Appeal Where Not Raised Below. — A party who is dissatisfied with the form of the issues or who desires an additional issue should raise the question at once, by objecting or by presenting the additional issue. If a party consents to the issues submitted, or does not object at the time or ask for a different or an additional issue, he cannot make the objection later on appeal. Hendrix v. All Am. Life & Cas. Co., 44 N.C. App. 464, 261 S.E.2d 270 (1980).

Failure to Instruct on Subordinate Features Not Error Absent Request. — Where the court has charged adequately on the material aspects of the case arising on the evidence and has fairly applied the law to the factual situation, the charge will not be held error for failure of the court to instruct on subordinate features absent a request. Hudson v. Hudson, 21 N.C. App. 412, 204 S.E.2d 697 (1974).

Failure to Give Proper Specific Instruction Aptly Tendered to Error. — When a party aptly tenders a written request for a specific instruction which is correct in itself and supported by the evidence, the failure of the court to give the instruction, at least in substance, is error. Faeber v. E.C.T. Corp., 16 N.C. App. 429, 192 S.E.2d 1 (1972); Property Shop, Inc. v. Mountain City Inv. Co., 56 N.C. App. 644, 290 S.E.2d 222 (1982); Millis Constr. Co. v. Fairfield Sapphire Valley, Inc., 86 N.C. App. 506, 358 S.E.2d 566 (1987); Williams v. Randolph, 94 N.C. App. 413, 380 S.E.2d 553, cert. denied, 325 N.C. 437, 384 S.E.2d 547 (1989); Stimpson Hosiery Mills, Inc. v. Pam Trading Corp., 98 N.C. App. 543, 392 S.E.2d 128 (1990).

Use of Exact Words Formulated by Litigant Not Required. — A litigant is not entitled to have the trial judge instruct the jury in the exact words formulated by the litigant, it being sufficient if the pertinent and applicable instructions requested are given substantially in the charge. Anderson v. Smith, 29 N.C. App. 72, 223 S.E.2d 402 (1976); Alston v. Monk, 92 N.C. App. 59, 373 S.E.2d 463 (1988), cert. denied, 324 N.C. 246, 378 S.E.2d 420 (1989); Williams v. Randolph, 94 N.C. App. 413, 380 S.E.2d 553, cert. denied, 325 N.C. 437, 384 S.E.2d 547 (1989).

Once contributory negligence becomes a question for the jury, the "reasonable person" objective standard comes into play. The trial court's refusal to give a special jury instruction requested under section (b) of this rule, phrased in terms of actual knowledge, the subjective standard, was proper. King v. Allred, 76 N.C. App. 427, 333 S.E.2d 758, cert. denied, 315 N.C. 184, 337 S.E.2d 857 (1985).

Trial judge did not err in failing to charge on the jury's right to consider the physical evidence, where the plaintiff had failed to submit a proposed instruction and had failed to submit her request to him in writing as required by section (b) of this rule. Hord v. Atkinson, 68 N.C. App. 346, 315 S.E.2d 339 (1984).

V. OPINION OF THE JUDGE.

Trial judge may not convey to the jury his opinion of the facts to be proven in any case. Brown v. Scism, 50 N.C. App. 619, 274 S.E.2d 897, cert. denied, 302 N.C. 396, 276 S.E.2d 919 (1981).

Subsection (a) of this Rule prohibits the trial judge from expressing an opinion on the weight to be given to particular evidence. Sherrod v. Nash Gen. Hosp., 126 N.C. App. 755, 487 S.E.2d 151 (1997), rev'd on other grounds, 348 N.C. 526, 500 S.E.2d 708 (1998).

In Any Manner at Any Stage of Trial. — While this rule refers to the judge's charge, the admonition has always been construed to forbid the judge to convey to the jury in any manner at any stage of the trial his opinion on the facts in evidence. State Hwy. Comm'n v. Ferry, 19 N.C. App. 332, 198 S.E.2d 773 (1973).

A trial judge is expressly forbidden to convey to the jury, in any manner, at any stage of the trial, his opinion as to whether a fact is fully or sufficiently proven. Worrell v. Hennis Credit Union, 12 N.C. App. 275, 182 S.E.2d 874 (1971).

The prohibition provided by section (a) of this rule does not apply to the charge alone, but prohibits a trial judge from asking questions or making comments at any time during the trial which amount to an expression of an opinion as to what has or has not been shown by the testimony. Worrell v. Hennis Credit Union, 12 N.C. App. 275, 182 S.E.2d 874 (1971); Saintsing v. Taylor, 57 N.C. App. 467, 291 S.E.2d 880, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 558, 294 S.E.2d 224 (1982).

Expressions of opinion in the presence of a jury are prohibited, and understandably so, since most juries lack the training needed to consider only relevant and competent evidence without guidance. In contrast, in a trial without a jury, the fact finder is also a highly trained legal expert, and thus the evil addressed by the statute is less likely to exist. Consolidated Sys. v. Granville Steel Corp., 63 N.C. App. 485, 305 S.E.2d 57 (1983).

The trial judge is prohibited from making comments at any time during the trial which amount to expressions of opinion as to what has or what has not been shown by the evidence. Russell v. Town of Morehead City, 90 N.C. App. 675, 370 S.E.2d 56 (1988).

Either Directly or by Implication. — Under section (a) of this rule the trial judge may not express an opinion, either directly or by implication, in favor of any party at any stage of the trial. Searcy v. Justice, 20 N.C. App. 559, 202 S.E.2d 314, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 235, 204 S.E.2d 25 (1974).

Whether prejudice resulted from trial judge's remarks is to be determined from the circumstances under which the remarks were made and the probable meaning of the language of the judge to the jury. Merchants Distribs., Inc. v. Hutchinson, 16 N.C. App. 655, 193 S.E.2d 436 (1972).

Probable Effect on Jury Determinative. — The probable effect upon the jury, and not the motive of the judge, determines whether a party's right to a fair trial has been impaired. In re Will of York, 18 N.C. App. 425, 197 S.E.2d 19, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 753, 198 S.E.2d 729 (1973).

The criterion for determining whether the trial judge deprived a litigant of his right to a fair trial by improper comments or remarks in the hearing of the jury is the probable effect upon the jury. Worrell v. Hennis Credit Union, 12 N.C. App. 275, 182 S.E.2d 874 (1971); Saintsing v. Taylor, 57 N.C. App. 467, 291 S.E.2d 880, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 558, 294 S.E.2d 224 (1982).

The criterion for judging any improper comments by the trial judge is their effect upon the jury. Brenner v. Little Red Sch. House, Ltd., 59 N.C. App. 68, 295 S.E.2d 607, cert. denied, 307 N.C. 468, 299 S.E.2d 220 (1982).

Probable Effect of Judge's Remarks to Be Considered Irrespective of Motive. — To determine whether a party's right to a fair trial has been impaired by the remarks of the trial judge, the Court of Appeals must examine the probable effect of the remarks upon the jury, irrespective of the motives of the trial judge. This test requires an examination of the circumstances under which the remarks were made and the probable meaning of the remarks to the jury. Russell v. Town of Morehead City, 90 N.C. App. 675, 370 S.E.2d 56 (1988).

In explaining legal principles the trial judge's use of illustrations should be carefully guarded to avoid suggestions susceptible of inferences as to the facts beyond those intended. Terrell v. H. & N. Chevrolet Co., 11 N.C. App. 310, 181 S.E.2d 124 (1971).

Where in his charge the court used the phrases "as I understand it" and "I think he meant" in referring to his own understanding of certain testimony, but cautioned the jury not to take the facts or evidence from the court but only from their own recollection of the evidence, the court was simply interpreting and summarizing the evidence in order to declare and explain the law arising thereon, as required by section (a) of this rule as it read prior to amendment in 1985. Slate v. Shelton, 20 N.C. App. 644, 202 S.E.2d 292 (1974).

Remarks Discrediting Counsel. — Remarks by the trial judge in effect threatening to find defendants' counsel in contempt of court tended to discredit defendants' counsel, and hence defendants' cause, in the eyes of the jury, in violation of section (a) of this rule. Board of Transp. v. Wilder, 28 N.C. App. 105, 220 S.E.2d 183 (1975).

Instruction as to Counsel's Statements on Applicable Law. — It was not error for the trial judge to charge the jury that "It is absolutely necessary that you take the law as I give it to you and not as you think it is or you might like it to be. What plaintiff's counsel and defendant's counsel have told you is the law is not the law." The fact that the charge mentioned both counsel eliminated any prejudice. Brenner v. Little Red Sch. House, Ltd., 59 N.C. App. 68, 295 S.E.2d 607, cert. denied, 307 N.C. 468, 299 S.E.2d 220 (1982).

The trial judge must abstain from conduct or language which tends to discredit or prejudice a litigant or his cause with the jury. Worrell v. Hennis Credit Union, 12 N.C. App. 275, 182 S.E.2d 874 (1971); Saintsing v. Taylor, 57 N.C. App. 467, 291 S.E.2d 880, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 558, 294 S.E.2d 224 (1982).

Prejudice to Unsuccessful Party May Be Grounds for New Trial. — Any remark by the presiding judge made in the presence of the jury that tends to prejudice the jury against the unsuccessful party may be grounds for a new trial. Russell v. Town of Morehead City, 90 N.C. App. 675, 370 S.E.2d 56 (1988).

Instruction "I will not attempt to recall all of the evidence, but only so much of it as the court deems is important when you come to consider your verdict," was erroneous as an expression of opinion on the importance of the recapitulated evidence. Little v. Poole, 11 N.C. App. 597, 182 S.E.2d 206 (1971).

Emphasis on Type of Witnesses Appearing for Plaintiff. — Where, in the court's charge to the jury in a condemnation case, emphasis was placed upon the type of witnesses appearing on behalf of the Board of Transportation, as contrasted to the laymen who testified on behalf of the landowners, the court erred. State Hwy. Comm'n v. Ferry, 19 N.C. App. 332, 198 S.E.2d 773 (1973).

Expression of Opinion on Credibility of Witness. — In the trial of plaintiff's action to recover damages for defendant's alleged breach of contract in the design and manufacture of a wrapping machine and of defendant's action against plaintiff to recover the balance due for the wrapping machine, trial court's declaration in the presence of the jury that defendant's president and chief witness was an expert in the field of machine design constituted an expression of opinion on the credibility of the witness in violation of this rule. Rannbury-Kobee Corp. v. Miller Mach. Co., 49 N.C. App. 413, 271 S.E.2d 554 (1980).

Court's Daily Prayer. — Absent a showing of prejudice by appellants, it could not be concluded that the trial court's daily prayer amounted to an impermissible expression of opinion in violation of subsection (a) of this Rule. Hill v. Cox, 108 N.C. App. 454, 424 S.E.2d 201 (1993).

Informal Remarks Held Not Reversible Error. — Judge's remarks to jury on the opening of court for the second and third days of trial, to the effect that jurors should "sit back, relax and stay tuned for the next portion of the trial," may have been informal and even jocular but did not constitute reversible error. Lenins v. K-Mart Corp., 98 N.C. App. 590, 391 S.E.2d 843 (1990).

Remarks Not Reversible Error. — While remarks made after the verdict was returned by the court were perhaps not appropriate under a strict reading of this rule, they did not constitute reversible error. Haymore v. Thew Shovel Co., 116 N.C. App. 40, 446 S.E.2d 865 (1994).

Expert Witness. — Where the witness involved was not a party to the litigation and court's declaration of him as an expert in no way touched upon any question which the jury had to decide, there was no prejudicial error by virtue of the trial court's stating its ruling concerning such witness in the presence of the jury. In re Lee, 69 N.C. App. 277, 317 S.E.2d 75 (1984).

Declaration That Defendant Is Expert. — The trial court committed prejudicial error when it declared in the presence of the jury that the defendant was found by the court to be an expert in the field of general psychiatry, where his expertise was not simply a question of fact but one of the most critical questions to be decided by the jury, so that the trial court's legal ruling improperly set forth a conclusion of law that the jury was duty-bound to accept. Sherrod v. Nash Gen. Hosp., 348 N.C. 526, 500 S.E.2d 708 (1998).

Rule 52. Findings by the court.

(a) Findings. —

(1) In all actions tried upon the facts without a jury or with an advisory jury, the court shall find the facts specially and state separately its conclusions of law thereon and direct the entry of the appropriate judgment.

(2) Findings of fact and conclusions of law are necessary on decisions of any motion or order ex mero motu only when requested by a party and as provided by Rule 41(b). Similarly, findings of fact and conclusions of law are necessary on the granting or denying of a preliminary injunction or any other provisional remedy only when required by statute expressly relating to such remedy or requested by a party.

(3) If an opinion or memorandum of decision is filed, it will be sufficient if the findings of fact and conclusions of law appear therein.

(b) Amendment. — Upon motion of a party made not later than 10 days after entry of judgment the court may amend its findings or make additional findings and may amend the judgment accordingly. The motion may be made with a motion for a new trial pursuant to Rule 59.

(c) Review on appeal. — When findings of fact are made in actions tried by the court without a jury, the question of the sufficiency of the evidence to support the findings may be raised on appeal whether or not the party raising the question has made in the trial court an objection to such findings or has made a motion to amend them or a motion for judgment, or a request for specific findings. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1969, c. 895, s. 12.)

COMMENT

Comment to this Rule as Originally Enacted. — This rule largely follows prior law, incorporating little of the federal rule. Former § 1-185 called for written findings and conclusions of law "upon trial of an issue of fact by the court." In respect to motions and provisional remedies, the Commission has been guided by the North Carolina case law. See Millhiser v. Balsley, 106 N.C. 433, 11 S.E. 314 (1890); Whitehead v. Hale, 118 N.C. 601, 24 S.E. 360 (1896). The reference to Rule 41(b) has to do with the situation when the trial judge is dismissing an action at the close of the plaintiff's evidence with the determination that the dismissal shall be on the merits. In this situation, both Rules 41 and 52 contemplate that the judge shall make written findings and conclusions.

Comment to the 1969 amendment. — (a) The amendment to Rule 52(a) and the addition of subsections (1) and (2) to section (a) merely assign numbers to the paragraphs. The other change is a matter of grammar.

The amendment added subsection (3) which is new. It provides that when findings are necessary by the court, it is sufficient if the findings of fact and conclusions of law appear in the decision or memorandum. The main purpose here is to make it clear that no particular form is required, and it is sufficient if the findings of fact and conclusions of law are distinguishable.

CASE NOTES

I. In General.
II. Findings and Conclusions, Generally.
III. Findings and Conclusions on Grant or Denial of Motions, Preliminary Injunctions, etc.
IV. Amendment.
V. Review on Appeal.
VI. Decisions under Prior Law.

I. IN GENERAL.

This rule necessarily contemplates that facts be found before conclusions can be reached. Baker v. Baker, 102 N.C. App. 792, 404 S.E.2d 20 (1991).

Where an order's rationale is tainted by a process that violates this rule, a new trial of the issues is required. Baker v. Baker, 102 N.C. App. 792, 404 S.E.2d 20 (1991).

In cases where the trial judge sits as the trier of facts, he is required to (1) find the facts on all issues joined in the pleadings; (2) declare the conclusions of law arising on the facts found; and (3) enter judgment accordingly. Gilbert Eng'g Co. v. City of Asheville, 74 N.C. App. 350, 328 S.E.2d 849, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 329, 333 S.E.2d 485 (1985).

Issues Must Be Resolved by Trial Court Before Appellate Review. — In a trial without a jury, it is the duty of the trial judge to resolve all issues raised by the pleadings and the evidence by making findings of fact and drawing therefrom conclusions of law upon which to base a final order or judgment. When all issues are not so resolved by the trial court, an appellate court has no option other than to vacate the order and remand the cause to the trial court for completion. Small v. Small, 107 N.C. App. 474, 420 S.E.2d 678 (1992).

Presumption Where Trial Court Is Not Required to Find Facts. — When the trial court is not required to find facts and make conclusions of law and does not do so, it is presumed that the court on proper evidence found facts to support its judgment. Estrada v. Burnham, 316 N.C. 318, 341 S.E.2d 538 (1986).

Jurisdiction of Trial Court. — The trial court is not divested of jurisdiction to hear and rule on a motion under section (b) of this rule, even though notice of appeal has been given. York v. Taylor, 79 N.C. App. 653, 339 S.E.2d 830 (1986).

Where notice of appeal from default judgment for defendants with respect to plaintiff's claim and defendants' counter-claim against plaintiff was filed at the same time as plaintiff's motion under section (b) of this rule for amended and additional findings of fact and his motion under § 1A-1, Rule 60(b) for relief from judgment, under the circumstances of the case the trial court had jurisdiction to rule on plaintiff's motion under § 1A-1, Rule 60(b). York v. Taylor, 79 N.C. App. 653, 339 S.E.2d 830 (1986).

Remedy for failure of court's order to "direct the entry of an appropriate judgment" under subsection (a)(1) of this rule was not a new trial, but rather, a remand for entry of a proper judgment. Pitts v. Broyhill, 88 N.C. App. 651, 364 S.E.2d 738 (1988).

Requirement of Appropriately Detailed Findings. — The requirement of appropriately detailed findings is designed to dispose of the issues raised by the pleadings and to allow the appellate courts to perform their proper function in the judicial system. Mashburn v. First Investors Corp., 102 N.C. App. 560, 402 S.E.2d 860 (1991).

Under this rule, the facts required to be found specially are those material and ultimate facts from which it can be determined whether the findings are supported by the evidence and whether they support the conclusions of law reached. Guilford County Planning & Dev. Dep't v. Simmons, 102 N.C. App. 325, 401 S.E.2d 659, cert. denied, 329 N.C. 496, 407 S.E.2d 533 (1991).

Rescission Offer. — Judgment that simply made the bare conclusion that an investment firm tendered a "valid" rescission offer and that, therefore, the investor was barred from bringing suit under the provisions of subdivision (g)(1) of § 78A-56 did not rise to the level of separate findings of fact and conclusions of law; the judgment, therefore, did not comport with the requirements of § 1A-1, Rule 41(b) and subsection (a) of this rule. Mashburn v. First Investors Corp., 102 N.C. App. 560, 402 S.E.2d 860 (1991).

II. FINDINGS AND CONCLUSIONS, GENERALLY.

Federal Interpretation of Rule May Be Used for Guidance. — Subsection (a)(1) of this rule is similar to FRCP, Rule 52(a) and therefore the federal courts' interpretations of the rule may be used for guidance. Harris v. North Carolina Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co., 91 N.C. App. 147, 370 S.E.2d 700 (1988).

Timeliness of Request. — A request for findings and conclusions under subsection (a)(2) of this rule is untimely if made after the entry of a trial court's order. Nobles v. First Carolina Communications, Inc., 108 N.C. App. 127, 423 S.E.2d 312 (1992), cert. denied, 333 N.C. 463, 427 S.E.2d 623 (1993).

In actions tried upon the facts without a jury, the court must make its own determination as to what pertinent facts are established by the evidence, rather than merely reciting what the evidence may tend to show. Lee v. Lee, 78 N.C. App. 632, 337 S.E.2d 690 (1985).

Subsection (a)(1) of this rule requires, in nonjury cases, that the trial judge make specific findings of ultimate facts established by the evidence, state the conclusions of law thereon, and direct entry of the appropriate judgment. City of Statesville v. Roth, 77 N.C. App. 803, 336 S.E.2d 142 (1985).

The trial judge becomes both judge and juror on waiver of jury trial. Beasley-Kelso Assocs. v. Tenney, 30 N.C. App. 708, 228 S.E.2d 620, cert. denied, 291 N.C. 323, 230 S.E.2d 675 (1976); General Specialties Co. v. Nello L. Teer Co., 41 N.C. App. 273, 254 S.E.2d 658 (1979).

And Must Consider and Weigh all Competent Evidence. — When trial by jury is waived and issues of facts are tried by the court, the trial judge becomes both judge and juror, and it is his duty to consider and weigh all the competent evidence before him. Laughter v. Lambert, 11 N.C. App. 133, 180 S.E.2d 450 (1971).

And Evaluate the Credibility of Witnesses. — The trial judge passes upon the credibility of the witnesses, the weight to be given their testimony, and the reasonable inferences to be drawn therefrom. Laughter v. Lambert, 11 N.C. App. 133, 180 S.E.2d 450 (1971); General Specialties Co. v. Nello L. Teer Co., 41 N.C. App. 273, 254 S.E.2d 658 (1979).

The trial judge determines which inferences shall be drawn and which shall be rejected if different inferences may be drawn from the evidence. Laughter v. Lambert, 11 N.C. App. 133, 180 S.E.2d 450 (1971).

Findings Must Be Supported by Evi- dence Determinative of Issues. — Section (a) of this rule requires that findings of fact be established by evidence, admissions, and stipulations determinative of the issues involved in the action. Hollerbach v. Hollerbach, 90 N.C. App. 384, 368 S.E.2d 413 (1988).

Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law Essential to Decision Making Process. — Under the rules, where a case is tried before a court without a jury, findings of fact and conclusions of law sufficient to support a judgment are essential parts of the decision-making process. Girard Trust Bank v. Easton, 12 N.C. App. 153, 182 S.E.2d 645, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 393, 183 S.E.2d 245 (1971).

Force and Effect of Findings. — Findings of fact by the court have the force and effect of a verdict by a jury. Broughton v. Broughton, 58 N.C. App. 778, 294 S.E.2d 772, cert. denied, 307 N.C. 269, 299 S.E.2d 214 (1982).

Findings Required on Award of Permanent Alimony. — Under subsection (a)(1) of this rule, findings of fact are required to support the amount of permanent alimony awarded by a trial judge. Quick v. Quick, 305 N.C. 446, 290 S.E.2d 653 (1982), overruling statement in Eudy v. Eudy, 288 N.C. 71, 215 S.E.2d 782 (1975).

Under § 1A-1, Rule 60(b), the trial court is not required to make findings of fact unless requested to do so by a party. Nations v. Nations, 111 N.C. App. 211, 431 S.E.2d 852 (1993).

Duty of Judge to Find Facts and State Conclusions of Law Separately. — Where the judge tries a case without a jury, it is his duty to find the facts specially and state separately his conclusions of law and thereby resolve all controversies between the parties raised by the pleadings and the evidence. Heating & Air Conditioning Assocs. v. Myerly, 29 N.C. App. 85, 223 S.E.2d 545, appeal dismissed, 290 N.C. 94, 225 S.E.2d 323 (1976); Rosenthal's Bootery, Inc. v. Shavitz, 48 N.C. App. 170, 268 S.E.2d 250 (1980).

The mandate of subsection (a)(1) of this rule requires that the trial judge "find the facts specially"; and, in lieu of giving instructions to a jury relevant to issues arising upon the pleadings, that he "state separately" his conclusions of law. Hartley v. Ballou, 286 N.C. 51, 209 S.E.2d 776 (1974).

It is the duty of the trial judge to make findings of fact determinative of the issues raised by the pleadings and the evidence. English v. Holden Beach Realty Corp., 41 N.C. App. 1, 254 S.E.2d 223, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 609, 257 S.E.2d 217 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

This rule governs findings by the court in nonjury proceedings. It requires the trial court in such proceedings to do three things: (1) find facts on all issues of fact joined on the pleadings, (2) declare conclusions of law arising on the facts found, and (3) enter judgment accordingly. This is because when a trial judge sits as both judge and juror, as he or she does in a nonjury proceeding, it is that judge's duty to weigh and consider all competent evidence, and pass upon the credibility of the witnesses, the weight to be given their testimony and the reasonable inferences to be drawn therefrom. In re Whisnant, 71 N.C. App. 439, 322 S.E.2d 434 (1984).

To comport with subsection (a)(1) of this rule, the trial court must make a specific statement of the facts on which the rights of the parties are to be determined, and those findings must be sufficiently specific to enable an appellate court to review the decision and test the correctness of the judgment. Chemical Realty Corp. v. Home Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 65 N.C. App. 242, 310 S.E.2d 33 (1983), cert. denied, 310 N.C. 624, 315 S.E.2d 689, cert. denied, 469 U.S. 835, 105 S. Ct. 128, 83 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1984).

When issues of fact are tried by the trial court, it must state its findings and conclusions separately. Hollerbach v. Hollerbach, 90 N.C. App. 384, 368 S.E.2d 413 (1988).

At the close of all the evidence in a bench trial, the trial court must make findings of fact and state separate conclusions of law to assist the appellate court in understanding the basis for the trial court's decision; a conclusion of law is a statement of the law arising on the specific facts of a case which determines the issues between the parties. In re Everette, — N.C. App. —, 514 S.E.2d 523 (1999).

So as to Render Them Distinguishable. — The judge must state his findings of fact and conclusions of law separately. The judge complies with this requirement if he separates the findings and the conclusions in such a manner as to render them distinguishable, no matter how the separation is effected. Williams v. Pilot Life Ins. Co., 288 N.C. 338, 218 S.E.2d 368 (1975).

This rule requiring that the findings of fact be stated separately from the conclusions of law is satisfied when the separation is made in such a manner as to render the findings of fact readily distinguishable from the conclusions of law. Jackson v. Collins, 9 N.C. App. 548, 176 S.E.2d 878 (1970).

The judge complies with subsection (a)(1) of this rule if he separates the findings and conclusions in such a manner as to render them distinguishable, no matter how the separation is effected. Highway Church of Christ, Inc. v. Barber, 72 N.C. App. 481, 325 S.E.2d 305 (1985).

Subsection (a)(1) of this rule requires only that the trial court's findings of fact be distinguishable from its conclusions of law. Mitchell v. Lowery, 90 N.C. App. 177, 368 S.E.2d 7, cert.

denied, 323 N.C. 365, 373 S.E.2d 547 (1988).

And to Enter Judgment Accordingly. — In cases in which the trial court passes on the facts, the court is required to do three things in writing: (1) to find the facts on all issues of fact joined on the pleadings; (2) to declare the conclusions of law arising on the facts found; and (3) To enter judgment accordingly. Coggins v. City of Asheville, 278 N.C. 428, 180 S.E.2d 149 (1971); Williams v. Williams, 13 N.C. App. 468, 186 S.E.2d 210 (1972); Littlejohn v. Hamrick, 15 N.C. App. 461, 190 S.E.2d 299 (1972); Luther v. Hauser, 24 N.C. App. 71, 210 S.E.2d 218 (1974).

Where a jury trial is waived by the parties to a civil action, the judge who tries the case is required to do three things: (1) To find the facts on all issues of fact joined on the pleadings; (2) to declare the conclusions of law arising upon the facts found; and (3) to enter judgment accordingly. Williams v. Pilot Life Ins. Co., 288 N.C. 338, 218 S.E.2d 368 (1975).

When trial by jury is waived and issues of facts are tried by the court, the court is required to find the facts specially and state separately its conclusions of law thereon and direct entry of the appropriate judgment. Laughter v. Lambert, 11 N.C. App. 133, 180 S.E.2d 450 (1971); Conrad v. Jones, 31 N.C. App. 75, 228 S.E.2d 618 (1976).

Trial judge has the duty to find facts, state separately his conclusions of law and enter judgment. General Specialties Co. v. Nello L. Teer Co., 41 N.C. App. 273, 254 S.E.2d 658 (1979).

There are two kinds of facts, ultimate facts and evidentiary facts. Williams v. Pilot Life Ins. Co., 288 N.C. 338, 218 S.E.2d 368 (1975).

Ultimate facts are the final facts required to establish plaintiff's cause of action or defendant's defense. Williams v. Pilot Life Ins. Co., 288 N.C. 338, 218 S.E.2d 368 (1975); Farmers Bank v. Michael T. Brown Distribs., Inc., 307 N.C. 342, 298 S.E.2d 357 (1983).

An ultimate fact is the final resulting effect which is reached by processes of logical reasoning from the evidentiary facts. Farmers Bank v. Michael T. Brown Distribs., Inc., 307 N.C. 342, 298 S.E.2d 357 (1983).

Ultimate facts are those found in that vaguely defined area lying between evidential facts on the one side and conclusions of law on the other. In consequence, the line of demarcation between ultimate facts and legal conclusions is not easily drawn. Farmers Bank v. Michael T. Brown Distribs., Inc., 307 N.C. 342, 298 S.E.2d 357 (1983).

An ultimate fact is the final resulting effect which is reached by processes of logical reasoning from the evidentiary facts. In re City of Durham Annexation Ordinance Numbered 5991 for Area A, 69 N.C. App. 77, 316 S.E.2d 649, appeal dismissed, 312 N.C. 493, 322 S.E.2d 553 (1984).

Evidentiary facts are those subsidiary facts required to prove the ultimate facts. Williams v. Pilot Life Ins. Co., 288 N.C. 338, 218 S.E.2d 368 (1975); Farmers Bank v. Michael T. Brown Distribs., Inc., 307 N.C. 342, 298 S.E.2d 357 (1983).

The trial judge is required to find and state the ultimate facts only. Williams v. Pilot Life Ins. Co., 288 N.C. 338, 218 S.E.2d 368 (1975).

While section (a) of this rule does not require a recitation of the evidentiary and subsidiary facts required to prove the ultimate facts, it does require specific findings of the ultimate facts established by the evidence, admissions and stipulations which are determinative of the questions involved in the action and essential to support the conclusions of law reached. Quick v. Quick, 305 N.C. 446, 290 S.E.2d 653 (1982); Farmers Bank v. Michael T. Brown Distribs., Inc., 307 N.C. 342, 298 S.E.2d 357 (1983); Plott v. Plott, 313 N.C. 63, 326 S.E.2d 863 (1985).

The facts required to be specially found by this rule are those material and ultimate facts from which it can be determined whether the findings are supported by the evidence and whether they support the conclusions of law reached. Quick v. Quick, 305 N.C. 446, 290 S.E.2d 653 (1982).

Subsection (a)(1) of this rule does not require recitation of evidentiary facts, but it does require specific findings on the ultimate facts established by the evidence, admissions and stipulations which are determinative of the questions involved in the action and essential to support the conclusions of law reached. Chemical Realty Corp. v. Home Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 65 N.C. App. 242, 310 S.E.2d 33 (1983), cert. denied, 310 N.C. 624, 315 S.E.2d 689, cert. denied, 469 U.S. 835, 105 S. Ct. 128, 83 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1984).

A finding of such essential facts as may lay a basis for the decision is sufficient under section (a) of this rule. Fortis Corp. v. Northeast Forest Prods., 68 N.C. App. 752, 315 S.E.2d 537 (1984).

The general rule is that in making findings of fact, the trial court is required only to make brief, pertinent and definite findings and conclusions about the matters in issue, but need not make a finding on every issue requested. Fortis Corp. v. Northeast Forest Prods., 68 N.C. App. 752, 315 S.E.2d 537 (1984).

The facts required to be found are the ultimate facts established by the evidence which are determinative of the questions involved in the action and are essential to support the conclusions of law reached. Gilbert Eng'g Co. v. City of Asheville, 74 N.C. App. 350, 328 S.E.2d

849, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 329, 333 S.E.2d 485 (1985).

In actions tried upon the facts without a jury, the trial court need not recite in its order every evidentiary fact presented at hearing, but must only make specific findings on the ultimate facts established by the evidence, admissions, and stipulations that are determinative of the questions raised in the action and essential to support the conclusions of law reached. Mitchell v. Lowery, 90 N.C. App. 177, 368 S.E.2d 7, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 365, 373 S.E.2d 547 (1988).

When findings are required, they must be made with sufficient specificity to allow meaningful appellate review. Andrews v. Peters, 318 N.C. 133, 347 S.E.2d 409 (1986).

A "conclusion of law" is the court's statement of the law which is determinative of the matter at issue between the parties. Montgomery v. Montgomery, 32 N.C. App. 154, 231 S.E.2d 26 (1977); Appalachian Poster Adv. Co. v. Harrington, 89 N.C. App. 476, 366 S.E.2d 705 (1988).

A conclusion of law is reached by an application of fixed rules of law. Farmers Bank v. Michael T. Brown Distribs., Inc., 307 N.C. 342, 298 S.E.2d 357 (1983).

A conclusion of law must be based on the facts found by the court and must be stated separately. Montgomery v. Montgomery, 32 N.C. App. 154, 231 S.E.2d 26 (1977).

What Conclusions Must Be Stated. — The conclusions of law necessary to be stated are the conclusions which, under the facts found, are required by the law and from which the judgment is to result. Montgomery v. Montgomery, 32 N.C. App. 154, 231 S.E.2d 26 (1977).

A bare conclusion unaccompanied by the supporting grounds for that conclusion does not comply with subsection (a)(1) of this rule. Appalachian Poster Adv. Co. v. Harrington, 89 N.C. App. 476, 366 S.E.2d 705 (1988).

Purpose of requiring findings of fact and conclusions of law is to allow meaningful review by the appellate courts. O'Neill v. Southern Nat'l Bank, 40 N.C. App. 227, 252 S.E.2d 231 (1979).

Necessity for the finding of facts and the entry thereof, and for the drawing of conclusions of law from the facts, is to allow review by the appellate courts. Without such findings and conclusions, it cannot be determined whether or not the judge correctly found the facts or applied the law thereto. Jones v. Murdock, 20 N.C. App. 746, 203 S.E.2d 102 (1974); Rosenthal's Bootery, Inc. v. Shavitz, 48 N.C. App. 170, 268 S.E.2d 250 (1980).

Requirement of appropriate findings of fact and conclusions of law is not designed to encourage ritualistic recitations by the trial court. The requirement is designed to dispose of the issues raised by the pleadings and to allow the appellate courts to perform their proper function in the judicial system. Without such findings and conclusions, it cannot be determined whether or not the judge correctly found the facts or applied the law thereto. Montgomery v. Montgomery, 32 N.C. App. 154, 231 S.E.2d 26 (1977).

A purpose of subsection (a)(1) of this rule is to assist the appellate courts in determining whether or not the trial court correctly found the facts and applied the law to them. O'Grady v. First Union Nat'l Bank, 35 N.C. App. 315, 241 S.E.2d 375, rev'd on other grounds, 296 N.C. 212, 250 S.E.2d 587 (1978).

The requirement that facts be found specially is intended to provide a basis for appellate review. Poag v. Powell, 39 N.C. App. 363, 250 S.E.2d 93, cert. denied, 296 N.C. 736, 254 S.E.2d 178 (1979).

The requirement for appropriately detailed findings is not a mere formality or a rule of empty ritual; it is designed instead to dispose of the issues raised by the pleadings and to allow the appellate courts to perform their proper function in the judicial system. Coble v. Coble, 300 N.C. 708, 268 S.E.2d 185 (1980).

The purpose of the requirement that the court make findings of those specific facts which support its ultimate disposition of the case is to allow a reviewing court to determine from the record whether the judgment, and the legal conclusions which underlie it, represent a correct application of the law. Coble v. Coble, 300 N.C. 708, 268 S.E.2d 185 (1980); Farmers Bank v. Michael T. Brown Distribs., Inc., 307 N.C. 342, 298 S.E.2d 357 (1983).

Under this rule, the trial judge is required to find the facts specially and state separately his conclusions of law thereon. The purpose of this requirement is to allow a reviewing court to determine from the record whether the judgment and the legal conclusions which underlie it represent a correct application of the law. In re Jones, 62 N.C. App. 103, 302 S.E.2d 259 (1983).

The purpose of detailed findings of specific fact is to allow a reviewing court to determine from the record whether the judgment and the underlying legal conclusions represent a correct application of the law. Waynick Constr., Inc. v. York, 70 N.C. App. 287, 319 S.E.2d 304, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 624, 323 S.E.2d 926 (1984); Gilbert Eng'g Co. v. City of Asheville, 74 N.C. App. 350, 328 S.E.2d 849, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 329, 333 S.E.2d 485 (1985).

The purpose for requiring conclusions of law to be stated separately is to enable the reviewing court to determine what law the court applied to the facts found. Waynick Constr., Inc. v. York, 70 N.C. App. 287, 319 S.E.2d 304, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 624, 323 S.E.2d 926 (1984).

The requirement that where the trial judge sits as the trier of facts, he must find facts upon all issues raised by the pleadings and evidence and declare the conclusions of law arising on the facts found is designed to dispose of the issues raised and to permit a reviewing court to determine from the record whether the judgment and the legal conclusions which underlie it represent a correct application of the law. Wohlfahrt v. Schneider, 82 N.C. App. 69, 345 S.E.2d 448 (1986).

Requirement for appropriately detailed findings is not a mere formality or a rule of empty ritual; it is designed instead "to dispose of the issues raised by the pleadings and to allow the appellate courts to perform their proper function in the judicial system." Farmers Bank v. Michael T. Brown Distribs., Inc., 307 N.C. 342, 298 S.E.2d 357 (1983).

Purpose for requiring conclusions of law to be stated separately is to enable appellate courts to determine what law the trial court applied in directing the entry of judgment in favor of one of the parties. Hinson v. Jefferson, 287 N.C. 422, 215 S.E.2d 102 (1975).

This rule does not require or contemplate that the court submit to itself issues of fact in the manner in which issues of fact are submitted to a jury. Hartley v. Ballou, 286 N.C. 51, 209 S.E.2d 776 (1974).

The posing and answering of issues by the court when it sits without a jury is not approved. Nor is the entry of a verdict by the trial court, sitting without a jury, based on issues of fact answered by the court. Gibson v. Jones, 7 N.C. App. 534, 173 S.E.2d 57 (1970).

When an action is tried upon the facts without a jury, there is no charge. Hartley v. Ballou, 286 N.C. 51, 209 S.E.2d 776 (1974).

Compliance with Subsection (a)(1) Held Sufficient. — Trial judge, after denying defendant's motion to dismiss, properly complied with the requirements of subsection (a)(1) of this rule by entering judgment in which the court found the facts specially. Higgins v. Builders & Fin., Inc., 20 N.C. App. 1, 200 S.E.2d 397, cert. denied, 284 N.C. 616, 201 S.E.2d 689 (1973).

Compliance Held Insufficient. — An action to enforce restrictive covenants would be remanded so that proper findings of fact could be entered based upon sufficient evidence where the record contained insufficient evidence to support all of the proper findings of fact, and the facts found did not support the conclusions of law and the judgment. Littlejohn v. Hamrick, 15 N.C. App. 461, 190 S.E.2d 299 (1972).

Mere assertion that plaintiff is not entitled to the relief prayed for by her, without stating the grounds for such a bare legal conclusion, does not comply with the requirements of subsection (a)(1) of this rule. Hinson v. Jefferson, 287 N.C. 422, 215 S.E.2d 102 (1975).

Where no evidence was introduced, and the stipulations were insufficient to support all the necessary findings of fact, it was necessary that case be remanded so that proper findings of fact could be entered based upon sufficient evidence. Littlejohn v. Hamrick, 15 N.C. App. 461, 190 S.E.2d 299 (1972).

Where deputy commissioner's order that was modified and adopted by the full Industrial Commission was devoid of any findings of fact on the claims of liability and negligence, the opinion was vacated. Parker v. State DOT, 122 N.C. App. 279, 468 S.E.2d 589 (1996).

Findings of fact which were mainly only recitations of the evidence, and set forth, sometimes verbatim, the contents of letters exchanged between petitioner and respondent, did not reflect the "processes of logical reasoning" required by subsection (a)(1) of this rule. Appalachian Poster Adv. Co. v. Harrington, 89 N.C. App. 476, 366 S.E.2d 705 (1988).

Where, instead of stating separately his conclusions of law, the trial judge answered issues of negligence and contributory negligence, these answers were treated as the equivalent of stated conclusions of law (1) that plaintiff was damaged by the negligence of defendant, and (2) that plaintiff did not by his own negligence contribute to his own damage. Blackwell v. Butts, 278 N.C. 615, 180 S.E.2d 835 (1971).

Oral Statements on Issues Neither Findings Nor Verdict. — Where, at the conclusion of the evidence in an action tried before the court without a jury, the trial judge orally indicated answers in favor of plaintiff to issues which had been prepared by counsel for defendant in anticipation of a jury trial, and instructed plaintiff's counsel to submit a proposed judgment containing appropriate findings of fact and conclusions of law, the issues and the court's answers thereto constituted neither a verdict nor findings of fact and conclusions of law which would permit a substitute judge to proceed under Rule 63 to enter judgment in the case. Girard Trust Bank v. Easton, 12 N.C. App. 153, 182 S.E.2d 645, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 393, 183 S.E.2d 245 (1971).

Findings on Discretionary Rulings. — When requested, findings of fact and conclusions of law must be made even on rulings resting within the trial court's discretion. Andrews v. Peters, 318 N.C. 133, 347 S.E.2d 409 (1986).

Findings on Setting Aside Verdict on Damages. — Findings, when requested, should be made in support of the ultimate conclusion that the damages appear to have been given under the influence of passion or prejudice in order to facilitate meaningful appellate review of an order setting aside the verdict on damages. Andrews v. Peters, 318

N.C. 133, 347 S.E.2d 409 (1986).

Findings and Conclusions on Alimony Award. — Because an alimony award is determined by a trial court without a jury, section (a) of this rule requires the trial court to find facts specially and state conclusions of law separately. Perkins v. Perkins, 85 N.C. App. 660, 355 S.E.2d 848, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 633, 360 S.E.2d 92 (1987).

If no findings of fact are required, the findings which support the trial judge's ruling are deemed implicit in the ruling. Donavant v. Hudspeth, 318 N.C. 1, 347 S.E.2d 797 (1986).

Findings of fact which resolve conflicts in the evidence are binding on appellate courts. Lane v. Honeycutt, 14 N.C. App. 436, 188 S.E.2d 604, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 622, 190 S.E.2d 466 (1972).

Trial court's findings of fact are conclusive if they are supported by competent evidence, even though there may be evidence to the contrary. Heating & Air Conditioning Assocs. v. Myerly, 29 N.C. App. 85, 223 S.E.2d 545, appeal dismissed, 290 N.C. 94, 225 S.E.2d 323 (1976); Cox v. Cox, 33 N.C. App. 73, 234 S.E.2d 189 (1977); Gilbert Eng'g Co. v. City of Asheville, 74 N.C. App. 350, 328 S.E.2d 849, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 329, 333 S.E.2d 485 (1985); City of Statesville v. Roth, 77 N.C. App. 803, 336 S.E.2d 142 (1985).

The trial court's findings of fact are conclusive if supported by any competent evidence, and judgment supported by such findings will be affirmed, even though there is evidence contra, or even though some incompetent evidence may also have been admitted. Little v. Little, 9 N.C. App. 361, 176 S.E.2d 521 (1970); Brooks v. Brooks, 12 N.C. App. 626, 184 S.E.2d 417 (1971).

Where facts are found by the court, if supported by competent evidence, such facts are as conclusive on appeal as the verdict of a jury. Coggins v. City of Asheville, 278 N.C. 428, 180 S.E.2d 149 (1971); Littlejohn v. Hamrick, 15 N.C. App. 461, 190 S.E.2d 299 (1972).

When a jury trial is waived, the court's findings of fact have the force and effect of a verdict by a jury and are conclusive on appeal if there is evidence to support them, even though the evidence might sustain findings to the contrary. Blackwell v. Butts, 278 N.C. 615, 180 S.E.2d 835 (1971); Laughter v. Lambert, 11 N.C. App. 133, 180 S.E.2d 450 (1971); Lane v. Honeycutt, 14 N.C. App. 436, 188 S.E.2d 604, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 622, 190 S.E.2d 466 (1972); Rose v. Vulcan Materials Co., 282 N.C. 643, 194 S.E.2d 521 (1973); Beasley-Kelso Assocs. v. Tenney, 30 N.C. App. 708, 228 S.E.2d 620, cert. denied, 291 N.C. 323, 230 S.E.2d 675 (1976); Wurlitzer Distrib. Corp. v. Schofield, 44 N.C. App. 520, 261 S.E.2d 688 (1980); Fortis Corp. v. Northeast Forest Prods., 68 N.C. App. 752, 315 S.E.2d 537 (1984).

If supported by competent evidence, findings of fact made by the trial judge sitting without a jury are conclusive upon review in an appellate court, the weight and credibility of the evidence being for the trial judge. Waters v. Humphrey, 33 N.C. App. 185, 234 S.E.2d 462, appeal dismissed, 293 N.C. 163, 236 S.E.2d 707 (1977).

Although the question of the sufficiency of the evidence to support the findings may be raised on appeal, the appellate courts are bound by the trial courts' findings of fact where there is some evidence to support those findings, even though the evidence might sustain findings to the contrary. In re Montgomery, 311 N.C. 101, 316 S.E.2d 246 (1984).

The appellate courts are bound by the trial court's findings of fact so long as there is some evidence to support those findings, even though the evidence could sustain findings to the contrary. Lyerly v. Malpass, 82 N.C. App. 224, 346 S.E.2d 254 (1986), cert. denied, 318 N.C. 695, 351 S.E.2d 748 (1987).

And Will Not Be Disturbed. — When the trial judge sits as the trier of facts, his judgment will not be disturbed on the theory that the evidence did not support his findings of fact if there be any evidence to support the judgment. Whitaker v. Earnhardt, 289 N.C. 260, 221 S.E.2d 316 (1976).

But Sufficiency of Evidence to Support Judge's Findings May Be Questioned on Appeal. — The question of the sufficiency of the evidence to support the trial court's findings of fact may be raised on appeal. Little v. Little, 9 N.C. App. 361, 176 S.E.2d 521 (1970); Wurlitzer Distrib. Corp. v. Schofield, 44 N.C. App. 520, 261 S.E.2d 688 (1980).

Notice of appeal and exception to the entry of a judgment after denial of motions for dismissal and judgment presents the face of the record for review including the question of whether the facts found support the judgment and whether the judgment is regular in form. Whitaker v. Earnhardt, 289 N.C. 260, 221 S.E.2d 316 (1976).

Where plaintiffs have not assigned error to the judge's findings, those findings are conclusive on appeal, and the Supreme Court is only required to determine whether the findings support the trial judge's conclusions and the entry of judgment. Sharpe v. Park Newspapers of Lumberton, Inc., 317 N.C. 579, 347 S.E.2d 25 (1986).

And Erroneous Legal Conclusions May Be Shown. — Although the presumption is that the court on proper evidence found facts to support its order, the record may clearly reveal that the court erroneously drew legal conclusions from these facts. H.V. Allen Co. v. Quip-Matic, Inc., 47 N.C. App. 40, 266 S.E.2d 768, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 85, 273 S.E.2d 298 (1980).

In cases involving a higher evidentiary standard, the appellate court must review the evidence in order to determine whether the findings are supported by clear, cogent and convincing evidence and support the conclusions of law. In re Montgomery, 311 N.C. 101, 316 S.E.2d 246 (1984).

Failure to except to the court's findings does not necessarily preclude appellate review on the question of whether the evidence supported the findings of fact, but appellant must assign error so as to outline his objections on appeal. Whitaker v. Earnhardt, 289 N.C. 260, 221 S.E.2d 316 (1976).

Judge's Findings Are Conclusive in Action for Permanent Restraining Order. — When the purpose of an action is a permanent restraining order, the trial court's findings of fact are binding on appeal if supported by the evidence. Coggins v. City of Asheville, 278 N.C. 428, 180 S.E.2d 149 (1971).

Trial judge's findings of fact in custody orders are binding on the appellate courts if supported by competent evidence. Hassell v. Means, 42 N.C. App. 524, 257 S.E.2d 123, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 568, 261 S.E.2d 122 (1979).

Where trial court failed to explicitly label findings of fact and conclusions of law, but sufficiently distinguished findings of fact from the conclusions of law so that the appellate court was able to determine how it applied the law to the facts, there was no prejudicial error. Freer v. Weinstein, 91 N.C. App. 138, 370 S.E.2d 860, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 476, 373 S.E.2d 863 (1988).

Findings and Conclusions Held Sufficiently Distinguishable. — Where trial court adopted clerk's very specific findings of fact and set forth its conclusions in a single paragraph, the court's findings of fact were distinguishable from its conclusions of law for the purposes of this rule. In re Estate of Francis, 94 N.C. App. 744, 381 S.E.2d 484, cert. denied, 325 N.C. 708, 388 S.E.2d 456 (1989), rev'd on other grounds, 327 N.C. 101, 394 S.E.2d 150 (1990).

Bare Conclusions Insufficient. — Although this rule requires that in all actions tried upon the facts without a jury, the court shall find the facts specially and state separately its conclusions of law, a bare conclusion such as the one in this case does not meet the requirements of subdivision (a)(1). Chapel Hill-Carrboro City Sch. Sys. v. Chavioux, 116 N.C. App. 131, 446 S.E.2d 612 (1994).

Finding of Ultimate Fact. — Trial court's finding that petitioner willfully refused without just cause or excuse to submit to a chemical analysis upon the request of the charging officer was an ultimate fact finding indicating that the trial court rejected all opposing inferences raised by petitioner's evidence that the refusal was not willful or was excused, and as such, the court's finding permitted adequate appellate review of the ultimate fact at issue. Tolbert v. Hiatt, 95 N.C. App. 380, 382 S.E.2d 453 (1989).

Order Setting Bond. — Where order setting an injunction bond at $20,000 contained no findings of fact or conclusions of law relating to the amount of the bond, and facts were in dispute, remand was necessary for proper determination of the amount of the security bond. Iverson v. TM One, Inc., 92 N.C. App. 161, 374 S.E.2d 160 (1988).

This rule does not require the manual drafting of judgment or oral dictation thereof. Johnson v. Johnson, 67 N.C. App. 250, 313 S.E.2d 162 (1984).

Findings on De Novo Review of Final Agency Decision. — Although a review of a final agency decision is de novo, the trial court is limited by § 136-134.1 in the scope of its review. However, this does not circumvent the requirements of subsection (a)(1) of this rule. Thus, although § 136-134.1 limits the scope of the findings of fact and conclusions of law which can be made, it does not limit the requirements for properly setting forth such findings and conclusions. Appalachian Poster Adv. Co. v. Harrington, 89 N.C. App. 476, 366 S.E.2d 705 (1988).

When the court's conclusions of law are unsupported by determinative facts, the case must be remanded to the trial court for further findings. Curd v. Winecoff, 88 N.C. App. 720, 364 S.E.2d 730 (1988).

The findings recited by the Disciplinary Committee in its order were inadequate to support its conclusion that the defendant's letter was threatening, because the Committee made no findings as to the exact nature of that threat nor as to the specific relationship between the defendant's "threatening letter" and the administration of justice. Thus the Committee's findings failed to conform to subdivision (a)(1) of this rule. North Carolina State Bar v. Beaman, 100 N.C. App. 677, 398 S.E.2d 68 (1990).

Deletion of Finding Without Reconsidering Conclusion Prejudicial to Defendant. — Where a judge initially found that defendant had committed adultery and then deleted that finding without reconsidering his conclusions, including the conclusion that plaintiff was entitled to permanent alimony, that process violated the sequence required by this rule to the prejudice of the defendant. Baker v. Baker, 102 N.C. App. 792, 404 S.E.2d 20 (1991).

III. FINDINGS AND CONCLUSIONS ON GRANT OR DENIAL OF MOTIONS, PRELIMINARY INJUNCTIONS, ETC.

Difference between this rule and the federal rule is that FRCP, Rule 52(a) specifically requires that in granting or refusing interlocutory injunctions the court shall similarly set forth the findings of fact and conclusions of law which constitute the grounds of its action. Pruitt v. Williams, 25 N.C. App. 376, 213 S.E.2d 369, appeal dismissed, 288 N.C. 368, 218 S.E.2d 348 (1975).

Findings and Conclusions Generally Not Required on Motions Absent Request. — If no request is made by the parties to a hearing on a motion, the trial judge is not required to find the facts upon which he bases his ruling, and in such case, it will be presumed that the judge, upon proper evidence, found facts sufficient to support his judgment. Allen v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 35 N.C. App. 267, 241 S.E.2d 123 (1978); Kolendo v. Kolendo, 36 N.C. App. 385, 243 S.E.2d 907 (1978); Brown v. Brown, 47 N.C. App. 323, 267 S.E.2d 345 (1980); City of Salisbury v. Kirk Realty Co., 48 N.C. App. 427, 268 S.E.2d 873 (1980).

Where no request was made that the trial judge make findings to support the denial of its motion, it was presumed that the judge made the determination based upon proper evidence. House Healers Restorations, Inc. v. Ball, 112 N.C. App. 783, 437 S.E.2d 383 (1993).

Unless Required by Rule § 1A-1, 41(b). — Under subsection (a)(2) of this rule, the trial judge need not make findings of fact and conclusions of law when making a decision on a motion unless they are requested by a party or required by § 1A-1, Rule 41(b). Fungaroli v. Fungaroli, 51 N.C. App. 363, 276 S.E.2d 521, cert. denied, 303 N.C. 314, 281 S.E.2d 651 (1981).

On a motion to dismiss a defendant's counterclaim under § 1A-1, Rule 41(b), where all the evidence is in, it is incumbent upon the judge to consider and weigh it all and render judgment on the merits of the claim and counterclaim in the form directed by section (a) of this rule. Helms v. Rea, 282 N.C. 610, 194 S.E.2d 1 (1973).

Trial court's compliance with party's motion under subsection (a)(2) of this rule is mandatory. Andrews v. Peters, 75 N.C. App. 252, 330 S.E.2d 638, cert. denied, 315 N.C. 182, 337 S.E.2d 65 (1985), aff'd, 318 N.C. 133, 347 S.E.2d 409 (1986).

Discretion of Trial Judge Under Subsection (a)(2). — Under subsection (a)(2) of this rule, it is left to the discretion of the trial judge whether to make a finding of fact on the decision of a motion if a party does not choose to compel a finding through the simple mechanism of so requesting. Watkins v. Hellings, 321 N.C. 78, 361 S.E.2d 568 (1987).

Discretion of Court. — A court is not required to make findings of fact and conclusions of law when ruling on preliminary motions, but it has the discretion to do so; however, if a court does enter conclusions of law, they must be supported by adequate findings. Epps v. Duke Univ., Inc., 116 N.C. App. 305, 447 S.E.2d 444 (1994).

When Findings and Conclusions Are Required on Motion to Dismiss. — The trial court is required to make findings of fact and conclusions of law on a motion to dismiss only when required by statute or requested by a party. Sherwood v. Sherwood, 29 N.C. App. 112, 223 S.E.2d 509 (1976).

Additional Findings of Fact Necessary. — Given the defendant's motion specifically asking for findings of fact and conclusions of law on the decision of the plaintiff's motion for a new trial, the insufficient findings of fact in the order granting the motion, and the conflicting evidence in the record, additional findings of fact were essential to provide the appellate court with a basis for a meaningful review. Andrews v. Peters, 75 N.C. App. 252, 330 S.E.2d 638, cert. denied, 315 N.C. 182, 337 S.E.2d 65 (1985), aff'd, 318 N.C. 133, 347 S.E.2d 409 (1986).

In a hearing involving a motion for declaration of compliance, in which neither side requested findings of fact, the court did not have to find the facts specially. Horne v. Flack, 68 N.C. App. 749, 315 S.E.2d 539 (1984).

Trial judge is not required to make findings and conclusions with respect to an interlocutory order that is not appealable, such as is the case with the denial of a motion to dismiss under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6). O'Neill v. Southern Nat'l Bank, 40 N.C. App. 227, 252 S.E.2d 231 (1979).

Nor on Denial or Issuance of Preliminary Injunction. — There is no statute that requires the court to make findings of fact and conclusions of law in granting or denying a preliminary injunction under § 1A-1, Rule 65. Hence, absent a request by a party that the court make findings of fact and conclusions of law, the court is required to state only the reasons for its issuance. Pruitt v. Williams, 25 N.C. App. 376, 213 S.E.2d 369, appeal dismissed, 288 N.C. 368, 218 S.E.2d 348 (1975).

It is not part of the function of the court on a motion for summary judgment to make findings of fact and conclusions of law. Marshall v. Keaveny, 38 N.C. App. 644, 248 S.E.2d 750 (1978).

A trial judge is not required to make finding of fact and conclusions of law in determining a motion for summary judgment, and if he does make some, they are disregarded on appeal. Mosley v. National Fin. Co., 36 N.C. App. 109, 243 S.E.2d 145, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 467, 246 S.E.2d 9 (1978), overruled on other grounds, Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987); White v. Town of Emerald Isle, 82 N.C. App. 392, 346 S.E.2d 176, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 511, 349 S.E.2d 874 (1986).

The making of additional specific findings and separate conclusions on a motion for summary judgment is ill advised, since it would carry an unwarranted implication that a fact question was presented. Garrison v. Blakeney, 37 N.C. App. 73, 246 S.E.2d 144, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 646, 248 S.E.2d 251 (1978).

Subsection (a)(2) of this rule does not apply to the decision on a summary judgment motion, because if findings of fact are necessary to resolve an issue, summary judgment is improper. Stone v. Conder, 46 N.C. App. 190, 264 S.E.2d 760, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 105 (1980).

But Findings and Conclusions Do Not Invalidate Summary Judgment. — Subsection (a)(2) of this rule does not apply to the decision on a summary judgment motion, because if findings of fact are necessary to resolve an issue, summary judgment is improper. However, such findings and conclusions do not render a summary judgment void or voidable and may be helpful, if the facts are not at issue and support the judgment. Mosley v. National Fin. Co., 36 N.C. App. 109, 243 S.E.2d 145, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 467, 246 S.E.2d 9 (1978), overruled on other grounds, Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987); White v. Town of Emerald Isle, 82 N.C. App. 392, 346 S.E.2d 176, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 511, 349 S.E.2d 874 (1986).

Consent Judgment. — A consent judgment is merely a recital of the parties' agreement and not an adjudication of rights. This type of judgment need not contain findings of fact and conclusions of law because the judge merely sanctions the agreement of the parties. In re Estate of Peebles, 118 N.C. App. 296, 454 S.E.2d 854 (1995).

Findings Not Required Under § 1A-1, Rule 37(c). — Section 1A-1, Rule 37(c), relating to expenses on failure to make admissions on discovery, does not require the trial court to make negative findings of fact with respect to the four exceptions therein, and where neither party made such a request of the trial judge, under this rule it would be presumed that the court on proper evidence found facts to support its judgment. Watkins v. Hellings, 321 N.C. 78, 361 S.E.2d 568 (1987).

In ruling on a motion for a new trial under § 1A-1, Rule 59(a), absent a specific request made pursuant to subsection (a)(2) of this rule, a trial court is not required to either state the reasons for its decision or make findings of fact showing those reasons. Strickland v. Jacobs, 88 N.C. App. 397, 363 S.E.2d 229 (1988).

When the trial court grants or denies a motion for a new trial without making findings of fact, appellate review is limited to determining whether the record indicates that the ruling amounts to a manifest abuse of discretion. Strickland v. Jacobs, 88 N.C. App. 397, 363 S.E.2d 229 (1988).

There may be cases where it would be helpful for the court to set out in summary judgment undisputed facts upon which judgment is based, but this procedure would rarely be helpful or necessary and should be used sparingly. When used, the court should be careful to note that it is stating the undisputed facts. They should not be referred to as findings. Garrison v. Blakeney, 37 N.C. App. 73, 246 S.E.2d 144, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 646, 248 S.E.2d 251 (1978).

Findings in Action Involving Temporary Restraining Order Not Binding on Review. — In cases involving a temporary rather than a permanent restraining order, the court's findings of fact are not binding on the appellate court, which may make its own findings. Coggins v. City of Asheville, 278 N.C. 428, 180 S.E.2d 149 (1971).

Presumption Applicable When Findings and Conclusions Are Not Required. — When the trial court is not required to find facts and make conclusions of law and does not do so, it is presumed that the court on proper evidence found facts to support its judgment. Sherwood v. Sherwood, 29 N.C. App. 112, 223 S.E.2d 509 (1976); Hankins v. Somers, 39 N.C. App. 617, 251 S.E.2d 640, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 300, 254 S.E.2d 920 (1979); Fungaroli v. Fungaroli, 51 N.C. App. 363, 276 S.E.2d 521, cert. denied, 303 N.C. 314, 281 S.E.2d 651 (1981).

This rule does not apply in awarding alimony pendente lite. Peoples v. Peoples, 10 N.C. App. 402, 179 S.E.2d 138 (1971).

And Findings of Fact Are Required upon Application for Alimony Pendente Lite. — The provision of subsection (a)(2) of this rule that the trial judge is not required to make findings of fact unless requested to do so by a party does not abrogate the specific requirement of § 50-16.8, prior to the 1995 amendment, that the trial judge shall make findings of fact upon an application for alimony pendent lite, since the Rules of Civil Procedure are of general application and do not abrogate the requirements of a statute of more specificity. Hatcher v. Hatcher, 7 N.C. App. 562, 173 S.E.2d 33 (1970).

While it is true that section (a) of this rule does not apply in proceedings to determine the amount of alimony pendent lite, the fact-finding requirements of § 50-16.8, prior to the 1995 amendment, are no less stringent than those required by section (a) of this rule. Quick v.

Quick, 305 N.C. 446, 290 S.E.2d 653 (1982).

Court's Decision Held Judgment on Merits Rather Than Dismissal. — Although the court allowed defendant's motion to dismiss, where it made findings of fact in its judgment as provided in this rule, and concluded and adjudged that plaintiffs were not entitled to recover anything from the defendants, the effect of the court's action was to enter judgment on the merits rather than to dismiss the case. Gurtis v. City of Sanford, 18 N.C. App. 543, 197 S.E.2d 584 (1973).

Additional Findings of Fact Necessary. — Given the defendant's motion specifically asking for findings of fact and conclusions of law on the decision of the plaintiff's motion for a new trial, the insufficient findings of fact in the order granting the motion, and the conflicting evidence in the record, additional findings of fact were essential to provide the appellate court with a basis for a meaningful review. Andrews v. Peters, 75 N.C. App. 252, 330 S.E.2d 638, cert. denied, 315 N.C. 182, 337 S.E.2d 65 (1985), aff'd, 318 N.C. 133, 347 S.E.2d 409 (1986).

IV. AMENDMENT.

The primary purpose of section (b) of this rule is to enable the appellate court to obtain a correct understanding of the factual issues determined by the trial court. Parrish v. Cole, 38 N.C. App. 691, 248 S.E.2d 878 (1978).

Section (b) of this rule mirrors FRCP, Rule 52(b); thus federal court decisions are pertinent. Parrish v. Cole, 38 N.C. App. 691, 248 S.E.2d 878 (1978).

Section (b) Motion Not Barred by Notice of Appeal. — Although the general rule has been that a timely notice of appeal removes jurisdiction from the trial court and places it in the appellate court, a notice of appeal will not bar a party from making a timely motion pursuant to section (b) of this rule. Parrish v. Cole, 38 N.C. App. 691, 248 S.E.2d 878 (1978).

As Defendant Is Not Prejudiced Thereby. — The rule that a timely motion under section (b) of this rule will be allowed despite a prior notice of appeal does not prejudice a defendant because he does not lose his right of appeal, as N.C.R.A.P., Rule 3(c), provides that a motion pursuant to section (b) of this rule tolls the 10-day period for notice of appeal. Parrish v. Cole, 38 N.C. App. 691, 248 S.E.2d 878 (1978).

Section (b) Inapplicable to Interlocutory Orders. — Section (b) of this rule concerns amendments to the findings and conclusions relating to a final judgment, and has no application with respect to interlocutory orders where findings and conclusions are neither made nor required. O'Neill v. Southern Nat'l Bank, 40 N.C. App. 227, 252 S.E.2d 231 (1979).

Jurisdiction of Trial Court. — The trial court is not divested of jurisdiction to hear and rule on a motion under section (b) of this rule, even though notice of appeal has been given. York v. Taylor, 79 N.C. App. 653, 339 S.E.2d 830 (1986).

Where notice of appeal from default judgment for defendants with respect to plaintiff's claim and defendants' counter-claim against plaintiff was filed at the same time as plaintiff's motion under section (b) of this rule for amended and additional findings of fact and his Rule 60(b) motion for relief from judgment under § 1A-1, Rule 60(b), under the circumstances of the case the trial court had jurisdiction to rule on plaintiff's motion under § 1A-1, Rule 60(b). York v. Taylor, 79 N.C. App. 653, 339 S.E.2d 830 (1986).

Refusal to Consider Affidavit After Hearing on Motion to Amend. — In action for modification of child custody and child support, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in refusing to consider the affidavit of the child, where the affidavit was offered after defendant's motion to amend the judgment under section (b) of this section had been heard and without notice to plaintiff, and defendant sought only to amend the judgment based on the insufficiency of the evidence already offered and errors of law which occurred during trial under § 1A-1, Rule 59(a)(7) and (a)(8). Payne v. Payne, 91 N.C. App. 71, 370 S.E.2d 428 (1988).

V. REVIEW ON APPEAL.

Section (c) of this rule is nearly identical to FRCP, Rule 52(b), and the court may therefore turn to the federal courts' interpretation of that rule for guidance. Whitaker v. Earnhardt, 289 N.C. 260, 221 S.E.2d 316 (1976).

Standard of Review. — Where a trial court sitting without a jury makes findings of fact, the sufficiency of those facts to support the judgment may be raised on appeal. The standard of review for those findings is whether any competent evidence exists in the record to support them. Hollerbach v. Hollerback, 90 N.C. App. 384, 368 S.E.2d 413 (1988).

Review Without Excepting to Findings at Trial. — Section (c) of this rule allows a party to seek appellate review on the question of whether the evidence supported the findings of fact without excepting at trial to the judge's findings, but in the record on appeal it is incumbent upon appellant to assign error so as to outline his objections on appeal. Sharpe v. Park Newspapers of Lumberton, Inc., 317 N.C. 579, 347 S.E.2d 25 (1986).

Review Even Where Defendant Failed to Request Specific Findings. — The court's failure to make specific findings and any miscalculation in the findings were reviewable under this rule on appeal despite failure of defendant to request specific or different findings. Davis v. Taylor, 81 N.C. App. 42, 344 S.E.2d 19, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 414, 349 S.E.2d 593 (1986).

VI. DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW.

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former §§ 1-184 and 1-185.

Guardian ad litem and his attorney may waive jury trial. Blades v. Spitzer, 252 N.C. 207, 113 S.E.2d 315 (1960).

Waiver by Consent to Pay Additur. — While it may be suggested that the practice of additur deprives a defendant of his constitutional right to a jury trial, guaranteed by N.C. Const., Art. I, § 19, the obvious answer is that the defendant can waive that right, which he does when he consents to pay the additur, since in this State the parties to a civil action have a right to waive a jury trial. Caudle v. Swanson, 248 N.C. 249, 103 S.E.2d 357 (1958).

Waiver of trial by jury invests the trial judge with the dual capacity of judge and juror. Hodges v. Hodges, 257 N.C. 774, 127 S.E.2d 567 (1962). See also, Knutton v. Cofield, 273 N.C. 355, 160 S.E.2d 29 (1968).

Waiver of a jury trial invests the trial judge with the dual capacity of judge and juror, and it is his duty to weigh the evidence, find the facts, and upon the conflicting inferences of causation of plaintiff's injuries, to draw the inferences; the ultimate issue is for him. Taney v. Brown, 262 N.C. 438, 137 S.E.2d 827 (1964).

Effect of submission to the judge is to invest him with the dual capacity of judge and juror. He is to hear the evidence and pass upon its competency and admissibility as judge, and determine its weight and sufficiency as juror. Everette v. D.O. Briggs Lumber Co., 250 N.C. 688, 110 S.E.2d 288 (1959).

Order Determining Issue of Fact Held Improper Absent Waiver of Jury Trial. — Where there was nothing in the record to indicate that petitioner and respondent waived their constitutional and statutory right to have the issue of fact joined on the pleadings tried by a jury, and there was no question of reference, judge had no authority to enter an order affirming the order of the assistant clerk of the superior court, which in effect was a determination by the judge of the issue of fact raised by the pleadings and a finding by him that money deposited in the office of the clerk of the superior court belonged to a decedent and that said money be distributed to the administrator c.t.a. of her last will and testament. In re Estate of Wallace, 267 N.C. 204, 147 S.E.2d 922 (1966).

The judge who tries an issue of fact is required to do three things: (1) To find the facts on the issue of fact submitted to him; (2) to declare the conclusions of law arising on the facts found by him; and (3) to adjudicate the rights of the parties accordingly. Woodard v. Mordecai, 234 N.C. 463, 67 S.E.2d 639 (1951); Bradham v. Robinson, 236 N.C. 589, 73 S.E.2d 555 (1952); Goldsboro v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 246 N.C. 101, 97 S.E.2d 486 (1957); Morehead v. Harris, 255 N.C. 130, 120 S.E.2d 425 (1961).

Where a jury trial is waived by the parties to a civil action, the judge who tries the case is required to do three things: (1) To find the facts on all issues of fact joined on the pleadings; (2) to declare the conclusions of law arising upon the facts found; and (3) to enter judgment accordingly. Watts v. Superintendent of Bldg. Inspection, 1 N.C. App. 292, 161 S.E.2d 210 (1968).

It is the duty of the trial judge to consider and weigh all competent evidence before him. Knutton v. Cofield, 273 N.C. 355, 160 S.E.2d 29 (1968).

When trial by jury is waived, it is the trial judge's right and duty to consider and weigh all the competent evidence before him, giving to it such probative value as in his sound discretion and opinion it is entitled to. Hodges v. Hodges, 257 N.C. 774, 127 S.E.2d 567 (1962).

And to Draw Reasonable Inferences. — When a trial by jury is waived, and where different reasonable inferences can be drawn from the evidence, the determination of which reasonable inferences shall be drawn is for the trial judge. Hodges v. Hodges, 257 N.C. 774, 127 S.E.2d 567 (1962).

The trial judge determines which inferences shall be drawn and which shall be rejected if different inferences may be drawn from the evidence. Knutton v. Cofield, 273 N.C. 355, 160 S.E.2d 29 (1968).

The trial judge passes upon the credibility of the witnesses, the weight to be given their testimony, and the reasonable inferences to be drawn therefrom. Knutton v. Cofield, 273 N.C. 355, 160 S.E.2d 29 (1968).

When trial by jury is waived, it is the trial judge's province to determine the credibility of the witnesses, the weight to be attached to their testimony, and the inferences legitimately to be drawn therefrom, in exactly the same sense that a jury should do in the trial of a case. Hodges v. Hodges, 257 N.C. 774, 127 S.E.2d 567 (1962).

There are two kinds of facts, ultimate facts and evidentiary facts. Watts v. Superintendent of Bldg. Inspection, 1 N.C. App. 292, 161 S.E.2d 210 (1968).

Ultimate facts are the final facts required to establish the plaintiff's cause of action or the defendant's defense. Watts v. Superintendent of Bldg. Inspection, 1 N.C. App. 292, 161 S.E.2d 210 (1968).

Evidentiary facts are those subsidiary facts required to prove the ultimate facts. Watts v. Superintendent of Bldg. Inspection, 1 N.C. App. 292, 161 S.E.2d 210 (1968).

The trial judge is required to find and state the ultimate facts only. Watts v. Superintendent of Bldg. Inspection, 1 N.C. App. 292, 161 S.E.2d 210 (1968).

Ultimate facts are the final facts required to establish the plaintiff's cause of action or the defendant's defense, while evidentiary facts are those subsidiary facts required to prove the ultimate facts. The trial judge is required to find and state the ultimate facts only. Woodard v. Mordecai, 234 N.C. 463, 67 S.E.2d 639 (1951). See also, St. George v. Hanson, 239 N.C. 259, 78 S.E.2d 885 (1954); Reid v. Johnston, 241 N.C. 201, 85 S.E.2d 114 (1954).

The trial judge is required to find and state the ultimate facts only, and not the evidentiary or subsidiary facts required to prove the ultimate facts. Bridges v. Jackson, 255 N.C. 333, 121 S.E.2d 542 (1961).

In a trial by the court under agreement of the parties, the court is required to find and state only the ultimate facts. McCallum v. Old Republic Life Ins. Co., 262 N.C. 375, 137 S.E.2d 164 (1964).

Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law to Be Stated Separately. — When trial by jury is waived and issues of fact are tried by the court, the court is required to give its decision with its findings of fact and conclusions of law stated separately. Knutton v. Cofield, 273 N.C. 355, 160 S.E.2d 29 (1968); Watts v. Superintendent of Bldg. Inspection, 1 N.C. App. 292, 161 S.E.2d 210 (1968).

A judge of the superior court, in passing upon a mixed question of law and fact, should state the facts found and the conclusions of law separately. Foushee v. Pattershall, 67 N.C. 453 (1872); Walker v. Walker, 204 N.C. 210, 167 S.E. 818 (1933). See also, Harrison v. Brown, 222 N.C. 610, 24 S.E.2d 470 (1943); Woodard v. Mordecai, 234 N.C. 463, 67 S.E.2d 639 (1951); Bradham v. Robinson, 236 N.C. 589, 73 S.E.2d 555 (1952).

Where the parties waive jury trial and agree to trial by the court, it is preferable that the court make separate findings of fact and conclusions of law rather than render a verdict on issues submitted to itself. Wynne v. Allen, 245 N.C. 421, 96 S.E.2d 422 (1957).

In Such a Manner as to Render Them Distinguishable. — The judge complies with the requirement that he state his findings of fact and conclusions of law separately if he separates the findings and the conclusions in such a manner as to render them distinguishable, no matter how the separation is effected. Woodard v. Mordecai, 234 N.C. 463, 67 S.E.2d 639 (1951); Watts v. Superintendent of Bldg. Inspection, 1 N.C. App. 292, 161 S.E.2d 210 (1968).

Judgment of Nonsuit as Sufficient Finding of Fact. — Where a cause was heard by the court by consent, its written judgment granting defendant's motion as of nonsuit was equivalent to a finding that all the evidence, considered in the light most favorable to plaintiffs, was insufficient to show facts entitling plaintiffs to recover on any issue raised by the pleadings, and was a sufficient finding of facts by the court. Home Real Estate Loan & Ins. Co. v. Town of Carolina Beach, 216 N.C. 778, 7 S.E.2d 13 (1940); Goldsboro v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 246 N.C. 101, 97 S.E.2d 486 (1957).

Compliance Sufficient. — Where the court fully and completely set out the facts found by him and rendered judgment thereon, an exception that the court did not state his findings of fact and conclusions of law separately could not be sustained, since the judgment constituted the court's conclusion of law on the facts found. Dailey v. Washington Nat'l Ins. Co., 208 N.C. 817, 182 S.E. 332 (1935).

The decision of the judge in writing, with a separate statement of his findings of fact and conclusions of law, is sufficient. Eley v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 165 N.C. 78, 80 S.E. 1064 (1914).

For case holding statements of facts found by court insufficient, see Jamison v. City of Charlotte, 239 N.C. 423, 79 S.E.2d 797 (1954).

Where the court does nothing more than indicate from what source facts may be gleaned, this is not a sufficient compliance with the requirement that the court's decision shall contain a statement of the facts found. Shore v. Norfolk Nat'l Bank of Commerce, 207 N.C. 798, 178 S.E. 572 (1935).

Verdict on Issues Submitted by Court to Itself. — Except in a small claim action, it is irregular for the court, in a trial by the court under agreement of the parties, to render a verdict on issues submitted to itself. Anderson v. Cashion, 265 N.C. 555, 144 S.E.2d 583 (1965).

Unless the action is a small claim, it is irregular for the court to render a verdict on issues submitted to itself. Sherrill v. Boyce, 265 N.C. 560, 144 S.E.2d 596 (1965).

Where jury trial is waived and the court acts both as judge and jury, it is irregular for the court to render a verdict on issues submitted to itself, but in the absence of objection and exception, a new trial will not be ordered for this cause if from the judgment it can be determined what the court found the ultimate facts to be and what the legal basis of the judgment was. Daniels v. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 258 N.C. 660, 129 S.E.2d 314 (1963).

Failure of judge to sign his findings of fact and incorporate them into the formal judgment rendered in the cause did not render judgment void where there was a substantial compliance with the statute. Bradham v.

Robinson, 236 N.C. 589, 73 S.E.2d 555 (1952).

Dictation of Findings to Court Reporter. — Where the judge dictated his findings to the court reporter and caused the reporter to transcribe them, this amounted to a finding of the facts by the judge in writing. Bradham v. Robinson, 236 N.C. 589, 73 S.E.2d 555 (1952).

As to trial of a case on an agreed statement of facts, see U Drive It Auto Co. v. Atlantic Fire Ins. Co., 239 N.C. 416, 80 S.E.2d 35 (1954); Competitor Liaison Bureau of NASCAR, Inc. v. Midkiff, 246 N.C. 409, 98 S.E.2d 468 (1957).

Court's Findings of Fact Have the Effect of a Jury Verdict. — Upon waiver of jury trial, the court's findings of fact have the force and effect of a verdict by jury. State Trust Co. v. M & J Fin. Corp., 238 N.C. 478, 78 S.E.2d 327 (1953); Textile Ins. Co. v. Lambeth, 250 N.C. 1, 108 S.E.2d 36 (1959); Sherrill v. Boyce, 265 N.C. 560, 144 S.E.2d 596 (1965); Knutton v. Cofield, 273 N.C. 355, 160 S.E.2d 29 (1968).

And Are Conclusive If Supported by Competent Evidence. — Where the parties consent to trial by the court without a jury, the findings of the court are as conclusive as a verdict of the jury if supported by competent evidence. Poole v. Gentry, 229 N.C. 266, 49 S.E.2d 464 (1948); Town of Burnsville v. Boone, 231 N.C. 577, 58 S.E.2d 351 (1950); Goldsboro v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 246 N.C. 101, 97 S.E.2d 486 (1957); Everette v. D.O. Briggs Lumber Co., 250 N.C. 688, 110 S.E.2d 288 (1959).

When a trial by jury has been waived by the parties, the judge's findings of fact are conclusive on appeal if there is evidence to support them. Yarborough v. Moore, 151 N.C. 116, 65 S.E. 763 (1909); Eley v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 165 N.C. 78, 80 S.E. 1064 (1914). See Fish v. Hanson, 223 N.C. 143, 25 S.E.2d 461 (1943); State Trust Co. v. M & J Fin. Corp., 238 N.C. 478, 78 S.E.2d 327 (1953); Priddy v. Kernersville Lumber Co., 258 N.C. 653, 129 S.E.2d 256 (1963).

Findings of fact by the court are conclusive on appeal if there is evidence to support them, even though the evidence might sustain a finding to the contrary. Knutton v. Cofield, 273 N.C. 355, 160 S.E.2d 29 (1968).

And Will Not Be Disturbed on Appeal. — Findings of fact by the court, when a jury trial has been waived by consent, will not be disturbed on appeal, if based upon competent evidence. Fish v. Hanson, 223 N.C. 143, 25 S.E.2d 461 (1943); Turnage Co. v. Morton, 240 N.C. 94, 81 S.E.2d 135 (1954); Reid v. Johnston, 241 N.C. 201, 85 S.E.2d 114 (1954).

Presumption That Findings Are Supported by Competent Evidence. — Where the parties waive a jury trial and there are no exceptions to the findings of fact by the judge, it will be presumed that they are supported by competent evidence, and they will be binding on appeal. Tanner v. Ervin, 250 N.C. 602, 109 S.E.2d 460 (1959), cert. denied, 361 U.S. 948, 80 S. Ct. 401, 4 L. Ed. 2d 381 (1960).

What Question Presented on Exception to Judgment Only. — An exception to a judgment rendered in a trial by the court, without exception to the evidence or the court's findings of fact, presents the sole question of whether the facts found support the judgment. Best v. Garris, 211 N.C. 305, 190 S.E. 221 (1937).

Question on Appeal of Judgment of Nonsuit. — Where, upon waiver of jury trial, the court made no specific findings of fact, but entered judgment of involuntary nonsuit, the only question presented was whether the evidence, taken in the light most favorable to plaintiff, would support findings of fact upon which plaintiff could recover. Shearin v. Lloyd, 246 N.C. 363, 98 S.E.2d 508 (1957); DeBruhl v. L. Harvey & Son Co., 250 N.C. 161, 108 S.E.2d 469 (1959); Oldham & Worth, Inc. v. Bratton, 263 N.C. 307, 139 S.E.2d 653 (1965).

Affirmation of Judgment on Failure to Except. — Where the court simply responded formally to the issues and directed judgment, to which no exception was taken, and no assignment of error was made, the judgment would be affirmed. Parks v. Davis, 98 N.C. 481, 4 S.E. 202 (1887).

Rule 53. Referees.

(a) Kinds of reference. —

(1) By Consent. — Any or all of the issues in an action may be referred upon the written consent of the parties except in actions to annul a marriage, actions for divorce, actions for divorce from bed and board, actions for alimony without the divorce or actions in which a ground of annulment or divorce is in issue.

(2) Compulsory. — Where the parties do not consent to a reference, the court may, upon the application of any party or on its own motion, order a reference in the following cases:

a. Where the trial of an issue requires the examination of a long or complicated account; in which case the referee may be directed to hear and decide the whole issue, or to report upon any specific question of fact involved therein.

b. Where the taking of an account is necessary for the information of the court before judgment, or for carrying a judgment or order into effect.

c. Where the case involves a complicated question of boundary, or requires a personal view of the premises.

d. Where a question of fact arises outside the pleadings, upon motion or otherwise, at any stage of the action.

(b) Jury trial. —

(1) Where the reference is by consent, the parties waive the right to have any of the issues within the scope of the reference passed on by a jury.

(2) A compulsory reference does not deprive any party of his right to a trial by jury, which right he may preserve by

a. Objecting to the order of compulsory reference at the time it is made, and

b. By filing specific exceptions to particular findings of fact made by the referee within 30 days after the referee files his report with the clerk of the court in which the action is pending, and

c. By formulating appropriate issues based upon the exceptions taken and demanding a jury trial upon such issues. Such issues shall be tendered at the same time the exceptions to the referee's report are filed. If there is a trial by jury upon any issue referred, the trial shall be only upon the evidence taken before the referee.

(c) Appointment. — The parties may agree in writing upon one or more persons not exceeding three, and a reference shall be ordered to such person or persons in appropriate cases. If the parties do not agree, the court shall appoint one or more referees, not exceeding three, but no person shall be appointed referee to whom all parties in the action object.

(d) Compensation. — The compensation to be allowed a referee shall be fixed by the court and charged in the bill of costs. After appointment of a referee, the court may from time to time order advancements by one or more of the parties of sums to be applied to the referee's compensation. Such advancements may be apportioned between the parties in such manner as the court sees fit. Advancements so made shall be taken into account in the final fixing of costs and such adjustments made as the court then deems proper.

(e) Powers. — The order of reference to the referee may specify or limit his powers and may direct him to report only upon particular issues or to do or perform particular acts or to receive and report evidence only and may fix the time and place for beginning and closing the hearings and for the filing of the referee's report. Subject to the specifications and limitations stated in the order, every referee has power to administer oaths in any proceeding before him, and has generally the power vested in a referee by law. The referee shall have the same power to grant adjournments and to allow amendments to pleadings and to the summons as the judge and upon the same terms and with like effect. The referee shall have the same power as the judge to preserve order and punish all violations thereof, to compel the attendance of witnesses before him by attachment, and to punish them as for contempt for nonattendance or for refusal to be sworn or to testify. The parties may procure the attendance of witnesses before the referee by the issuance and service of subpoenas as provided in Rule 45.

(f) Proceedings. —

(1) Meetings. — When a reference is made, the clerk shall forthwith furnish the referee with a copy of the order of reference. Upon receipt thereof unless the order of reference otherwise provides, the referee shall forthwith set a time and place for the first meeting of the parties or their attorneys to be held within 20 days after the date of the order of reference and shall notify the parties or their attorneys. It is the duty of the referee to proceed with all reasonable diligence. Any party, on notice to all other parties and the referee, may apply to the court for an order requiring the referee to expedite the proceedings and to make his report. If a party fails to appear at the time and place appointed, the referee may proceed ex parte, or, in his discretion, may adjourn the proceedings to a future day, giving notice to the absent party of the adjournment.

(2) Statement of Accounts. — When matters of accounting are in issue before the referee, he may prescribe the form in which the accounts shall be submitted and in any proper case may require or receive in evidence a statement by a certified public accountant or other qualified accountant who is called as a witness. Upon objection of a party to any of the items thus submitted or upon a showing that the form of statement is insufficient, the referee may require a different form of statement to be furnished, or the accounts of specific items thereof to be proved by oral examination of the accounting parties or upon written interrogatories or in such other manner as he directs.

(3) Testimony Reduced to Writing. — The testimony of all witnesses must be reduced to writing by the referee, or by someone acting under his direction and shall be filed in the cause and constitute a part of the record.

(g) Report. —

(1) Contents and Filing. — The referee shall prepare a report upon the matters submitted to him by the order of reference and shall include therein his decision on all matters so submitted. If required to make findings of fact and conclusions of law, he shall set them forth separately in the report. He shall file the report with the clerk of the court in which the action is pending and unless otherwise directed by the order of reference, shall file with it a transcript of the proceedings and of the evidence and the original exhibits. Before filing his report a referee may submit a draft thereof to counsel for all parties for the purpose of receiving their suggestions. The clerk shall forthwith mail to all parties notice of the filing.

(2) Exceptions and Review. — All or any part of the report may be excepted to by any party within 30 days from the filing of the report. Thereafter, and upon 10 days' notice to the other parties, any party may apply to the judge for action on the report. The judge after hearing may adopt, modify or reject the report in whole or in part, render judgment, or may remand the proceedings to the referee with instructions. No judgment may be rendered on any reference except by the judge. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1969, c. 895, s. 13.)

COMMENT

Comment to this Rule as Originally Enacted. — Generally, the rules leave the reference practice as it was. But some changes are made.

Section (a). — The Commission has included all of the grounds for compulsory reference found in former § 1-189 except that providing for reference in actions "of which the courts of equity . . . had exclusive jurisdiction" prior to 1868.

Section (b). — In keeping with prior practice, the rule affirms the right of jury trial in compulsory reference cases. It goes further, and spells out, as former §§ 1-188 to 1-195 did not, just how the right of jury trial is to be preserved. The method of preserving jury trial is essentially the same as that required by the case law. See Bartlett v. Hopkins, 235 N.C. 165, 69 S.E.2d 236 (1952).

Section (c). — This section essentially makes no change.

Section (d). — The Commission thought it would be useful to include, as former §§ 1-188 to 1-195 did not, some details in respect to the compensation of referees.

Section (e). — The first sentence specifying the allowable flexibility in the order of reference is new. So far as the powers of the referee are concerned, they remain essentially unchanged except as enlarged by section (f).

Section (f). — Former §§ 1-188 to 1-195 contained no equivalent to subsection (2) but the Commission believes the new authority will be useful.

Section (g). — Here, for purposes of clarity, the rules goes into more detail than did former §§ 1-188 to 1-195 but the main outlines of the prior practice are retained.

Comment to the 1969 amendment. — Section (a). — Rule 53(a) previously provided that all issues in an action may be referred upon the written consent of the parties except in actions to annul a marriage, and actions for divorce and separation.

There being no such action as an "action for divorce and separation," this ground has been deleted. The 1969 amendment added to the list: actions for divorce, actions for divorce from bed and board, actions for alimony without the divorce or actions in which a ground of annulment or divorce is in issue. This language now conforms to previous rules concerning reference in domestic relations cases.

CASE NOTES

I. In General.
II. Jury Trial.
III. Decisions under Prior Law.
A. In General.
B. Jury Trial.

I. IN GENERAL.

The word "may," as used in section (a) of this rule, connotes permissive and not mandatory power in the court to grant a reference. Green Hi-Win Farm, Inc. v. Neal, 83 N.C. App. 201, 349 S.E.2d 614 (1986), cert. denied, 319 N.C. 104, 353 S.E.2d 109 (1987).

To Whom Reference Is "Compulsory". — Once a court orders a reference, whether upon application by any party or on its own motion, it is "compulsory" only as to the parties to the processioning action. Green Hi-Win Farm, Inc. v. Neal, 83 N.C. App. 201, 349 S.E.2d 614 (1986), cert. denied, 319 N.C. 104, 353 S.E.2d 109 (1987).

The ordering of a reference is within the sound discretion of the court. Livermon v. Bridgett, 77 N.C. App. 533, 335 S.E.2d 753 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 391, 338 S.E.2d 880 (1986).

The ordering or refusal to order a compulsory reference is a matter within the discretion of the trial judge. Vick v. Vick, 80 N.C. App. 697, 343 S.E.2d 245, cert. denied, 317 N.C. 341, 346 S.E.2d 149 (1986).

Ordering Reference in Boundary Dispute Case. — Where the pleadings showed a potentially complicated boundary dispute in which one side claimed the boundaries were not as stated in the deeds but were marked by known and visible boundaries on the ground, and a view of the premises would, therefore, be helpful, there was no abuse of discretion by the trial court in ordering the reference. Livermon v. Bridgett, 77 N.C. App. 533, 335 S.E.2d 753 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 391, 338 S.E.2d 880 (1986).

The duty and powers of the referee are not inherent but are determined by the order of the judge. Godwin v. Clark, Godwin, Harris & Li, 40 N.C. App. 710, 253 S.E.2d 598, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 297 N.C. 698, 259 S.E.2d 295 (1979).

Generally, the powers of a referee are governed by the order of reference. Davis v. Davis, 58 N.C. App. 25, 293 S.E.2d 268, cert. denied, 307 N.C. 127, 297 S.E.2d 399 (1982).

The referee has authority to resolve issues not contained in the pleadings at any stage of the action. Fauchette v. Zimmerman, 79 N.C. App. 265, 338 S.E.2d 804 (1986).

Referee Not Required to Conduct Hearings, etc. — This rule does not require that the referee conduct hearings, examine witnesses under oath, admit exhibits into evidence, prepare a record, make definite findings of fact or conduct an audit before making the valuation. Godwin v. Clark, Godwin, Harris & Li, 40 N.C. App. 710, 253 S.E.2d 598, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 297 N.C. 698, 259 S.E.2d 295 (1979).

Consent Generally Necessary to Vacate Reference by Consent. — Once a reference has been ordered with the consent of both parties, the trial court may not revoke it absent the consent of all parties. Reeves v. Musgrove, 39 N.C. App. 43, 249 S.E.2d 455 (1978).

Either party has a right to have the order carried into effect and complied with by a full report of the referee, and further action by the court can only be had upon such report. Reeves v. Musgrove, 39 N.C. App. 43, 249 S.E.2d 455 (1978).

Trial of Issues on Failure of Report to Determine Them. — If the issues are presented to the referee, but his report does not determine them, the trial court may properly choose not to again submit the issues to a referee. It then becomes incumbent upon the trial court to try these issues. Reeves v. Musgrove, 39 N.C. App. 43, 249 S.E.2d 455 (1978).

Where the trial of an issue requires the examination of a complicated account the trial court may, upon its own motion, order a reference. Porter Bros. v. Jones, 11 N.C. App. 215, 181 S.E.2d 177 (1971).

What Constitutes a "Long Account". — There is no statutory or judicial definition of a long account. It is clear, however, that the exact words of the statute do not characterize a case for compulsory reference, and that a long account does not restrict the reference to an action on an account. Synco, Inc. v. Headen, 47 N.C. App. 109, 266 S.E.2d 715, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 238, 283 S.E.2d 135 (1980).

The referee in a compulsory reference is required to file a transcript of the evidence with his report, and the referee's notes summarizing the testimony of the witnesses in the hearing before him are not a proper substitute for the transcript of the evidence. Synco, Inc. v. Headen, 47 N.C. App. 109, 266 S.E.2d 715, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 238, 283 S.E.2d 135 (1980).

The parties were entitled to have all appropriate issues determined by the jury upon the report of the referee with the transcript of the evidence, unless the parties agreed that the report would be accompanied by the referee's notes without a transcript of the evidence. Synco, Inc. v. Headen, 47 N.C. App. 109, 266 S.E.2d 715, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 238, 283 S.E.2d 135 (1980).

Costs of Transcript. — It is the duty of the referee in a compulsory reference, with the assistance of the trial court if needed, to have the reporter who recorded the hearing testimony submit a copy or copies of the transcript of evidence at the hearing, and any controversy as to the cost of the transcript was not a private matter between the parties to the action but was a question for determination by the referee and the trial court. Synco, Inc. v. Headen, 47 N.C. App. 109, 266 S.E.2d 715, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 238, 283 S.E.2d 135 (1980).

In the absence of exceptions to the factual findings of a referee, such findings are conclusive, and where no exceptions are filed, the case is to be determined upon the facts as found by the referee. State ex rel. Gilchrist v. Hurley, 48 N.C. App. 433, 269 S.E.2d 646 (1980), cert. denied, 301 N.C. 720, 274 S.E.2d 233 (1981); State ex rel. Gilchrist v. Cogdill, 74 N.C. App. 133, 327 S.E.2d 647 (1985).

Review of Referee's Findings and Conclusions. — The unambiguous wording of subsection (g)(2) of this rule reveals the options available to a judge with respect to a report filed after a hearing; there is nothing in the plain language thereof which could infer a mandatory review of the referee's findings of fact and conclusions of law. However, when exceptions are taken to a referee's findings of fact and law, it is the duty of the judge to consider the evidence and give his own opinion and conclusion, both upon the facts and the law. Quate v. Caudle, 95 N.C. App. 80, 381 S.E.2d 842, cert. denied, 325 N.C. 709, 388 S.E.2d 462 (1989).

Where court affirmed in part and modified in part the referee's report, the modification clearly established that the presiding judge made a review of the referee's findings pursuant to subsection (g)(2) of this rule; therefore, defendant's argument to the contrary was without merit. Quate v. Caudle, 95 N.C. App. 80, 381 S.E.2d 842, cert. denied, 325 N.C. 709, 388 S.E.2d 462 (1989).

Only Judge Has Authority to Enter Judgment upon Reference. — Where the referee made findings of fact and conclusions of law and purported to enter a judgment against defendant, and the superior court judge confirmed the referee's report but did not enter a judgment on the approved findings and conclusions, the cause would be remanded to the superior court for entry of a proper judgment, since only the judge, and not the referee, has authority to enter judgment upon a reference. Rouse v. Wheeler, 17 N.C. App. 422, 194 S.E.2d 555 (1973).

When an appellate court finds a referee's report to be faulty and remands the case, the trial court may again order a reference or make its own findings. Reeves v. Musgrove, 39 N.C. App. 43, 249 S.E.2d 455 (1978).

Applied in Davis v. Hall, 80 N.C. App. 532, 342 S.E.2d 576 (1986).

Quoted in Crutchley v. Crutchley, 301 N.C. 518, 293 S.E.2d 793 (1982).

Cited in Dawson v. Sugg, 32 N.C. App. 650, 233 S.E.2d 639 (1977); Brown v. Brown, 112 N.C. App. 15, 434 S.E.2d 873 (1993); Sharp v. Gulley, 120 N.C. App. 878, 463 S.E.2d 577 (1995).

II. JURY TRIAL.

A compulsory reference does not deprive one of the right to trial by jury. — Resort Dev. Co. v. Phillips, 9 N.C. App. 158, 175 S.E.2d 782 (1970), modified on other grounds, 278 N.C. 69, 178 S.E.2d 813 (1971).

A compulsory reference, under provisions of former § 1-189, did not deprive either party of his constitutional right to a trial by jury of the issues of fact arising on the pleadings, but such trial was only upon the written evidence taken before the referee. Resort Dev. Co. v. Phillips, 278 N.C. 69, 178 S.E.2d 813 (1971).

Subsection (b)(2) of this rule provides that a reference does not deprive a party of a jury trial and sets out the steps to be followed to preserve the right. Porter Bros. v. Jones, 11 N.C. App. 215, 181 S.E.2d 177 (1971).

Preservation of Right to Jury Trial. — When the referee's report is adverse to a party, that party may preserve his right to jury trial pursuant to section (b) of this rule. Fauchette v. Zimmerman, 79 N.C. App. 265, 338 S.E.2d 804 (1986).

Right to Jury Trial Only If Evidence Raises Fact Issue. — Although when a court orders a compulsory reference, a party preserves his right to trial by complying with the procedural steps outlined in this rule, the party is entitled to trial by jury only if the evidence before the referee was sufficient to raise an issue of fact. Fauchette v. Zimmerman, 79 N.C. App. 265, 338 S.E.2d 804 (1986).

Right to Jury Trial in Quiet Title Action. — In an action to quiet title to 48.7 acres of land, where evidence taken by referee raised factual issues regarding the respective parties' actual possession of the disputed land, which issues were material to a resolution of the case, it was for the jury to decide, under proper instructions, whether the acts shown by the evidence constituted open, notorious and adverse possession. Federal Paper Bd. Co. v. Hartsfield, 87 N.C. App. 667, 362 S.E.2d 169 (1987).

Failure to Formulate Appropriate Issues Based on Exceptions as Waiver of Jury Trial. — Having failed to formulate appropriate issues based upon the exceptions taken, defendants waived their right to jury trial. Porter Bros. v. Jones, 11 N.C. App. 215, 181 S.E.2d 177 (1971).

Defendants did not waive their right to jury trial on the true boundary line between the lands of the parties by failing to make exceptions to specified findings of fact by the referee where exceptions which defendants did make were sufficient to give plaintiff notice and to present the issue in dispute to the court. Mathias v. Brumsey, 27 N.C. App. 558, 219 S.E.2d 646 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 140, 220 S.E.2d 798 (1976).

III. DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW.

A. In General.

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former §§ 1-188 through 1-190, 1-192 and 1-195.

Effect on Common-Law Arbitration. — The provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure did not repeal the common-law practice of reference to arbitrators. Keener v. Goodson, 89 N.C. 273 (1883).

When Order of Reference Permitted. — No order of reference, either by consent or otherwise, should be permitted by the court until the pleadings are in and the parties are at issue. Crew v. Thompson, 266 N.C. 476, 146 S.E.2d 471 (1966).

Reference Does Not Deprive Court of Jurisdiction. — Sending a case to be tried by a referee does not deprive the court of its jurisdiction, and it can make any and all necessary orders therein pending trial before the referee. McNeill v. Lawton, 97 N.C. 16, 1 S.E. 493 (1887).

A referee has no inherent or original powers and can only do those things expressly enumerated, and such as he is authorized to do by the court which sends him the case. Jones v. Beaman, 117 N.C. 259, 23 S.E. 248 (1895).

Referee May Allow Amendments and Make New Parties. — The authority of the referee to allow amendments to pleadings and to make new parties was expressly given by former § 1-192. Sheffield v. Alexander, 194 N.C. 744, 140 S.E. 726 (1927), citing Koonce v. Pelletier, 115 N.C. 233, 20 S.E. 391 (1894); Blanton v. Bostic, 126 N.C. 418, 35 S.E. 1035 (1900); Rosenbacher & Bro. v. Martin, 170 N.C. 236, 86 S.E. 785 (1915).

A referee has power to admit new parties to an action. Perkins v. Berry, 103 N.C. 131, 9 S.E. 621 (1889).

But May Not Allow Filing of Answer Absent Consent. — While a referee may allow amendments to pleadings, he is not authorized to allow a defendant who has not previously done so to file an answer, except by consent. Jones v. Beaman, 117 N.C. 259, 23 S.E. 248 (1895).

Notice Held Ineffective to Bring Surety into Court. — A notice issued by a referee and served upon a surety on an administrator's bond to appear before him, no order having been made to make such surety a party, was not a legal process effective to bring him into court. Koonce v. Pelletier, 115 N.C. 233, 20 S.E. 391 (1894).

To review the action of the referee in permitting amendments to pleadings and the making of new parties, and to contend successfully on appeal that there was a misjoinder of parties and causes of action, it is required that the appellant should have excepted in apt time and have preserved his exceptions or they will not be considered on appeal. Sheffield v. Alexander, 194 N.C. 744, 140 S.E. 726 (1927).

Power to Enforce Rulings. — The referee has power to enforce obedience to the rulings on the trial of the issues before him, just as the court would have upon the trial before it. LaFontaine v. Southern Underwriters Ass'n, 83 N.C. 132 (1880).

What May Be Referred by Consent. — All or any of the issues in an action may be referred by consent of the parties. Lusk v. Clayton, 70 N.C. 184 (1874).

No Appeal from Decision as to Issues Referred by Consent. — Upon a consent reference to try a cause, the question as to whether all the issues raised by the pleadings are to be considered depends upon the extent of the agreement of the parties, and the finding of the trial court is conclusive. Barrett v. Henry, 85 N.C. 321 (1881).

Judge May Disregard Agreement to Refer. — The trial judge, in the exercise of a sound discretion, may disregard the agreement of parties that a reference shall be made. J. L. Roper Lumber Co. v. Elizabeth City Lumber Co., 137 N.C. 431, 49 S.E. 946 (1905).

Order of reference by consent entered of record is a sufficient compliance with the requirement that the consent be in writing. And when entered it must stand until a full report is made. White v. Utley, 86 N.C. 415 (1882).

The referee selected by the parties must remain in the discharge of his duties, unless with like consent another is substituted in his place, until the order has been fully executed and the final report made. Perry v. Tupper, 77 N.C. 413 (1877).

Setting Aside of Report Does Not Revoke Reference. — When for cause the referee's report is set aside, the order of reference is not thereby revoked; it continues, and a second trial may be had before the same referee, although a party may not consent to such a second trial. Flemming v. Roberts, 77 N.C. 415 (1877).

Consent Generally Necessary to Vacate Reference by Consent. — Where an action is once referred, the order of reference cannot be annulled except by the consent of all parties. Morisey v. Swinson, 104 N.C. 555, 10 S.E. 754 (1889), modified on rehearing, 106 N.C. 221, 10 S.E. 1103 (1890); Keystone Driller Co. v. Worth, 117 N.C. 515, 23 S.E. 427 (1895).

When the parties agree upon a reference, the consent continues until the order is complied with by a full report, and the judge cannot revoke it without the consent of both parties. Coburn v. Roanoke Land & Timber Corp., 257 N.C. 222, 125 S.E.2d 593 (1962).

Unless a sufficient cause therefor is made to appear. Patrick v. Richmond & D.R.R., 101 N.C. 602, 8 S.E. 172 (1888).

Motion for Compulsory Reference Must Be Timely. — A motion for a compulsory reference should be made in an action before the jury has been empaneled, or the rights of a party thereto will be considered as waived. Peyton v. Hamilton-Brown Shoe Co., 167 N.C. 250, 167 N.C. 280, 83 S.E. 487, 83 S.E. 487 (1914).

It is not error to refuse a compulsory reference, when the motion to refer is not made until after the close of the evidence. Hughes v. Boone, 102 N.C. 137, 9 S.E. 286 (1889).

The right of a party to move for compulsory reference is waived unless made before the jury has been empaneled, but the rule does not apply where reference is ordered by the court of its own motion. Shute v. Fisher, 270 N.C. 247, 154 S.E.2d 75 (1967).

The court has discretionary power to grant or refuse a compulsory reference, and while movant has the right to insist that the judge exercise his discretionary power and act on the motion, he has no legal right to demand that the court direct a reference. Veazey v. City of Durham, 231 N.C. 354, 57 S.E.2d 375 (1950).

The ordering or refusal to order a compulsory reference in an action which the court has authority to refer is a matter within the sound discretion of the court. Long v. Honeycutt, 268 N.C. 33, 149 S.E.2d 579 (1966).

Order of Reference Not to Be Set Aside Without Good Cause. — Once the order of reference is made, and particularly after the report has been filed, it cannot be set aside except for good and sufficient cause assigned and made to appear to the court. Coburn v. Roanoke Land & Timber Corp., 257 N.C. 222, 125 S.E.2d 593 (1962).

In order for one superior court judge to set aside an order of compulsory reference entered by another, the motion would have to go to the validity and regularity of the proceeding or some subsequent change of circumstances affecting the status of the case. Coburn v. Roanoke Land & Timber Corp., 257 N.C. 222, 125 S.E.2d 593 (1962).

Even when a report is set aside for cause, the order of reference is not thereby revoked; it continues. Coburn v. Roanoke Land & Timber Corp., 257 N.C. 222, 125 S.E.2d 593 (1962).

Court Held Without Authority to Set Aside Order of Reference. — Where the trial judge ordered a compulsory reference upon the ground that the complaint stated a long and involved account, and no exception was taken to the order by either party, the court was without authority to set aside the order of reference and submit the case to the jury when upon his rulings the referee committed error in excluding certain evidence materially bearing upon the controversy. American Trust Co. v. Jenkins, 196 N.C. 428, 146 S.E. 68 (1929).

Reference of Both Fact and Law Issues. — Under the provisions of former § 1-172, judge was authorized to order a compulsory reference as to all of the issues, both of fact and of law. Resort Dev. Co. v. Phillips, 3 N.C. App. 295, 164 S.E.2d 516 (1968).

Reference on All Issues Precedes Adjudication of Liability. — A compulsory reference to hear and determine all matters in controversy precedes any adjudication by the court of the liability of the parties. Governor ex rel. Trustees v. Lassiter, 83 N.C. 38 (1880).

But Complete Defense Should Be Decided First. Sloan v. McMahon, 85 N.C. 296 (1881); Commissioners of Iredell County v. White, 123 N.C. 534, 31 S.E. 670 (1898); Bank of Tarboro v. Fidelity & Deposit Co., 126 N.C. 320, 35 S.E. 588 (1900); Reynolds v. Morton, 205 N.C. 491, 171 S.E.2d 781 (1933); Graves v. Pritchett, 207 N.C. 518, 177 S.E. 641 (1934); Grimes v. County of Beaufort, 218 N.C. 164, 10 S.E.2d 640 (1940); Grady v. Parker, 230 N.C. 166, 52 S.E.2d 273 (1949).

Incomplete Defense Does Not Bar Reference. — A party to an action may not successfully object to a compulsory reference when the same is allowed by statute and the complaint states a good cause of action and no complete plea in bar to the entire cause is set up by him. Murchison Nat'l Bank v. McCormick, 192 N.C. 42, 133 S.E. 183 (1926).

Compulsory Reference Improvidently Entered Where Complete Bar Alleged. — Where a suit to set aside a deed to lands, an action for possession, and a petition for dower were consolidated, an allegation of the wife's adultery was in bar of the wife's right, and whether the compulsory order of reference was treated as one of consolidation and reference of the consolidated action or as a reference of each action and proceeding under one form, it was improvidently entered. Lee v. Thornton, 176 N.C. 208, 97 S.E. 23 (1918).

Waiver of Challenge to Order of Reference Entered Before Plea in Bar Passed On. — Defendants, by not excepting to the order of compulsory reference when made and by proceeding with trial before the referee, did not preserve the right to challenge the order upon the ground that it should not have been entered before an alleged plea of accord and satisfaction had been passed on, or any other plea in bar they may have alleged. Farmers Coop. Exch. v. Scott, 260 N.C. 81, 132 S.E.2d 161 (1963).

Compulsory Reference of One Cause of Action. — Although where several causes of action arising out of the same transaction or series of transactions are properly joined in the complaint, the court may not ordinarily order that one of them be referred to a referee, court's order of compulsory reference of one cause of action would be upheld where it appeared that the action involved a long account and that the controversy was so involved that it could not be readily presented to a jury, former § 1-189 being liberally construed to afford the salutary procedure therein provided. Fry v. Pomona Mills, Inc., 206 N.C. 768, 175 S.E. 156 (1934).

Direction of Mistrial and Ordering of Reference Upheld. — Where, in an action to impeach a former decree, it appeared that alleged expenditures for the benefit of a ward should be ascertained before final judgment, it was held not to be error in the court to direct a mistrial and order a reference. Sutton v. Schonwald, 80 N.C. 20 (1879).

Action on Administration Bond. — A plea in an answer to a complaint on an administration bond of "performance of the condition of the bond by payment to the next of kin" was good in substance, and an issue taken upon it could be the subject of a compulsory reference. Flack v. Dawson, 69 N.C. 42 (1873).

Suit by Creditor Against Executor. — In an action by a creditor against an executor, where the defendant denied the debt and also denied that he had assets, the issue as to the debt would be tried in the ordinary way; and if the debt was established, a reference would be had to ascertain the amount of the debts and their several classes, and upon the coming in of the report a judgment would be entered in favor of all the creditors who had proved their debts for such part of the fund as they might be entitled to. Heilig v. Foard, 64 N.C. 710 (1870).

Suit on Confessed Judgment. — A compulsory reference could not be ordered by the court in a suit on a judgment confessed by the defendants as executors before the Civil War, where the only matters of defense were payments made by them in Confederate currency during the war and alleged counterclaims for notes due from the plaintiffs to them as executors. Hall v. Craige, 65 N.C. 51 (1871).

Location of Dividing Line. — A compulsory reference may be ordered by the trial judge in an action involving the true location of a dividing line between the owners of adjoining lands, in an action of trespass and the wrongful cutting of timber, where the location of the line is complicated or requires a personal view of the premises. Waller v. Dudley, 194 N.C. 139, 138 S.E. 595 (1927).

A case involving a complicated question of boundary which required a personal view of the premises was a proper case for a compulsory reference. Coburn v. Roanoke Land & Timber Corp., 257 N.C. 222, 125 S.E.2d 593 (1962).

Processioning Proceeding. — A controversy by stipulation of the parties that boundary only was involved became, in effect, a processioning proceeding and was properly referred. Harrill v. Taylor, 247 N.C. 748, 102 S.E.2d 223 (1958).

Contract for Rent. — Where the question involved in an action was the amount of rent due under a contract placing the rental at not less than a certain monthly sum, with obligation of the lessee to pay more in accordance with what other tenants were paying in the locality for other stores, etc., of the same rental value, the question to be determined by the jury did not require a view of the premises entitling the party requesting it to a compulsory reference. Kearns v. Huff, 191 N.C. 593, 132 S.E. 566 (1926).

Action on Conditional Sales Contract. — In an action to recover a specified sum and interest alleged to be due and owing to plaintiff as the holder in due course of a conditional sales contract alleged to have been executed and delivered by defendant, in which action no equitable relief was sought, the lower court had no power to authorize a compulsory reference. Coin Mach. Acceptance Corp. v. Pillman, 235 N.C. 295, 69 S.E.2d 563 (1952).

Suit to Sell Corporation Assets. — Where a stockholder sued to compel corporation to sell certain lands and distribute the proceeds among the stockholders, and the corporation claimed that such lands should have been included in a conveyance previously made by it to another corporation but that they were omitted by mistake, the action was a proper case for a reference. Pinchback v. Bessemer Mining & Mfg. Co., 137 N.C. 171, 49 S.E. 106 (1904).

Action in ejectment in which defendants pleaded statutes of limitation was not subject to compulsory reference. Williams v. Robertson, 233 N.C. 309, 63 S.E.2d 632 (1951).

The taking of an account must be necessary, and the accounting taken should have some direct relation to the ultimate disposition of the case. Harrell v. Harrell, 253 N.C. 758, 117 S.E.2d 728 (1961).

What constitutes a "long account" must be determined upon the facts of each particular case, it not being necessary that the action be for an accounting, but sufficient if a long account is directly and not merely collaterally involved in the action. Fry v. Pomona Mills, Inc., 206 N.C. 768, 175 S.E. 156 (1934).

There is no statutory or judicial definition of a "long account," but a correct conclusion as to whether an account was "long" would depend upon the facts and circumstances of a given case. Dayton Rubber Mfg. Co. v. Horn, 203 N.C. 732, 167 S.E. 42 (1932).

Examination of Long Account Required. — Where the verdict of the jury established that plaintiff was entitled to commissions on the gross receipts of defendant store and a bonus on the increase of the total gross receipts over those of the same period of the preceding year, as extra compensation under his contract of employment, ascertainment of the amount required an examination of a long account, and the court was empowered to order a compulsory reference to determine such amount. Parker v. Helms, 231 N.C. 334, 56 S.E.2d 659 (1949).

Where action was instituted to recover for services rendered defendant county by plaintiff as an attorney, plaintiff alleging as a basis of recovery services rendered in a certain civil action and services rendered relating to 21 different transactions extending over a period of more than a year subsequent to the termination of the civil action, it could not be said as a matter of law that the cause of action did not require the consideration of a long account, and defendants' exception to the order of compulsory reference on this ground could not be sustained. Grimes v. County of Beaufort, 218 N.C. 164, 10 S.E.2d 640 (1940).

Where an action involved purchases on account over a period of years, it could not be said that the action did not require the examination of a long account. Farmers Coop. Exch. v. Scott, 260 N.C. 81, 132 S.E.2d 161 (1963).

To hear evidence requiring the examination of a long account involving the books and records of the defendant corporation, numerous calculations of interest, an examination of numerous exhibits, and the determination of the fair value of the stock of the corporation would be the equivalent of the examination of a long account which would justify the order of reference. Shute v. Fisher, 270 N.C. 247, 154 S.E.2d 75 (1967).

Long Account Not Involved. — A compulsory reference was not authorized on the ground that the trial required the examination of long accounts in an action instituted to recover on a promissory note or an account where the receipt of each and every payment alleged to have been made thereon was admitted. Where numerous payments on an indebtedness have been made, the case involves only a matter of computation of figures and has none of the elements of a long account with charges and discharges, as contemplated in the statute. Commercial Fin. Co. v. Culler, 236 N.C. 758, 73 S.E.2d 780 (1953). See also, Coin Mach. Acceptance Corp. v. Pillman, 235 N.C. 295, 69 S.E.2d 563 (1952).

An action on a note given to finance an automobile, in which all payments alleged by defendant were admitted by plaintiff, did not involve a long account with charges and discharges and was not subject to compulsory reference, notwithstanding further counterclaims for usury and damage for the mortgagee's alleged breach of his agreement to procure insurance on the car. Commercial Fin. Co. v. Culler, 236 N.C. 758, 73 S.E.2d 780 (1953).

Judgment Not Disturbed for Failure to Refer Long Account. — Where controversy involved the taking of a long account, it should have been referred, but where it was otherwise tried, without error or prejudice to the appellant, the judgment of the trial court would not be disturbed. Ragland v. Lassiter-Ragland, Inc., 174 N.C. 579, 94 S.E. 100 (1917).

Appointment of Referee by Court. — Where the parties fail to agree upon a referee, the court may appoint a referee, and such appointment will not be disturbed when only one of the parties objects. Shute v. Fisher, 270 N.C. 247, 154 S.E.2d 75 (1967).

Referee Cannot Be Appointed to Attend and Determine Rights at Meeting. — It is not contemplated that a referee be appointed to attend a meeting, such as the annual meeting of the members of an association, and there make determinations relating to the respective rights of contesting parties during the progress of such meeting. Crew v. Thompson, 266 N.C. 476, 146 S.E.2d 471 (1966).

When Nonsuit Allowed. — A plaintiff may take a nonsuit while the case is pending before a referee, if the case is one in which he is entitled to do so. McNeill v. Lawton, 97 N.C. 16, 1 S.E. 493 (1887).

In cases purely equitable in nature, if a reference for an account has been ordered and a report made, the plaintiff will not be allowed to take judgment of nonsuit. Boyle v. Stallings, 140 N.C. 524, 53 S.E. 346 (1906).

Referee's Duty to State Findings and Conclusions. — It is the duty of a referee to state positively and definitely all the facts constituting the grounds of action or defense, and not to leave to inference what is the precise fact intended to be found. Conclusions of law and fact must be stated separately; otherwise the appellate court cannot review the referee's conclusions of law, and the report of the referee will be set aside as being defective. State ex rel. Klutts v. McKenzie, 65 N.C. 102 (1871); Earp v. Richardson, 75 N.C. 84 (1876).

The referee should ordinarily enter his rulings on each objection to the evidence taken before him; but where the exceptions are very numerous and relate to a single ground of objection, it is a sufficient compliance with this rule if the referee incorporates in his report a general statement of his rulings sufficient to give the parties and the reviewing judge full opportunity to consider the referee's rulings on and findings from the evidence reported. Pack v. Katzin, 215 N.C. 233, 1 S.E.2d 566 (1939).

Remedy for Failure of Referee to Send Up Evidence. — Fact that the referee has not reported all the evidence is not a ground of exception. If all the evidence is not sent up, the remedy of the prejudiced party is by application to the judge for an order directing the referee to send up that which has been omitted. Perkins v. Berry, 103 N.C. 131, 9 S.E. 621 (1889).

It is error for the judge to pass upon exceptions to an unfinished report. White v. Utley, 86 N.C. 415 (1882).

Additional Matters Incorporated in Report Held Not Prejudicial. — The fact that the referee, in an action to determine title to land, in addition to entering findings of fact, conclusions of law and his decision, also incorporated in his report an analysis of the statement of contentions of the parties, a summary of the evidence relating to each contention, and his view of the law, was not prejudicial. McCormick v. Smith, 246 N.C. 425, 98 S.E.2d 448 (1957).

The referee's findings of fact and conclusions of law are not competent as evidence on trial of the issue raised by exceptions to the report. Cherry v. Andrews, 231 N.C. 261, 56 S.E.2d 703 (1949).

When Findings of Referee Are Conclusive. — On a reference without objection, the findings of the referee, when approved by the trial court, are conclusive on appeal, unless there is no evidence to support them or some error of law has been committed in the hearing of the cause. Williamson v. Spivey, 224 N.C. 311, 30 S.E.2d 46 (1944).

The findings of fact by a referee, adopted by the trial judge, are conclusive. Joyner v. Stancil, 108 N.C. 153, 12 S.E. 912 (1891). See also, Battle v. Mayo, 102 N.C. 413, 9 S.E. 384 (1889).

The findings of fact of the referee, approved by the judge, are conclusive on appeal if there is any competent evidence to support them. Morpul, Inc. v. Mayo Knitting Mill, 265 N.C. 257, 143 S.E.2d 707 (1965).

On a consent reference, findings of fact made by a referee, in the absence of exceptions thereto, are conclusive on the hearings in the superior court as they are on appeal to the Supreme Court. The findings to which no exceptions are entered become in effect facts agreed. Keith v. Silvia, 233 N.C. 328, 64 S.E.2d 178 (1951).

The findings of fact reported by a referee are presumed to be right unless shown to be wrong. If there is no evidence to support them, they will not be sustained. Green v. Jones, 78 N.C. 265 (1878).

Where reference is by consent, the referee's report has the effect of a special verdict. Battle v. Mayo, 102 N.C. 413, 9 S.E. 384 (1889).

Subject, however, to the right of either party, on notice, to move the court to review his report, to set it aside, to modify it or to confirm it. Barrett v. Henry, 85 N.C. 321 (1881).

A party moving for a reference to report the facts is not bound by the findings of the report as if a special verdict, and he is entitled to except to the report of the referee. Hardaway Contracting Co. v. Western Carolina Power Co., 195 N.C. 649, 143 S.E. 241 (1928).

Continuance of the case and allowance of time to file exceptions to the referee's report are matters within the discretion of the court. White v. Price, 237 N.C. 347, 75 S.E.2d 244 (1953).

Purpose of Exceptions Where Reference Is by Consent. — If the reference is by consent, the purpose of the exceptions is to bring the controversy into focus for the trial judge, who, in the exercise of his supervisory power may affirm, amend, modify, set aside, make additional findings, and confirm, in whole or in part, or disaffirm the report of a referee. This he may do, however, only in passing upon exceptions, for in the absence of exceptions to the factual findings of a referee, such findings are conclusive, and where no exceptions are filed, the case is to be determined upon the facts as found by the referee. Coburn v. Roanoke Land & Timber Corp., 257 N.C. 222, 125 S.E.2d 593 (1962).

The judge cannot affirm the report of the referee prior to the time for filing exceptions where there has been no waiver of the right to file them. Coburn v. Roanoke Land & Timber Corp., 257 N.C. 222, 125 S.E.2d 593 (1962).

Supervisory power of the trial judge over the referee's report is broad and comprehensive. Dumas v. Morrison, 175 N.C. 431, 95 S.E. 775 (1918).

In the exercise of its power the trial judge may recommit the report for the correction of errors and irregularities, or for more definite statement of facts or conclusions of law, and such order recommitting the report for such purpose is not appealable. Mills v. Apex Ins. & Realty Co., 196 N.C. 223, 145 S.E. 26 (1928), citing State ex rel. Commissioners v. Magnin, 85 N.C. 114 (1881); Lutz v. Cline, 89 N.C. 186 (1883); State ex rel. Robertson v. Jackson, 183 N.C. 695, 110 S.E. 593 (1922); Coleman v. McCullough, 190 N.C. 590, 130 S.E. 508 (1925); Carolina Mineral Co. v. Young, 211 N.C. 387, 190 S.E. 520 (1937).

Reference to Another Referee After Filing of Report Not Authorized. — Where a compulsory reference is made, and a report is filed containing findings of fact and conclusions of law, the trial judge may not refer the case to another referee with partial approval thereof for action upon the unapproved parts. Mills v. Apex Ins. & Realty Co., 196 N.C. 223, 145 S.E. 26 (1928).

The judge, in his discretion, may set aside a reference after the report is filed and proceed to try the case. Cummings v. Swepson, 124 N.C. 579, 32 S.E. 966 (1899).

The decision of the judge in revising the report of a referee is available as to questions of law, but not as to the findings of fact. Vaughan v. Lewellyn, 94 N.C. 472 (1886).

Judge has a wide latitude of discretion over the report of a referee, with power to review, modify, confirm in whole or in part, or set aside the report. Keith v. Silvia, 236 N.C. 293, 72 S.E.2d 686 (1952).

The report of the referee is under the control of the court, and the power of review is a broad one, as the court may set aside, modify, or confirm it in whole or in part. Terrell v. Terrell, 271 N.C. 95, 155 S.E.2d 511 (1967).

When an action came on to be heard on exceptions to a referee's report, the judge of the superior court had authority to affirm in whole or in part, amend, modify, or set aside the report of the referee, or he could make additional findings of fact and enter judgment on the report as amended by him. Hall v. City of Fayetteville, 248 N.C. 474, 103 S.E.2d 815 (1958).

The superior court, on exceptions taken to the referee's report, may affirm, set aside, make additional findings, modify, or disaffirm the report. Wallace v. Benner, 200 N.C. 124, 156 S.E. 795 (1931).

Upon appeal in a consent reference, the superior court has the power to confirm the findings of the referee in whole or in part, to set aside the findings in whole or part and to substitute other findings supported by the evidence. Ramsey v. Nebel, 226 N.C. 590, 39 S.E.2d 616 (1946).

But the judge does not have the power ex mero motu to vacate a report upon which no attack had been made by any of the parties; the authority must be exercised, if at all, in an orderly manner in accord with recognized rules of procedure. Coburn v. Roanoke Land & Timber Corp., 257 N.C. 222, 125 S.E.2d 593 (1962).

The judge of the superior court may affirm, amend, modify, set aside, confirm in whole or in part, or disaffirm the report of a referee, or he may make additional findings of fact and enter judgment on the report as thus amended. But this does not mean that the judge may, ex mero motu, vacate a report upon which no attack has been made by any of the parties. The authority must be exercised, if at all, in an orderly manner in accord with recognized rules of procedure. Keith v. Silvia, 233 N.C. 328, 64 S.E.2d 178 (1951).

Duty of Judge When Exceptions Are

Taken to Referee's Report. — When exceptions are taken to a referee's findings of fact and law, it is the duty of the judge to consider the evidence and give his own opinion and conclusion, both upon the facts and the law. He is not permitted to do this in a perfunctory way, but he must deliberate and decide as in other cases, using his own faculties in ascertaining the truth, and forming his judgment as to fact and law. This is required not only as a check upon the referee and a safeguard against any possible error on his part, but because he cannot review the referee's findings in any other way. Terrell v. Terrell, 271 N.C. 95, 155 S.E.2d 511 (1967).

Filing of Exceptions Not Precluded by Motion for Voluntary Nonsuit. — Motion by plaintiff for voluntary nonsuit before the referee appointed to hear the cause did not preclude her from filing exceptions to the referee's report. Crowley v. McDougald, 241 N.C. 404, 85 S.E.2d 377 (1955).

Where a motion to remove the referee was made prior to the time his report was filed, and an appeal was taken from the granting of the motion, the superior court, upon the certification of the decision of the Supreme Court reversing the judgment, had discretionary power to allow the filing of exceptions to the report, even though the report was filed prior to the hearing of the motion for removal. Keith v. Silvia, 236 N.C. 293, 72 S.E.2d 686 (1952).

Premature Entry of Judgment. — Where the record disclosed that judgment confirming the report of a referee was entered at a term of court convening before the expiration of the 30-day period for filing exceptions, and the record disclosed no waiver of the right to file exceptions at any time during the 30-day period, the premature entry of judgment of confirmation was error appearing on the face of the record. Crowley v. McDougald, 241 N.C. 404, 85 S.E.2d 377 (1955).

Appeal Held Premature. — Where the jury found that a partnership existed, an appeal from the order of reference before judgment upon the report thereon was premature and had to be dismissed. The defendant should have noted his exception and upon the coming in of the report and exceptions thereto should have brought up his appeal from the final judgment. Leroy v. Saliba, 182 N.C. 757, 108 S.E. 303 (1921).

There is no ground for exception on appeal unless the judge's action is not supported by sufficient evidence, or error has been committed in receiving or rejecting testimony upon which it is based. Caudell v. Blair, 254 N.C. 438, 119 S.E.2d 172 (1961).

Exceptions to the Action of the Trial Court. — Where an appeal is taken from the action of the trial court in passing upon exceptions to the report of a referee, exceptions should be taken and stated in the record to the rulings of the court which it is sought to have reviewed, and the case ought not to be sent to the appellate court to be heard only on the exceptions taken to the ruling of the referee. Traders' Nat'l Bank v. Lawrence Mfg. Co., 96 N.C. 298, 3 S.E. 363 (1887).

No Appeal Available from Order Recommitting Report. — Where the court orders a compulsory reference, an appeal does not lie from an order recommitting the report of the referee for the correction of errors and irregularities. State ex rel. Comm'rs v. Magnin, 85 N.C. 114 (1881).

The findings of fact of a referee approved by the trial judge cannot be reviewed upon appeal if supported by any competent evidence. Cummings v. Swepson, 124 N.C. 579, 32 S.E. 966 (1899); Anderson v. McRae, 211 N.C. 197, 189 S.E. 639 (1937); Dent v. English Mica Co., 212 N.C. 241, 193 S.E. 165 (1937); Holder v. Home Mtg. Co., 214 N.C. 128, 198 S.E. 589 (1938).

The appellate court has no power to review the conclusions of fact as found by the referee and sustained by the judge, unless it appears that such findings have no evidence to support them. Boyle v. Stallings, 140 N.C. 524, 53 S.E. 346 (1906); Lindsay v. Brawley, 226 N.C. 468, 38 S.E.2d 528 (1946).

Court's Action Not Ordinarily Disturbed on Appeal. — Upon the filing of the report of the referee in a consent reference, as well as in a compulsory one, the trial court has the power to affirm, amend, modify, set aside, make additional findings and confirm, in whole or in part, or disaffirm the report of the referee, and where the court has made additional findings and there is evidence to sustain them, the action of the court will be given the effect of a verdict of a jury and will not ordinarily be disturbed on appeal. Thigpen v. Farmers' Banking & Trust Co., 203 N.C. 291, 165 S.E. 720 (1932).

Absent Abuse. — The court retains the cause and its jurisdiction in every case of reference, with power to review and reverse the conclusions of law of the referee, and a discretion to modify or set aside the report, and its ruling in the latter respect is not reviewable unless it appears that such discretion has been abused. Cummings v. Swepson, 124 N.C. 579, 32 S.E. 966 (1899).

B. Jury Trial.

Reference by consent is a waiver of the right of trial by jury. Green v. Castlebury, 70 N.C. 20 (1874); In re Parker, 209 N.C. 693, 184 S.E. 532 (1936); Anderson v. McRae, 211 N.C. 197, 189 S.E. 639 (1937).

But Jury Trial Is Not Waived by Compulsory Reference. — By a compulsory reference the parties waive nothing, and are still entitled to a trial by jury on the issues as if no reference had been made. Green v. Castlebury, 70 N.C. 20 (1874); State ex rel. Carr v. Askew, 94 N.C. 194 (1886).

Compulsory reference does not deprive a party of the right to trial by jury. Resort Dev. Co. v. Phillips, 3 N.C. App. 295, 164 S.E.2d 516 (1968).

A compulsory reference does not deprive either party of his constitutional right to a trial by jury of the issues of fact arising on the pleadings, but such trial is only upon the written evidence taken before the referee. And the report of the referee, consisting of his findings of fact and conclusions of law, is incompetent as evidence before the jury. Moore v. Whitley, 234 N.C. 150, 66 S.E.2d 785 (1951). See also, Solon Lodge No. 9 Knights of Phythias Co. v. Ionic Lodge Free Ancient & Accepted Masons No. 72 Co., 245 N.C. 281, 95 S.E.2d 921 (1957).

And Either Party May Demand Jury Trial of the Issues. — In a case of a compulsory reference either party may, at some stage of the proceedings to be determined by the court, demand a trial by jury of the issues arising in the report of the referee. State ex rel. Armfield v. Brown, 70 N.C. 27 (1874).

Where a reference is by consent, the parties waive the right to have any of the issues of fact passed on by a jury. Where the reference is compulsory, either party has the right to have all issues of fact which arise on the pleadings submitted to a jury, but not the questions of fact which arise on exceptions to the findings of fact by the referee. State ex rel. Armfield v. Brown, 70 N.C. 27 (1874); State ex rel. Carr v. Askew, 94 N.C. 194 (1886).

Unless He Waives Such Right. — While a compulsory reference does not deprive either party of his constitutional right to trial by jury on the issues of fact arising on the pleadings, such right is waived by failure to follow the appropriate procedure. Simmons v. Lee, 230 N.C. 216, 53 S.E.2d 79 (1949).

A party to a compulsory reference waives his right to a jury trial by failing to take the proper steps to save it. Bartlett v. Hopkins, 235 N.C. 165, 69 S.E.2d 236 (1952).

In order to preserve the right to trial by jury in a compulsory reference, a party must object to the order of reference at the time it is made, file exceptions to particular findings of fact made by the referee, tender appropriate issues based on the facts pointed out by the exceptions and raised by the pleadings, and demand a jury trial on each of the issues thus tendered. Booker v. Highlands, 198 N.C. 282, 151 S.E. 635 (1930); Marshville Cotton Mills v. Maslin, 200 N.C. 328, 156 S.E. 484 (1931); Simmons v. Lee, 230 N.C. 216, 53 S.E.2d 79 (1949); Better Home Furn. Co. v. Baron, 243 N.C. 502, 91 S.E.2d 236 (1956).

In order to preserve his right to a jury trial in a compulsory reference where the referee's report is adverse to him, a party must comply with each of the following procedural requirements: 1) He must object to the order of compulsory reference at the time it is made; 2) he must file specific exceptions to particular findings of fact made by the referee within 30 days after the referee delivers his report to the clerk of the court in which the action is pending; 3) he must formulate appropriate issues of fact raised by the pleadings and based on the facts pointed out in his exceptions, and tender such issues with his exceptions to the referee's report; and 4) he must set forth in his exceptions to the referee's report a definite demand for a jury trial on each issue so tendered. Bartlett v. Hopkins, 235 N.C. 165, 69 S.E.2d 236 (1952).

A party duly and aptly excepting to an order of reference, and also to the admissions of evidence before the referee, and submitting issues, secures his right thereby to a trial by jury upon the issues presented by him. Brown v. Buchanan, 194 N.C. 675, 140 S.E. 749 (1927).

By objecting to the order of compulsory reference when entered, and by filing in apt time exceptions to particular findings of fact made by the referee, tendering issues and demanding a jury trial on each issue tendered, defendants complied with procedural requirements to preserve their right to a jury trial. Farmers Coop. Exch. v. Scott, 260 N.C. 81, 132 S.E.2d 161 (1963).

Where a party objects to a compulsory reference, makes proper exceptions to the findings of fact and conclusions of law of the referee, and tenders the issue of title raised by the pleadings, he has preserved his right to trial by jury. Moore v. Whitley, 234 N.C. 150, 66 S.E.2d 785 (1951).

By excepting to an order of court referring to a long account between the parties as determinative, a party may preserve his right to a trial by jury upon the evidence thus taken, unless he waives his right during the progress of the reference; and while an issue determinative of the action should first be tried before a reference is ordered, a party excepting to the order may not successfully insist thereon when the issue is to be determined solely by the reference. Green Sea Lumber Co. v. Pemberton, 188 N.C. 532, 125 S.E. 119 (1924).

In case of a compulsory reference a litigant can renew his demand for a jury trial by excepting to the report of the referee and pointing out the findings so excepted to as a basis for the issues. State ex rel. Wilson v. Featherstone, 120 N.C. 446, 27 S.E. 124 (1897).

An exception to the report of a referee must be specific. Battle v. Mayo, 102 N.C. 413, 9 S.E. 384 (1889).

An exception to the admission of evidence by a referee which is not specific, but is vague and indefinite in form, will not be considered.

Perkins v. Berry, 103 N.C. 131, 9 S.E. 621 (1889).

Exceptions to a referee's report made the basis of a demand for a trial by jury should be explicit enough for the opposing party to see clearly what the issue will be, so as to prepare to meet it with his evidence. State ex rel. Wilson v. Featherstone, 120 N.C. 446, 27 S.E. 124 (1897).

An exception, "The plaintiff excepts to such rulings adverse to it and appeals," is too general to be considered. Commissioners v. Erwin, 140 N.C. 193, 52 S.E. 785 (1905).

Controverted Facts Should Be Designated by Timely Exceptions. — To avail himself of the right to jury trial a litigant should, by exceptions made in apt time, distinctly designate the controverted facts that he demands shall thus be determined. Yelverton v. Coley, 101 N.C. 248, 7 S.E. 672 (1888).

Where a case is one properly subject to a compulsory reference, a party excepting to the order of reference is not entitled to have issues tendered upon the hearing of exceptions to the referee's report submitted to the jury when the issues do not arise upon the exceptions. Atlantic Joint Stock Land Bank v. Fisher, 206 N.C. 412, 173 S.E. 907 (1934).

Failure to object to an order of reference at the time it is made is a waiver of the right to a trial by jury. Belvin v. Raleigh Paper Co., 123 N.C. 138, 31 S.E. 655 (1898).

As Is Failure to Except to Referee's Findings. — The right to trial by jury in civil cases may be waived, and in reference cases the failure to except to the findings of the referee or properly to preserve the right to jury trial has been uniformly held to constitute a waiver. Chesson v. Kieckhefer Container Co., 223 N.C. 378, 26 S.E.2d 904 (1943).

With Sufficient Specificity. — Although a party has his objection to a compulsory reference entered in apt time, he may waive his right to a trial by jury by failing to assert it definitely and specifically in each exception to the referee's report. Keystone Driller Co. v. Worth, 117 N.C. 515, 23 S.E. 427 (1895).

Waiver by Failure to Demand Jury Trial in Excepting to Referee's Report. — Where a party makes no demand in his exceptions to the referee's report for a jury trial on the issues tendered by him, he waives his constitutional right to have a jury determine the controverted issues of fact. Bartlett v. Hopkins, 235 N.C. 165, 69 S.E.2d 236 (1952).

When Exception to Refusal of Jury Trial Untenable. — Even though a party to a compulsory reference by proper exceptions and tender of issues preserves his right to jury trial upon the written evidence taken before the referee, if such evidence is insufficient to raise issues of fact, exception to the refusal of a jury trial is untenable. Nantahala Power & Light Co. v. Horton, 249 N.C. 300, 106 S.E.2d 461 (1959).

Purpose of Reference and Exceptions Where Right to Jury Trial Is Reserved. — When the reference is compulsory and the parties have reserved their rights to a jury trial, the practical purpose of the reference and exceptions is to develop and specifically delimit the issues to be determined by a jury. Coburn v. Roanoke Land & Timber Corp., 257 N.C. 222, 125 S.E.2d 593 (1962).

Trial judge must act upon the report even in a compulsory reference where right to jury trial has been preserved. Coburn v. Roanoke Land & Timber Corp., 257 N.C. 222, 125 S.E.2d 593 (1962).

Submission of Issues to Jury in Passing on Exceptions. — It is not the duty of a judge, in passing on exceptions to a referee's report, to decide all questions of fact without a jury, but on the contrary, if the facts depend upon doubtful and conflicting testimony, he may cause issues to be framed and submitted to a jury for information. Maxwell v. Maxwell, 67 N.C. 383 (1872).

Article 7.

Judgment.

Rule 54. Judgments.

(a) Definition. — A judgment is either interlocutory or the final determination of the rights of the parties.

(b) Judgment upon multiple claims or involving multiple parties. — When more than one claim for relief is presented in an action, whether as a claim, counterclaim, crossclaim, or third-party claim, or when multiple parties are involved, the court may enter a final judgment as to one or more but fewer than all of the claims or parties only if there is no just reason for delay and it is so determined in the judgment. Such judgment shall then be subject to review by appeal or as otherwise provided by these rules or other statutes. In the absence of entry of such a final judgment, any order or other form of decision, however designated, which adjudicates fewer than all the claims or the rights and liabilities of fewer than all the parties shall not terminate the action as to any of the claims or parties and shall not then be subject to review either by appeal or otherwise except as expressly provided by these rules or other statutes. Similarly, in the absence of entry of such a final judgment, any order or other form of decision is subject to revision at any time before the entry of judgment adjudicating all the claims and the rights and liabilities of all the parties.

(c) Demand for judgment. — A judgment by default shall not be different in kind from or exceed in amount that prayed for in the demand for judgment. Except as to a party against whom a judgment is entered by default, every final judgment shall grant the relief to which the party in whose favor it is rendered is entitled, even if the party has not demanded such relief in his pleadings. (1967, c. 954, s. 1.)

COMMENT

Section (a). — This section carries forward the definition of a judgment formerly contained in § 1-208.

Section (b). — These rules, with their liberalized provisions for expanding the size of a lawsuit, make it highly desirable in the multi-party and multi-claim lawsuit that there be provision for expediting appeals, in certain instances, from rulings terminating the litigation in respect to fewer than all the parties or all the claims. Otherwise, it may well be, if the aggrieved party must delay his appeal until all parties and claims have been disposed of, that the delay will be intolerable. On the other hand, there may be cases which should be presented in their entirety to the appellate court even at the price of delaying one party or another.

In considering this section, it should be remembered that § 1-277 was left intact except as it is modified by this section. In other words, appeals will continue to lie only when a "party aggrieved" has been deprived of a "substantial right," or from a final judgment. The modification here is that when there is no just reason for delay and when there is an express determination to that effect, the unit to which the finality concept shall be applied is by this rule made a smaller one. Thus, if two claims are presented to the trial court and one of them is the subject of a disputed ruling, an appeal will lie if the ruling would have been appealable in an action involving that claim alone and if the judge makes the requisite determination.

Conversely, in the absence of a determination by the trial judge, it is clear that there can be no appellate review irrespective of the nature of the ruling of the trial court, unless elsewhere expressly authorized. Section 1-277 is not such an express authorization. Thus, it will be seen that in the absence of a determination by the trial judge, a lawyer can safely delay in prosecuting his appeal. When there is such a determination, the situation will not be as clear. There must be in addition either a final judgment or a ruling affecting a "substantial right" for an appeal to lie. When these conditions obtain has not heretofore been altogether clear, and will not be under these rules. The only course of safety will be to press for review.

Section (c). — This section is a restatement of prior law.

CASE NOTES

I. In General.
II. Judgment on Multiple Claims or Involving Multiple Parties.
III. Decisions under Prior Law.

I. IN GENERAL.

Purpose. — The purpose of subsection (c) is to provide plaintiff with whatever relief is supported by the complaint's factual allegations and proof at trial. Holloway v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 339 N.C. 338, 452 S.E.2d 233 (1994).

Final Judgment Defined. — A final judgment is one which disposes of the cause as to all the parties, leaving nothing to be judicially determined between them in the trial court. Hinson v. Hinson, 17 N.C. App. 505, 195 S.E.2d 98 (1973); Godley Auction Co. v. Myers, 40 N.C. App. 570, 253 S.E.2d 362 (1979); Bailey v. Gooding, 301 N.C. 205, 270 S.E.2d 431 (1980); Cunningham v. Brown, 51 N.C. App. 264, 276 S.E.2d 718 (1981); Beam v. Morrow, 77 N.C. App. 800, 336 S.E.2d 106 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 192, 341 S.E.2d 575 (1986).

A trial court cannot confer appeal status under subsection (b) by denominating its decision a "final judgment" if its ruling is not indeed such a judgment; the trial court's order denying insurance company's motion for summary judgment did not constitute a "final" judgment and was therefore not appealable. Cagle v. Teachy, 111 N.C. App. 244, 431 S.E.2d 801 (1993).

The denial of a motion for summary judgment is not a final judgment and is generally not immediately appealable even if the trial court has attempted to certify it for appeal under subsection (b). Knighten v. Barnhill Contracting Co., 122 N.C. App. 109, 468 S.E.2d 564 (1996).

Finality. — This rule indicates that finality with respect to parties and claims is a key aspect of a judgment as it relates to its entry and appealability. Stachlowski v. Stach, 328 N.C. 276, 401 S.E.2d 638 (1991).

The importance of finality to the timing of entry of judgment is apparent more from the interrelationship between this rule and § 1A-1, Rule 58 than from the express language of Rule 58 itself. The principal concern regarding finality is that all matters for determination be resolved. Stachlowski v. Stach, 328 N.C. 276, 401 S.E.2d 638 (1991).

Requirements of Rule. — This rule imposes three requirements on the court sitting as finder of fact: it must (1) find the facts on all issues joining the pleadings; (2) declare the conclusions of law arising from the facts found; and (3) enter judgment accordingly. Stachlowski v. Stach, 328 N.C. 276, 401 S.E.2d 638 (1991).

Interlocutory Order Defined. — An interlocutory order is one made during the pendency of an action, which does not dispose of the case, but leaves it for further action by the trial court in order to settle and determine the entire controversy. Hinson v. Hinson, 17 N.C. App. 505, 195 S.E.2d 98 (1973); Godley Auction Co. v. Myers, 40 N.C. App. 570, 253 S.E.2d 362 (1979); Bailey v. Gooding, 301 N.C. 205, 270 S.E.2d 431 (1980); Cunningham v. Brown, 51 N.C. App. 264, 276 S.E.2d 718 (1981).

Order requiring party to take actions "pending further orders of this court," was an interlocutory order, since it was made during the pendency of the action and did not dispose of the case in a final manner. Transtector Sys. v. Electric Supply, Inc., 113 N.C. App. 148, 437 S.E.2d 699 (1993).

Ruling on interlocutory nature of appeals is properly a matter for the appellate division, not the trial court. Since this often requires consideration of the merits, motions to dismiss appeals as being interlocutory should properly be filed after the record on appeal is filed in the appellate court. Estrada v. Jaques, 70 N.C. App. 627, 321 S.E.2d 240 (1984).

The appellate division possesses sufficient authority to dispose of interlocutory appeals which do not affect a substantial right by dismissal. It has express authority to do so on motion of the parties if the appeal is frivolous or taken solely for purposes of delay. Or it may exercise its general authority in response to motions filed under the general motions provision. Or the appellate division may dismiss upon its own motion as part of its general duty to apply the laws governing the right to appeal. Estrada v. Jaques, 70 N.C. App. 627, 321 S.E.2d 240 (1984).

Plaintiff in Unfair Trade Practices action had no right of immediate appeal from an interlocutory order dismissing her claim for treble damages. Simmons v. C.W. Myers Trading Post, Inc., 68 N.C. App. 511, 315 S.E.2d 75, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 85, 321 S.E.2d 898 (1984).

When Summary Judgment Is Immediately Appealable. — Where dismissal of an appeal of a summary judgment could result in two different trials on the same issues, thereby creating the possibility of inconsistent verdicts, a substantial right is prejudiced and the summary judgment is immediately appealable. Taylor v. Brinkman, 108 N.C. App. 767, 425

There are two avenues by which a party may immediately appeal an interlocutory order of judgment. First, if the order or judgment is final as to some but not all of the claims or parties, and the trial court certifies the case for appeal pursuant to this rule an immediate appeal may lie. Second, an appeal is permitted under §§ 1-277(a) and 7A-27(d)(1) if the trial court's decision deprives the appellant of a substantial right which would be lost absent immediate review. Tinch v. Video Indus. Servs., Inc., 124 N.C. App. 391, 477 S.E.2d 193 (1996), rev'd on other grounds, 347 N.C. 380, 493 S.E.2d 426 (1997).

There are two avenues by which an interlocutory judgment or order can be immediately appealed. First, if the order is final as to some but not all of the claims or parties and the trial court certifies there is no just reason to delay the appeal, and second, an interlocutory order can be immediately appealed under §§ 1-277(a) and 7A-27(d)(1) if the trial court's decision deprives the appellant of a substantial right which would be lost absent immediate review. Bartlett v. Jacobs, 124 N.C. App. 521, 477 S.E.2d 693 (1996); Romig v. Jefferson-Pilot Life Ins. Co., — N.C. App. —, 513 S.E.2d 598 (1999).

Relief under section (c) of this rule is always proper when it does not operate to the substantial prejudice of the opposing party. Such relief should, therefore, be denied when the relief demanded was not suggested or illuminated by the pleadings nor justified by the evidence adduced at trial. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Carter, 71 N.C. App. 118, 322 S.E.2d 180 (1984).

The order of an appellate court dismissing an appeal upon denying a petition for review is not a judgment; it is not a ruling on the merits of the rights or obligations of the parties, but is purely procedural in nature. Hunter v. City of Asheville, 80 N.C. App. 325, 341 S.E.2d 743 (1986).

The effective date of an annexation ordinance was July 11, 1983, the date the judgment of the Court of Appeals holding the ordinance to be valid was certified, and not December 6, 1983, the date of the Supreme Court's order dismissing plaintiffs' appeal and denying discretionary review of the judgment of the Court of Appeals, as the final judgment in the annexation case was the judgment of the Court of Appeals. Hunter v. City of Asheville, 80 N.C. App. 325, 341 S.E.2d 743 (1986).

Alternative Method to Appeal Interlocutory Orders. — An interlocutory order not appealable under subsection (b) may nevertheless be appealed pursuant to § 1-277 and § 7A-27(d) of the Rules of Civil Procedure which permit an appeal of an interlocutory order which (1) affects a substantial right, or (2) in effect determines the action and prevents a judgment from which appeal might be taken, or (3) discontinues the action, or (4) grants or refuses a new trial. Dalton Moran Shook, Inc. v. Pitt Dev. Co., 113 N.C. App. 707, 440 S.E.2d 585 (1994).

II. JUDGMENT ON MULTIPLE CLAIMS OR INVOLVING MULTIPLE PARTIES.

For history and background of section (b) of this rule, see Oestreicher v. American Nat'l Stores, Inc., 290 N.C. 118, 225 S.E.2d 797 (1976).

There is a significant difference between section (b) of this rule and FRCP, Rule 54(b), as there is no exception in the federal rule for a right to appeal under "other statutes." Oestreicher v. American Nat'l Stores, Inc., 290 N.C. 118, 225 S.E.2d 797 (1976).

This rule should be seen as a companion to other rules of procedure permitting liberal joinder of claims and parties, particularly § 1A-1, Rules 13, 14 and 17 through 24. Tridyn Indus., Inc. v. American Mut. Ins. Co., 296 N.C. 486, 251 S.E.2d 443 (1979).

Need for section (b) of this rule arose from increased opportunity for liberal joinder of claims and parties which the new Rules of Civil Procedure provided. Arnold v. Howard, 24 N.C. App. 255, 210 S.E.2d 492 (1974), disapproved on other grounds in Oestreicher v. American Nat'l Stores, Inc., 290 N.C. 118, 225 S.E.2d 797 (1976).

One of the purposes of this rule is to minimize fragmentary appeals. Wachovia Realty Invs. v. Housing, Inc., 28 N.C. App. 385, 221 S.E.2d 381 (1976), rev'd on other grounds, 292 N.C. 93, 232 S.E.2d 667 (1977).

The reason for §§ 1-277, 7A-27 and this rule is to prevent fragmentary, premature and unnecessary appeals, by permitting the trial divisions to have done with a case fully and finally before it is presented to the appellate division. Blue Ridge Sportcycle Co. v. Schroader, 53 N.C. App. 354, 280 S.E.2d 799 (1981).

Section (b) of this rule modifies the traditional notion that a case could not be appealed until the trial court had finally and entirely disposed of it all. Tridyn Indus., Inc. v. American Mut. Ins. Co., 296 N.C. 486, 251 S.E.2d 443 (1979).

The limitation under section (b) of this rule on appealability is not applicable where other statutes expressly provide otherwise. Oestreicher v. American Nat'l Stores, Inc., 290 N.C. 118, 225 S.E.2d 797 (1976).

"Other Statutes" Refers Particularly to §§ 1-277 and 7A-27(d). — Section (b) of this rule, where it refers to "other statutes," is speaking in particular of §§ 1-277 and 7A-27(d). Oestreicher v. American Nat'l Stores, Inc., 290 N.C. 118, 225 S.E.2d 797 (1976).

The General Assembly in section (b) of this rule used the words "as expressly provided by these rules or other statutes" in order to avoid any conflict between section (b) and §§ 1-277(a) and 7A-27(d). Oestreicher v. American Nat'l Stores, Inc., 290 N.C. 118, 225 S.E.2d 797 (1976).

The addition of the language "except as expressly provided by these rules or other statutes" in section (b) of this rule was clearly intended to except from the prohibition of review of nonfinal partial adjudications those orders or judgments which by virtue of §§ 1-277 and 7A-27(d) are reviewable despite their interlocutory nature. Newton v. Standard Fire Ins. Co., 291 N.C. 105, 229 S.E.2d 297 (1976).

The "other statutes" referred to by subsection (b) of this rule are § 1-227 and § 7A-27(d), which allow an immediate appeal from a judicial determination which deprives appellant of a substantial right which he would lose if the ruling is not reviewed on appeal before final judgment. Beam v. Morrow, 77 N.C. App. 800, 336 S.E.2d 106 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 192, 341 S.E.2d 575 (1986).

Section (b) of this rule and § 7A-27(c) do not absolutely bar appeals from other than final judgments. Estrada v. Jaques, 70 N.C. App. 627, 321 S.E.2d 240 (1984).

Right of Appeal Under §§ 1-277 and 7A-27(d) Not Restricted by Section (b) Requirements. — The 1967 General Assembly did not restrict the right of appeal provided by §§ 1-277 and 7A-27(d) by engrafting the requirements of section (b) of this rule upon them. Oestreicher v. American Nat'l Stores, Inc., 290 N.C. 118, 225 S.E.2d 797 (1976).

Where a party has a statutory right of appeal pursuant to §§ 1-277 or 7A-27, even from an interlocutory order, section (b) of this rule will never bar appeal, even though the order appealed from fails to find "no just reason for delay." Nasco Equip. Co. v. Mason, 291 N.C. 145, 229 S.E.2d 278 (1976).

Section (b) of this rule cannot limit an appellant's right to appeal when the decree is appealable under other statutory provisions, namely §§ 1-277 and 7A-27(d). Tridyn Indus., Inc. v. American Mut. Ins. Co., 296 N.C. 486, 251 S.E.2d 443 (1979); Bacon v. Leatherwood, 52 N.C. App. 587, 279 S.E.2d 86 (1981).

The Right to Appeal Is Available Through Two Channels. — This rule allows appeal if there has been a final judgment as to all of the claims and parties, or if the specific action of the trial court from which appeal is taken is final and the trial judge expressly determines that there is no just reason for delaying the appeal. The second channel to an appeal is by way of §§ 1-277 or 7A-27; an appeal will be permitted under these statutes if a substantial right would be affected by not allowing appeal before final judgment. Brown v. Brown, 77 N.C. App. 206, 334 S.E.2d 506 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 389, 338 S.E.2d 878 (1986).

An interlocutory order can be immediately appealed under this rule if the order is final as to some but not all of the claims or if the trial court's decision deprives the appellant of a substantial right which would be lost absent immediate review. First Atl. Mgt. Corp. v. Dunlea Realty Co., 131 N.C. App. 242, 507 S.E.2d 56 (1998).

An appeal of right from an interlocutory order lies: (1) where the order represents a final judgment as to one or more but fewer than all of the claims or parties and the trial court certifies in the judgment that there is no just reason to delay the appeal; and (2) where delaying the appeal will irreparably impair a substantial right of the party. Hudson-Cole Dev. Corp. v. Beemer, — N.C. App. —, 511 S.E.2d 309 (1999).

Determination of Fundamental Claim Immediately Appealable. — By ordering a former employee to assign a patent, the trial court effectively decided ownership of the patented process, and where this determination was fundamental to the disposition of the remaining claims, grant of summary judgment on the ownership claim was immediately appealable as affecting a substantial right. Liggett Group, Inc. v. Sunas, 113 N.C. App. 19, 437 S.E.2d 674 (1993).

Appeal Is Permitted Where a Substantial Right Would Be Affected. — Where the right to appeal is conferred by statute, i.e., where a substantial right of the parties would be affected if immediate appeal were not permitted under §§ 1-277 or 7A-27, the judgment is appealable whether it is final or interlocutory in nature. Equitable Leasing Corp. v. Myers, 46 N.C. App. 162, 265 S.E.2d 240 (1980).

To the extent that judgments as to one or more but fewer than all parties are determined by the appellate courts of this State to affect a "substantial right" of one of the litigants under §§ 1-277 and 7A-27(d), the procedure for trial court certification of such judgments as appealable, established in section (b) of this rule, is bypassed, and the appellate court is substituted as the true dispatcher of appeals. Equitable Leasing Corp. v. Myers, 46 N.C. App. 162, 265 S.E.2d 240, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 301 N.C. 92 (1980).

Actions by the trial court, if not final or if final but not properly certified by the trial judge pursuant to section (b) of this rule, are nonetheless immediately appealable if the denial of an immediate appeal would affect a substantial right and work an injury to the appellant. Harris v. DePencier, 52 N.C. App. 161, 278 S.E.2d 759 (1981).

Orders which are technically interlocutory may properly be appealed, regardless of lack of certification under section (b) of this rule, if they affect a substantial right. Estrada v. Jaques, 70 N.C. App. 627, 321 S.E.2d 240 (1984).

No hard and fast rules exist for determining which appeals affect a substantial right. Rather, such decisions usually require consideration of the facts of the particular case. Estrada v. Jaques, 70 N.C. App. 627, 321 S.E.2d 240 (1984).

Where a distinct possibility of inconsistent verdicts in separate trials had arisen, and the trial court's order allowing summary judgment therefore affected a substantial right, the denial of which would work an injury to the plaintiff if not corrected before an appeal from a final judgment, plaintiff's appeal was properly before the Court of Appeals. Perry v. Aycock, 68 N.C. App. 705, 315 S.E.2d 791 (1984).

Orders which are technically interlocutory may properly be appealed, regardless of lack of certification under section (b) of this rule, if they affect a substantial right. Estrada v. Jaques, 70 N.C. App. 627, 321 S.E.2d 240 (1984).

In determining the appealability of interlocutory orders a substantial right is a right which will be lost or irremediably adversely affected if the order is not reviewable before the final judgment. Jenkins v. Maintenance, Inc., 76 N.C. App. 110, 332 S.E.2d 90 (1985).

Interlocutory summary judgments in favor of third-party and fourth-party defendants in a negligence action were appealable as to the question of negligence, which presented common factual issues with the remaining claim of plaintiff against defendant, but not as to the issue of indemnity, which did not. Britt v. American Hoist & Derrick Co., 97 N.C. App. 442, 388 S.E.2d 613 (1990).

Trial judge's order that denial of immediate appeal would affect substantial right of plaintiffs was tantamount to certification that there was no just reason for delay, and accordingly the appeal was effectively certified and was therefore properly before the Court of Appeals. Smock v. Brantley, 76 N.C. App. 73, 331 S.E.2d 714 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 590, 341 S.E.2d 30 (1986).

Limitation on Substantial Right Exception to Certification. — The "substantial right" exception to certification under section (b) of this rule has been limited by the court to those situations where the substance of an appealing party's claim or defense would be reduced, or where the appealing party would incur some other direct injury, if the appeal were not heard prior to entry of a final judgment disposing of all of the claims of all of the parties. Nichols v. State Employees' Credit Union, 46 N.C. App. 294, 264 S.E.2d 793 (1980).

Finding That Ruling Affects Substantial Right Not Enough. — Court's ruling on a separation/property settlement agreement did not dispose of plaintiff's claims for equitable distribution and alimony, but only disposed of defendant's plea in bar to those claims; the court's ruling was thus interlocutory, and although the court's order stated that its ruling affected a substantial right and was a proper subject of immediate appeal, the court's order could not be certified as a final appealable order under section (b) of this rule. Garris v. Garris, 92 N.C. App. 467, 374 S.E.2d 638 (1988).

Section (b) of this rule does not purport to define a final judgment. It simply provides for (1) the entry of such a judgment as to fewer than all of the claims in a multiple claim or multiple party lawsuit, and (2) a procedure whereby such final judgments on one or more but fewer than all of the claims or parties are immediately appealable. Tridyn Indus., Inc. v. American Mut. Ins. Co., 296 N.C. 486, 251 S.E.2d 443 (1979).

Determining Whether Appeal Lies Absent Statutory Right Thereto. — Where there is no statutory right to appeal, the question is whether the judgment is in effect final as to all of the claims and parties. If so, the judgment is immediately appealable. If not, the next question must be whether the specific action of the trial court from which appeal is taken is final or interlocutory. If the court's action is interlocutory, no appeal will lie whether or not certified for appeal by the trial court. If the action is final as to fewer than all claims or the rights and liabilities of fewer than all parties, but has not been certified for appeal by the trial court under section (b) of this rule, no appeal will lie. On the other hand, an appeal from such a final judgment or order will be allowed if it is properly certified under the rule. Equitable Leasing Corp. v. Myers, 46 N.C. App. 162, 265 S.E.2d 240, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 301 N.C. 92 (1980).

Section (b) of this rule establishes the trial court as the "dispatcher" of appeals to the appellate division. Green v. Duke Power Co., 50 N.C. App. 646, 274 S.E.2d 889 (1981), aff'd, 305 N.C. 603, 290 S.E.2d 593 (1982). See also, Arnold v. Howard, 24 N.C. App. 255, 210 S.E.2d 492 (1974), disapproved on other grounds in Oestreicher v. American Nat'l Stores, Inc., 290 N.C. 118, 225 S.E.2d 797 (1976).

Finding of No Just Reason for Delay as Certification That Judgment is Final and Appealable. — By making the express determination in a judgment adjudicating fewer than all the claims or the rights and liabilities of fewer than all the parties that there is "no just reason for delay," the trial judge in effect certifies that the judgment is a final judgment under section (b) of this rule and subject to immediate appeal. Arnold v. Howard, 24 N.C. App. 255, 210 S.E.2d 492 (1974), disapproved on other grounds in Oestreicher v. American Nat'l Stores, Inc., 290 N.C. 118, 225 S.E.2d 797 (1976); Raynor v. Mutual of Omaha, 24 N.C. App. 573, 211 S.E.2d 458 (1975).

Trial judge cannot by denominating a decree a "final judgment" make it immediately appealable if it is not such a judgment. Tridyn Indus., Inc. v. American Mut. Ins. Co., 296 N.C. 486, 251 S.E.2d 443 (1979).

Certification under this rule by the trial court is reviewable by the appellate court because the trial court's denomination of its decree as a final judgment does not make it so. First Atl. Mgt. Corp. v. Dunlea Realty Co., 131 N.C. App. 242, 507 S.E.2d 56 (1998).

Signing of Appeal Entry Not Sufficient. — The signing of an appeal entry by the trial court cannot, in and of itself, be held to satisfy the affirmative act of certification required by section (b) of this rule. Equitable Leasing Corp. v. Myers, 46 N.C. App. 162, 265 S.E.2d 240, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 301 N.C. 92 (1980); Pasour v. Pierce, 46 N.C. App. 636, 265 S.E.2d 652 (1980).

Appeal from Judgment Adjudicating Fewer Than All Claims, Rights or Liabilities. — An appeal is subject to dismissal when the judgment from which the appeal is taken purportedly adjudicates fewer than all the claims or the rights and liabilities of fewer than all the parties and the trial court does not find that there was "no just reason for delay." Equitable Leasing Corp. v. Kingsmen Prods., Inc., 27 N.C. App. 661, 220 S.E.2d 95 (1975).

Attempted appeal from an order dismissing fewer than all of plaintiffs' claims is premature where the trial court did not find that there was no just reason for delay. Mozingo v. North Carolina Nat'l Bank, 27 N.C. App. 196, 218 S.E.2d 506 (1975).

Although the defendants' appeal was from an order which adjudicates fewer than all the claims or the rights and liabilities of fewer than all the parties, and was thus premature, the Court of Appeals chose to exercise its discretion to pass on the merits of the defendants' appeal. International Harvester Credit Corp. v. Bowman, 69 N.C. App. 217, 316 S.E.2d 619, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 493, 322 S.E.2d 556 (1984).

The fact that plaintiff waived her right to appeal the order granting summary judgment to one of three defendants in no way affected her statutory right to appeal from the final judgment, since although she could have appealed the entry of summary judgment as to that defendant, she was not required to do so. Ingle v. Allen, 71 N.C. App. 20, 321 S.E.2d 588 (1984), cert. denied, 313 N.C. 508, 329 S.E.2d 391 (1985).

Under section (b) of this rule, in the absence of a determination by the trial judge that there is no just reason for delay, there can be no appellate review of an order which adjudicates fewer than all the claims or the rights and liabilities of fewer than all the parties. Thompson v. Newman, 74 N.C. App. 597, 328 S.E.2d 597 (1985).

Entry of summary judgment for fewer than all defendants was not a final judgment and was not immediately appealable as no substantial right was involved and the trial court did not certify the appeal under subdivision (b) of this rule. Long v. Giles, 123 N.C. App. 150, 472 S.E.2d 374 (1996).

Finding of No Reason for Delay Not Enough. — While the trial judge found that there was no reason for delay in obtaining appellate review, a trial judge cannot by denominating his decree a "final judgment" make it immediately appealable under section (b) of this rule if it is not such a judgment. A finding that there is no just reason for delay under section (b) is not enough. The judgment must also be final. Pelican Watch v. United States Fire Ins. Co., 90 N.C. App. 140, 367 S.E.2d 351 (1988), rev'd on other grounds, 323 N.C. 700, 375 S.E.2d 161 (1989).

A judgment which creates the possibility of inconsistent verdicts on the same issue in different trials affects a substantial right. New Bern Assocs. v. Celotex Corp., 87 N.C. App. 65, 359 S.E.2d 481, cert. denied, 321 N.C. 297, 362 S.E.2d 782 (1987).

Avoiding separate trials of different issues does not qualify as a substantial right, but preventing separate trials of the same factual issues does constitute a substantial right. Hudson-Cole Dev. Corp. v. Beemer, — N.C. App. —, 511 S.E.2d 309 (1999).

Factors for Immediate Appealability of Judgment. — In order for a judgment in a multiple claim or multiple party action to be immediately appealable, the judgment must be (1) in effect final as to one or more of the claims or parties; and (2) certified for appeal by the trial judge. If the judgment is final as to one or more of the claims or parties but has not been certified for appeal by the trial court, no appeal will lie unless an immediate appeal is authorized by some other rule or statute, such as § 1-277 or § 7A-27. North Carolina R.R. v. City of Charlotte, 112 N.C. App. 762, 437 S.E.2d 393 (1993), appeal dismissed, review denied, 336 N.C. 608, 447 S.E.2d 397 (1994), cert. denied, 515 U.S. 1130, 115 S. Ct. 2554, 132 L. Ed. 2d 808 (1995).

Judgment Held Appealable. — Trial court's judgment dismissing plaintiffs' claims of punitive damages against all defendants and dismissing claims against former law partners for the acts of individual defendant in his capacity as executor of decedent's estate was immediately appealable, as plaintiffs had a substantial right to have all of their claims for relief tried at the same time before the same judge and jury. Shelton v. Fairley, 86 N.C. App. 147, 356 S.E.2d 917, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 634, 360 S.E.2d 94 (1987).

Where a bank, as third-party defendant, not only had an opportunity to participate in, but in fact did fully participate in the determination of third-party plaintiff's liability, and was bound by the judgment in favor of plaintiff entered against defendants as third-party plaintiffs, since the bank was bound by a judgment which affected its substantial rights, it was clearly an aggrieved party within the meaning of § 1-271.

Barker v. Agee, 326 N.C. 470, 389 S.E.2d 803 (1990).

A partial summary judgment was appealable under this section, where the trial court granted summary judgment as to the plaintiff's claim for unfair and deceptive trade practices and certified that there was no "just reason for delay in entering this order or the appeal therefrom." DKH Corp. v. Rankin-Patterson Oil Co., 348 N.C. 583, 500 S.E.2d 666 (1998).

Judgments Held Nonappealable. — Where judgment adjudicated the rights and liabilities of fewer than all the parties and contained no determination by the trial judge that there was no just reason for delay, and although the claims of the respective defendants against each other did not seem to affect the plaintiff's rights, the judgment was interlocutory and not appealable. Nytco Leasing, Inc. v. Dan-Cleve Corp., 25 N.C. App. 18, 212 S.E.2d 41, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 241, 216 S.E.2d 910 (1975).

Where order dismissing plaintiffs' claim against defendants and dismissing by consent counterclaim of defendants against plaintiffs adjudicated fewer than all the claims of all the parties and did not contain a determination by the trial judge that there was no just reason for delay in entering such order, the order was interlocutory and not appealable. Durham v. Creech, 25 N.C. App. 721, 214 S.E.2d 612 (1975).

Judgment dismissing plaintiff's claim, which adjudicated the rights and liabilities of fewer than all the parties and expressly retained jurisdiction for the purpose of adjudication with respect to defendants' counterclaim without providing "no just reason for delay," was interlocutory and not appealable. Rorie v. Blackwelder, 26 N.C. App. 195, 215 S.E.2d 397, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 243, 217 S.E.2d 666 (1975).

Where summary judgment dismissing the action as to two defendants adjudicated the rights and liabilities of fewer than all the parties and contained no determination by the trial judge that there was no just reason for delay, it was not a final judgment and therefore not appealable. Beach & Adams Bldrs., Inc. v. Felton, 27 N.C. App. 334, 219 S.E.2d 287 (1975). But see Oestreicher v. American Nat'l Stores, Inc., 290 N.C. 118, 225 S.E.2d 797 (1976).

Partial summary judgment orders, which established the negligence of defendant-administrator's decedent and the absence of contributory negligence or assumption of risk on the part of plaintiff, had the effect of fixing liability and retaining the cause for determination solely on the issue of damages, and were not immediately appealable, despite the trial court's recital that this was a final judgment and that there was no just reason for delay. Schuch v. Hoke, 82 N.C. App. 445, 346 S.E.2d 313 (1986).

There were no factual issues common to the claims determined by summary judgments or the claims remaining, so that no substantial right was affected and plaintiff was not entitled to interlocutory appeal of summary judgments, since plaintiff did not present identical factual issues creating the possibility of two trials on the same issue. Jarrell v. Coastal Emergency Servs. of Carolinas, Inc., 121 N.C. App. 198, 464 S.E.2d 720 (1995).

The denial of defendant's motion for stay did not dispose of any of the claims or parties, the trial court did not certify the case for immediate appeal under this rule, and defendants did not show that the trial court's decision deprived them of a substantial right which would be lost absent immediate review. Howerton v. Grace Hosp., 124 N.C. App. 199, 476 S.E.2d 440 (1996).

Order Denying Release of Escrow Funds Held Not Appealable. — The effect of an order denying the release of the funds held in escrow under § 58-36-25 was temporary and not permanent where the Commissioner's order only determined that the funds are not to be released now, and did not purport to determine who is entitled to the money; for these reasons, an appeal of the order was interlocutory and was not immediately appealable under either this rule or §§ 1-277 and 7A-27(d). State ex rel. Comm'r of Ins. v. North Carolina Rate Bureau, 102 N.C. App. 809, 403 S.E.2d 597 (1991).

Application of Section (b) in Case Involving Only Two Parties. — In a case involving only two parties it is important in applying section (b) of this rule to distinguish the true multiple claim case from the case in which only a single claim based on a single factual occurrence is asserted but in which various kinds of remedies may be sought. Tridyn Indus., Inc. v. American Mut. Ins. Co., 296 N.C. 486, 251 S.E.2d 443 (1979).

While a default judgment on a cross-claim may be reviewed immediately under § 1-277, it is not a "final judgment" until all claims made in the action are adjudicated, unless the court makes findings pursuant to section (b) of this rule that there is no just reason for delay and that the severed claim should be granted final judgment. American Imports, Inc. v. G.E. Employees W. Region Fed. Credit Union, 37 N.C. App. 121, 245 S.E.2d 798 (1978).

Joinder and restraining orders are in the nature of interlocutory orders, and are generally nonappealable unless some substantial right will be affected if the appeal is not immediately perfected. Guy v. Guy, 27 N.C. App. 343, 219 S.E.2d 291 (1975).

Grant of Summary Judgment Appealable Where Substantial Right Affected. —

There is a right of appeal under § 1-277 from an order granting summary judgment, notwithstanding the failure to meet the requirements for appeal under section (b) of this rule, where a substantial right is affected. Jones v. Clark, 36 N.C. App. 327, 244 S.E.2d 183 (1978).

Where summary judgment is allowed for fewer than all the defendants and the judgment does not contain a certification pursuant to section (b) of this rule that there is no just reason for delay, a plaintiff's appeal will be premature unless the order allowing summary judgment affects a substantial right. Clevenger v. Pride Trimble Corp., 96 N.C. App. 631, 386 S.E.2d 594 (1989).

Entry of summary judgment for a monetary sum against one of two defendants affected a "substantial right" of that defendant, and such judgment was therefore immediately appealable under §§ 1-277 and 7A-27, notwithstanding the absence of an express determination by the trial judge that there was "no just reason for delay." Equitable Leasing Corp. v. Myers, 46 N.C. App. 162, 265 S.E.2d 240, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 301 N.C. 92 (1980).

Entry of Summary Judgment on Two of Three Claims. — Where plaintiff's complaint alleged three causes of action, namely, breach of contract, punitive damages based on continuing fraud involved in the breach of contract, and anticipatory breach of contract, and defendant's summary judgment motion was allowed regarding plaintiff's claims for relief for punitive damages and for anticipatory breach of contract, but overruled as to breach of contract, plaintiff had a "substantial right" to have all three cases tried at the same time by the same judge and jury if the causes were not subject to summary judgment, and hence his appeal of the summary judgment should not have been dismissed. Oestreicher v. American Nat'l Stores, Inc., 290 N.C. 118, 225 S.E.2d 797 (1976).

Denial of Summary Judgment Only Appealable If Substantial Right Affected. — Denial of summary judgment is interlocutory in nature and not appealable under §§ 1-277 and 7A-27 unless a substantial right of one of the parties would be affected if the appeal were not heard prior to final judgment. Equitable Leasing Corp. v. Myers, 46 N.C. App. 162, 265 S.E.2d 240, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 301 N.C. 92 (1980).

Fact that the trial court makes the finding required under section (b) of this rule before a final judgment can be entered, i.e., that there is no just reason for delay of entry of a final judgment, does not make the denial of summary judgment immediately appealable, because it is not a final judgment. Lamb v. Wedgewood S. Corp., 308 N.C. 419, 302 S.E.2d 868 (1963).

The denial of a motion for summary judgment is not a final judgment, and is generally not immediately appealable, even if the trial court has attempted to certify it for appeal under subsection (b) of this rule. Henderson v. LeBauer, 101 N.C. App. 255, 399 S.E.2d 142, cert. denied, 328 N.C. 731, 404 S.E.2d 868 (1991).

Partial summary judgment was not appealable under section (b) of this rule, even if the court's finding that third party defendant was entitled to appeal the judgment to the Court of Appeals constituted a finding that there was no just reason for delay, since the judgment was not final as to any of the parties. Cook v. Export Leaf Tobacco Co., 47 N.C. App. 187, 266 S.E.2d 754 (1980).

In an action seeking to quiet title to property which the plaintiffs, the original owners, alleged was secured by two of the defendants by fraud or by mutual mistake and conveyed to the other defendant, the current owner, by general warranty deed, summary judgment in favor of the current owner precluded the plaintiffs from obtaining reformation of the deed and reconveyance of the property, thereby affecting a substantial right; and, therefore, the interlocutory order was appealable. Jenkins v. Maintenance, Inc., 76 N.C. App. 110, 332 S.E.2d 90 (1985).

In action by discharged employee seeking to recover accumulated vacation leave, "substantial right" of the plaintiff was affected by the granting of summary judgment for the defendant, so that the order granting the motion for summary judgment was appealable, despite the defendant's pending counterclaim for wrongful conversion of company funds, and despite the absence of a determination by the trial judge under section (b) of this rule that "there was no just reason for delay." Narron v. Hardee's Food Systems, 75 N.C. App. 579, 331 S.E.2d 205, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 542, 335 S.E.2d 316 (1985).

Judgment dismissing plaintiff's punitive damage claim against defendant was immediately appealable, as plaintiff had a substantial right to have all of her claims for relief tried at the same time before the same judge and jury. Byrne v. Bordeaux, 85 N.C. App. 262, 354 S.E.2d 277 (1987).

Dismissal of One Defendant. — Dismissal of Count II of plaintiff's amended complaint, resulting in dismissal of plaintiff's claim against defendant professional corporation, affected her substantial right to have determined in a single proceeding the issues of whether she had been damaged by the actions of one, some or all of the defendants, especially since her claims against all of them arose upon the same series of transactions. Therefore, her appeal therefrom was not premature. Fox v. Wilson, 85 N.C. App. 292, 354 S.E.2d 737 (1987).

Order Dismissing Complaint Against City. — Plaintiff's appeal from trial court's order dismissing complaint against defendant city was premature, where the granting of the city's motion to dismiss disposed of the rights and liabilities of fewer than all the parties, and nowhere in the trial court's order did it certify that there was no just reason for delay. Pasour v. Pierce, 46 N.C. App. 636, 265 S.E.2d 652 (1980).

Order denying defendant's motion to dismiss plaintiff's claim for punitive damages is not immediately appealable. Williams v. East Coast Sales, Inc., 50 N.C. App. 565, 274 S.E.2d 276 (1981).

Judgment of absolute divorce upon a counterclaim to an action for alimony without divorce, rendered prior to final determination of all the issues, was interlocutory and subject to the provisions of section (b) of this rule for purposes of determining its finality. Hamilton v. Hamilton, 36 N.C. App. 755, 245 S.E.2d 399 (1978), aff'd, 296 N.C. 574, 251 S.E.2d 441 (1979).

Orders for child support which are entered in conjunction with orders awarding alimony pendente lite are not appealable until entry of a final order on the plaintiff's claim for permanent alimony. To hold otherwise would allow appeal from an order which adjudicates fewer than all claims in violation of this rule. Fliehr v. Fliehr, 53 N.C. App. 465, 289 S.E.2d 105 (1982).

Staying Enforcement of Judgment. — Section 1A-1, Rule 62(g) allows the trial court, after it has ordered a final judgment as to one or more but fewer than all parties under the conditions stated in section (b) of this rule, to stay enforcement of the judgment until the entering of a subsequent judgment or judgments and to prescribe such conditions as are necessary to prevent any harm that might result to a party if the trial court should decide not to certify judgment for immediate appeal. Equitable Leasing Corp. v. Myers, 46 N.C. App. 162, 265 S.E.2d 240, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 301 N.C. 92 (1980).

III. DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW.

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former § 1-208.

What Is a Judgment. — In its ordinary acceptation, a judgment is the conclusion of the law or facts admitted or in some way established. Sedbury v. Southern Express Co., 164 N.C. 363, 79 S.E. 286 (1913).

Judgments are the solemn determinations of judges upon subjects submitted to them, and the proceedings are recorded for the purpose of perpetuating them. They are the foundation of legal repose. Williams v. Woodhouse, 14 N.C. 257 (1831).

Judgments are considered as contracts to distinguish a cause of action thereon from one ex delicto. Moore v. Nowell, 94 N.C. 265 (1886).

But Are Not Contracts for Purposes of Impairment of Contract Clause. — While judgments are sometimes spoken of as contracts, they are not in reality contracts, and are never so considered in reference to the clause in the federal Constitution which forbids that contracts should be impaired by state legislation. Mottu v. Davis, 151 N.C. 237, 65 S.E. 969 (1909).

Final Judgment Defined. — A judgment is final which decides the case upon its merits without reservation for other and future directions of the court. Flemming v. Roberts, 84 N.C. 532 (1881); Sanders v. May, 173 N.C. 47, 91 S.E. 526 (1917); Russ v. Woodard, 232 N.C. 36, 59 S.E.2d 351 (1950).

A final judgment is one which disposes of the cause as to all the parties, leaving nothing to be judicially determined between them in the trial court. Veazey v. City of Durham, 231 N.C. 357, 57 S.E.2d 377, rehearing denied, 232 N.C. 744, 59 S.E.2d 429 (1950).

Interlocutory Order Defined. — An interlocutory order is one made during the pendency of an action, which does not dispose of the case but leaves it for further action by the trial court in order to settle and determine the entire controversy. Veazey v. City of Durham, 231 N.C. 357, 57 S.E.2d 377, rehearing denied, 232 N.C. 744, 59 S.E.2d 429 (1950).

A judgment is interlocutory when subject to change by the court, during the pendency of the action, to meet the exigencies of the case. Skidmore v. Austin, 261 N.C. 713, 136 S.E.2d 99 (1964).

An interlocutory order or decree is provisional or preliminary only. It does not determine the issues joined in the suit, but merely directs some further proceedings preparatory to the final decree. Johnson v. Robertson, 171 N.C. 194, 88 S.E. 231 (1916); Russ v. Woodard, 232 N.C. 36, 59 S.E.2d 351 (1950).

And Remains in Court's Control. — An interlocutory order remains in the control of and in the breast of the court, and upon good cause shown it may be amended, modified, changed, or rescinded, as the court may think proper. Maxwell v. Blair, 95 N.C. 317 (1886).

An interlocutory order or judgment differs from a final judgment in that an interlocutory order or judgment is subject to change by the court during the pendency of the action to meet the exigencies of the case. Russ v. Woodard, 232 N.C. 36, 59 S.E.2d 351 (1950).

Every judgment should and must have the sanction of the court, except in the case of consent judgments, and those must be entered with its knowledge and permission. Branch v. Walker, 92 N.C. 87 (1885).

A judgment may grant to the defendant any affirmative relief to which he may be entitled. Hutchinson v. Smith, 68 N.C. 354 (1873).

Judgments to Determine All the Rights of the Parties. — Since the gist of a judgment is the final determination of the rights of the parties to an action, courts are required to recognize both the legal and equitable rights of the parties, and to frame their judgments so as to determine all the rights of the parties, equitable as well as legal. Lee v. Pearce, 68 N.C. 76 (1873); Hutchinson v. Smith, 68 N.C. 354 (1873); McCown v. Sims, 69 N.C. 159 (1873).

It is not proper to enter a partial judgment on the pleadings for part of a litigant's claim, leaving controverted issues of fact relating to other parts of such claim open for subsequent trial. Erickson v. Starling, 235 N.C. 643, 71 S.E.2d 384 (1952).

Rule 55. Default.

(a) Entry. — When a party against whom a judgment for affirmative relief is sought has failed to plead or is otherwise subject to default judgment as provided by these rules or by statute and that fact is made to appear by affidavit, motion of attorney for the plaintiff, or otherwise, the clerk shall enter his default.

(b) Judgment. — Judgment by default may be entered as follows:

(1) By the Clerk. — When the plaintiff's claim against a defendant is for a sum certain or for a sum which can by computation be made certain, the clerk upon request of the plaintiff and upon affidavit of the amount due shall enter judgment for that amount and costs against the defendant, if the defendant has been defaulted for failure to appear and if the defendant is not an infant or incompetent person. A verified pleading may be used in lieu of an affidavit when the pleading contains information sufficient to determine or compute the sum certain.

In all cases wherein, pursuant to this rule, the clerk enters judgment by default upon a claim for debt which is secured by any pledge, mortgage, deed of trust or other contractual security in respect of which foreclosure may be had, or upon a claim to enforce a lien for unpaid taxes or assessments under G.S. 105-414, the clerk may likewise make all further orders required to consummate foreclosure in accordance with the procedure provided in Article 29A of Chapter 1 of the General Statutes, entitled "Judicial Sales."

(2) By the Judge. —

a. In all other cases the party entitled to a judgment by default shall apply to the judge therefor; but no judgment by default shall be entered against an infant or incompetent person unless represented in the action by a guardian ad litem or other such representative who has appeared therein. If the party against whom judgment by default is sought has appeared in the action, that party (or, if appearing by representative, the representative) shall be served with written notice of the application for judgment at least three days prior to the hearing on such application. If, in order to enable the judge to enter judgment or to carry it into effect, it is necessary to take an account or to determine the amount of damages or to establish the truth of any averment by evidence or to take an investigation of any other matter, the judge may conduct such hearings or order such references as the judge deems necessary and proper and shall accord a right of trial by jury to the parties when and as required by the Constitution or by any statute of North Carolina. If the plaintiff seeks to establish paternity under Article 3 of Chapter 49 of the General Statutes and the defendant fails to appear, the judge shall enter judgment by default.

b. A motion for judgment by default may be decided by the court without a hearing if:

1. The motion specifically provides that the court will decide the motion for judgment by default without a hearing if the party against whom judgment is sought fails to serve a written response, stating the grounds for opposing the motion, within 30 days of service of the motion; and
2. The party against whom judgment is sought fails to serve the response in accordance with this sub-subdivision.

(c) Service by publication. — When service of the summons has been made by published notice, no judgment shall be entered on default until the plaintiff shall have filed a bond, approved by the court, conditioned to abide such order as the court may make touching the restitution of any property collected or obtained by virtue of the judgment in case a defense is thereafter permitted and sustained; provided, that in actions involving the title to real estate or to foreclose mortgages thereon or in actions in which the State of North Carolina or a county or municipality thereof is the plaintiff such bond shall not be required.

(d) Setting aside default. — For good cause shown the court may set aside an entry of default, and, if a judgment by default has been entered, the judge may set it aside in accordance with Rule 60(b).

(e) Plaintiffs, counterclaimants, cross claimants. — The provisions of this rule apply whether the party entitled to the judgment by default is a plaintiff, a third-party plaintiff, or a party who has pleaded a crossclaim or counterclaim. In all cases a judgment by default is subject to the limitations of Rule 54(c).

(f) Judgment against the State of North Carolina. — No judgment by default shall be entered against the State of North Carolina or an officer in his official capacity or agency thereof unless the claimant establishes his claim or right to relief by evidence. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1971, cc. 542, 1101; 1977, c. 675; 1991, c. 278, s. 1; 1993 (Reg. Sess., 1994), c. 733, s. 3; 1999-187, s. 1.)

COMMENT

The State statutes presented a hodgepodge. Although former § 1-211 purported by its literal terms to give an exclusive listing of all the cases in which judgment by default final might be given, there were various other authorizations for such judgments scattered throughout the procedural and substantive sections. Section 1-212 then purportedly rounded out the scheme by providing that in all other cases "except those mentioned in § 1-211," judgment by default and inquiry might be given. This was obviously in literal conflict with all sections other than former § 1-211 which specifically authorized judgment by default final.

Although failure to file appropriate responsive pleading to a claim for affirmative relief is the usual basis for default judgment, other grounds appear: e.g. failure to file required bonds (former § 1-211(4) and § 1-525), failure to comply with pretrial discovery orders (former §§ 1-568.19, 8-89), and filing of "frivolous" pleadings (former § 1-219).

By § 1-209, clerks of superior court were authorized to enter all judgments by default authorized generally by § 1-209, and former §§ 1-211 and 1-213. This jurisdiction given clerks is concurrent with that of the superior court judge. Moody v. Howell, 229 N.C. 198, 49 S.E.2d 233 (1948). But some of the other scattered statutes authorizing judgments by default apparently contemplate that in the specific situations dealt with only the judge may enter judgment (e.g. § 1-525). Where the concurrent jurisdiction existed however, the appellate jurisdiction of the superior court judge as to the clerk's entry of judgment was retained (former § 1-220).

Although not made plain in the statutes, it has been held that though there is a "right" to a judgment upon default, the court may always in the exercise of its discretion allow time to answer when motion for judgment by default is made. Kruger v. Bank of Commerce, 123 N.C. 16, 31 S.E. 270 (1898). And of course, such judgments, as others, may be set aside after entry either by the clerk who entered them (former § 1-220), or by any appropriate judge for the usual reasons, i.e., excusable neglect, mistake, surprise, etc.

The main infirmities in the prior North Carolina practice as codified were thought to be (1) a general lack of symmetry and orderliness in the style and pattern of the various statutes, and (2) as a matter of substance, too much power and too much readiness in clerks to enter judgments which may thereafter be hard to set aside.

Accordingly, it was felt that federal Rule 55, with some few modifications to accommodate certain actions found in state practice and not in federal should be adopted, partially supplanting certain of the statutes which dealt with default judgments.

The federal rule approach actually contemplates a two-stage approach to judgment by default: The entry of default by the clerk; and thereafter the entry of judgment by default. Federal Rule 55(b)(1) provides that the clerk may only enter judgments by default in a very limited context, when (a) the claim is for a sum certain or for a computable sum, and (b) the default is for want of appearance, and (c) the defaulting party is neither an infant nor incompetent. This approach of limiting the clerk's power to the purely ministerial functions of (a) making entry of default in all cases, and (b) entering judgment itself in only this very limited context is felt to be wise.

The basic federal scheme continues by providing in 55(b)(2) that in all other cases than the very limited area spelled out in 55(b)(1), judgment itself may only be entered by the judge. Thus, in all cases where (a) the claim is not for a sum certain or computable, or (b) the defaulting party has appeared, or (c) the defaulting party is an infant or incompetent, only the judge may actually enter judgment. And except where the defaulting party has made no appearance, he must be given notice, and the entry of the judgment is in all instances in the discretion of the judge. It is believed that deliberately pointing up the discretionary nature of this power to enter judgment by default at this stage is wise, and will result in an overall saving of time by prompting full inquiry into the matter at the pre-entry stage rather than, as under prior practice, having discretion in the matter exercised usually after judgment has already been entered.

Note next that the delineation between judges' and clerks' power is not the delineation between judgments by "default final" and those by "default and inquiry." This distinction indeed is not retained in literal terms in the federal rule pattern. Obviously those very limited judgments within the power of the clerk to enter are judgments by default final. But the judge may enter either type under 55(b)(2). Instead of using this terminology, however, the rule as presented approaches the matter pragmatically by providing that when in order to enter final judgment something further must be done after entry of default, e.g. when an account must be taken or a jury trial had on an issue of damages or any other, the judge orders that done which is necessary. Thus, there is no intermediate judgment by "default and inquiry," but an entry of default in all cases and a final judgment by default entered only after everything required to its entry has been done. The same conceptions were involved in former § 1-212.

Section (c). — The Commission here attempted to take abundant precaution to protect the nonappearing defendant.

Section (d). — This section provides for setting aside default entries and judgments by default and ties the basis therefor into Rule 60(b) providing generally for setting aside judgments. Former § 1-220 and existing case law expressed this conception so that this involves no real change.

Section (e). — This section makes it plain that the general provisions of the rule apply as well to defendants and third-party plaintiffs as to plaintiffs seeking affirmative relief. This conception was expressed less artfully in former § 1-213 as to defendants and North Carolina actually had no express provision for default judgments in favor of third-party plaintiffs, or crossclaims. This is necessary now particularly in view of the third-party practice liberalization provided in other rules.

Section (f). — This section seems to be self-explanatory.

Editor's Note. — Section 105-414, referred to in subdivision (b)(1) of this rule, was repealed by Session Laws 1971, c. 806, s. 3.

Section 1-212, referred to in the Comment above, has been repealed. For general information regarding the official comments to the North Carolina Rules of Civil Procedure, see the Editor's Note under the heading for this Chapter.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 1999-187, s. 1, effective October 1, 1999, and applicable to causes of action commenced on or after that date, substituted "the defendant" for "he" twice in the first paragraph of subdivision (b)(1); designated the former paragraph in subdivision (b)(2) as present subdivision (b)(2)a; in subdivision (b)(2)a, substituted "that party (or, if appearing by representative, the representative" for "he (or, if appearing by representative, his representative"; and added subdivision (b)(2)b.

I. IN GENERAL.

This rule appears to be a counterpart of FRCP, Rule 55. Rawleigh, Moses & Co. v. Capital City Furn., Inc., 9 N.C. App. 640, 177 S.E.2d 332 (1970); Harris v. Carter, 33 N.C. App. 179, 234 S.E.2d 472 (1977).

This rule has no application where plaintiff does not proceed under it after defendant fails to file his answer within the required time, but allows the case to be regularly scheduled for trial. Whitaker v. Whitaker, 16 N.C. App. 432, 192 S.E.2d 80 (1972).

Plaintiffs Not Entitled to Default Judgment in Declaratory Judgment Action. — In an action for a declaratory judgment, failure of defendants to file an answer to the complaint or to answer interrogatories did not entitle plaintiffs to a judgment against such defendants based on plaintiffs' conclusions and contentions as to the construction of the instrument in question, since the rights of the parties had to be determined by a proper construction of the instrument. Baxter v. Jones, 14 N.C. App. 296, 188 S.E.2d 622, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 621, 190 S.E.2d 465 (1972).

This rule has no applicability to the entering of final judgments in condemnation proceedings. Board of Transp. v. Williams, 31 N.C. App. 125, 229 S.E.2d 37 (1976).

Entry of default is to be distinguished from a judgment by default. Whaley v. Rhodes, 10 N.C. App. 109, 177 S.E.2d 735 (1970); Hubbard v. Lumley, 17 N.C. App. 649, 195 S.E.2d 330 (1973); Miller v. Miller, 24 N.C. App. 319, 210 S.E.2d 438 (1974).

Effect of Appearance of Defendant on Right to Notice. — Defendant's appearance in an action is of no significance in determining whether he is entitled to notice of plaintiff's motion for any entry of default under section (a) of this rule. It is only in reference to entry of a default judgment, under section (b) of this rule, that a party's appearance entitles him to notice. G & M Sales of E.N.C., Inc. v. Brown, 64 N.C. App. 592, 307 S.E.2d 593 (1983).

Service of the answer is both a "pleading" and an "appearance" for the purpose of this rule. Quaker Furn. House, Inc. v. Ball, 31 N.C. App. 140, 228 S.E.2d 475 (1976).

A party may appear without pleading. Taylor v. Triangle Porsche-Audi, Inc., 27 N.C. App. 711, 220 S.E.2d 806 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 619, 223 S.E.2d 396 (1976).

Negotiations Between Parties as Appearance. — Negotiations between parties after institution of an action may constitute an appearance. Taylor v. Triangle Porsche-Audi, Inc., 27 N.C. App. 711, 220 S.E.2d 806 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 619, 223 S.E.2d 396 (1976); Webb v. James, 46 N.C. App. 551, 265 S.E.2d 642 (1980).

Letter as Appearance. — A letter sent by defendant to plaintiff's attorney and to the clerk of court, acknowledging plaintiff's complaint and setting out reasons for denial of plaintiff's claim, constituted an "appearance" for the purposes of this rule. Peebles v. Moore, 48 N.C. App. 497, 269 S.E.2d 694 (1980), modified and aff'd, 302 N.C. 351, 275 S.E.2d 833 (1981).

A motion to intervene after the entry of default against the defendant, his liability to the plaintiff being conclusively established, the extent of liability never being in issue, was untimely. State Employee's Credit Union, Inc. v. Gentry, 75 N.C. App. 260, 330 S.E.2d 645 (1985).

Where a complaint alleges a joint claim against more than one defendant, default judgment pursuant to this rule should not be entered against a defaulting defendant until all defendants have defaulted; if one or more defendants do not default, generally entry of default judgment should await an adjudication as to the liability of the non-defaulting defendants. Leonard v. Pugh, 86 N.C. App. 207, 356 S.E.2d 812 (1987).

Hearing on Punitive Damages Following Default. — Due process concerns demand that a party who is defaulted for failure to answer interrogatories be afforded an opportunity to be heard on the question of punitive damages. Hunter v. Spaulding, 97 N.C. App. 372, 388 S.E.2d 630 (1990).

Pre-answer Motion to Dismiss was not a responsible pleading within the confines of Rule 12 of the North Carolina Rules of Civil Procedure, preventing the entry of default judgment pursuant to this rule. Eden's Gate, Ltd. v. Leeper, 121 N.C. App. 171, 464 S.E.2d 696 (1995).

Applied in Gregg v. Steele, 24 N.C. App. 310, 210 S.E.2d 434 (1974); Lewis Clarke Assocs. v. Tobler, 32 N.C. App. 435, 232 S.E.2d 458 (1977); Quis v. Griffin, 42 N.C. App. 477, 256 S.E.2d 846 (1979); Bailey v. Gooding, 301 N.C. 205, 270 S.E.2d 431 (1980); Whitfield v. Wakefield, 51 N.C. App. 124, 275 S.E.2d 263 (1981); Pryse v. Strickland Lumber & Bldg. Supply, Inc., 66 N.C. App. 361, 311 S.E.2d 598 (1984); Smith v. Barfield, 77 N.C. App. 217, 334 S.E.2d 487 (1985); Roan-Baker v. Southeastern Hosp. Supply Corp., 99 N.C. App. 30, 392 S.E.2d 663 (1990); John Henry Spainhour & Sons Grading Co. v. Carolina E.E. Homes, Inc., 109 N.C. App. 174, 426 S.E.2d 728 (1993).

App. 370, 465 S.E.2d 561 (1996).

II. ENTRY OF DEFAULT.

The "entry of default" has been characterized as a ministerial duty. Whaley v. Rhodes, 10 N.C. App. 109, 177 S.E.2d 735 (1970); Miller v. Miller, 24 N.C. App. 319, 210 S.E.2d 438 (1974).

Interlocutory Entry of Default. — Where the trial court in its findings of fact referred to petitioner's "Motion for Entry of Default" and concluded that "the Clerk shall sign and file the Entry of Default, if not already signed and filed," and where the trial court then set for hearing a determination as to the money and property taken, damages caused, and "all other things" taken, the order entered by the trial court was not a final order or final judgment but was an interlocutory entry of default and not subject to appellate review. Duncan v. Duncan, 102 N.C. App. 107, 401 S.E.2d 398 (1991).

Entry of default is only an interlocutory act looking toward subsequent entry of final judgment by default and is more in the nature of a formal matter. Whaley v. Rhodes, 10 N.C. App. 109, 177 S.E.2d 735 (1970); Crotts v. Camel Pawn Shop, Inc., 16 N.C. App. 392, 192 S.E.2d 55, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 425, 192 S.E.2d 835 (1972); Hubbard v. Lumley, 17 N.C. App. 649, 195 S.E.2d 330 (1973); First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. R & G Constr. Co., 24 N.C. App. 131, 210 S.E.2d 97 (1974); Battle v. Clanton, 27 N.C. App. 616, 220 S.E.2d 97 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 613, 223 S.E.2d 391 (1976).

Generally, there is first an interlocutory entry of default, and then a final judgment by default only after the requisites to its entry, including a jury trial on damages, have occurred. An entry of default is not a final order or a final judgment. Stone v. Martin, 69 N.C. App. 650, 318 S.E.2d 108 (1984).

The entry of default is interlocutory in nature and is not a final judicial action. State Employee's Credit Union, Inc. v. Gentry, 75 N.C. App. 260, 330 S.E.2d 645 (1985).

Defaults may not be entered after an answer has been filed, even if the answer is late, as defaults should not be entered, even though technical default is clear, if justice may be served otherwise. Peebles v. Moore, 302 N.C. 351, 275 S.E.2d 833 (1981).

By waiting till an answer had been tardily filed before seeking to obtain entry of default, the plaintiff waived its rights to entry of default. Joe Newton, Inc. v. Tull, 75 N.C. App. 325, 330 S.E.2d 664 (1985).

According to the language of this section, defaults may not be entered after answer has been filed, even though the answer is late; however, a better reasoned and more equitable result may be reached by adhering to the principle that a default should not be entered, even though technical default is clear, if justice may be served otherwise. Fieldcrest Cannon Employees Credit Union v. Mabes, 116 N.C. App. 351, 447 S.E.2d 510 (1994).

Written Motion Not Mandatory. — Section (a) of this rule provides for the use of affidavit or motion or some other method. The use of the disjunctive rather than the conjunctive suggests that the use of a written motion is not mandatory. While it may be better practice to file a written motion, the use of a written motion is not mandatory. Sawyer v. Cox, 36 N.C. App. 300, 244 S.E.2d 173, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 467, 246 S.E.2d 216 (1978).

Section (a) of this rule plainly does not require proof solely by affidavit; the clerk may act upon any proof he or she deems appropriate, including the record alone. Silverman v. Tate, 61 N.C. App. 670, 301 S.E.2d 732 (1983).

Default may not be entered if an answer has been filed, even if the answer is deficient in some respect. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Virginia Carolina Bldrs., 307 N.C. 563, 299 S.E.2d 629 (1983).

Where default is established, defendant has no further standing to contest the merits of plaintiff's right to recover. His only recourse is to show good cause for setting aside the default and, failing that, to contest the amount of the recovery. North Am. Acceptance Corp. v. Samuels, 11 N.C. App. 504, 181 S.E.2d 794 (1971); Peebles v. Moore, 48 N.C. App. 497, 269 S.E.2d 694 (1980), modified and aff'd, 302 N.C. 351, 275 S.E.2d 833 (1981); Hasty v. Carpenter, 51 N.C. App. 333, 276 S.E.2d 513 (1981).

Challenge to Sufficiency of Complaint After Default. — A default judgment admits only the allegations contained within the complaint, and a defendant may still show that the complaint is insufficient to warrant plaintiff's recovery. Hunter v. Spaulding, 97 N.C. App. 372, 388 S.E.2d 630 (1990).

Defendant's exception to judgment, entered in open court, permitted him to challenge on appeal whether a default judgment could be based upon plaintiff's complaint. Hunter v. Spaulding, 97 N.C. App. 372, 388 S.E.2d 630 (1990).

Substantive Allegations Deemed Admitted When Default Entered. — When default is entered due to defendant's failure to answer, the substantive allegations raised by plaintiff's complaint are no longer in issue, and, for the purposes of entry of default and default judgment, are deemed admitted. Bell v. Martin, 299 N.C. 715, 264 S.E.2d 101 (1980); Peebles v. Moore, 48 N.C. App. 497, 269 S.E.2d 694 (1980), modified and aff'd, 302 N.C. 351, 275 S.E.2d 833 (1981); State Employee's Credit Union, Inc. v. Gentry, 75 N.C. App. 260, 330 S.E.2d 645 (1985).

Where respondent in a partition proceeding failed to answer petition for partition because he was satisfied that the interests of the tenants in common were correctly alleged and that the relief prayed for was appropriate, petitioners were not entitled to an entry of default, as respondents were not "in default" under this rule. Macon v. Edinger, 49 N.C. App. 624, 272 S.E.2d 411 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 303 N.C. 274, 278 S.E.2d 256 (1981).

Raising Affirmative Defense for First Time on Summary Judgment Ruling. — Even if the plaintiff's motion to strike tardily filed answer had been ruled upon and allowed before the trial court considered the defendant's motion for summary judgment based upon an affirmative defense, the defendants would have been entitled to proceed with their motion. An affirmative defense may be raised for the first time by affidavit for the purpose of ruling on a motion for summary judgment. Joe Newton, Inc. v. Tull, 75 N.C. App. 325, 330 S.E.2d 664 (1985).

Defendant is entitled to a hearing where he may move to vacate entry of default in favor of plaintiff. Bell v. Martin, 299 N.C. 715, 264 S.E.2d 101 (1980).

Prior Hearing Not Required. — The North Carolina Industrial Commission was not required by subsection (f) to conduct a full evidentiary hearing prior to entering default against the State. Parker v. State DOT, 122 N.C. App. 279, 468 S.E.2d 589 (1996).

Effect of Entry of Default. — The effect of an entry of default is that the defendant against whom entry of default is made is deemed to have admitted the allegations in plaintiff's complaint and is prohibited from defending on the merits of the case. Spartan Leasing, Inc. v. Pollard, 101 N.C. App. 450, 400 S.E.2d 476 (1991).

Default Entered Properly. — Denial of the defendants' motion to set aside entry of default was not in error. RC Assocs. v. Regency Ventures, Inc., 111 N.C. App. 367, 432 S.E.2d 394 (1993).

III. ENTRY OF JUDGMENT BY DEFAULT.

A. By Clerk.

Subsection (b)(1) Subject to §§ 1-75.11 and 1-209(4). — Default judgment by the clerk, provided for by subsection (b)(1) of this rule, is subject to the jurisdictional proofs required by § 1-75.11, and is still controlled by § 1-209(4), which empowers the clerk to enter all judgments by default final and default and inquiry as are authorized by this rule. Taylor v. Triangle Porsche-Audi, Inc., 27 N.C. App. 711, 220 S.E.2d 806 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 619, 223 S.E.2d 396 (1976).

Applicability of § 1-75.11 to Judgment Against Nonappearing Defendant. — In order for a valid judgment to be entered in an action against a nonappearing defendant, there must be compliance with the provisions of this rule as well as § 1-75.11. Hill v. Hill, 11 N.C.

App. 1, 180 S.E.2d 424, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 348, 182 S.E.2d 580 (1971).

Entry of default by the clerk is not a prerequisite to obtaining judgment against a nonappearing defendant. Plaintiff has the option to bypass entry of default and proceed to trial. Love v. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 45 N.C. App. 444, 263 S.E.2d 337, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 198, 269 S.E.2d 617 (1980).

Liens established pursuant to Chapter 44A are not "contractual security" within the meaning of subsection (b)(1) of this rule, and a clerk or assistant clerk of court is without jurisdiction to make orders consummating foreclosure of liens established pursuant to Chapter 44A. Ridge Community Investors, Inc. v. Berry, 293 N.C. 688, 239 S.E.2d 566 (1977).

Mere demand for a specified dollar amount does not suffice to make claim one for "a sum certain," as contemplated by section (b) of this rule. Hecht Realty, Inc. v. Hastings, 45 N.C. App. 307, 262 S.E.2d 858 (1980).

Complaint Not for "Sum Certain." — Where plaintiff's complaint alleged a breach of contract by defendant, but nothing in the allegations of the complaint made it possible to compute the amount of damages to which plaintiff was entitled by reason of the breach, then the allegations of the complaint were not sufficient to state a claim "for a sum certain or a sum which can by computation be made certain" within the meaning of subsection (b)(1) of this rule. Hecht Realty, Inc. v. Hastings, 45 N.C. App. 307, 262 S.E.2d 858 (1980).

Plaintiffs' claim was not for a sum certain where their damages were mitigated by a sum dependent on plaintiffs' estimate of the "fair rental value" of some unspecified amount of land, and where there was uncertainty as to how plaintiffs arrived at an expense figure for land clearing. Williams v. Moore, 95 N.C. App. 601, 383 S.E.2d 416 (1989).

Authority of Clerk Concurrent with That of Judge in Certain Instances. — The authority of the clerk of court to enter judgments in certain instances is concurrent with and in addition to that of the judge of the superior court. Highfill v. Williamson, 19 N.C. App. 523, 199 S.E.2d 469 (1973).

And Judge Is Not Deprived of Jurisdiction Thereby. — The judge of the superior court is in no way deprived of jurisdiction simply because the clerk, in certain instances, has concurrent jurisdiction. Highfill v. Williamson, 19 N.C. App. 523, 199 S.E.2d 469 (1973); Hasty v. Carpenter, 51 N.C. App. 333, 276 S.E.2d 513 (1981).

When Clerk May Enter Judgment. — There are two basic requirements that must be fulfilled before a clerk can enter a default judgment: (1) Plaintiff's claim must be for a sum certain or for a sum that can by computation be made certain, and (2) defendant must have been defaulted for failure to appear and he must not have been an infant or incompetent person. Roland v. W & L Motor Lines, 32 N.C. App. 288, 231 S.E.2d 685 (1977); General Foods Corp. v. Morris, 49 N.C. App. 541, 272 S.E.2d 17 (1980).

Clerk may enter default judgment against a defendant only if he has never made an appearance. Roland v. W & L Motor Lines, 32 N.C. App. 288, 231 S.E.2d 685 (1977).

This rule authorizes the clerk to enter only those judgments which would have been designated formerly as "default final." Taylor v. Triangle Porsche-Audi, Inc., 27 N.C. App. 711, 220 S.E.2d 806 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 619, 223 S.E.2d 396 (1976).

The clerk can enter a default judgment against a defendant only if the defendant has failed to appear in the matter. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. McKee, 63 N.C. App. 58, 303 S.E.2d 842 (1983).

The entry of default by the clerk requires only that the clerk ascertain that the party against whom a judgment for affirmative relief is sought has failed to plead. Beard v. Pembaur, 68 N.C. App. 52, 313 S.E.2d 853, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 750, 321 S.E.2d 126 (1984).

Affidavit Held Sufficient. — Where plaintiffs' affidavit referred to complaint and complaint contained lease as Exhibit A, plaintiffs' affidavit met the requirements of this rule for entry of default judgment by the clerk, even though the affidavit was supplemented by allegations in plaintiffs' unverified complaint; while the basis for plaintiffs' motion would have been clearer if all material had been in either an affidavit or a verified complaint, it was not improper for plaintiffs to refer in their affidavit to material already set out in or attached to their complaint. Williams v. Moore, 95 N.C. App. 601, 383 S.E.2d 416 (1989).

Plaintiff is not required to show that defendant is not an infant and not under disability before he is entitled to obtain an entry of default and a judgment by default. General Foods Corp. v. Morris, 49 N.C. App. 541, 272 S.E.2d 17 (1980).

Nor Is Clerk Required to Make Such Finding. — This rule and § 1-75.11 do not require the clerk to make an affirmative finding that defendant is not a minor nor under legal disability in order to enter a default or a default judgment. General Foods Corp. v. Morris, 49 N.C. App. 541, 272 S.E.2d 17 (1980).

Basis for Finding Defendant Neither Infant Nor Incompetent. — Where verified complaint stated: "Defendant is a citizen and resident of the County of Person, State of North Carolina, and is of a legal age and under no legal disability," there was a basis upon which the court could find that defendant was neither an infant nor an incompetent person. Highfill v. Williamson, 19 N.C. App. 523, 199 S.E.2d 469 (1973).

Entry of default and of default judgment by the clerk may be simultaneous and can be contained in the same document. Taylor v. Triangle Porsche-Audi, Inc., 27 N.C. App. 711, 220 S.E.2d 806 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 619, 223 S.E.2d 396 (1976).

B. By Judge.

This rule does not provide for judgments by "default and inquiry" per se. Taylor v. Triangle Porsche-Audi, Inc., 27 N.C. App. 711, 220 S.E.2d 806 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 619, 223 S.E.2d 396 (1976).

Subsection (b)(2) of this rule does not require a written motion for entry of judgment by default. Sawyer v. Cox, 36 N.C. App. 300, 244 S.E.2d 173, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 467, 246 S.E.2d 216 (1978).

When Judgment Must Be Entered by Judge. — When a party, or his representative, has appeared in an action and later defaults, section (b) of this rule requires that the judge, rather than the clerk, enter the judgment by default after the required notice has been given. Roland v. W & L Motor Lines, 32 N.C. App. 288, 231 S.E.2d 685 (1977); Williams v. Jennette, 77 N.C. App. 283, 335 S.E.2d 191 (1985).

Where the claim is not for a sum certain or for a sum which can by computation be made certain, the party entitled to the default judgment must make his application to a judge. Grant v. Cox, 106 N.C. App. 122, 415 S.E.2d 378 (1992).

An appearance need not be a direct response to the complaint; there may be an appearance whenever a defendant takes, seeks or agrees to some step in the proceedings that is beneficial to himself or detrimental to the plaintiff. Williams v. Jennette, 77 N.C. App. 283, 335 S.E.2d 191 (1985).

An appearance within the meaning of section (b) of this rule is not always comprised of a direct response to a complaint. Stanaland v. Stanaland, 89 N.C. App. 111, 365 S.E.2d 170 (1988).

In some cases, an appearance may arise by implication, as when a defendant takes, seeks or agrees to some step in the proceedings that is beneficial to himself or detrimental to the plaintiff. Stanaland v. Stanaland, 89 N.C. App. 111, 365 S.E.2d 170 (1988).

Negotiations as Appearances. — Negotiations for settlements or continuances, whether by letter or by meeting, after the complaint is filed, constitute appearances within the meaning of subsection (b)(2) of this rule. Stanaland v. Stanaland, 89 N.C. App. 111, 365 S.E.2d 170 (1988).

Defendant's meeting with plaintiff and her attorney was sufficient to constitute an appearance within the meaning of subsection (b)(2) of this rule. Stanaland v. Stanaland, 89 N.C. App. 111, 365 S.E.2d 170 (1988).

Notice Requirement Under Subsection (b)(2) Inapplicable Where No Appearance Made. — Requirement of subsection (b)(2) of this rule that a defendant who has appeared in an action be served with written notice of application of a default judgment at least three days prior to the hearing on the application is inapplicable where defendant does not make an appearance prior to the entry of default by the clerk or default judgment. North Brook Farm Lines v. McBrayer, 35 N.C. App. 34, 241 S.E.2d 74 (1978).

Effect of Failure to Give Notice under Subsection (b)(2). — Failure to give notice under subsection (b)(2) of this rule constitutes a mere procedural irregularity, subjecting resulting judgment to direct but not collateral attack. Yale v. National Indem. Co., 602 F.2d 642 (4th Cir. 1979).

"Request to Calendar Clerk" and calendar which were mailed to defendant were sufficient notice of an application for judgment to satisfy the requirements of subsection (b)(2) of this rule. Sawyer v. Cox, 36 N.C. App. 300, 244 S.E.2d 173, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 467, 246 S.E.2d 216 (1978).

Motion to Set Aside and Inquiry Thereon as Waiver of Notice Requirement. — Where defendants brought the matter in controversy before the trial court as a result of their motion to set aside clerk's order entering default, and there was a full inquiry, defendants in effect waived the notice requirement of subsection (b)(2) of this rule and were not entitled to further notice prior to entry of default judgment. Webb v. James, 46 N.C. App. 551, 265 S.E.2d 642 (1980).

Defendant Held Entitled to Notice. — Where defendant filed an application for an extension of time in which to answer, a motion to vacate entry of default, and a motion to dismiss the complaint, and was present for a hearing in superior court on his motion to vacate, he appeared in the action within the meaning of subsection (b)(2) of this rule and should have been served with written notice of plaintiff's application for default judgment at least three days prior to the hearing on the application; failure to provide the statutory notice required that the default judgment be vacated. Miller v. Belk, 18 N.C. App. 70, 196 S.E.2d 44, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 665, 197 S.E.2d 874 (1973).

Where defendant had made an appearance in plaintiff's action for purposes of section (b) of this rule by meeting with plaintiff and her attorney, plaintiff was required to provide three days' notice of subsequent default hearing.

Stanaland v. Stanaland, 89 N.C. App. 111, 365 S.E.2d 170 (1988).

Oral Warning Not Sufficient Notice. — Oral warning given to defendant during meeting with plaintiff and her attorney that plaintiff would go forward with her case did not comprise the written notice required by subsection (b)(2) of this rule. Stanaland v. Stanaland, 89 N.C. App. 111, 365 S.E.2d 170 (1988).

Same Judge Need Not Enter Default Judgment and Default Final. — Subsection (b)(2) of this rule does not require the same judge who enters default judgment to likewise conduct jury trial to determine damages and enter default final. Highfill v. Williamson, 19 N.C. App. 523, 199 S.E.2d 469 (1973).

IV. SETTING ASIDE DEFAULT.

Entry of default may be set aside, not by motion pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 60(b), but by motion pursuant to section (d) of this rule and a showing of good cause. Bailey v. Gooding, 60 N.C. App. 459, 299 S.E.2d 267 (1983).

An adequate basis for the motion to set aside must be shown. North Am. Acceptance Corp. v. Samuels, 11 N.C. App. 504, 181 S.E.2d 794 (1971).

Entry of Default Might Be Set Aside on Showing That Would Not Justify Setting Aside Default Judgment. — A court might feel justified in setting aside an entry of default on a showing that would not move it to set aside a default judgment. Whaley v. Rhodes, 10 N.C. App. 109, 177 S.E.2d 735 (1970); Crotts v. Camel Pawn Shop, Inc., 16 N.C. App. 392, 192 S.E.2d 55, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 425, 192 S.E.2d 835 (1972); Hubbard v. Lumley, 17 N.C. App. 649, 195 S.E.2d 330 (1973).

The rules evidently make a distinction between what is required to make a good case for setting aside a default and what is required to set aside a judgment. Whaley v. Rhodes, 10 N.C. App. 109, 177 S.E.2d 735 (1970).

An entry of default is an interlocutory and ministerial act and, therefore, is more easily set aside than a default judgment. Peebles v. Moore, 48 N.C. App. 497, 269 S.E.2d 694 (1980), modified and aff'd, 302 N.C. 351, 275 S.E.2d 833 (1981).

First Clause of Section (d) Governs Motion to Vacate Entry of Default. — Where a default but no judgment has been entered, the motion to vacate the default is governed by the first clause of section (d) of this rule. Whaley v. Rhodes, 10 N.C. App. 109, 177 S.E.2d 735 (1970).

And Reference to § 1A-1, Rule 60 Is Unnecessary. — Where defendant's motion to set aside and vacate entry of default is governed by section (d) of this rule, any reference to or discussion of § 1A-1, Rule 60, governing the setting aside of judgment by default, is unnecessary and surplusage. Hubbard v. Lumley, 17 N.C. App. 649, 195 S.E.2d 330 (1973).

Standard of § 1A-1, Rule 60(b)(1) Inapplicable to Judgment Determining Issue of Liability But Not Damages. — A judgment by a superior court judge which determined the issue of liability in a personal injury action and ordered a trial on the issue of damages was an entry of default, rather than a default judgment, since it was not a final judgment. Therefore, the trial court erred in applying the "mistake, inadvertence, surprise or excusable neglect" standard of § 1A-1, Rule 60(b)(1) rather than the "good cause shown" standard of section (d) of this rule in ruling on defendant's motion to set aside its judgment. Pendley v. Ayers, 45 N.C. App. 692, 263 S.E.2d 833 (1980).

There is no necessity to find excusable neglect in granting motion to set aside entry of default. Hence, plaintiff's assignment of error directed at trial judge's conclusion that excusable neglect existed was to no avail; such finding was surplusage, and though erroneous, was not prejudicial. Whaley v. Rhodes, 10 N.C. App. 109, 177 S.E.2d 735 (1970).

In setting aside an entry of default, as opposed to a default judgment, a showing of excusable neglect is not necessary. Frye v. Wiles, 33 N.C. App. 581, 235 S.E.2d 889 (1977); Hecht Realty, Inc. v. Hastings, 45 N.C. App. 307, 262 S.E.2d 858 (1980).

Attack of Default Judgment on Appeal. — Failure to attack default judgment at the trial court level precludes such an attack on appeal. University of N.C. v. Shoemate, 113 N.C. App. 205, 437 S.E.2d 892, cert. denied, 336 N.C. 615, 447 S.E.2d 413 (1994).

Only Good Cause Required to Set Aside Entry of Default. While setting aside a default judgment under § 1A-1, Rule 60(b) generally involves a showing of excusable neglect and a meritorious defense, to set aside an entry of default all that need be shown is good cause. Peebles v. Moore, 48 N.C. App. 497, 269 S.E.2d 694 (1980), modified and aff'd, 302 N.C. 351, 275 S.E.2d 833 (1981).

To set aside a default all that need be shown is good cause. Whaley v. Rhodes, 10 N.C. App. 109, 177 S.E.2d 735 (1970); Frye v. Wiles, 33 N.C. App. 581, 235 S.E.2d 889 (1977); Hecht Realty, Inc. v. Hastings, 45 N.C. App. 307, 262 S.E.2d 858 (1980).

Where the facts of a case are sufficient to warrant a conclusion by the trial judge that defendant has shown good cause for his failure to file an answer, the judge's action in vacating the entry of default must be upheld. Whaley v. Rhodes, 10 N.C. App. 109, 177 S.E.2d 735 (1970); Crotts v. Camel Pawn Shop, Inc., 16 N.C. App. 392, 192 S.E.2d 55, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 425, 192 S.E.2d 835 (1972).

For the entry of a default to be disturbed, section (d) of this rule requires that "good cause" be shown. That determination is in the trial judge's discretion and will not be disturbed absent an abuse of discretion. Byrd v. Mortenson, 60 N.C. App. 85, 298 S.E.2d 170 (1982).

A motion to set aside entry of default is governed by the first clause of section (d) of this rule that, for good cause shown, the court may set aside an entry of default. This standard is more lax than that required for setting aside a default judgment pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 60(b), which requires the presence of mistake, inadvertence, or excusable neglect. Bailey v. Gooding, 60 N.C. App. 459, 299 S.E.2d 267 (1983).

To set aside an entry of default, good cause must be shown. Silverman v. Tate, 61 N.C. App. 670, 301 S.E.2d 732 (1983).

What constitutes "good cause" depends on the circumstances in a particular case, and within the limits of discretion, an inadvertence which is not strictly excusable may constitute good cause, particularly where plaintiff can suffer no harm from the short delay involved in the default and grave injustice may be done to defendant. Peebles v. Moore, 48 N.C. App. 497, 269 S.E.2d 694 (1980), modified and aff'd, 302 N.C. 351, 275 S.E.2d 833 (1981).

Inadvertence, even if not strictly "excusable," may constitute good cause, particularly in a case where plaintiff can suffer no harm from the short delay involved in the default and grave injustice may be done to defendant. Whaley v. Rhodes, 10 N.C. App. 109, 177 S.E.2d 735 (1970).

Burden on Defendant to Show Good Cause. — In moving for relief pursuant to section (d) of this rule, the burden is on defendant, as the defaulting party, not to refute the allegations of plaintiff's complaint, nor to show the existence of factual issues as in summary judgment, but to show good cause why he should be allowed to file answer to plaintiff's complaint. Bell v. Martin, 299 N.C. 715, 264 S.E.2d 101 (1980); Peebles v. Moore, 48 N.C. App. 497, 269 S.E.2d 694 (1980), modified and aff'd, 302 N.C. 351, 275 S.E.2d 833 (1981).

Defendant failed to show good cause for setting aside of entry of default where defendant's affidavits showed that, although defendant's legal department received suit papers on June 7, 1978, they were misplaced and not relocated until July 12, 1978, the day entry of default was made. Britt v. Georgia-Pacific Corp., 46 N.C. App. 107, 264 S.E.2d 395 (1980).

Excusable Mistake, Inadvertence, Surprise or Neglect Required to Set Aside Default Judgment. — The rule as to what is required to set aside a judgment specifies "mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect." This has been construed to mean that the mistake, inadvertence, or surprise, as well as neglect, must be excusable in order to give the court the power to set aside the judgment. Whaley v. Rhodes, 10 N.C. App. 109, 177 S.E.2d 735 (1970).

Meritorious Defense and Good Reason for Default Must Be Shown. — The court should not reopen a default judgment merely because the party in default requests it, but should require the party to show both that there was a good reason for the default and that he has a meritorious defense to the action. North Am. Acceptance Corp. v. Samuels, 11 N.C. App. 504, 181 S.E.2d 794 (1971).

Excusable Neglect Not Shown. — Affidavit filed by defendant stating that he was 63 years old and semi-retired; that he had two nephews who were seriously ill; that due to his nephews' illnesses he had to operate both his own general store and his nephews' trucking business; and that he was under great physical and mental strain at the time summons and complaint were served and for several weeks thereafter, failed to make out a case of excusable neglect under subsection (b)(1) of this rule. Rawleigh, Moses & Co. v. Capital City Furn., Inc., 9 N.C. App. 640, 177 S.E.2d 332 (1970).

Jurisdiction of Court on Motion to Set Aside Clerk's Entry of Default Judgment. — When defendants made a motion to set aside the clerk's entry of default and default judgment, the trial court was not limited to a review of the action of the clerk, but was vested with jurisdiction to hear and determine all matters in controversy and render such judgment or order within the limits provided by law, including default judgment; this principle would apply even if the order by the clerk was a nullity. Webb v. James, 46 N.C. App. 551, 265 S.E.2d 642 (1980).

Motion to set aside a default or a judgment by default is addressed to the discretion of the court. North Am. Acceptance Corp. v. Samuels, 11 N.C. App. 504, 181 S.E.2d 794 (1971).

Motion pursuant to section (d) of this rule to set aside an entry by default is addressed to the discretion of the trial court. Privette v. Privette, 30 N.C. App. 41, 226 S.E.2d 188 (1976).

Motion to set aside an entry of default is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge, and the order of the trial court ruling on such a motion will not be disturbed on appeal absent a showing of abuse of that discretion. Coulbourn Lumber Co. v. Grizzard, 51 N.C. App. 561, 277 S.E.2d 95 (1981).

Motion to set aside a default is addressed to the discretion of the court. Whaley v. Rhodes, 10 N.C. App. 109, 177 S.E.2d 735 (1970); Crotts v. Camel Pawn Shop, Inc., 16 N.C. App. 392, 192 S.E.2d 55, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 425, 192 S.E.2d 835 (1972).

As Is Determination of Good Cause to Vacate Entry of Default. — The determination of good cause is for the trial judge in the exercise of his sound discretion. Pioneer Acoustical Co. v. Cisne & Assocs., 25 N.C. App. 114, 212 S.E.2d 402 (1975).

Determination as to whether good cause exists to vacate an entry of default is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge. Hasty v. Carpenter, 51 N.C. App. 333, 276 S.E.2d 513 (1981).

Section (d) of this rule specifically allows the trial court to set aside an entry of default for good cause shown. The determination of whether good cause has been shown is for the trial judge in the exercise of his sound discretion. Stone v. Martin, 69 N.C. App. 650, 318 S.E.2d 108 (1984).

And Court's Determination Will Not Be Disturbed Absent Abuse. — Determination of whether good cause exists to vacate an entry of default is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge, and his exercise of that discretion will not be disturbed on appeal unless a clear abuse of discretion is shown. Hubbard v. Lumley, 17 N.C. App. 649, 195 S.E.2d 330 (1973); Miller v. Miller, 24 N.C. App. 319, 210 S.E.2d 438 (1974); Frye v. Wiles, 33 N.C. App. 581, 235 S.E.2d 889 (1977); Britt v. Georgia-Pacific Corp., 46 N.C. App. 107, 264 S.E.2d 395 (1980); Webb v. James, 46 N.C. App. 551, 265 S.E.2d 642 (1980); Williams v. Jennette, 77 N.C. App. 283, 335 S.E.2d 191 (1985).

A judge is subject to reversal for abuse of discretion only upon a showing by a litigant that the challenged actions are manifestly unsupported by reason. Byrd v. Mortenson, 60 N.C. App. 85, 298 S.E.2d 170 (1982), modified on other grounds, 308 N.C. 536, 302 S.E.2d 809 (1983).

Presumption That Judge Acted Within Discretion. — Where appellant failed to bring evidence up for review, the appellate court would presume that the trial judge acted within his discretion on evidence showing good cause to vacate the entry of default. Crotts v. Camel Pawn Shop, Inc., 16 N.C. App. 392, 192 S.E.2d 55, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 425, 192 S.E.2d 835 (1972); Moseley v. Branch Banking & Trust Co., 19 N.C. App. 137, 198 S.E.2d 36, cert. denied, 284 N.C. 121, 199 S.E.2d 659 (1973).

Discretion Not Abused. — Where defendant did not offer any evidence showing a good reason for her default upon which the judge could have set aside the entry of default, nor show an adequate basis for the judge to have set aside the default judgment on the grounds of mistake, inadvertence, surprise, excusable neglect or meritorious defense, the judge did not abuse her discretion in failing to set aside the entry of default or the judgment by default. North Am. Acceptance Corp. v. Samuels, 11 N.C. App. 504, 181 S.E.2d 794 (1971).

As to considerations in exercising discretion, see Howell v. Haliburton, 22 N.C. App. 40, 205 S.E.2d 617 (1974).

Default Judgments Not Favored. — Inasmuch as the law generally disfavors default judgments, any doubt should be resolved in favor of setting aside an entry of default so the case may be decided on its merits. At the same time the rules which require responsive pleadings within a limited time serve important social goals, and a party should not be permitted to flout them with impunity. Byrd v. Mortenson, 60 N.C. App. 85, 298 S.E.2d 170 (1982), modified on other grounds, 308 N.C. 536, 302 S.E.2d 809 (1983).

In exercising its discretion the court will be guided by the fact that default judgments are not favored in the law. North Am. Acceptance Corp. v. Samuels, 11 N.C. App. 504, 181 S.E.2d 794 (1971). See also, Peebles v. Moore, 48 N.C. App. 497, 269 S.E.2d 694 (1980), modified and aff'd, 302 N.C. 351, 275 S.E.2d 833 (1981).

A motion for entry of default and default judgment is addressed to the discretion of the court. In exercising its discretion the trial court should be guided by the consideration that default judgments are disfavored by the law. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. McKee, 63 N.C. App. 58, 303 S.E.2d 842 (1983).

Any doubt should be resolved in favor of setting aside defaults, so that cases may be decided on their merits. Whaley v. Rhodes, 10 N.C. App. 109, 177 S.E.2d 735 (1970); Peebles v. Moore, 48 N.C. App. 497, 269 S.E.2d 694 (1980), modified and aff'd, 302 N.C. 351, 275 S.E.2d 833 (1981).

Order setting aside or refusing to set aside entry of default is not a final order and is, therefore, not appealable, where judgment has not been entered. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. R & G Constr. Co., 24 N.C. App. 131, 210 S.E.2d 97 (1974).

Order entered pursuant to section (d) of this rule, setting aside entry by default, was interlocutory, and plaintiff's appeal thereon was premature. Pioneer Acoustical Co. v. Cisne & Assocs., 25 N.C. App. 114, 212 S.E.2d 402 (1975).

Entry of Default Judgment Against One of Several Defendants Properly Set Aside. — Where, in a civil action to recover money advanced by plaintiff in an alleged factoring agreement with defendant furniture company, brought against the company and five individual guarantors, one individual defendant failed to answer, an entry of default against said defendant was proper, but default judgment against him was properly set aside; while said defendant was not entitled to file an answer or other defensive pleading, the action would proceed to trial on its merits on the complaint and answers filed by the non-defaulting defendants, and appropriate judgment would be entered as to the defaulting defendant following the trial. Rawleigh, Moses & Co. v. Capital City Furn., Inc., 9 N.C. App. 640, 177 S.E.2d 332 (1970).

Entry of default and judgment by default would be improper where defendants showed (1) excusable neglect in failing to timely file a responsive pleading, and (2) a meritorious defense to plaintiff's claim. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. McKee, 63 N.C. App. 58, 303 S.E.2d 842 (1983).

Where 30 days had not elapsed since the filing of amended complaint, judgment by default was not available; the default judgment obtained was, therefore, void, and it was error as a matter of law for the court to refuse to set it aside. Hyder v. Dergance, 76 N.C. App. 317, 332 S.E.2d 713 (1985).

Entry of Default Set Aside. — Where counsel for defendant failed to file responsive pleadings within the allowable time limit and there was no evidence in the record that defendant was anything less than diligent in its pursuit of the matter, nor any allegations that plaintiff was prejudiced by the five-day delay between the expiration of the filing period and the date defendant filed its motion and proposed answer, justice would best be served by setting aside the entry of default. Automotive Equip. Distribs., Inc. v. Petroleum Equip. & Serv., Inc., 87 N.C. App. 606, 361 S.E.2d 895 (1987).

Multiple Default Judgments. — A custody order remained binding and effective, where the trial court entered an order setting aside the entry of default obtained by the father of a minor child against the mother, but the order did not purport to set aside the subsequent default judgment that was entered against the mother awarding custody of their minor child to the father, so that the custody order remained valid and could be modified only by showing a substantial change in circumstances. West v. Marko, 130 N.C. App. 751, 504 S.E.2d 571 (1998).

Party May Not Claim Judgment Is Defective After Accepting Its Benefits. — After petitioning the court to enter a default judgment, plaintiff relied upon its validity and force thrice — by executing on it; by retaining the money collected by execution; and by suing defendant in a separate action for future rents. The law does not permit a party to claim that a judgment is defective after relying upon its validity and accepting its benefits. Kimzay Winston-Salem, Inc. v. Jester, 103 N.C. App. 77, 404 S.E.2d 176, cert. denied, 329 N.C. 497, 407 S.E.2d 534 (1991).

An order reopening and enlarging a default judgment was erroneous because, by deciding to obtain a final judgment for the sum certain that was owed when the default judgment was entered, rather than to have the damages determined later by a trial, plaintiff waived any right it might have had to obtain judgment for a larger amount. Kimzay Winston-Salem, Inc. v. Jester, 103 N.C. App. 77, 404 S.E.2d 176, cert. denied, 329 N.C. 497, 407 S.E.2d 534 (1991).

Superior court order which kept a default judgment in effect and permitted it to be enlarged from $7,039 to $35,857 was erroneous because the court had no authority to enter it. The order neither set aside the default judgment nor relieved plaintiff of it as authorized by this rule or § 1A-1, Rule 60(b), N.C.R.Civ.P. Kimzay Winston-Salem, Inc. v. Jester, 103 N.C. App. 77, 404 S.E.2d 176, cert. denied, 329 N.C. 497, 407 S.E.2d 534 (1991).

Motion for Relief on Grounds of Insufficient Service. — In filing a motion to claim exempt property, which was inconsistent with her later motion for relief from judgment on the grounds of the invalidity of service of process, defendant made a general appearance, and her subsequent motion for relief from a default judgment on the grounds of the invalidity of service of process was properly dismissed. Faucette v. Dickerson, 103 N.C. App. 620, 406 S.E.2d 602 (1991).

V. DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW.

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former § 1-211.

Complaint which fails to state a cause of action is not sufficient to support a default judgment for plaintiff. Lowe's of Raleigh, Inc. v. Worlds, 4 N.C. App. 293, 166 S.E.2d 517 (1969).

Default judgment admits only the averments in the complaint, and the defendant may still show that such averments are insufficient to warrant plaintiff's recovery. Lowe's of Raleigh, Inc. v. Worlds, 4 N.C. App. 293, 166 S.E.2d 517 (1969).

Where judgment by default is irregularly and improvidently entered by the assistant clerk of the superior court, the clerk of the superior court has authority to vacate the same upon motion in the cause. Booker v. Porth, 1 N.C. App. 434, 161 S.E.2d 767 (1968).

Rule 56. Summary judgment.

(a) For claimant. — A party seeking to recover upon a claim, counterclaim, or crossclaim or to obtain a declaratory judgment may, at any time after the expiration of 30 days from the commencement of the action or after service of a motion for summary judgment by the adverse party, move with or without supporting affidavits for a summary judgment in his favor upon all or any part thereof.

(b) For defending party. — A party against whom a claim, counterclaim, or crossclaim is asserted or a declaratory judgment is sought, may, at any time, move with or without supporting affidavits for a summary judgment in his favor as to all or any part thereof.

(c) Motion and proceedings thereon. — The motion shall be served at least 10 days before the time fixed for the hearing. The adverse party prior to the day of hearing may serve opposing affidavits. The judgment sought shall be rendered forthwith if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that any party is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law. A summary judgment, interlocutory in character, may be rendered on the issue of liability alone although there is genuine issue as to the amount of damages. Summary judgment, when appropriate, may be rendered against the moving party.

(d) Case not fully adjudicated on motion. — If on motion under this rule judgment is not rendered upon the whole case or for all the relief asked and a trial is necessary, the court at the hearing of the motion, by examining the pleadings and the evidence before it and by interrogating counsel, shall if practicable ascertain what material facts exist without substantial controversy and what material facts are actually and in good faith controverted. It shall thereupon make an order specifying the facts that appear without substantial controversy, including the extent to which the amount of damages or other relief is not in controversy, and directing such further proceedings in the action as are just. Upon the trial of the action the facts so specified shall be deemed established.

(e) Form of affidavits; further testimony; defense required. — Supporting and opposing affidavits shall be made on personal knowledge, shall set forth such facts as would be admissible in evidence, and shall show affirmatively that the affiant is competent to testify to the matters stated therein. Sworn or certified copies of all papers or parts thereof referred to in an affidavit shall be attached thereto or served therewith. The court may permit affidavits to be supplemented or opposed by depositions, answers to interrogatories, or further affidavits. When a motion for summary judgment is made and supported as provided in this rule, an adverse party may not rest upon the mere allegations or denials of his pleading, but his response, by affidavits or as otherwise provided in this rule, must set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial. If he does not so respond, summary judgment, if appropriate, shall be entered against him.

(f) When affidavits are unavailable. — Should it appear from the affidavits of a party opposing the motion that he cannot for reasons stated present by affidavit facts essential to justify his opposition, the court may refuse the application for judgment or may order a continuance to permit affidavits to be obtained or depositions to be taken or discovery to be had or may make such other order as is just.

(g) Affidavits made in bad faith. — Should it appear to the satisfaction of the court at any time that any of the affidavits presented pursuant to this rule are presented in bad faith or solely for the purpose of delay, the court shall forthwith order the party employing them to pay to the other party the amount of the reasonable expenses which the filing of the affidavits caused him to incur, including reasonable attorney's fees. (1967, c. 954, s. 1.)

COMMENT

While it has long been urged in North Carolina, see Chadbourn, A Summary Judgment Procedure for North Carolina, 14 N.C.L. Rev., 211 (1936), and while, in one form or another, it has been adopted in a majority of the states, the procedure provided by this rule is wholly new to North Carolina. It adds a powerful new weapon for the just, swift and efficient disposition of claims or defenses patently without merit. The rule provides a device whereby it can expeditiously be determined whether or not there exists between the parties a genuine issue as to any material fact. It is not the purpose of the rule to resolve disputed material issues of fact but rather to determine if such issues exist.

Under prior procedure, if the pleadings disclosed an issue of fact, a trial was generally necessary even though there might in actuality be no genuine dispute at all as to the facts. It was enough if the issue was formally raised by the pleadings. Significantly, however, the code drafters were well aware that there might indeed be no issue of material fact present even though the pleadings appeared to present one. They thus provided that sham and irrelevant defenses could be stricken, former § 1-126, that irrelevant and redundant matter might be stricken, former § 1-153, and that a frivolous demurrer, answer or reply might be disregarded, former § 1-219. But, for reasons that need not be examined here, these devices have not proved equal to the task of identifying those claims or defenses in which there was no genuine dispute as to a material fact.

The great merit of the summary judgment is that it does provide a device for identifying the factually groundless claim or defense. It does so by enabling the parties to lay before the court materials extraneous to the pleadings. If these materials reveal any dispute as to a material fact, summary judgment is precluded. But as section (e) makes clear, a party cannot necessarily rely on the pleadings to show the existence of such a dispute.

The operation of the rule can be illustrated by supposing an action to recover damages for personal injuries. The sole defense offered is that the plaintiff's exclusive remedy is afforded by the Workmen's Compensation Act. The plaintiff moves for summary judgment, supporting his motion with affidavits which on their face show that the act is inapplicable to the defendant's enterprise. At the hearing on the motion, the defendant can forestall summary judgment simply by producing an affidavit, deposition or interrogatory or oral testimony tending to show that he does come under the act. If, on the other hand, he does nothing, entry of partial summary judgment, leaving for later jury determination the amount of damages, can be entered against him. He has failed to show that there is a genuine issue as to any material fact except damages.

The defendant might also move for a summary judgment in the case supposed. If he shows, without any contrary showing by the plaintiff, that the act applies, then it would be appropriate to enter judgment for the defendant. Of course, section (f) permits the refusal of the motion when a party presents reasons for his inability to present affidavits opposing the motion.

It will be observed that section (e) requires that supporting and opposing affidavits "shall be made on personal knowledge" and "shall set forth such facts as would be admissible in evidence."

I. IN GENERAL.

Summary Judgment Defined. — Summary judgment is a device whereby judgment is rendered if the pleadings, depositions, interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with any affidavits, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that a party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Johnson v. Phoenix Mut. Life Ins. Co., 300 N.C. 247, 266 S.E.2d 610 (1980); Rose v. Guilford County, 60 N.C. App. 170, 298 S.E.2d 200 (1982).

This rule and its federal counterpart are practically the same. Pridgen v. Hughes, 9 N.C. App. 635, 177 S.E.2d 425 (1970); Kessing v. National Mtg. Corp., 278 N.C. 523, 180 S.E.2d 823 (1971); Page v. Sloan, 281 N.C. 697, 190 S.E.2d 189 (1972); Norfolk & W. Ry. v. Werner Indus., Inc., 286 N.C. 89, 209 S.E.2d 734 (1974); Reavis v. Campbell, 27 N.C. App. 231, 218 S.E.2d 873 (1975); Pitts v. Village Inn Pizza, Inc., 296 N.C. 81, 249 S.E.2d 375 (1978); Piedmont Consultants of Statesville, Inc. v. Baba, 48 N.C. App. 160, 268 S.E.2d 222 (1980).

And Federal Decisions May Be Looked to for Guidance in Applying This Rule. — FRCP, Rule 56 is substantially the same as this rule and the Supreme Court therefore looks to the federal decisions for guidance in applying this rule. Singleton v. Stewart, 280 N.C. 460, 186 S.E.2d 400 (1972); Dendy v. Watkins, 288 N.C. 447, 219 S.E.2d 214 (1975).

Summary judgment is a new procedure in North Carolina. Motyka v. Nappier, 9 N.C. App. 579, 176 S.E.2d 858 (1970); Patterson v. Reid, 10 N.C. App. 22, 178 S.E.2d 1 (1970).

Demurrer and Summary Judgment Compared. — A demurrer was a proper method of testing the legal sufficiency of the complaint, but it was confined only to the complaint itself. A motion for summary judgment allows the court to consider matter outside of the complaint for the purpose of ascertaining whether a genuine issue of fact does exist, thus recognizing the fact that a genuine issue of fact may not exist even though one appears in the complaint. Motyka v. Nappier, 9 N.C. App. 579, 176 S.E.2d 858 (1970).

Motion for Directed Verdict Similar. — The motion for summary judgment and the motion for a directed verdict are functionally very similar. Williams v. Carolina Power & Light Co., 296 N.C. 400, 250 S.E.2d 255 (1979).

Functionally the motion for summary judgment and the motion for a directed verdict are closely akin to each other. Dendy v. Watkins, 288 N.C. 447, 219 S.E.2d 214 (1975).

For comparison of motion for directed verdict and motion for summary judgment, see Edwards v. Northwestern Bank, 53 N.C. App. 492, 281 S.E.2d 86, cert. denied, 304 N.C. 389, 285 S.E.2d 831 (1981).

For comparison of motion for failure to state a claim under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6) and motion for summary judgment, see Shoffner Indus., Inc. v. W.B. Lloyd Constr. Co., 42 N.C. App. 259, 257 S.E.2d 50, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 296, 259 S.E.2d 301 (1979).

Conversion of § 1A-1, Rule 10(c) Motion to Motion for Summary Judgment. — Where affidavits considered by the trial court were not incorporated by reference into the pleadings pursuant to Rule 10(c), the motion to dismiss was converted into a motion for summary judgment. Richland Run Homeowners Ass'n v. CHC Durham Corp., 123 N.C. App. 345, 473 S.E.2d 649 (1996), rev'd, 346 N.C. 170, 484 S.E.2d 527 (1997).

Conversion of § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6) and 12(c) Motions to Motions for Summary Judgment. — Motions under § 1A-1, Rules 12(b)(6) and 12(c) can be treated as summary judgment motions, the difference being that under § 1A-1, Rules 12(b)(6) and 12(c) the motion is decided on the pleadings alone, while under this rule the court may receive and consider various kinds of evidence. Kessing v. National Mtg. Corp., 278 N.C. 523, 180 S.E.2d 823 (1971).

A motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6) is converted to a motion under this rule for summary judgment when matters outside the pleadings are presented to and not excluded by the court. Stanback v. Stanback, 297 N.C. 181, 254 S.E.2d 611 (1979); Smith v. Independent Life Ins. Co., 43 N.C. App. 269, 258 S.E.2d 864 (1979); Piedmont Consultants of Statesville, Inc. v. Baba, 48 N.C. App. 160, 268 S.E.2d 222 (1980); Baugh v. Woodard, 56 N.C. App. 180, 287 S.E.2d 412, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 305 N.C. 759, 292 S.E.2d 574 (1982).

Where extraneous matter is received and considered on a motion to dismiss under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6), the motion should be treated as a motion for summary judgment and disposed of in the manner and on the conditions stated in this rule. Fowler v. Williamson, 39 N.C. App. 715, 251 S.E.2d 889 (1979); Roach v. City of Lenoir, 44 N.C. App. 608, 261 S.E.2d 299

(1980); Parslow v. Parslow, 47 N.C. App. 84, 266 S.E.2d 746 (1980); Oliver v. Roberts, 49 N.C. App. 311, 271 S.E.2d 399 (1980).

Where the record contains affidavits and indicates that the trial judge, in addition to considering the pleadings and attached exhibits, also heard counsel for both parties and considered briefs submitted by both parties, the motion for judgment on the pleadings under § 1A-1, Rule 12(c) must be considered as though it was made under this rule. Minor v. Minor, 70 N.C. App. 76, 318 S.E.2d 865, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 495, 322 S.E.2d 558 (1984).

Where matters outside the pleadings are presented to and not excluded by the court on a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, the motion shall be treated as one for summary judgment under this rule. DeArmon v. B. Mears Corp., 312 N.C. 749, 325 S.E.2d 223 (1985); King v. Durham County Mental Health Developmental Disabilities & Substance Abuse Auth., 113 N.C. App. 341, 439 S.E.2d 771 (1994), cert. denied,.

The denial of a motion to dismiss under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6) does not prevent the court from allowing a subsequent motion for summary judgment. Dull v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co., 85 N.C. App. 310, 354 S.E.2d 752, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 512, 358 S.E.2d 518 (1987); Burton v. NCNB Nat'l Bank, 85 N.C. App. 702, 355 S.E.2d 800 (1987).

Where matters outside the pleadings are before the court, a motion to dismiss may be treated as a motion for summary judgment. Deans v. Layton, 89 N.C. App. 358, 366 S.E.2d 560, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 834, 371 S.E.2d 276 (1988).

When a trial court considers matters outside the pleadings, a motion under Rule 12 is automatically converted into a motion for summary judgment. North Carolina Steel, Inc. v. National Council on Comp. Ins., 123 N.C. App. 163, 472 S.E.2d 578 (1996), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 347 N.C. 627, 496 S.E.2d 369 (1998).

Memoranda, Briefs and Oral Arguments Not Outside the Pleadings for Purposes of Converting Motion. — Memoranda of points and authorities as well as briefs and oral arguments are not considered matters outside the pleading for purposes of converting a motion under § 1A-1, Rule 12 into a motion for summary judgment. Privette v. University of N.C., 96 N.C. App. 124, 385 S.E.2d 185 (1989).

Section (c) of this rule does not require that a party move for summary judgment in order to be entitled to it. McNair Constr. Co. v. Fogle Bros. Co., 64 N.C. App. 282, 307 S.E.2d 200 (1983), cert. denied, 312 N.C. 84, 321 S.E.2d 897 (1984).

Motion Under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6) Not Converted by Incorporation of Exhibit by Reference in Complaint. — Where, in her complaint, plaintiff incorporated by reference a complaint in a federal court action and attached a copy of it, the complaint in the federal court action was not a matter outside the pleadings so as to convert her motion to dismiss under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6) into a motion for summary judgment, since § 1A-1, Rule 10(c) provides that such an exhibit is a part of the pleading for all purposes. Stanback v. Stanback, 297 N.C. 181, 254 S.E.2d 611 (1979).

Treatment of Summary Judgment Motion as Though Made Under § 1A-1, Rule 12(c). — Where the record on appeal contained no affidavits, answers to interrogatories, or anything other than the pleadings upon which to base decision, motion for summary judgment would be considered as though made under § 1A-1, Rule 12(c) for judgment on the pleadings, and not as a motion under this rule. Reichler v. Tillman, 21 N.C. App. 38, 203 S.E.2d 68 (1974); Town of Bladenboro v. McKeithan, 44 N.C. App. 459, 261 S.E.2d 260, appeal dismissed, 300 N.C. 202, 282 S.E.2d 228 (1980).

Plaintiff may not defeat a motion for summary judgment by taking a voluntary dismissal after a hearing on the summary judgment motion where plaintiff introduces evidence, and after the court signs the summary judgment, but before it is filed with the clerk. Maurice v. Hatterasman Motel Corp., 38 N.C. App. 588, 248 S.E.2d 430 (1978).

Where a party appears at a summary judgment hearing and produces evidence or is given an opportunity to produce evidence and fails to do so, and the question is submitted to the court for decision, he has "rested his case" within the meaning of § 1A-1, Rule 41(a)(1)(i). He cannot thereafter take a voluntary dismissal under § 1A-1, Rule 41(a)(1)(i). Maurice v. Hatterasman Motel Corp., 38 N.C. App. 588, 248 S.E.2d 430 (1978); Wesley v. Bland, 92 N.C. App. 513, 374 S.E.2d 475 (1988).

Validity of the judgment does not depend upon the form in which the determination is made, whether express or implied, but upon the correctness of the determination. Tripp v. Flaherty, 27 N.C. App. 180, 218 S.E.2d 709 (1975).

There is no requirement that summary judgment, to be valid, must contain ritual statement that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact. Tripp v. Flaherty, 27 N.C. App. 180, 218 S.E.2d 709 (1975).

When it is unclear from looking at a judgment whether a default judgment or a summary judgment was intended, the wording of the body of the judgment itself controls, not the heading. East Carolina Oil Transp., Inc. v. Petroleum Fuel & Term. Co., 82 N.C. App. 746, 348 S.E.2d 165 (1986), cert. denied, 318 N.C. 693, 351 S.E.2d 745 (1987).

Matters determined by summary judgment, as by any other judgment, are res judicata in a subsequent action. T.A. Loving Co. v. Latham, 15 N.C. App. 441, 190 S.E.2d 248 (1972).

But an order denying summary judgment is not res judicata, and a judge is clearly within his rights in vacating such denial. Where nothing pertinent to the motion has been filed subsequent to the previous order, it is not necessary to issue new notice. Miller v. Miller, 34 N.C. App. 209, 237 S.E.2d 552 (1977).

Summary Judgment Not Precluded by Earlier Denial of Motion Under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6). — Denial of a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, which motion merely challenges the sufficiency of the complaint, does not prevent the court's allowance of a subsequent motion for summary judgment based on affidavits outside the complaint. Alltop v. J.C. Penney Co., 10 N.C. App. 692, 179 S.E.2d 885, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 348, 182 S.E.2d 580 (1971).

Denial of a motion to dismiss made under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6) does not prevent the court, whether in the person of the same or a different superior court judge, from thereafter allowing a subsequent motion for summary judgment made and supported as provided in this rule. Barbour v. Little, 37 N.C. App. 686, 247 S.E.2d 252, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 733, 248 S.E.2d 862 (1978).

However, a motion for summary judgment denied by one superior court judge may not be allowed by another on identical legal issues. But this does not apply to interlocutory orders given in the progress of the cause. American Travel Corp. v. Central Carolina Bank & Trust Co., 57 N.C. App. 437, 291 S.E.2d 892, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 306 N.C. 555, 294 S.E.2d 369 (1982).

A motion for summary judgment denied by one superior court judge may not be allowed by another superior court judge on identical legal issues. Furr v. Charmichael, 82 N.C. App. 634, 347 S.E.2d 481 (1986).

Summary Judgment for Nonmovant. — Although plaintiffs filed motion for summary judgment, trial court entered summary judgment for defendants. When appropriate, summary judgment may be rendered against the party moving for such judgment. Coulter v. City of Newton, 100 N.C. App. 523, 397 S.E.2d 244 (1990).

Pleadings Deemed Amended. — Where a motion for summary judgment is supported by matters outside the pleadings, the pleadings are deemed amended if in fact the issue not raised by the pleadings or by the motion for summary judgment is tried by the express or implied consent of both parties. County of Rutherford ex rel. Child Support Enforcement Agency ex rel. Hedrick v. Whitener, 100 N.C. App. 70, 394 S.E.2d 263 (1990).

Because the plaintiffs' summary judgment motion went only to liability, the trial court had the power to render summary judgment for the defendants with respect to liability notwithstanding the procedural defects in the defendants' summary judgment motion. Messer v. Laurel Hill Assocs., 102 N.C. App. 307, 401 S.E.2d 843 (1991).

Entry of Summary Judgment. — The mere filing of an affirmative defense without more is not sufficient to establish the absence of a justiciable issue, nor is the grant of a § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6) motion, nor the entry of summary judgment. These events may only be evidence of the absence of a justiciable issue. However, action by the losing party which perpetuated litigation in the fact of events substantially establishing that the pleadings no longer presented a justiciable controversy may also serve as evidence for purposes of § 6-21.5. Sunamerica Fin. Corp. v. Bonham, 328 N.C. 254, 400 S.E.2d 435 (1991).

Distinction Between Motion to Dismiss and Summary Judgment. — The distinction between a § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss and a motion for summary judgment is more than a mere technicality. When considering a § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss, the trial court need only look to the face of the complaint to determine whether it reveals an insurmountable bar to plaintiff's recovery. By contrast, when considering a summary judgment motion, the trial court must look at more than the pleadings; it must also consider additional matters such as affidavits, depositions and other specified matter outside the pleadings. Locus v. Fayetteville State Univ., 102 N.C. App. 522, 402 S.E.2d 862 (1991).

Ordinarily, findings of fact and conclusions of law are not required in the determination of a motion for summary judgment, and if these are made, they are disregarded on appeal. Sunamerica Fin. Corp. v. Bonham, 328 N.C. 254, 400 S.E.2d 435 (1991).

Effect of Denial of Motion on Subsequent Motions Based on Trial Evidence. — Denial of a motion for summary judgment, based only upon a forecast of evidence, should not operate to bar the granting of a directed verdict or a judgment notwithstanding the verdict based on the evidence actually presented at trial. Whittaker Gen. Medical Corp. v. Daniel, 87 N.C. App. 659, 362 S.E.2d 302 (1987), rev'd in part on other grounds, 324 N.C. 523, 379 S.E.2d 824 (1989).

Attorneys' Fees. — Section 6-21.5 provides in part that the entry of judgment pursuant to Rule 50 or this rule may be some evidence that an attorneys' fee may be warranted. The statute's reference to these rules, which are applicable only if evidence in addition to the pleadings is before the court, thus implies that when deciding whether to grant a motion under § 6-21.5 the trial court may consider evidence developed after the pleadings have been filed. Sunamerica Fin. Corp. v. Bonham, 328 N.C. 254, 400 S.E.2d 435 (1991).

Applied in Pulley v. Rex Hosp., 326 N.C. 701, 392 S.E.2d 380 (1990); Barclays American/Leasing, Inc. v. North Carolina Ins. Guar. Ass'n, 99 N.C. App. 290, 392 S.E.2d 772 (1990); Kearney v. County of Durham, 99 N.C. App. 349, 393 S.E.2d 129 (1990); Lowry v. Lowry, 99 N.C. App. 246, 393 S.E.2d 141 (1990); Medley v. North Carolina Dep't of Cor., 99 N.C. ## II. PURPOSE OF SUMMARY JUDGMENT.

This rule is designed to permit penetration of an unfounded claim or defense in advance of trial and to allow summary disposition for either party when a fatal weakness in the claim or defense is exposed. Patrick v. Hurdle, 16 N.C. App. 28, 190 S.E.2d 871, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 304, 192 S.E.2d 195 (1972); Caldwell v. Deese, 288 N.C. 375, 218 S.E.2d 379 (1975); Philbin Invs., Inc. v. Orb Enters., Ltd., 35 N.C. App. 622, 242 S.E.2d 176, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 90, 244 S.E.2d 260 (1978); Thompson v. Northwestern Sec. Life Ins. Co., 44 N.C. App. 668, 262 S.E.2d 397, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 202, 269 S.E.2d 620 (1980); Southeastern Asphalt & Concrete Co. v. American Defender Life Ins. Co., 69 N.C. App. 185, 316 S.E.2d 311 (1984); Cannon v. Miller, 71 N.C. App. 460, 322 S.E.2d 780 (1984); N.C. Coastal Motor Line v. Everette Truck Line, 77 N.C. App. 149, 334 S.E.2d 499 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 391, 338 S.E.2d 880 (1986); Sink v. Andrews, 81 N.C. App. 594, 344 S.E.2d 831 (1986); Palm Beach, Inc. v. Allen, 91 N.C. App. 115, 370 S.E.2d 440 (1988), overruled on other grounds, Kraft v. Hardee, 340 N.C. 344, 457 S.E.2d 596 (1995).

The purpose of this rule is to preserve the court from frivolous defenses, and to defeat attempts to use formal pleadings as means to delay the recovery of just demands. Kidd v. Early, 289 N.C. 343, 222 S.E.2d 392 (1976); Baum v. Golden, 83 N.C. App. 218, 349 S.E.2d 625 (1986), cert. denied, 319 N.C. 102, 353 S.E.2d 104 (1987).

Summary judgment is designed to eliminate formal trials where only questions of law are involved by permitting penetration of an unfounded claim or defense in advance of trial and allowing summary disposition for either party when a fatal weakness in the claim or defense is exposed. Highlands Tp. Taxpayers Ass'n v. Highlands Tp. Taxpayers Ass'n, 62 N.C. App. 537, 303 S.E.2d 234 (1983).

The goal of this procedural device is to allow penetration of an unfounded claim or defense before trial. Asheville Contracting Co. v. City of Wilson, 62 N.C. App. 329, 303 S.E.2d 365 (1983).

A motion for summary judgment is an attempt by a party to avoid the necessity of trial by exposing a fatal weakness in the claim or defense of his opponent. Normile v. Miller, 63 N.C. App. 689, 306 S.E.2d 147 (1983), modified on other grounds, 313 N.C. 98, 326 S.E.2d 11 (1985).

The goal of summary judgment procedures is to allow penetration of an unfounded claim or defense before trial. Thus, if there is any question as to the credibility of an affiant in a summary judgment motion or if there is a question which can be resolved only by the weight of the evidence, summary judgment should be denied. Broadway v. Blythe Indus., Inc., 313 N.C. 150, 326 S.E.2d 266 (1985), overruled on other grounds, Nelson v. Freeland, 349 N.C. 615, 507 S.E.2d 882 (1998).

The ultimate goal of the procedural device of summary judgment is to allow penetration of an unfounded claim or defense before trial. Murphrey v. Winslow, 70 N.C. App. 10, 318 S.E.2d 849, cert. denied as to additional issues, 312 N.C. 495, 322 S.E.2d 558 (1984).

Summary judgment is designed to eliminate the necessity of a formal trial where only questions of law are involved and a fatal weakness in the claim of a party is exposed. Hall v. Post, 85 N.C. App. 610, 355 S.E.2d 819 (1987), rev'd on other grounds, 323 N.C. 259, 372 S.E.2d 711 (1988).

And to Allow a Preview or Forecast of the Proof. — The procedure for a summary judgment motion is designed to allow a "preview" or "forecast" of the proof of the parties in order to determine whether a jury trial is necessary. Loy v. Lorm Corp., 52 N.C. App. 428, 278 S.E.2d 897 (1981); Asheville Contracting Co. v. City of Wilson, 62 N.C. App. 329, 303 S.E.2d 365 (1983).

Purpose of summary judgment is to provide an expeditious method for determining whether a material issue of fact actually exists. Patterson v. Reid, 10 N.C. App. 22, 178 S.E.2d 1 (1970); Alltop v. J.C. Penney Co., 10 N.C. App. 692, 179 S.E.2d 885, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 348, 182 S.E.2d 580 (1971); Blackmon v. Valley Decorating Co., 11 N.C. App. 137, 180 S.E.2d 396 (1971); Robinson v. McMahan, 11 N.C. App. 275, 181 S.E.2d 147, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 395, 183 S.E.2d 243 (1971); Millsaps v. Wilkes Contracting Co., 14 N.C. App. 321, 188 S.E.2d 663, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 623, 190 S.E.2d 466 (1972); Emanuel v. Colonial Life & Accident Ins. Co., 35 N.C. App. 435, 242 S.E.2d 381 (1978); Vassey v. Burch, 301 N.C. 68, 269 S.E.2d 137 (1980); Gregory v. Perdue, Inc., 47 N.C. App. 655, 267 S.E.2d 584 (1980); Southerland v. Kapp, 59 N.C. App. 94, 295 S.E.2d 602 (1982).

The purpose of summary judgment is to go beyond or to pierce the pleadings and determine whether there is a genuine issue of material fact. Singleton v. Stewart, 280 N.C. 460, 186 S.E.2d 400 (1972).

The purpose of summary judgment is to eliminate formal trials where only questions of law are involved by allowing summary disposition for either party when a fatal weakness in the claim or defense is exposed. Gray v. Hager, 69 N.C. App. 331, 317 S.E.2d 59 (1984).

And, If Not, Whether Movant Is Entitled to Judgment. — The purpose of the summary judgment rule is to provide an expeditious method of determining whether a genuine issue as to any material fact actually exists, and if not, whether the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Schoolfield v. Collins, 12 N.C. App. 106, 182 S.E.2d 648 (1971), rev'd on other grounds, 281 N.C. 604, 189 S.E.2d 208 (1972); Gudger v. Transitional Furn., Inc., 30 N.C. App. 387, 226 S.E.2d 835 (1976).

The purpose of the summary judgment procedure provided by this rule is to ferret out those cases in which there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and in which, upon such undisputed facts, a party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Haithcock v. Chimney Rock Co., 10 N.C. App. 696, 179 S.E.2d 865 (1971); Robinson v. McMahan, 11 N.C. App. 275, 181 S.E.2d 147, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 395, 183 S.E.2d 243 (1971); Peterson v. Winn-Dixie of Raleigh, Inc., 14 N.C. App. 29, 187 S.E.2d 487 (1972); Cameron-Brown Capital Corp. v. Spencer, 31 N.C. App. 499, 229 S.E.2d 711 (1976), cert. denied, 291 N.C. 710, 232 S.E.2d 203 (1977).

And to Bring Litigation to a Prompt Disposition on the Merits. — The purpose of summary judgment is to bring litigation to an early decision on the merits without the delay and expense of a trial where it can be readily demonstrated that no material facts are in issue. Kessing v. National Mtg. Corp., 278 N.C. 523, 180 S.E.2d 823 (1971); Blades v. City of Raleigh, 280 N.C. 531, 187 S.E.2d 35 (1972); McNair v. Boyette, 282 N.C. 230, 192 S.E.2d 457 (1972); Yount v. Lowe, 24 N.C. App. 48, 209 S.E.2d 867 (1974); 288 N.C. 90, 215 S.E.2d 563 (1975); Barrett v. Phillips, 29 N.C. App. 220, 223 S.E.2d 918 (1976); Carr v. Great Lakes Carbon Corp., 49 N.C. App. 631, 272 S.E.2d 374 (1980), cert. denied, 302 N.C. 217, 276 S.E.2d 914 (1981); Texaco, Inc. v. Creel, 57 N.C. App. 611, 292 S.E.2d 130, aff'd, 310 N.C. 695, 314 S.E.2d 506 (1984); Jones v. City of Burlington, 58 N.C. App. 193, 293 S.E.2d 252 (1982); Southern Ry. v. ADM Milling Co., 58 N.C. App. 667, 294 S.E.2d 750, cert. denied, 307 N.C. 270, 299 S.E.2d 215 (1982); Angola Farm Supply & Equip. Co. v. FMC Corp., 59 N.C. App. 272, 296 S.E.2d 503 (1982); Harris v. Walden, 314 N.C. 284, 333 S.E.2d 254 (1985); Campbell v. Board of Educ., 76 N.C. App. 495, 333 S.E.2d 507 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 390, 338 S.E.2d 878 (1986).

Summary judgment is a device to make possible the prompt disposition of controversies on their merits without a trial, if in essence there is no real dispute as to the salient facts. Pridgen v. Hughes, 9 N.C. App. 635, 177 S.E.2d 425 (1970); Town of Southern Pines v. Mohr, 30 N.C. App. 342, 226 S.E.2d 865 (1976).

This rule is for the disposition of cases where there is no genuine issue of fact. Kessing v. National Mtg. Corp., 278 N.C. 523, 180 S.E.2d 823 (1971); Riggins v. County of Mecklenburg, 14 N.C. App. 624, 188 S.E.2d 749 (1972); Caldwell v. Deese, 288 N.C. 375, 218 S.E.2d 379 (1975); Barrett v. Phillips, 29 N.C. App. 220, 223 S.E.2d 918 (1976); Baumann v. Smith, 298 N.C. 778, 260 S.E.2d 626 (1979).

The purpose of the motion for summary judgment is to determine prior to trial whether there is any genuine issue with respect to any material fact and, if not, to provide for an early and effective disposition of the matter. Doggett v. Welborn, 18 N.C. App. 105, 196 S.E.2d 36, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 665, 197 S.E.2d 873 (1973); Britt v. Britt, 26 N.C. App. 132, 215 S.E.2d 172, appeal dismissed, 288 N.C. 238, 217 S.E.2d 678 (1975); Carroll v. Rountree, 34 N.C. App. 167, 237 S.E.2d 566 (1977), aff'd on rehearing, 36 N.C. App. 156, 243 S.E.2d 821,

While a day in court may be a constitutional necessity when there are disputed questions of fact, the function of the motion of summary judgment is to smoke out if there is any case, i.e., any genuine dispute as to any material fact, and if there is no case, to conserve judicial time and energy by avoiding an unnecessary trial and by providing a speedy and efficient summary disposition. Pridgen v. Hughes, 9 N.C. App. 635, 177 S.E.2d 425 (1970); Town of Southern Pines v. Mohr, 30 N.C. App. 342, 226 S.E.2d 865 (1976).

Summary judgment allows quick and final disposition of claims where there is no real question as to whether plaintiff should recover, or where the defendant has established a complete defense. Oakley v. Little, 49 N.C. App. 650, 272 S.E.2d 370 (1980).

The purpose of this rule is to eliminate formal trials where only questions of law are involved. Kessing v. National Mtg. Corp., 278 N.C. 523, 180 S.E.2d 823 (1971); Nat Harrison Assocs. v. North Carolina State Ports Auth., 280 N.C. 251, 185 S.E.2d 793 (1972); Riggins v. County of Mecklenburg, 14 N.C. App. 624, 188 S.E.2d 749 (1972); Caldwell v. Deese, 288 N.C. 375, 218 S.E.2d 379 (1975); Nasco Equip. Co. v. Mason, 291 N.C. 145, 229 S.E.2d 278 (1976); Barrett v. Phillips, 29 N.C. App. 220, 223 S.E.2d 918 (1976); Baumann v. Smith, 298 N.C. 778, 260 S.E.2d 626 (1979); Phillips v. Universal Underwriters Ins. Co., 43 N.C. App. 56, 257 S.E.2d 671 (1979); Thompson v. Northwestern Sec. Life Ins. Co., 44 N.C. App. 668, 262 S.E.2d 397, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 202, 269 S.E.2d 620 (1980); Poindexter v. Sanco Corp., 44 N.C. App. 694, 262 S.E.2d 333 (1980); Asheville Contracting Co. v. City of Wilson, 62 N.C. App. 329, 303 S.E.2d 365 (1983).

The purpose of a summary judgment motion is to eliminate a trial when, based on the pleadings and supporting materials, the trial court determines that only questions of law, not fact, are at issue. Loy v. Lorm Corp., 52 N.C. App. 428, 278 S.E.2d 897 (1981).

The purpose of summary judgment is to eliminate formal trials where only questions of law are involved by allowing summary disposition for either party when a fatal weakness in the claim or defense is exposed. Gray v. Hager, 69 N.C. App. 331, 317 S.E.2d 59 (1984).

The purpose of this rule is to prevent unnecessary trials when there are no genuine issues of fact and to identify and separate such issues if they are present. Kidd v. Early, 289 N.C. 343, 222 S.E.2d 392 (1976); Arnold v. Howard, 29 N.C. App. 570, 225 S.E.2d 149 (1976); Old S. Life Ins. Co. v. Bank of N.C., 36 N.C. App. 18, 244 S.E.2d 264 (1978); Pierce Concrete, Inc. v. Cannon Realty & Constr. Co., 77 N.C. App. 411, 335 S.E.2d 30 (1985).

The purpose of summary judgment is to eliminate formal trials where only questions of law are involved by permitting penetration of an unfounded claim or defense in advance of trial and allowing summary disposition for either party when a fatal weakness in the claim or defense is exposed. Pressman v. University of N.C., 78 N.C. App. 296, 337 S.E.2d 644 (1985), cert. granted, 315 N.C. 589, 341 S.E.2d 28 (1986).

The purpose of a summary judgment motion is to foreclose the need for a trial when, based upon the pleadings and supporting materials, the trial court determines that only questions of law, not fact, are to be decided. Robertson v. Hartman, 90 N.C. App. 250, 368 S.E.2d 199 (1988).

Thus Saving Time and Expense. — The obvious purpose of summary judgment is to save time and expense in cases where there is no "genuine issue" as to any material fact. Dandy v. Watkins, 288 N.C. 447, 219 S.E.2d 214 (1975).

One purpose of motion for summary judgment is to avoid useless trials when a debtor has chosen to defend rather than default. Land-of-Sky Regional Council v. County of Henderson, 78 N.C. App. 85, 336 S.E.2d 653 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 553, 344 S.E.2d 7 (1986).

The purpose of a motion for summary judgment is to avoid a useless trial. N.C. Coastal Motor Line v. Everette Truck Line, 77 N.C. App. 149, 334 S.E.2d 499 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 391, 338 S.E.2d 880 (1986).

It is not the purpose of the summary judgment procedure to resolve disputed material issues of fact. Patterson v. Reid, 10 N.C. App. 22, 178 S.E.2d 1 (1970); Blackmon v. Valley Decorating Co., 11 N.C. App. 137, 180 S.E.2d 396 (1971); Robinson v. McMahan, 11 N.C. App. 275, 181 S.E.2d 147, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 395, 183 S.E.2d 243 (1971); Millsaps v. Wilkes Contracting Co., 14 N.C. App. 321, 188 S.E.2d 663, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 623, 190 S.E.2d 466 (1972); Stonestreet v. Compton Motors, Inc., 18 N.C. App. 527, 197 S.E.2d 579 (1973); Reid v. Reid, 32 N.C. App. 750, 233 S.E.2d 620 (1977); Carroll v. Rountree, 34 N.C. App. 167, 237 S.E.2d 566 (1977), aff'd on rehearing, 36 N.C. App. 156, 243 S.E.2d 821, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 549, 248 S.E.2d 725 (1978).

The purpose of this rule is not to allow the court to decide an issue of fact, but to determine whether a genuine issue of fact exists and thereby eliminate the necessity of a formal trial where only questions of law are involved and a fatal weakness in the claim or defense of a party is exposed. Econo-Travel Motor Hotel Corp. v. Taylor, 301 N.C. 200, 271 S.E.2d 54 (1980).

Summary judgment is not a device to resolve factual disputes; however, complex facts and legal issues do not preclude summary judgment. Land-of-Sky Regional Council v. County of Henderson, 78 N.C. App. 85, 336 S.E.2d 653 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 553, 344 S.E.2d 7 (1986).

Nor to Test the Sufficiency of the Evidence. — The office of summary judgment is not to test the sufficiency of the evidence. Mitchell v. Mitchell, 12 N.C. App. 54, 182 S.E.2d 627 (1971).

The summary judgment rule was not intended to deprive a party of a jury trial. Kidd v. Early, 289 N.C. 343, 222 S.E.2d 392 (1976).

Nor to Provide a Quick and Easy Method of Clearing the Docket. — The purpose of summary judgment is not to provide a quick and easy method for clearing the docket, but is to permit the disposition of cases in which there is no genuine controversy concerning any fact material to issues raised by the pleadings, so that the litigation involves questions of law only. First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Branch Banking & Trust Co., 282 N.C. 44, 191 S.E.2d 683 (1972); Housing, Inc. v. Weaver, 37 N.C. App. 284, 246 S.E.2d 219 (1978), aff'd, 296 N.C. 581, 251 S.E.2d 457 (1979); Durham v. Vine, 40 N.C. App. 564, 253 S.E.2d 316 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Roumillat v. Simplistic Enters., Inc., 331 N.C. 57, 414 S.E.2d 339 (1992), overruled on other grounds, Nelson v. Freeland, 349 N.C. 615, 507 S.E.2d 882 (1998).

III. PROPRIETY OF SUMMARY JUDGMENT.

A. In General.

Summary judgment is a drastic remedy. First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Branch Banking & Trust Co., 282 N.C. 44, 191 S.E.2d 683 (1972); Billings v. Joseph Harris Co., 27 N.C. App. 689, 220 S.E.2d 361 (1975), aff'd, 290 N.C. 502, 226 S.E.2d 321 (1976); Wilson Bros. v. Mobil Oil, 63 N.C. App. 334, 305 S.E.2d 40, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 634, 308 S.E.2d 718, 308 S.E.2d 719 (1983); Bradshaw v. McElroy, 62 N.C. App. 515, 302 S.E.2d 908 (1983).

And Must Be Used Cautiously. — Summary judgment is a drastic remedy, one to be approached with caution. Billings v. Joseph Harris Co., 27 N.C. App. 689, 220 S.E.2d 361 (1975), aff'd, 290 N.C. 502, 226 S.E.2d 321 (1976); DeCarlo v. Gerryco, Inc., 46 N.C. App. 15, 264 S.E.2d 370; Southern Watch Supply Co. v. Regal Chrysler-Plymouth, Inc., 69 N.C. App. 164, 316 S.E.2d 318, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 496, 322 S.E.2d 560 (1984).

Summary judgment should be used cautiously. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Gillespie, 291 N.C. 303, 230 S.E.2d 375 (1976).

Requirement that summary judgment be entered only where there is no genuine disputed factual issue and the party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law should be cautiously observed. Volkman v. DP Assocs., 48 N.C. App. 155, 268 S.E.2d 265 (1980).

While the granting of summary judgment is a drastic remedy and should be granted cautiously, summary judgment is appropriate when the nonmoving party cannot produce evidence of an essential element of his claim. Anderson v. Canipe, 69 N.C. App. 534, 317 S.E.2d 44 (1984).

Especially in Negligence Cases. — Summary judgment is a drastic measure, and it should be used with caution, especially in a negligence case in which a jury ordinarily applies the reasonable person standard to the facts of each case. Williams v. Carolina Power & Light Co., 296 N.C. 400, 250 S.E.2d 255 (1979); Willis v. Duke Power Co., 42 N.C. App. 582, 257 S.E.2d 471 (1979); Brown v. Duke Power Co., 45 N.C. App. 384, 263 S.E.2d 366, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 194, 269 S.E.2d 615 (1980); Holcomb v. United States Fire Ins. Co., 52 N.C. App. 474, 279 S.E.2d 50 (1981); Laughter v. Southern Pump & Tank Co., 75 N.C. App. 185, 330 S.E.2d 51, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 666, 335 S.E.2d 495 (1985).

Summary judgment is a somewhat drastic remedy and should be granted cautiously, especially in actions alleging negligence as a basis of recovery. Dumouchelle v. Duke Univ., 69 N.C. App. 471, 317 S.E.2d 100 (1984).

Although North Carolina appellate courts have consistently held that summary judgment is rarely appropriate in negligence actions, summary judgment should be entered where the forecast of evidence before the trial court demonstrates that a plaintiff cannot support an essential element of his claim. Thus, summary judgment was appropriate in action arising from automobile collision. Patterson v. Pierce, 115 N.C. App. 142, 443 S.E.2d 770, cert. denied, 337 N.C. 803, 449 S.E.2d 749 (1994).

And Awarded Only Where the Truth Is Clear. — Summary judgment is an extreme remedy and should be awarded only where the truth is quite clear. Lee v. Shor, 10 N.C. App. 231, 178 S.E.2d 101 (1970); Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Chantos, 25 N.C. App. 482, 214 S.E.2d 438, cert. denied, 287 N.C. 465, 215 S.E.2d 624 (1975); Edwards v. Means, 36 N.C. App. 122, 243 S.E.2d 161, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 260, 245 S.E.2d 777 (1978); Volkman v. DP Assocs., 48 N.C. App. 155, 268 S.E.2d 265 (1980); Warren v. Rosso & Mastracco, Inc., 78 N.C. App. 163, 336 S.E.2d 699 (1985).

So That No Party Is Deprived of Trial on a Genuinely Disputed Factual Issue. — Since this rule provides a somewhat drastic remedy, it must be used with due regard to its purposes and a cautious observance of its requirements, in order that no person shall be deprived of a trial on a genuinely disputed factual issue. Kessing v. National Mtg. Corp., 278 N.C. 523, 180 S.E.2d 823 (1971); Moore v. Bryson, 11 N.C. App. 260, 181 S.E.2d 113 (1971); Miller v. Snipes, 12 N.C. App. 342, 183 S.E.2d 270, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 619, 184 S.E.2d 883 (1971); Koontz v. City of Winston-Salem, 280 N.C. 513, 186 S.E.2d 897 (1972); Executive Leasing Assocs. v. Rowland, 30 N.C. App. 590, 227 S.E.2d 642 (1976); Texaco, Inc. v. Creel, 57 N.C. App. 611, 292 S.E.2d 130, aff'd, 310 N.C. 695, 314 S.E.2d 506 (1984); Angola Farm Supply & Equip. Co. v. FMC Corp., 59 N.C. App. 272, 296 S.E.2d 503 (1982); Godwin Sprayers, Inc. v. Utica Mut. Ins. Co., 59 N.C. App. 497, 296 S.E.2d 843 (1982), cert. denied, 307 N.C. 576, 299 S.E.2d 646 (1983); Sauls v. Charlotte Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 62 N.C. App. 533, 303 S.E.2d 358 (1983); Justus v. Deutsch, 62 N.C. App. 711, 303 S.E.2d 571, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 821, 310 S.E.2d 349 (1983); Byrd Motor Lines v. Dunlop Tire & Rubber Corp., 63 N.C. App. 292, 304 S.E.2d 773 (1983), cert. denied, 310 N.C. 624, 315 S.E.2d 689 (1984); Barnes v. Wilson Hdwe. Co., 77 N.C. App. 473, 336 S.E.2d 457 (1985).

Where matters involving the credibility and weight of the evidence exist, summary judgment ordinarily should be denied. Burrow v. Westinghouse Elec. Corp., 88 N.C. App. 347, 363 S.E.2d 215, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 111, 367 S.E.2d 910 (1988).

Summary judgment may not be used to resolve factual disputes which are material to the disposition of the action. Robertson v. Hartman, 90 N.C. App. 250, 368 S.E.2d 199 (1988).

Where there is a need to find facts, then summary judgment is not an appropriate device to employ, provided those facts are material. Robertson v. Hartman, 90 N.C. App. 250, 368 S.E.2d 199 (1988).

Generally Summary Judgment Inappropriate Where Subjective Feelings or Conflicting Evidence Is Involved. — Generally summary judgment is inappropriate when issues such as motive, intent, and other subjective feelings and reactions are material, or when the evidence presented is subject to conflicting interpretations, or reasonable men might differ as to its significance. Smith v. Currie, 40 N.C. App. 739, 253 S.E.2d 645, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 612, 257 S.E.2d 219 (1979); Feibus & Co. v. Godley Constr. Co., 301 N.C. 294, 271 S.E.2d 385 (1980), rehearing denied, 301 N.C. 727, 274 S.E.2d 228 (1981).

Summary judgment is rarely proper when a state of mind such as intent or knowledge is at issue. Valdese Gen. Hosp. v. Burns, 79 N.C. App. 163, 339 S.E.2d 23 (1986); Robertson v. Hartman, 90 N.C. App. 250, 368 S.E.2d 199 (1988).

Summary judgment is generally not appropriate where intent or other subjective feelings are at issue. The rule that intent should generally be a question of fact for the jury does not mean, however, that it should always be so. Little v. National Servs. Indus., Inc., 79 N.C. App. 688, 340 S.E.2d 510 (1986).

Two types of cases involve an absence of material issues of fact: (a) Those where a claim or defense is utterly baseless in fact, and (b) those where only a question of law on the indisputable facts is in controversy and it can be appropriately decided without full exposure of trial. Kessing v. National Mtg. Corp., 278 N.C. 523, 180 S.E.2d 823 (1971); Blades v. City of Raleigh, 280 N.C. 531, 187 S.E.2d 35 (1972); McNair v. Boyette, 282 N.C. 230, 192 S.E.2d 457 (1972); Calhoun v. Calhoun, 18 N.C. App. 429, 197 S.E.2d 83 (1973); Baumann v. Smith, 298 N.C. 778, 260 S.E.2d 626 (1979); Rockingham Square Shopping Center, Inc. v. Integon Life Ins. Corp., 52 N.C. App. 633, 279 S.E.2d 918, cert. denied, 304 N.C. 196, 285 S.E.2d 101 (1981).

Summary judgment should be granted only when movant is clearly entitled thereto. Houck v. Overcash, 282 N.C. 623, 193 S.E.2d 905 (1973).

Test Is Whether There Is Any Genuine Issue as to Any Material Fact. — Where a motion for summary judgment, the test is whether on the basis of the materials presented to the court there is any genuine issue as to any material fact. Alltop v. J.C. Penney Co., 10 N.C. App. 692, 179 S.E.2d 885, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 348, 182 S.E.2d 580 (1971); Prather, Thomas, Campbell, Pridgeon, Inc. v. Florilina Properties, Inc., 29 N.C. App. 316, 224 S.E.2d 289 (1976); Lowe v. Murchison, 44 N.C. App. 488, 261 S.E.2d 255 (1980).

The critical question for determination by the trial court in considering a motion for summary judgment is whether the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, establish a genuine issue as to any material fact. Johnston County Tuberculosis Ass'n v. North Carolina Tuberculosis & Respiratory Disease Ass'n, 15 N.C. App. 492, 190 S.E.2d 264 (1972); In re Will of Edgerton, 29 N.C. App. 60, 223 S.E.2d 524, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 308, 225 S.E.2d 832 (1976); Oliver v. Roberts, 49 N.C. App. 311, 271 S.E.2d 399 (1980).

Upon a motion for summary judgment, the trial court first must determine whether there is a genuine issue as to any material fact. Only after the trial court determines that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact, can it dispose of the matter. Housing, Inc. v. Weaver, 37 N.C. App. 284, 246 S.E.2d 219 (1978), aff'd, 296 N.C. 581, 251 S.E.2d 457 (1979).

And Whether Party Is Entitled to Judgment. — The test for summary judgment is twofold: Is there a genuine issue of material fact, and is the moving party entitled to judgment as a matter of law? Gore v. Hill, 52 N.C. App. 620, 279 S.E.2d 102, cert. denied, 303 N.C. 710, 283 S.E.2d 136 (1981); First Am. Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Royall, 77 N.C. App. 131, 334 S.E.2d 792 (1985).

The test on a motion for summary judgment made under this rule and supported by matters outside the pleadings is whether, on the basis of the materials presented to the courts, there is any genuine issue as to any material fact and whether the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Barbour v. Little, 37 N.C. App. 686, 247 S.E.2d 252, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 733, 248 S.E.2d 862 (1978); Ward v. Durham Life Ins. Co., 90 N.C. App. 286, 368 S.E.2d 391 (1988), aff'd, 325 N.C. 202, 381 S.E.2d 698 (1989).

On motion for summary judgment, the question before the court is whether the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that a party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Gregory v. Perdue, Inc., 47 N.C. App. 655, 267 S.E.2d 584 (1980); Buffington v. Buffington, 69 N.C. App. 483, 317 S.E.2d 97 (1984); Dumouchelle v. Duke Univ., 69 N.C. App. 471, 317 S.E.2d 100 (1984); Herbert v. Browning-Ferris Indus. of S. Atl., Inc., 90 N.C. App. 339, 368 S.E.2d 416 (1988); Meadows v. Cigar Supply Co., 91 N.C. App. 404, 371 S.E.2d 765 (1988).

Where there is no genuine issue as to any material fact, the sole question for the court's determination is whether defendant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Weaver v. Home Sec. Life Ins. Co., 20 N.C. App. 135, 201 S.E.2d 63 (1973); Prather, Thomas, Campbell, Pridgeon, Inc. v. Florilina Properties, Inc., 29 N.C. App. 316, 224 S.E.2d 289 (1976).

Determination of what constitutes a "genuine issue as to any material fact" is often difficult. Kessing v. National Mtg. Corp., 278 N.C. 523, 180 S.E.2d 823 (1971); McNair v. Boyette, 282 N.C. 230, 192 S.E.2d 457 (1972); Lowman v. Huffman, 15 N.C. App. 700, 190 S.E.2d 700 (1972); Zimmerman v. Hogg & Allen, 286 N.C. 24, 209 S.E.2d 795 (1974); Norfolk & W. Ry. v. Werner Indus., Inc., 286 N.C. 89, 209 S.E.2d 734 (1974); Nasco Equip. Co. v. Mason, 291 N.C. 145, 229 S.E.2d 278 (1976); Barrett v. Phillips, 29 N.C. App. 220, 223 S.E.2d 918 (1976).

A genuine issue is one which can be maintained by substantial evidence. Kessing v. National Mtg. Corp., 278 N.C. 523, 180 S.E.2d 823 (1971); Koontz v. City of Winston-Salem, 280 N.C. 513, 186 S.E.2d 897 (1972); McNair v. Boyette, 282 N.C. 230, 192 S.E.2d 457 (1972); Zimmerman v. Hogg & Allen, 286 N.C. 24, 209 S.E.2d 795 (1974); Norfolk & W. Ry. v. Werner Indus., Inc., 286 N.C. 89, 209 S.E.2d 734 (1974); Barrett v. Phillips, 29 N.C. App. 220, 223 S.E.2d 918 (1976); Gladstein v. South Square Assocs., 39 N.C. App. 171, 249 S.E.2d 827 (1978), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 736, 254 S.E.2d 178 (1979); Steel Creek Dev. Corp. v. Smith, 300 N.C. 631, 268 S.E.2d 205 (1980); City of Thomasville v. Lease-Afex, Inc., 300 N.C. 651, 268 S.E.2d 190 (1980); Bernick v. Jurden, 306 N.C. 435, 293 S.E.2d 405 (1982); Hillman v. United States Liab. Ins. Co., 59 N.C. App. 145, 296 S.E.2d 302 (1982); Godwin Sprayers, Inc. v. Utica Mut. Ins. Co., 59 N.C. App. 497, 296 S.E.2d 843 (1982), cert. denied, 307 N.C. 576, 299 S.E.2d 646 (1983); Justus v. Deutsch, 62 N.C. App. 711, 303 S.E.2d 571, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 821, 310 S.E.2d 349 (1983); Byrd Motor Lines v. Dunlop Tire & Rubber Corp., 63 N.C. App. 292, 304 S.E.2d 773 (1983), cert. denied, 310 N.C. 624, 315 S.E.2d 689 (1984); Anderson v. Canipe, 69 N.C. App. 534, 317 S.E.2d 44 (1984); All In One Maintenance Serv. v. Beech Mt. Constr. Co., 70 N.C. App. 49, 318 S.E.2d 856 (1984); Cox v. Cox, 75 N.C. App. 354, 330 S.E.2d 506 (1985); Surrette v. Duke Power Co., 78 N.C. App. 647, 338 S.E.2d 129 (1986); Sturm v. Goss, 90 N.C. App. 326, 368 S.E.2d 399 (1988).

A genuine issue of material fact is defined as one in which the facts alleged are such as to constitute a legal defense or are of such nature as to affect the result of the action, or if the resolution of the issue is so essential that the party against whom it is resolved may not prevail. A genuine issue is one which can be maintained by substantial evidence. Smith v. Smith, 65 N.C. App. 139, 308 S.E.2d 504 (1983).

When Issue Is Material. — An issue is material if the facts alleged are such as to constitute a legal defense or are of such nature as to affect the result of the action, or if the resolution of the issue is so essential that the party against whom it is resolved may not prevail. Kessing v. National Mtg. Corp., 278 N.C. 523, 180 S.E.2d 823 (1971); Koontz v. City of Winston-Salem, 280 N.C. 513, 186 S.E.2d 897 (1972); McNair v. Boyette, 282 N.C. 230, 192 S.E.2d 457 (1972); Lowman v. Huffman, 15 N.C. App. 700, 190 S.E.2d 700 (1972); Kiser v. Snyder, 17 N.C. App. 445, 194 S.E.2d 638, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 257, 195 S.E.2d 689 (1973); Zimmerman v. Hogg & Allen, 286 N.C. 24, 209 S.E.2d 795 (1974); Norfolk & W. Ry. v. Werner Indus., Inc., 286 N.C. 89, 209 S.E.2d 734 (1974); Nasco Equip. Co. v. Mason, 291 N.C. 145, 229 S.E.2d 278 (1976); Mecklenburg County v. Westbery, 32 N.C. App. 630, 233 S.E.2d 658 (1977); First Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Northwestern Ins. Co., 44 N.C. App. 414, 261 S.E.2d 242 (1980); Loy v. Lorm Corp., 52 N.C. App. 428, 278 S.E.2d 897 (1981); Godwin Sprayers, Inc. v. Utica Mut. Ins. Co., 59 N.C. App. 497, 296 S.E.2d 843 (1982), cert. denied, 307 N.C. 576, 299 S.E.2d 646 (1983); Byrd Motor Lines v. Dunlop Tire & Rubber Corp., 63

N.C. App. 292, 304 S.E.2d 773 (1983), cert. denied, 310 N.C. 624, 315 S.E.2d 689 (1984); Cox v. Cox, 75 N.C. App. 354, 330 S.E.2d 506 (1985).

An issue is material if the facts alleged would constitute a legal defense, or would affect the result of the action, or if its resolution would prevent the party against whom it is resolved from prevailing in the action. Raleigh Paint & Wallpaper Co. v. Peacock & Assocs., 38 N.C. App. 144, 247 S.E.2d 728 (1978), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 415, 251 S.E.2d 470 (1979); Miller v. Lemon Tree Inn of Wilmington, Inc., 39 N.C. App. 133, 249 S.E.2d 836 (1978); Gladstein v. South Square Assocs., 39 N.C. App. 171, 249 S.E.2d 827 (1978), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 736, 254 S.E.2d 178 (1979); Steel Creek Dev. Corp. v. Smith, 300 N.C. 631, 268 S.E.2d 205 (1980); City of Thomasville v. Lease-Afex, Inc., 300 N.C. 651, 268 S.E.2d 190 (1980); Hillman v. United States Liab. Ins. Co., 59 N.C. App. 145, 296 S.E.2d 302 (1982); Sauls v. Charlotte Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 62 N.C. App. 533, 303 S.E.2d 358 (1983); Elmore's Feed & Seed, Inc. v. Patrick, 62 N.C. App. 715, 303 S.E.2d 394 (1983).

An issue is material if the facts alleged would constitute a legal defense or would affect the result of the action. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Gillespie, 291 N.C. 303, 230 S.E.2d 375 (1976).

A fact is material if it would constitute or would irrevocably establish any material element of a claim or defense. Bernick v. Jurden, 306 N.C. 435, 293 S.E.2d 405 (1982); Anderson v. Canipe, 69 N.C. App. 534, 317 S.E.2d 44 (1984); All In One Maintenance Serv. v. Beech Mt. Constr. Co., 70 N.C. App. 49, 318 S.E.2d 856 (1984); Surrette v. Duke Power Co., 78 N.C. App. 647, 338 S.E.2d 129 (1986).

A fact is material if it constitutes a legal defense, such as the bar of an applicable statute of limitations. Pembee Mfg. Corp. v. Cape Fear Constr. Co., 313 N.C. 488, 329 S.E.2d 350 (1985); Boundreau v. Baughman, 86 N.C. App. 165, 356 S.E.2d 907 (1987), rev'd in part on other grounds, modified and aff'd in part, 322 N.C. 331, 368 S.E.2d 849 (1988).

In application for life insurance policy, written questions and answers relating to health are material as a matter of law. Sauls v. Charlotte Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 62 N.C. App. 533, 303 S.E.2d 358 (1983).

How Absence of Genuine Issue of Material Fact Established. — A party may show that there is no genuine issue as to any material facts by showing that no facts are in dispute. And where an issue of fact arises, a party may show that it is not a genuine issue as to a material fact by showing that the party with the burden of proof in the action will not be able to present substantial evidence which would allow that issue to be resolved in his favor. Best v. Perry, 41 N.C. App. 107, 254 S.E.2d 281 (1979).

A question of fact which is immaterial does not preclude summary judgment. Kessing v. National Mtg. Corp., 278 N.C. 523, 180 S.E.2d 823 (1971); McNair v. Boyette, 282 N.C. 230, 192 S.E.2d 457 (1972); Keith v. G.D. Reddick, Inc., 15 N.C. App. 94, 189 S.E.2d 775 (1972); Norfolk & W. Ry. v. Werner Indus., Inc., 286 N.C. 89, 209 S.E.2d 734 (1974); Johnson v. Northwestern Bank, 27 N.C. App. 240, 218 S.E.2d 722 (1975); Nasco Equip. Co. v. Mason, 291 N.C. 145, 229 S.E.2d 278 (1976); Mecklenburg County v. Westbery, 32 N.C. App. 630, 233 S.E.2d 658 (1977); Capps v. City of Raleigh, 35 N.C. App. 290, 241 S.E.2d 527 (1978); Ledford v. Ledford, 49 N.C. App. 226, 271 S.E.2d 393 (1980); Little v. National Servs. Indus., Inc., 79 N.C. App. 688, 340 S.E.2d 510 (1986); Prince v. Mallard Lakes Ass'n, 82 N.C. App. 431, 346 S.E.2d 191, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 508, 349 S.E.2d 865 (1986); Dull v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co., 85 N.C. App. 310, 354 S.E.2d 752, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 512, 358 S.E.2d 518 (1987).

Summary Judgment to Be Granted Only Where No Genuine Issue of Material Fact Is Presented. — Summary judgment is an extreme remedy and is appropriate only where no genuine issue of material fact is presented. Long v. Long, 15 N.C. App. 525, 190 S.E.2d 415 (1972); Haddock v. Smithson, 30 N.C. App. 228, 226 S.E.2d 411, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 776, 229 S.E.2d 32 (1976); Emanuel v. Colonial Life & Accident Ins. Co., 35 N.C. App. 435, 242 S.E.2d 381 (1978).

Summary judgment should be granted with caution and only where the movant has established the nonexistence of any genuine issue of fact. English v. Holden Beach Realty Corp., 41 N.C. App. 1, 254 S.E.2d 223 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Crow v. Citicorp Acceptance Co., 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

In ruling on a motion for summary judgment the court does not resolve issues of fact, and must deny the motion if there is any issue of genuine material fact. Singleton v. Stewart, 280 N.C. 460, 186 S.E.2d 400 (1972); Whitten v. Bob King's AMC/Jeep, Inc., 30 N.C. App. 161, 226 S.E.2d 530 (1976), rev'd on other grounds, 292 N.C. 84, 231 S.E.2d 891 (1977); Baumann v. Smith, 298 N.C. 778, 260 S.E.2d 626 (1979); Southland Assocs. v. Peach, 52 N.C. App. 340, 278 S.E.2d 293, cert. denied, 303 N.C. 546, 281 S.E.2d 394 (1981).

Summary judgment may not be granted if there is any genuine issue as to any material fact. Williams v. North Carolina State Bd. of Educ., 284 N.C. 588, 201 S.E.2d 889 (1974); Gray v. American Express Co., 34 N.C. App. 714, 239 S.E.2d 621 (1977).

The motion for summary judgment should not be granted unless it is perfectly clear that no issue of fact is involved and inquiry into the facts is not desirable to clarify the application of the law. Dendy v. Watkins, 288 N.C. 447, 219 S.E.2d 214 (1975); Carlton v. Carlton, 74 N.C. App. 690, 329 S.E.2d 682 (1985).

Before entry of summary judgment it must be clearly established by the record before the trial court that there is a lack of any triable issue of fact. A-S-P Assocs. v. City of Raleigh, 38 N.C. App. 271, 247 S.E.2d 800 (1978), rev'd on other grounds, 298 N.C. 207, 258 S.E.2d 444 (1979).

Generally, on undisputed aspects of the opposing evidential forecast, where there is no genuine issue of fact, the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Taylor v. Greensboro News, Co., 57 N.C. App. 426, 291 S.E.2d 852 (1982), appeal dismissed, 307 N.C. 459, 298 S.E.2d 385 (1983); Quality Inns Int'l, Inc. v. Booth, Fish, Simpson, Harrison & Hall, 58 N.C. App. 1, 292 S.E.2d 755 (1982); Bicycle Transit Auth., Inc. v. Bell, 314 N.C. 219, 333 S.E.2d 299 (1985).

Summary judgment is proper only where there are no material facts in issue. Southern Watch Supply Co. v. Regal Chrysler-Plymouth, Inc., 69 N.C. App. 164, 316 S.E.2d 318, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 496, 322 S.E.2d 560 (1984).

Summary judgment is appropriate only where there are no genuine and material issues of fact to be resolved. Harris-Teeter Supermarkets, Inc. v. Hampton, 76 N.C. App. 649, 334 S.E.2d 81, cert. denied, 315 N.C. 183, 337 S.E.2d 857 (1985).

Summary judgment under this section should be granted when there is no genuine issue of material fact and only issues of law remain. Johnson v. Holbrook, 77 N.C. App. 485, 335 S.E.2d 53 (1985).

Evidence held insufficient to establish any genuine issue of material fact. Long v. Vertical Technologies, Inc., 113 N.C. App. 598, 439 S.E.2d 797 (1994).

And Where a Party Is Entitled to Judgment as a Matter of Law. — Summary judgment is proper only when there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and one party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Bogle v. Duke Power Co., 27 N.C. App. 318, 219 S.E.2d 308 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 296, 222 S.E.2d 695 (1976); Mecklenburg County v. Westbery, 32 N.C. App. 630, 233 S.E.2d 658 (1977); Frye v. Arrington, 58 N.C. App. 180, 292 S.E.2d 772 (1982); Laughter v. Southern Pump & Tank Co., 75 N.C. App. 185, 330 S.E.2d 51, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 666, 335 S.E.2d 495 (1985); Schaffner v. Cumberland County Hosp. Sys., 77 N.C. App. 689, 336 S.E.2d 116 (1985); Valdese Gen. Hosp. v. Burns, 79 N.C. App. 163, 339 S.E.2d 23 (1986); Ward v. Turcotte, 79 N.C. App. 458, 339 S.E.2d 444 (1986); Little v. National Servs. Indus., Inc., 79 N.C. App. 688, 340 S.E.2d 510 (1986); Vance v. Wiley T. Booth, Inc., 112 N.C. App. 600, 436 S.E.2d 256 (1993).

Rendition of summary judgment is conditioned upon a showing by the movant that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact, and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law. Page v. Sloan, 12 N.C. App. 433, 183 S.E.2d 813 (1971), aff'd, 281 N.C. 697, 190 S.E.2d 189 (1972); Singleton v. Stewart, 280 N.C. 460, 186 S.E.2d 400 (1972); Page v. Sloan, 281 N.C. 697, 190 S.E.2d 189 (1972); Kiser v. Snyder, 17 N.C. App. 445, 194 S.E.2d 638, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 257, 195 S.E.2d 689 (1973); Van Poole v. Messer, 19 N.C. App. 70, 198 S.E.2d 106 (1973); Norfolk & W. Ry. v. Werner Indus., Inc., 286 N.C. 89, 209 S.E.2d 734 (1974); Caldwell v. Deese, 288 N.C. 375, 218 S.E.2d 379 (1975); Parker v. Bennett, 32 N.C. App. 46, 231 S.E.2d 10, cert. denied, 292 N.C. 266, 233 S.E.2d 393 (1977); Harris v. Carter, 33 N.C. App. 179, 234 S.E.2d 472 (1977); Moore v. Fieldcrest Mills, Inc., 36 N.C. App. 350, 244 S.E.2d 208 (1978), aff'd, 296 N.C. 467, 251 S.E.2d 419 (1979); Baumann v. Smith, 41 N.C. App. 223, 254 S.E.2d 627, rev'd on other grounds, 298 N.C. 778, 260 S.E.2d 626 (1979); Strickland v. Tant, 41 N.C. App. 534, 255 S.E.2d 325, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 304, 259 S.E.2d 917 (1979); Willis v. Duke Power Co., 42 N.C. App. 582, 257 S.E.2d 471 (1979); Williams v. Congdon, 43 N.C. App. 53, 257 S.E.2d 677 (1979); Heritage Communities of N.C., Inc. v. Powers, Inc., 49 N.C. App. 656, 272 S.E.2d 399 (1980); Miller v. Triangle Volkswagen, Inc., 55 N.C. App. 593, 286 S.E.2d 608 (1982); Ft. Recovery Indus., Inc. v. Perry, 57 N.C. App. 354, 291 S.E.2d 329 (1982); Candid Camera Video World, Inc. v. Mathews, 76 N.C. App. 634, 334 S.E.2d 94 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 390, 338 S.E.2d 879 (1986).

Motion for summary judgment may be granted only when there is no genuine issue as to any material fact, and the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Zimmerman v. Hogg & Allen, 286 N.C. 24, 209 S.E.2d 795 (1974); North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Gillespie, 291 N.C. 303, 230 S.E.2d 375 (1976); Ballenger v. Crowell, 38 N.C. App. 50, 247 S.E.2d 287 (1978); Branch Banking & Trust Co. v. Creasy, 301 N.C. 44, 269 S.E.2d 117 (1980); First Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Northwestern Ins. Co., 44 N.C. App. 414, 261 S.E.2d 242 (1980); Ellis v. Smith-Broadhurst, Inc., 48 N.C. App. 180, 268 S.E.2d 271 (1980); Cunningham v. Brown, 51 N.C. App. 264, 276 S.E.2d 718 (1981); Loy v. Lorm Corp., 52 N.C. App. 428, 278 S.E.2d 897 (1981); Lattimore v. Fisher's Food Shoppe, Inc., 69 N.C. App. 227, 316 S.E.2d 344 (1984), reversed on other grounds, 313 N.C. 467, 329 S.E.2d 346 (1985); Ivey v. Williams, 74 N.C. App. 532, 328 S.E.2d 837 (1985).

Summary judgment is proper only when the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Lee v. Shor, 10 N.C. App. 231, 178 S.E.2d 101 (1970); Lowman v. Huffman, 15 N.C. App. 700, 190 S.E.2d 700 (1972); Ryals v. Barefoot, 19 N.C. App. 564, 199 S.E.2d 483 (1973); Pilot Freight Carriers, Inc. v. David G. Allen Co., 22 N.C. App. 442, 206 S.E.2d 750 (1974), cert. denied, 287 N.C. 465, 215 S.E.2d 625 (1975), cert. denied, 423 U.S. 1055, 96 S. Ct. 786, 46 L. Ed. 2d 644 (1976); Norfolk & W. Ry. v. Werner Indus., Inc., 286 N.C. 89, 209 S.E.2d 734 (1974); Barnes v. Barnes, 30 N.C. App. 196, 226 S.E.2d 549, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 775, 229 S.E.2d 31 (1976); Haddock v. Smithson, 30 N.C. App. 228, 226 S.E.2d 411, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 776, 229 S.E.2d 32 (1976); Whitten v. Bob King's AMC/Jeep, Inc., 292 N.C. 84, 231 S.E.2d 891 (1977); Reid v. Reid, 32 N.C. App. 750, 233 S.E.2d 620 (1977); Edwards v. Means, 36 N.C. App. 122, 243 S.E.2d 161, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 260, 245 S.E.2d 777 (1978); Bentley v. Langley, 39 N.C. App. 20, 249 S.E.2d 481 (1978), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 735, 254 S.E.2d 176 (1979); Fitzgerald v. Wolf, 40 N.C. App. 197, 252 S.E.2d 523 (1979); Jenkins v. Stewart & Everett Theatres, Inc., 41 N.C. App. 262, 254 S.E.2d 776, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 698, 259 S.E.2d 295 (1979); Neihage v. Kittrell Auto Parts, Inc., 41 N.C. App. 538, 255 S.E.2d 315, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 298, 259 S.E.2d 914 (1979); Stillwell Enters., Inc. v. Interstate Equip. Co., 41 N.C. App. 204, 254 S.E.2d 770 (1979), rev'd on other grounds, 300 N.C. 286, 266 S.E.2d 812 (1980); Johnson v. Phoenix Mut. Life Ins. Co., 44 N.C. App. 210, 261 S.E.2d 135 (1979), rev'd on other grounds, 300 N.C. 247, 266 S.E.2d 610 (1980); Wells v. North Carolina Nat'l Bank, 44 N.C. App. 592, 261 S.E.2d 296 (1980); Thompson v. Northwestern Sec. Life Ins. Co., 44 N.C. App. 668, 262 S.E.2d 397, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 202, 269 S.E.2d 620 (1980); Econo-Travel Motor Hotel Corp. v. Taylor, 45 N.C. App. 229, 262 S.E.2d 869, rev'd on other grounds, 301 N.C. 200, 271 S.E.2d 54 (1980); Bell v. Martin, 299 N.C. 715, 264 S.E.2d 101 (1980); Econo-Travel Motor Hotel Corp. v. Taylor, 301 N.C. 200, 271 S.E.2d 54 (1980); Quail Hollow E. Condominium Ass'n v. Donald J. Scholz Co., 47 N.C. App. 518, 268 S.E.2d 12, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 527, 273 S.E.2d 454 (1980); Brenner v. Little Red Sch. House, Ltd., 302 N.C. 207, 274 S.E.2d 206 (1981); Kent v. Humphries, 303 N.C. 675, 281 S.E.2d 43 (1981); Dealers Specialties, Inc. v. Neighborhood Hous. Servs., Inc., 54 N.C. App. 46, 283 S.E.2d 155 (1981), modified and aff'd, 305 N.C. 633, 291 S.E.2d 137 (1982); Sharpe v. Quality Educ., Inc., 59 N.C. App. 304, 296 S.E.2d 661 (1982); Ruffin v. Contractors & Materials, Inc., 69 N.C. App. 174, 316 S.E.2d 353 (1984); Amoco Oil Co. v. Griffin, 78 N.C. App. 716, 338 S.E.2d 601, cert. denied, 316 N.C. 374, 342 S.E.2d 889 (1986).

In order for the granting of plaintiff's motion for summary judgment to be appropriate, it must appear from the items submitted in support of plaintiff's motion that plaintiff was entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Atkinson v. Wilkerson, 10 N.C. App. 643, 179 S.E.2d 872 (1971); Carr v. Great Lakes Carbon Corp., 49 N.C. App. 631, 272 S.E.2d 374 (1980), cert. denied, 302 N.C. 217, 276 S.E.2d 914 (1981).

If the evidentiary materials filed by the parties indicate that a genuine issue of material fact does exist, the motion for summary judgment must be denied, as the motion may be granted only where there is no such issue and the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Vassey v. Burch, 301 N.C. 68, 269 S.E.2d 137 (1980).

In addition to no issue of fact being present, to grant summary judgment a court must find that on the undisputed aspects of the opposing evidential forecasts the party given judgment is entitled to it as a matter of law. Godwin Sprayers, Inc. v. Utica Mut. Ins. Co., 59 N.C. App. 497, 296 S.E.2d 843 (1982), cert. denied, 307 N.C. 576, 299 S.E.2d 646 (1983).

Summary judgment, like judgment on the pleadings, is appropriately granted only where no disputed issues of fact have been presented and the undisputed facts show that any party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Minor v. Minor, 70 N.C. App. 76, 318 S.E.2d 865, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 495, 322 S.E.2d 558 (1984).

When considering a motion for summary judgment, the question before the court is whether the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that a party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. The burden upon the moving party is to establish that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact remaining to be determined and this burden may be carried by a movant by proving that an essential element of the opposing party's claim is nonexistent. Gray v. Hager, 69 N.C. App. 331, 317 S.E.2d 59 (1984).

A motion for summary judgment should be allowed only when there exists no triable genuine issue of material fact and the movant's forecast of the evidence demonstrates that it is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law. Cashion v. Texas Gulf, Inc., 79 N.C. App. 632, 339 S.E.2d 797 (1986).

Summary judgment is appropriate only where the pleadings, affidavits and other evidentiary materials before the court disclose that there is no genuine issue of material fact and that a party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Rolling Fashion Mart, Inc. v.

Mainor, 80 N.C. App. 213, 341 S.E.2d 61 (1986).

A party moving for summary judgment is entitled to such judgment if he can show, through pleadings and affidavits, that there is no genuine issue of material fact requiring a trial and that he is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Hagler v. Hagler, 319 N.C. 287, 354 S.E.2d 228 (1987).

This rule does not require that party move for summary judgment in order to be entitled to it; however, the nonmovant must be entitled to the judgment as a matter of law. N.C. Coastal Motor Line v. Everette Truck Line, 77 N.C. App. 149, 334 S.E.2d 499 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 391, 338 S.E.2d 880 (1986).

Evidence Must Be Insufficient to Support a Verdict for Nonmovant. — Motion for summary judgment should be granted only if, as a matter of law, the evidence is insufficient to support a verdict for the nonmovant. Freeman v. Sturdivant Dev. Co., 25 N.C. App. 56, 212 S.E.2d 190 (1975).

Even If Facts Claimed by Plaintiff Are Proved or Taken as True. — Summary judgment is proper when it appears that even if the facts as claimed by plaintiff are taken as true, there can be no recovery. Doggett v. Welborn, 18 N.C. App. 105, 196 S.E.2d 36, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 665, 197 S.E.2d 873 (1973); Hudson v. All Star Mills, Inc., 68 N.C. App. 447, 315 S.E.2d 514, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 755, 321 S.E.2d 134 (1984); Lowder v. Lowder, 68 N.C. App. 505, 315 S.E.2d 520, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 759, 321 S.E.2d 138 (1984).

Summary judgment is proper where it appears that even if the facts as claimed by a plaintiff are proved, there can be no recovery, thus providing a device for identifying the factually groundless claim or defense. Pridgen v. Hughes, 9 N.C. App. 635, 177 S.E.2d 425 (1970).

Absence of Evidence Leading to Different Conclusion Must Be Shown. — Before summary judgment may be had, the record must affirmatively show that not only would the moving party be entitled to judgment from the evidence before the court, but it must also show there can be no other evidence from which a jury could reach a different conclusion as to a material fact. Goode v. Tait, Inc., 36 N.C. App. 268, 243 S.E.2d 404, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 465, 246 S.E.2d 215 (1978); McLean v. Sale, 38 N.C. App. 520, 248 S.E.2d 372 (1978), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 585, 254 S.E.2d 32 (1979); Easter v. Lexington Mem. Hosp., 49 N.C. App. 398, 271 S.E.2d 545 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 303 N.C. 303, 278 S.E.2d 253 (1981).

If different material conclusions can be drawn from the evidence, summary judgment should be denied, even though the evidence is uncontradicted. Durham v. Vine, 40 N.C. App. 564, 253 S.E.2d 316 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Roumillat v. Simplistic Enters., Inc., 331 N.C. 57, 414 S.E.2d 339 (1992), overruled on other grounds, Nelson v. Freeland, 349 N.C. 615, 507 S.E.2d 882 (1998); Spector United Employees Credit Union v. Smith, 45 N.C. App. 432, 263 S.E.2d 319 (1980).

Where the evidence of the party to be awarded summary judgment is self-contradictory or allows reasonable inferences inconsistent with conclusions necessary to entitle that party to summary judgment, the trial court should not enter summary judgment and should allow the case to proceed to trial. A-S-P Assocs. v. City of Raleigh, 38 N.C. App. 271, 247 S.E.2d 800 (1978), rev'd on other grounds, 298 N.C. 207, 258 S.E.2d 444 (1979).

Summary judgment should be denied if different material conclusions can be drawn from the evidence. Godwin Sprayers, Inc. v. Utica Mut. Ins. Co., 59 N.C. App. 497, 296 S.E.2d 843 (1982), cert. denied, 307 N.C. 576, 299 S.E.2d 646 (1983); Carlton v. Carlton, 74 N.C. App. 690, 329 S.E.2d 682 (1985); Warren v. Rosso & Mastracco, Inc., 78 N.C. App. 163, 336 S.E.2d 699 (1985); Herbert v. Browning-Ferris Indus. of S. Atl., Inc., 90 N.C. App. 339, 368 S.E.2d 416 (1988).

As Where Moving Papers Affirmatively Disclose a Material Controversy. — Where the moving papers affirmatively disclose that the nature of the controversy presents a good faith and actual, as distinguished from formal, dispute on one or more material issues, summary judgment cannot be used. Page v. Sloan, 281 N.C. 697, 190 S.E.2d 189 (1972); Pitts v. Village Inn Pizza, Inc., 296 N.C. 81, 249 S.E.2d 375 (1978).

Motion for summary judgment must be denied if the opposing party submits material which casts doubts upon the existence of a material fact or upon the credibility of a material witness, or if such doubts are raised by movant's own evidentiary material. Kidd v. Early, 289 N.C. 343, 222 S.E.2d 392 (1976).

Summary judgment is appropriate when movant shows through discovery that the opposing party cannot produce evidence to support an essential element of his claim. Dellinger v. Belk, 34 N.C. App. 488, 238 S.E.2d 788 (1977), cert. denied, 294 N.C. 182, 241 S.E.2d 517 (1978).

Lack of Cause of Action or Defense Supports Grant of Judgment. — Where the pleadings or proof disclose that no cause of action or defense exists, summary judgment may be granted. Kessing v. National Mtg. Corp., 278 N.C. 523, 180 S.E.2d 823 (1971); Nat Harrison Assocs. v. North Carolina State Ports Auth., 280 N.C. 251, 185 S.E.2d 793 (1972); Norfolk & W. Ry. v. Werner Indus., Inc., 286 N.C. 89, 209 S.E.2d 734 (1974); Barrett v. Phillips, 29 N.C. App. 220, 223 S.E.2d 918 (1976).

Where the pleadings or proof disclose that no cause of action exists, summary judgment may be granted. Davenport v. Davenport, 25 N.C. App. 621, 214 S.E.2d 294 (1975); Williams v. Congdon, 43 N.C. App. 53, 257 S.E.2d 677 (1979); Rockingham Square Shopping Center, Inc. v. Town of Madison, 45 N.C. App. 249, 262 S.E.2d 705 (1980).

Summary judgment is appropriately entered if the movant establishes that an essential part or element of the opposing party's claim is nonexistent. Rorrer v. Cooke, 313 N.C. 338, 329 S.E.2d 355 (1985).

Where the pleadings or proof of the plaintiff disclose that no claim exists, summary judgment for defendant is proper. Colonial Bldg. Co. v. Justice, 83 N.C. App. 643, 351 S.E.2d 140 (1986), cert. denied, 319 N.C. 402, 354 S.E.2d 711 (1987).

When the only issues to be decided are issues of law, summary judgment is proper. Wachovia Mtg. Co. v. Autry-Barker-Spurrier Real Estate, Inc., 39 N.C. App. 1, 249 S.E.2d 727 (1978), aff'd, 297 N.C. 696, 256 S.E.2d 688 (1979); Brawley v. Brawley, 87 N.C. App. 545, 361 S.E.2d 759 (1987), cert. denied, 321 N.C. 471, 364 S.E.2d 918 (1988).

And Presence of Difficult Questions of Law Is No Barrier. — Where there is no genuine issue as to the facts, the presence of important or difficult questions of law is no barrier to the granting of summary judgment. Kessing v. National Mtg. Corp., 278 N.C. 523, 180 S.E.2d 823 (1971); Wachovia Mtg. Co. v. Autry-Barker-Spurrier Real Estate, Inc., 39 N.C. App. 1, 249 S.E.2d 727 (1978), aff'd, 297 N.C. 696, 256 S.E.2d 688 (1979).

Summary judgment is appropriate where there is no genuine issue of material fact and the case presents only questions of law. This is true even if the questions of law are complex. VEPCO v. Tillett, 80 N.C. App. 383, 343 S.E.2d 188 (1986).

Movant Entitled to Summary Judgment Where Directed Verdict Would Be Required. — If the materials before the court at the summary judgment hearing would require a directed verdict for defendants at trial, defendants are entitled to summary judgment. Whitaker v. Blackburn, 47 N.C. App. 144, 266 S.E.2d 763 (1980).

If a verdict would be directed for the movant on the evidence presented at the hearing on the motion for summary judgment, the motion for summary judgment may properly be granted. Dendy v. Watkins, 288 N.C. 447, 219 S.E.2d 214 (1975); Haskins v. Carolina Power & Light Co., 47 N.C. App. 664, 267 S.E.2d 587 (1980).

On motion for summary judgment, the test is whether the moving party presents materials which would require a directed verdict in his favor if offered as evidence at trial. Haithcock v. Chimney Rock Co., 10 N.C. App. 696, 179 S.E.2d 865 (1971); Coakley v. Ford Motor Co., 11 N.C. App. 636, 182 S.E.2d 260, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 393, 183 S.E.2d 244 (1971); Millsaps v. Wilkes Contracting Co., 14 N.C. App. 321, 188 S.E.2d 663, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 623, 190 S.E.2d 466 (1972); Fitzgerald v. Wolf, 40 N.C. App. 197, 252 S.E.2d 523 (1979).

Unless Nonmovant Shows a Triable Issue of Fact. — Where a motion for summary judgment is supported by proof which would require a directed verdict in his favor at trial, movant is entitled to summary judgment, unless the opposing party comes forward to show a triable issue of material fact. In re Will of Edgerton, 29 N.C. App. 60, 223 S.E.2d 524, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 308, 225 S.E.2d 832 (1976); Old S. Life Ins. Co. v. Bank of N.C., 36 N.C. App. 18, 244 S.E.2d 264 (1978); Watson v. Watson, 49 N.C. App. 58, 270 S.E.2d 542 (1980).

The opposing party is not entitled to have the motion for summary judgment denied on the mere hope that at trial he will be able to discredit movant's evidence; he must, at the hearing, be able to point out to the court something indicating the existence of a triable issue of material fact. Kidd v. Early, 289 N.C. 343, 222 S.E.2d 392 (1976).

Or Shows Unavailability of Affidavits. — If the party moving for summary judgment by affidavit or otherwise presents materials which would require a directed verdict in his favor if presented at trial, he is entitled to summary judgment unless the opposing party either shows that affidavits are then unavailable to him or comes forward with affidavits or other materials that show there is a triable issue of fact. Pridgen v. Hughes, 9 N.C. App. 635, 177 S.E.2d 425 (1970); First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Branch Banking & Trust Co., 14 N.C. App. 567, 188 S.E.2d 661, rev'd on other grounds, 282 N.C. 44, 191 S.E.2d 683 (1972); Millsaps v. Wilkes Contracting Co., 14 N.C. App. 321, 188 S.E.2d 663, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 623, 190 S.E.2d 466 (1972); Brooks v. Smith, 27 N.C. App. 223, 218 S.E.2d 489 (1975).

If plaintiff's claim is barred by the statute of limitations, defendant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law and summary judgment is appropriate. Brantley v. Dunstan, 10 N.C. App. 706, 179 S.E.2d 878 (1971); Poston v. Morgan-Schultheiss, Inc., 46 N.C. App. 321, 265 S.E.2d 615 (1980).

Ordinarily, the question of whether a cause of action is barred by the statute of limitations is a mixed question of law and fact. However, when the bar is properly pleaded and the facts are admitted or are not in conflict, the question of whether the action is barred becomes one of law, and summary judgment is appropriate. Pembee Mfg. Corp. v. Cape Fear Constr. Co., 313 N.C. 488, 329 S.E.2d 350 (1985).

The statute of limitations, if properly pled, and if all the facts with reference thereto are admitted or established, may act as an affirmative defense, barring plaintiff's claims and entitling defendants to summary judgment as a matter of law. Lackey v. Bressler, 86 N.C. App. 486, 358 S.E.2d 560 (1987); Rowan County Bd. of Educ. v. United States Gypsum Co., 87 N.C. App. 106, 359 S.E.2d 814, cert. denied, 321 N.C. 298, 362 S.E.2d 782 (1987).

When the statute of limitations is properly pleaded and the facts of the case are not in dispute, resolution of the question becomes a matter of law, and summary judgment may be appropriate. Marshburn v. Associated Indem. Corp., 84 N.C. App. 365, 353 S.E.2d 123, cert. denied, 319 N.C. 673, 356 S.E.2d 779, petition for reconsideration denied, 320 N.C. 170, 358 S.E.2d 53 (1987); Boundreau v. Baughman, 86 N.C. App. 165, 356 S.E.2d 907 (1987), rev'd in part, modified and aff'd in part, 322 N.C. 331, 368 S.E.2d 849 (1988).

The failure of the defendant to plead res judicata is not a bar to that issue being raised at hearing on summary judgment. County of Rutherford ex rel. Child Support Enforcement Agency ex rel. Hedrick v. Whitener, 100 N.C. App. 70, 394 S.E.2d 263 (1990).

When defendant establishes a complete defense to plaintiff's claim, he is entitled to the quick and final disposition of that claim which summary judgment provides. Ballinger v. North Carolina Dep't of Revenue, 59 N.C. App. 508, 296 S.E.2d 836 (1982), cert. denied, 307 N.C. 576, 299 S.E.2d 645 (1983).

The court may grant summary judgment if the movant conclusively establishes every element of its claim or conclusively establishes a complete defense or legal bar to the nonmovant's claim. VEPCO v. Tillett, 80 N.C. App. 383, 343 S.E.2d 188, cert. denied, 317 N.C. 715, 347 S.E.2d 457 (1986).

A defending party is entitled to summary judgment if he can show that no claim for relief exists or that the claimant cannot overcome an affirmative defense to the claim. Rolling Fashion Mart, Inc. v. Mainor, 80 N.C. App. 213, 341 S.E.2d 61 (1986).

A defending party is entitled to summary judgment if it can establish that no claim for relief exists or that the claimant cannot overcome an affirmative defense or legal bar to the claim. Wilder v. Hobson, 101 N.C. App. 199, 398 S.E.2d 625 (1990).

Motive, like intent or other states of mind, is rarely susceptible to direct proof and almost always depends on inferences drawn from circumstantial evidence. Consequently, summary judgment should rarely be granted in cases in which it is at issue. Burrow v. Westinghouse Elec. Corp., 88 N.C. App. 347, 363 S.E.2d 215, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 111, 367 S.E.2d 910 (1988).

Constitutional Arguments Susceptible to Summary Judgment. — Since the general rule is that the constitutionality of a statute is to be determined merely from an examination of the statute itself and of only those matters of which the court may take judicial notice, plaintiff's constitutional arguments presented a question of law and were properly susceptible to summary judgment. Baugh v. Woodard, 56 N.C. App. 180, 287 S.E.2d 412, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 305 N.C. 759, 292 S.E.2d 574 (1982).

Summary judgment is not a proper remedy for failure to join a necessary party. Dildy v. Southeastern Fire Ins. Co., 13 N.C. App. 66, 185 S.E.2d 272 (1971).

Summary judgment procedure is available to both plaintiff and defendant. Pridgen v. Hughes, 9 N.C. App. 635, 177 S.E.2d 425 (1970); Kessing v. National Mtg. Corp., 278 N.C. 523, 180 S.E.2d 823 (1971); Clear Fir Sales Co. v. Carolina Plywood Distrib., Inc., 13 N.C. App. 429, 185 S.E.2d 737 (1972); McNair v. Boyette, 282 N.C. 230, 192 S.E.2d 457 (1972).

A defending party may show as a matter of law that he is entitled to summary judgment in his favor by showing that there is no genuine issue of material fact concerning an essential element of the claimant's claim for relief and that the claimant cannot prove the existence of that element. Best v. Perry, 41 N.C. App. 107, 254 S.E.2d 281 (1979); Ramsey v. Rudd, 49 N.C. App. 670, 272 S.E.2d 162 (1980), cert. denied, 302 N.C. 220, 276 S.E.2d 917 (1981).

If defendants clearly establish that there is no genuine issue as to the nonexistence of material facts which are necessary as an essential element of any cause of action against them, then they are entitled to summary judgment on that action. Clodfelter v. Bates, 44 N.C. App. 107, 260 S.E.2d 672 (1979), cert. denied, 299 N.C. 329, 265 S.E.2d 394 (1980).

A defending party is entitled to summary judgment if he can show that the claimant cannot prove the existence of an essential element of his claim or cannot surmount an affirmative defense which would bar the claim. Little v. National Servs. Indus., Inc., 79 N.C. App. 688, 340 S.E.2d 510 (1986).

Party Need Not Move for Judgment in Order to Be Entitled to It. — Section (c) of this rule does not require that a party move for summary judgment in order to be entitled to it. Greenway v. North Carolina Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co., 35 N.C. App. 308, 241 S.E.2d 339 (1978); McNair Constr. Co. v. Fogle Bros. Co., 64 N.C. App. 282, 307 S.E.2d 200 (1983), cert. denied, 312 N.C. 84, 321 S.E.2d 897 (1984).

Summary judgment may be granted in favor of a nonmoving party in proper cases. A-S-P Assocs. v. City of Raleigh, 38 N.C. App. 271, 247 S.E.2d 800 (1978), rev'd on other grounds, 298 N.C. 207, 258 S.E.2d 444 (1979).

Summary judgment in favor of the nonmovant is appropriate when the evidence presented demonstrates that no material issues of fact are in dispute, and the nonmovant is entitled to entry of judgment as a matter of law. A-S-P Assocs. v. City of Raleigh, 298 N.C. 207, 258 S.E.2d 444 (1979).

In an appropriate case, summary judgment may be rendered against the moving party. Candid Camera Video World, Inc. v. Mathews, 76 N.C. App. 634, 334 S.E.2d 94 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 390, 338 S.E.2d 879 (1980).

After Movant Is Given Opportunity to Show Existence of a Genuine Issue. — Summary judgment for the nonmoving party should be granted only when the moving party has been given adequate opportunity to show in opposition that there is a genuine issue of fact to be resolved. A-S-P Assocs. v. City of Raleigh, 298 N.C. 207, 258 S.E.2d 444 (1979).

Granting of Summary Judgment by Judge on Own Motion. — The granting of summary judgment or judgment on the pleadings by the trial judge on his own motion is a practice not to be commended, and is clearly erroneous where there is a factual question to be answered. Crews v. Taylor, 21 N.C. App. 296, 204 S.E.2d 193 (1974).

Rarely is it proper to enter summary judgment in favor of the party having the burden of proof. Blackwell v. Massey, 69 N.C. App. 240, 316 S.E.2d 350 (1984).

Summary judgment may be granted for a party with the burden of proof on his own affidavits (1) when there are only latent doubts as to the affiant's credibility; (2) when the opposing party has failed to introduce any materials supporting his opposition, failed to point to specific areas of impeachment and contradiction, and failed to utilize section (f) of this rule; and (3) when summary judgment is otherwise appropriate. Almond Grading Co. v. Shaver, 74 N.C. App. 576, 329 S.E.2d 417 (1985); Valdese Gen. Hosp. v. Burns, 79 N.C. App. 163, 339 S.E.2d 23 (1986).

Plaintiff's bare assertions in unverified complaint, which were denied by defendant, held insufficient to support entry of summary judgment for plaintiff. Smith v. Rushing Constr. Co., 84 N.C. App. 692, 353 S.E.2d 692 (1987).

Where plaintiff made a motion for summary judgment, which was denied, and later plaintiff filed a second motion for summary judgment involving the same issue as presented by the initial motion, the trial court erred by granting plaintiff's second motion for summary judgment. Taylorsville Fed. Savs. & Loan Ass'n v. Keen, 110 N.C. App. 784, 431 S.E.2d 484 (1993).

Appellate Conclusion Improper. — Where Court of Appeals majority opinion included a paragraph that concluded that a balancing of the equities favored denial of relief to plaintiff, such a conclusion was improper at the summary judgment stage. Roberts v. Madison County Realtors Ass'n, 344 N.C. 394, 474 S.E.2d 783 (1996).

Judgment on Pleadings Treated As Summary Judgment. — Where matters outside the pleadings were considered by the court in reaching its decision on the judgment on the pleadings, the motion was treated as if it was a motion for summary judgment. Helms v. Holland, 124 N.C. App. 629, 478 S.E.2d 513 (1996).

Standing Determination May Be Reviewed by Subsequent Superior Court Judge. — Standing is an issue of subject matter jurisdiction which may be raised at any time; therefore, it is proper for a second superior court judge to review standing in motion for summary judgment after a previous motion to dismiss had been denied by another judge. Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Corp. v. Calco Enters., — N.C. App. —, 511 S.E.2d 671 (1999).

B. Particular Types of Actions, etc.

This rule is not limited in its application to any particular type or types of action. Pridgen v. Hughes, 9 N.C. App. 635, 177 S.E.2d 425 (1970); Kessing v. National Mtg. Corp., 278 N.C. 523, 180 S.E.2d 823 (1971); McNair v. Boyette, 282 N.C. 230, 192 S.E.2d 457 (1972); Atkins v. Beasley, 53 N.C. App. 33, 279 S.E.2d 866 (1981).

While the motion for summary judgment will receive stricter application in negligence cases, summary judgment is available in all types of litigation to both plaintiff and defendant. Emerson v. Great Atl. & Pac. Tea Co., 41 N.C. App. 715, 255 S.E.2d 768 (1979).

Section (a) of this rule contemplates that summary judgment may be granted for any type of claim, counterclaim, or cross-claim, or for a declaratory judgment, so long as the issue to be determined is one which lends itself to summary adjudication. Frank H. Conner Co. v. Spanish Inns Charlotte, Ltd., 294 N.C. 661, 242 S.E.2d 785 (1978).

Summary judgment may be granted for any type of claim, including a claim for specific performance of a contract. Atkins v. Beasley, 53 N.C. App. 33, 279 S.E.2d 866 (1981).

Summary judgment is an appropriate procedure in a declaratory judgment action. Montgomery v. Hinton, 45 N.C. App. 271, 262 S.E.2d 697 (1980); Threatte v. Threatte, 59 N.C. App. 292, 296 S.E.2d 521 (1982), discretionary review improvidently granted, 308 N.C. 384, 302 S.E.2d 226 (1983); Pine Knoll Ass'n v. Cardon, 126 N.C. App. 155, 484 S.E.2d 446 (1997).

Summary judgment may be entered upon the motion of either the plaintiff or the defendant under this rule, and the rule applies in an action for declaratory judgment. Bellefonte Underwriters Ins. Co. v. Alfa Aviation, Inc., 61 N.C. App. 544, 300 S.E.2d 877 (1983), aff'd, 310

N.C. 471, 312 S.E.2d 426 (1984).

The propriety of a summary judgment in an action for a declaratory judgment is governed by the same rules applicable to other actions. Meachan v. Montgomery County Bd. of Educ., 47 N.C. App. 271, 267 S.E.2d 349 (1980); North Carolina Life & Accident & Health Ins. Guar. Ass'n v. Underwriters Nat'l Assurance Co., 48 N.C. App. 508, 269 S.E.2d 688, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 301 N.C. 527, 273 S.E.2d 453 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 455 U.S. 691, 102 S. Ct. 1357, 71 L. Ed. 2d 558 (1982).

Summary judgment can be appropriate in an action for a declaratory judgment where there is no genuine issue of material fact and one of the parties is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. North Carolina Ass'n of ABC Bds. v. Hunt, 76 N.C. App. 290, 332 S.E.2d 693, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 667, 336 S.E.2d 400 (1985).

Summary Judgment on a Claim for Damages. — Summary judgment on a claim for damages is appropriate where the moving party sufficiently establishes by competent documents that a liquidated amount is owing him and the opposing party fails to show facts which dispute that evidence. In such a case there is no triable issue of fact concerning damages due the moving party. Frank H. Conner Co. v. Spanish Inns Charlotte, Ltd., 294 N.C. 661, 242 S.E.2d 785 (1978).

Summary judgment is rarely appropriate in a negligence action. Barnes v. Wilson Hdwe. Co., 77 N.C. App. 773, 336 S.E.2d 457 (1985); Warren v. Rosso & Mastracco, Inc., 78 N.C. App. 163, 336 S.E.2d 699 (1985); White v. Hunsinger, 88 N.C. App. 382, 363 S.E.2d 203 (1988).

Summary judgment should rarely be granted in negligence cases. Moore v. Crumpton, 306 N.C. 618, 295 S.E.2d 436 (1982).

Negligence claims are rarely susceptible of summary adjudication, and should ordinarily be resolved by trial of the issues. Lamb v. Wedgewood S. Corp., 308 N.C. 419, 302 S.E.2d 868 (1983).

Summary judgment may be granted in a negligence action even though summary judgment is seldom appropriate in a negligence case where there are no genuine issues of material fact and the plaintiff fails to show one of the elements of negligence. Lavelle v. Schultz, 120 N.C. App. 857, 463 S.E.2d 567 (1995).

Or Where Contributory Negligence Is Involved. — Like negligence, contributory negligence is rarely appropriate for summary judgment. Ballenger v. Crowell, 38 N.C. App. 50, 247 S.E.2d 287 (1978); Branks v. Kern, 83 N.C. App. 32, 348 S.E.2d 815 (1986), rev'd on other grounds, 320 N.C. 621, 359 S.E.2d 780 (1987).

And Ordinarily Negligence Actions Should Be Resolved by Trial. — As a general proposition issues of negligence are ordinarily not susceptible of summary adjudication either for or against the claimant, but should be resolved by trial in the ordinary manner. Page v. Sloan, 281 N.C. 697, 190 S.E.2d 189 (1972); Kiser v. Snyder, 17 N.C. App. 445, 194 S.E.2d 638, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 257, 195 S.E.2d 689 (1973); Roberts v. Whitley, 17 N.C. App. 554, 195 S.E.2d 62 (1973); Moore v. Fieldcrest Mills, Inc., 296 N.C. 467, 251 S.E.2d 419 (1979); Moye v. Thrifty Gas Co., 40 N.C. App. 310, 252 S.E.2d 837, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 611, 257 S.E.2d 219 (1979); Vassey v. Burch, 301 N.C. 68, 269 S.E.2d 137 (1980); Hockaday v. Morse, 57 N.C. App. 109, 290 S.E.2d 763 (1982), cert. denied, 306 N.C. 384, 294 S.E.2d 209 (1982), overruled on other grounds, Nelson v. Freeland, 349 N.C. 615, 507 S.E.2d 882 (1998); Roberson v. Griffeth, 57 N.C. App. 227, 291 S.E.2d 347, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 558, 294 S.E.2d 224 (1982); Quality Inns Int'l, Inc. v. Booth, Fish, Simpson, Harrison & Hall, 58 N.C. App. 1, 292 S.E.2d 755 (1982).

Negligence issues are not ordinarily susceptible to summary disposition. However, where there is no genuine issue of material fact and reasonable men could only concede the defendant was not negligent, then a motion for summary judgment is proper. Boza v. Schiebel, 65 N.C. App. 151, 308 S.E.2d 510 (1983), cert. denied, 310 N.C. 475, 312 S.E.2d 882 (1984).

Issues of negligence should ordinarily be resolved by a jury and are rarely appropriate for summary judgment. Schaffner v. Cumberland County Hosp. Sys., 77 N.C. App. 689, 336 S.E.2d 116 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 195, 341 S.E.2d 578, 341 S.E.2d 579 (1986).

There is a presumption against granting summary judgment in negligence cases. Wilson Bros. v. Mobil Oil, 63 N.C. App. 334, 305 S.E.2d 40, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 634, 308 S.E.2d 718, 308 S.E.2d 719 (1983).

Only in exceptional cases involving the question of negligence or reasonable care will summary judgment be appropriate to resolve the controversy. Gladstein v. South Square Assocs., 39 N.C. App. 171, 249 S.E.2d 827 (1978), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 736, 254 S.E.2d 178 (1979); Emerson v. Great Atl. & Pac. Tea Co., 41 N.C. App. 715, 255 S.E.2d 768 (1979); Letchworth v. Town of Ayden, 44 N.C. App. 1, 260 S.E.2d 143 (1979), cert. denied, 299 N.C. 331, 265 S.E.2d 396 (1980).

As it is usually the jury's prerogative to apply the standard of reasonable care in a negligence action, and in such actions summary judgment is, therefore, appropriate only in exceptional cases where the movant shows that one or more of the essential elements of the claim do not appear in the pleadings or proof at the discovery stage of the proceedings. Ziglar v. E.I. Du Pont De Nemours & Co., 53 N.C. App.

It is only in the exceptional negligence case that this rule should be invoked. Even in a case in which there is no substantial dispute as to what occurred, it usually remains for the jury, under appropriate instructions from the court, to apply the standard of the reasonably prudent man to the facts of the case. Robinson v. McMahan, 11 N.C. App. 275, 181 S.E.2d 147, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 395, 183 S.E.2d 243 (1971); Page v. Sloan, 281 N.C. 697, 190 S.E.2d 189 (1972); Kiser v. Snyder, 17 N.C. App. 445, 194 S.E.2d 638, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 257, 195 S.E.2d 689 (1973); Roberts v. Whitley, 17 N.C. App. 554, 195 S.E.2d 62 (1973); Stancill v. City of Washington, 29 N.C. App. 707, 225 S.E.2d 834 (1976); Haddock v. Smithson, 30 N.C. App. 228, 226 S.E.2d 411, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 776, 229 S.E.2d 32 (1976); Edwards v. Means, 36 N.C. App. 122, 243 S.E.2d 161, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 260, 245 S.E.2d 777 (1978); Ballenger v. Crowell, 38 N.C. App. 50, 247 S.E.2d 287 (1978); Moore v. Fieldcrest Mills, Inc., 296 N.C. 467, 251 S.E.2d 419 (1979); Johnson v. Lockman, 41 N.C. App. 54, 254 S.E.2d 187, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 610, 257 S.E.2d 436 (1979); Vassey v. Burch, 301 N.C. 68, 269 S.E.2d 137 (1980); Stansfield v. Mahowsky, 46 N.C. App. 829, 266 S.E.2d 28, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 96, 273 S.E.2d 442 (1980); Arey v. Board of Light & Water Comm'n, 50 N.C. App. 505, 274 S.E.2d 268, cert. denied, 302 N.C. 629, 280 S.E.2d 440 (1981); Hockaday v. Morse, 57 N.C. App. 109, 290 S.E.2d 763 (1982), cert. denied, 306 N.C. 384, 294 S.E.2d 209 (1982), overruled on other grounds, Nelson v. Freeland, 349 N.C. 615, 507 S.E.2d 882 (1998); Roberson v. Griffeth, 57 N.C. App. 227, 291 S.E.2d 347, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 558, 294 S.E.2d 224 (1982); Quality Inns Int'l, Inc. v. Booth, Fish, Simpson, Harrison & Hall, 58 N.C. App. 1, 292 S.E.2d 755 (1982); Derrick v. Ray, 61 N.C. App. 218, 300 S.E.2d 721 (1983); Southern Watch Supply Co. v. Regal Chrysler-Plymouth, Inc., 69 N.C. App. 164, 316 S.E.2d 318, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 496, 322 S.E.2d 560 (1984).

Summary judgment will not usually be feasible in negligence cases where the standard of the prudent man must be applied. Pridgen v. Hughes, 9 N.C. App. 635, 177 S.E.2d 425 (1970); Robinson v. McMahan, 11 N.C. App. 275, 181 S.E.2d 147, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 395, 183 S.E.2d 243 (1971); Long v. Long, 15 N.C. App. 525, 190 S.E.2d 415 (1972); Brawley v. Heymann, 16 N.C. App. 125, 191 S.E.2d 366, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 425, 192 S.E.2d 835 (1972); Forte v. Dillard Paper Co., 35 N.C. App. 340, 241 S.E.2d 394, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 89, 244 S.E.2d 258 (1978); Whitaker v. Blackburn, 47 N.C. App. 144, 266 S.E.2d 763 (1980).

The propriety of summary judgment does not always revolve around the elusive distinction between questions of fact and law. Although there may be no question of fact, when the facts are such that reasonable men could differ on the issue of negligence, courts have generally considered summary judgment improper. Gladstein v. South Square Assocs., 39 N.C. App. 171, 249 S.E.2d 827 (1978), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 736, 254 S.E.2d 178 (1979).

When the facts are such that reasonable men could differ on the issue of negligence, courts have generally considered summary judgment improper. Derrick v. Ray, 61 N.C. App. 218, 300 S.E.2d 721 (1983).

Summary judgment is rarely appropriate in negligence actions because ordinarily it is the duty of the jury to apply the standard of care of a reasonably prudent person. Bernick v. Jurden, 306 N.C. 435, 293 S.E.2d 405 (1982).

The stringent requirements placed on a movant are intended, because summary judgment is a drastic measure, and it should be used with caution. This is especially true in a negligence case in which a jury ordinarily applies the reasonable person standard to the facts of each case. McCullough v. AMOCO Oil Co., 64 N.C. App. 312, 307 S.E.2d 208 (1983), rev'd on other grounds, 310 N.C. 452, 312 S.E.2d 417 (1984).

It is an accepted tenet of jurisprudence that summary judgment is rarely proper in negligence cases. Even where there is no dispute as to the essential facts, where reasonable people could differ with respect to whether a party acted with reasonable care, it ordinarily remains the province of the jury to apply the reasonable person standard. But where there is no genuine issue of material fact and reasonable men could only conclude that the defendant was not negligent, entry of summary judgment is proper. Elmore's Feed & Seed, Inc. v. Patrick, 62 N.C. App. 715, 303 S.E.2d 394 (1983); Byrd Motor Lines v. Dunlop Tire & Rubber Corp., 63 N.C. App. 292, 304 S.E.2d 773 (1983), cert. denied, 310 N.C. 624, 315 S.E.2d 689 (1984); Wilson Bros. v. Mobil Oil, 63 N.C. App. 334, 305 S.E.2d 40, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 634, 308 S.E.2d 718, 308 S.E.2d 719 (1983).

Ordinarily, summary judgment is not appropriate in negligence actions because the right of recovery usually depends on the application of the reasonable person standard of care. Only the jury, under instructions from the court, may apply that standard. Holley v. Burroughs Wellcome Co., 74 N.C. App. 736, 330 S.E.2d 228 (1985), aff'd, 318 N.C. 352, 348 S.E.2d 772 (1986).

Summary judgment is rarely appropriate in negligence cases, even when there is no dispute as to the facts, because the issue of whether a party acted in conformity with the reasonable person standard is ordinarily an issue to be determined by a jury. Surrette v. Duke Power Co., 78 N.C. App. 647, 338 S.E.2d 129 (1986).

If the pleadings establish the existence of a cause of action, summary judgment should be granted cautiously in negligence cases, in which the jury ordinarily applies a standard of care to the facts of the case. Coleman v. Cooper, 89 N.C. App. 188, 366 S.E.2d 2, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 834, 371 S.E.2d 275 (1988).

Summary judgment may be granted in a negligence action. Cole v. Duke Power Co., 68 N.C. App. 159, 314 S.E.2d 808, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 752, 321 S.E.2d 129 (1984).

And when the facts in a negligence action are admitted or established, negligence is a question of law and the court must say whether it does or does not exist. Kiser v. Snyder, 17 N.C. App. 445, 194 S.E.2d 638, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 257, 195 S.E.2d 689 (1973).

When Summary Judgment for Defendant Is Proper in Negligence Action. — Summary judgment for defendant in a negligence action is proper where the evidence fails to show negligence on the part of defendant, or where contributory negligence on the part of plaintiff is established, or where it is established that the purported negligence of defendant was not the proximate cause of plaintiff's injury. Hale v. Duke Power Co., 40 N.C. App. 202, 252 S.E.2d 265, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 452, 256 S.E.2d 805 (1979); Stansfield v. Mahowsky, 46 N.C. App. 829, 266 S.E.2d 28, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 96, 273 S.E.2d 442 (1980); Edwards v. Akion, 52 N.C. App. 688, 279 S.E.2d 894, aff'd, 304 N.C. 585, 284 S.E.2d 518 (1981); Rorrer v. Cooke, 313 N.C. 338, 329 S.E.2d 355 (1985).

Summary judgment is proper in negligence cases where it appears that there can be no recovery even if the facts as claimed by plaintiff are true. Pridgen v. Hughes, 9 N.C. App. 635, 177 S.E.2d 425 (1970); Kiser v. Snyder, 17 N.C. App. 445, 194 S.E.2d 638, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 257, 195 S.E.2d 689 (1973); Joyce v. City of High Point, 30 N.C. App. 346, 226 S.E.2d 856 (1976); Whitaker v. Blackburn, 47 N.C. App. 144, 266 S.E.2d 763 (1980); Long v. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co., 53 N.C. App. 110, 280 S.E.2d 3 (1981); Southern Watch Supply Co. v. Regal Chrysler-Plymouth, Inc., 69 N.C. App. 164, 316 S.E.2d 318, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 496, 322 S.E.2d 560 (1984); O'Connor v. Corbett Lumber Corp., 84 N.C. App. 178, 352 S.E.2d 267 (1987); Jacobs v. Hill's Food Stores, Inc., 88 N.C. App. 730, 364 S.E.2d 692 (1988).

Where motion for summary judgment is supported by evidentiary matter showing a lack of negligence on the part of the movants and there is no question as to the credibility of the witnesses and no evidence is offered in opposition thereto, no issue is raised for the jury to consider under appropriate instructions. Moore v. Fieldcrest Mills, Inc., 296 N.C. 467, 251 S.E.2d 419 (1979).

Although issues of negligence and contributory negligence are rarely appropriate for summary judgment, where the uncontroverted evidence indicated that plaintiff failed to use ordinary care and that want of due care was at least one of the proximate causes of the fall at issue, and plaintiff was contributorily negligent as a matter of law, summary judgment in favor of defendants was proper. Brooks v. Francis, 57 N.C. App. 556, 291 S.E.2d 889 (1982).

While summary judgment is generally not appropriate in negligence cases, it is appropriate in cases in which it appears that the plaintiff cannot recover even if the facts as alleged by the plaintiff are true. Stoltz v. Burton, 69 N.C. App. 231, 316 S.E.2d 646 (1984).

Where it is clearly established that defendant's negligence was not the proximate cause of plaintiff's injury, summary judgment is appropriate. Southern Watch Supply Co. v. Regal Chrysler-Plymouth, Inc., 69 N.C. App. 164, 316 S.E.2d 318, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 496, 322 S.E.2d 560 (1984).

Summary judgment may be granted in a negligence case where there is no question as to the credibility of witnesses and the evidence shows either (1) a lack of any negligence on the part of the defendant, or (2) that plaintiff was contributorily negligent as a matter of law. Surrette v. Duke Power Co., 78 N.C. App. 647, 338 S.E.2d 129 (1986).

As a general rule, summary judgment is not appropriate where issues of negligence are involved. However, if the evidentiary forecasts establish either a lack of any conduct on the part of the movant which could constitute negligence, or the existence, as a matter of law, of a complete defense to the claim, summary judgment may be properly allowed. Sink v. Andrews, 81 N.C. App. 594, 344 S.E.2d 831 (1986).

Summary judgment is appropriate in a negligence case if it is established that the alleged negligence of a defendant was not the proximate cause of a plaintiff's injury. Street v. Moffitt, 84 N.C. App. 138, 351 S.E.2d 821 (1987).

A premises owner is entitled to summary judgment in a slip and fall case if it can show either the non-existence of an essential element of the plaintiff's claim or that the plaintiff has no evidence of an essential element of her claim. Nourse v. Food Lion, Inc., 127 N.C. App. 235, 488 S.E.2d 608 (1997), aff'd, 347 N.C. 666, 496 S.E.2d 379 (1998).

Ordinarily discovery is required prior to granting summary judgment in a medical malpractice suit so that the party can explore issues of malpractice. Easter v. Lexington Mem. Hosp., 49 N.C. App. 398, 271 S.E.2d 545 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 303 N.C. 303, 278 S.E.2d 253 (1981).

The inference created by res ipsa loquitur will defeat a motion for summary judgment even though the defendant presents evidence tending to establish absence of negligence. The burden of proving negligence, however, remains with the plaintiff; accordingly, the finder of fact may reject the permissible inference of negligence even though the defendant presents no evidence. Schaffner v. Cumberland County Hosp. Sys., 77 N.C. App. 689, 336 S.E.2d 116 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 195, 341 S.E.2d 578, 341 S.E.2d 579 (1986).

For discussion of application of res ipsa loquitur in medical malpractice actions, see Schaffner v. Cumberland County Hosp. Sys., 77 N.C. App. 689, 336 S.E.2d 116 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 195, 341 S.E.2d 578, 341 S.E.2d 579 (1986).

Summary judgment is generally inappropriate in an action for fraud, as the existence of fraud necessarily involves a question concerning the existence of fraudulent intent, and the intent of a party is a state of mind generally within the exclusive knowledge of that party which must, by necessity, must be proved by circumstantial evidence. Girard Trust Bank v. Belk, 41 N.C. App. 328, 255 S.E.2d 430, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 293, 259 S.E.2d 299 (1979).

Allegations of fraud do not readily lend themselves to resolution by way of summary judgment, because a cause of action based on fraud usually requires the determination of a litigant's state of mind. Johnson v. Phoenix Mut. Life Ins. Co., 300 N.C. 247, 266 S.E.2d 610 (1980); Watts v. Cumberland County Hosp. Sys., 75 N.C. App. 1, 330 S.E.2d 242 (1985), rev'd on other grounds, 317 N.C. 321, 345 S.E.2d 201 (1986).

But Fraud May Be Summarily Adjudicated When Absence of Genuine Issue Is Clearly Established. — Summary judgment is inappropriate in a fraud case where the court is called upon to draw a factual inference in favor of the moving party, or where the court is called upon to resolve a genuine issue of credibility, but the issue of fraud may be summarily adjudicated when it is clearly established that there is no genuine issue of material fact. Johnson v. Phoenix Mut. Life Ins. Co., 300 N.C. 247, 266 S.E.2d 610 (1980); Ramsey v. Keever's Used Cars, 92 N.C. App. 187, 374 S.E.2d 135 (1988).

In order for defendant in an action for fraud to prevail on its motion for summary judgment, he must show that evidence of one or more of the elements of fraud is unavailable to plaintiff. Johnson v. Phoenix Mut. Life Ins. Co., 44 N.C. App. 210, 261 S.E.2d 135 (1979), rev'd on other grounds, 300 N.C. 247, 266 S.E.2d 610 (1980).

If the defendant moving for summary judgment in a fraud case presents material evidence which effectively negates even one of the essential elements of fraud, summary judgment in defendant's favor should be allowed. It is not necessary that defendant's material evidence negate all of the essential elements. Russo v. Mountain High, Inc., 38 N.C. App. 159, 247 S.E.2d 654 (1978); Ramsey v. Keever's Used Cars, 92 N.C. App. 187, 374 S.E.2d 135 (1988).

In a claim for relief based on fraud, summary judgment for defendant is proper where the forecast of evidence shows that even one of the essential elements of fraud is missing. Uzzell v. Integon Life Ins. Corp., 78 N.C. App. 458, 337 S.E.2d 639 (1985), cert. denied, 317 N.C. 341, 346 S.E.2d 149 (1986).

To overcome defendant's motion for summary judgment in an action alleging fraud, breach of contract, and unfair trade practices, plaintiff needed only to forecast evidence: (1) that defendant made a definite and specific representation to her that was materially false; (2) that defendant made the representation with knowledge of its falsity; and (3) that plaintiff reasonably relied on the representation to her detriment. Kent v. Humphries, 50 N.C. App. 580, 275 S.E.2d 176, modified and aff'd, 303 N.C. 675, 281 S.E.2d 43 (1981).

Libel Action by Public Figure. — When a libel action brought by a public figure is at the summary judgment stage, the appropriate question for the trial judge is whether the evidence in the record would allow a reasonable finder of fact to find either that the plaintiff has shown actual malice by clear and convincing evidence or that the plaintiff has not. Proffitt v. Greensboro News & Record, Inc., 91 N.C. App. 218, 371 S.E.2d 292 (1988).

Summary judgment in a libel action is not favored where proof of actual malice is required of the plaintiff. Cochran v. Piedmont Publishing Co., 62 N.C. App. 548, 302 S.E.2d 903, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 819, 310 S.E.2d 348 (1983); 469 U.S. 816, 105 S. Ct. 83, 83 L. Ed. 2d 30 (1984).

Legal Malpractice Action. — For a discussion of the standard for granting summary judgment in a legal malpractice action, see Bamberger v. Bernholz, 96 N.C. App. 555, 386 S.E.2d 450 (1989), rev'd on other grounds, 326 N.C. 589, 391 S.E.2d 192 (1990).

Termination of Parental Rights. — Article 24B of Chapter 7A (former § 7A-289.22 et seq.) does not provide for a summary proceeding to determine whether the petitioner has proven the existence of one or more of the grounds for termination. Thus, the trial court erred in granting petitioners' motion for partial summary judgment. Curtis v. Curtis, 104 N.C. App. 625, 410 S.E.2d 917 (1991).

A summary judgment may not be entered granting an absolute divorce in this State. Edwards v. Edwards, 42 N.C. App. 301, 256 S.E.2d 728 (1979).

Raising of Affirmative Defenses on Mo- tion. — The nature of summary judgment procedure, coupled with the generally liberal rules relating to amendment of pleadings, requires that unpleaded affirmative defenses be deemed part of the pleadings where such defenses are raised in a hearing on a motion for summary judgment. Cooke v. Cooke, 34 N.C. App. 124, 237 S.E.2d 323, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 740, 241 S.E.2d 513 (1979); Ridings v. Ridings, 55 N.C. App. 630, 286 S.E.2d 614, cert. denied, 305 N.C. 586, 292 S.E.2d 571 (1982).

If an affirmative defense required to be raised by a responsive pleading is sought to be raised for the first time in a motion for summary judgment, the motion must ordinarily refer expressly to the affirmative defense relied upon. Dickens v. Puryear, 302 N.C. 437, 276 S.E.2d 325 (1981).

Defense of laches may be properly raised by summary judgment motion. Capps v. City of Raleigh, 35 N.C. App. 290, 241 S.E.2d 527 (1978).

As May Statute of Frauds. — While the statute of frauds is an affirmative defense which ordinarily must be pleaded, for the purpose of ruling on a motion for summary judgment, an affirmative defense may be raised for the first time by affidavit. Bassett Furn. Indus. of N.C., Inc. v. Griggs, 47 N.C. App. 104, 266 S.E.2d 702 (1980).

Expiration of Statute of Repose. — Whether a statute of repose has expired is strictly a legal issue, and where the pleadings and proof show without contradiction that the statute has expired, then summary judgment may be granted. Cellu Prods. Co. v. G.T.E. Prods. Corp., 81 N.C. App. 474, 344 S.E.2d 566 (1986).

Summary judgment is an appropriate means of raising the defense of a statute of limitation if the statute is properly before the court. Baucom's Nursery Co. v. Mecklenburg County, 89 N.C. App. 542, 366 S.E.2d 558, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 834, 371 S.E.2d 274 (1988).

Assignments. — Generally, the interpretation of an assignment is governed by rules applicable to the interpretation of a contract. If there is no ambiguity regarding the subject matter of the assignment, the plaintiff's intent can be interpreted without resort to extrinsic evidence and summary judgment may be appropriate. Martin v. Ray Lackey Enters., Inc., 100 N.C. App. 349, 396 S.E.2d 327 (1990).

Shareholders' Derivative Actions. — For a case discussing interplay of rules and statutes governing procedure and discovery in shareholders' derivative action, particularly with respect to former § 55-55(c) (see now § 55-7-40), this rule, and § 1A-1, Rules 12 and 23, see Alford v. Shaw, 327 N.C. 526, 398 S.E.2d 445 (1990).

Lack of Verification Pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 23(b). — Because the verification requirement in § 1A-1, Rule 23(b) is not jurisdictional in nature, where the purposes behind the rule have been fulfilled by the time the objection to a defective or absent verification is lodged, dismissal or summary judgment in favor of defendants is not appropriate. Alford v. Shaw, 327 N.C. 526, 398 S.E.2d 445 (1990).

C. Cases in Which Summary Judgment Held Proper.

Declaratory Judgment. — Summary judgment was proper in an action seeking a declaratory judgment as to the validity of a zoning ordinance where there was no substantial controversy as to the facts disclosed by the evidence, but the controversy involved the legal significance of those facts. Blades v. City of Raleigh, 280 N.C. 531, 187 S.E.2d 35 (1972); Taylor v. Taylor, 45 N.C. App. 449, 263 S.E.2d 351, rev'd on other grounds, 301 N.C. 357, 271 S.E.2d 506 (1980).

Contributory Negligence in Use of Steps. — Although issues of negligence and contributory negligence are rarely appropriate for summary judgment, where the uncontroverted evidence indicated that plaintiff failed to use ordinary care and that want of due care was at least one of the proximate causes of the fall at issue, her use of steps rendered her contributorily negligent as a matter of law, making summary judgment in favor of defendants proper. Brooks v. Francis, 57 N.C. App. 556, 291 S.E.2d 889 (1982).

No Genuine Issue as to Inflicted Injury. — Where plaintiff took advantage of the discovery procedures available and was still unable to obtain evidence as to when and how injury occurred and who or what caused it, and the record did not reveal that any injury in the nature of an inflicted harm occurred, and plaintiff's condition could just as well have been from a pathological cause, there was an absence of a showing of a genuine issue as to any material fact and summary judgment was appropriate. Hoover v. Gaston Mem. Hosp., 11 N.C. App. 119, 180 S.E.2d 479 (1971).

Summary judgment was appropriate where plaintiff's claim did not meet the test in Woodson v. Rowland, 329 N.C. 330, 407 S.E.2d 222 (1991), requiring that the plaintiff show that the defendant engaged in misconduct he knew was substantially certain to cause serious injury. Henderson v. Henderson, 121 N.C. App. 752, 468 S.E.2d 454 (1996).

In an action to recover damages for alleged wrongful suspension or discharge of plaintiff from his employment with defendant, trial court properly entered summary judgment for defendant where defendant's evidence established that, except for a bargaining agreement, plaintiff's contract of employment was for an indefinite period of time, terminable at the will of either party, that defendant suspended plaintiff for cause, and that defendant had the right to do so, conditioned or circumscribed only by the provisions of a collective bargaining agreement. Tucker v. General Tel. Co., 50 N.C. App. 112, 272 S.E.2d 911 (1980).

Action for Sexual Assault or Seduction. — Summary judgment was appropriate in an action to recover for sexual assault or seduction where the evidence tended to show that plaintiff willingly went to a field with defendant, willingly drank two alcoholic beverages, and remembered nothing until she found herself back in town, but subsequently discovered that she had had intercourse, since there was no evidence that plaintiff feared or even knew that harmful or offensive contact might occur, which was required to show an assault, and since there was no evidence that defendant deceived or enticed plaintiff in any way, which was required to show seduction. McCraney v. Flanagan, 47 N.C. App. 498, 267 S.E.2d 404 (1980).

Where materials presented in support of defendant's motion for summary judgment showed that plaintiff had suffered no compensable injury or damage, the entry of summary judgment was proper, since there appeared to be no genuine issue as to any material fact. Alltop v. J.C. Penney Co., 10 N.C. App. 692, 179 S.E.2d 885, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 348, 182 S.E.2d 580 (1971).

There was no genuine issue as to any material fact in an action under an airplane insurance policy where defendant insurance company effectively canceled the policy under the terms of the contract by notice to plaintiff insured when plaintiff failed to make premium payments on time and had not waived the right of cancellation by past acceptance of late payments which conformed to the conditions of cancellation, and where tender or refund of the unearned portion of the premium payments was not a condition precedent to cancellation. Klein v. Avemco Ins. Co., 289 N.C. 63, 220 S.E.2d 595 (1975).

Summary judgment dismissing plaintiff's action against defendant insurance company under an uninsured motorists endorsement to a policy was proper where the admitted facts established that at the time the action was instituted a claim for wrongful death was no longer within the coverage provided by the policy. Brown v. Lumbermens Mut. Cas. Co., 19 N.C. App. 391, 199 S.E.2d 42 (1973), aff'd, 285 N.C. 313, 204 S.E.2d 829 (1974).

In an action to recover accidental death insurance proceeds, where defendant's evidentiary matter established that cause of death was heart failure and defendant's evidence was not contradicted by plaintiff in response to motion for summary judgment, the motion was properly granted. Hicks v. Old Republic Life Ins. Co., 29 N.C. App. 561, 225 S.E.2d 164 (1976).

Commission Agreement. — Where defendant's original contract for the sale of land to a third party was cancelled, and plaintiff submitted no evidentiary materials in opposition to defendant's motion for summary judgment, plaintiff failed to raise any issue of fact as to the nature of an oral agreement by defendant to pay plaintiff one half of any commissions defendant received, since the right to share in commissions under an agreement between brokers to divide commissions does not arise until the commissions have actually been received by the broker charged with liability; thus, summary judgment was appropriate. Chears v. Robert A. Young & Assocs., 49 N.C. App. 674, 272 S.E.2d 402 (1980).

In an action for specific performance of an option contract for the sale of land, where plaintiffs' affidavits and materials in support of their motion for summary judgment, if true, established that upon tender of the deed they were ready, willing and able to pay defendants cash for the property, there were only latent doubts as to the credibility of the affidavits, the affidavits of a disinterested bank president strongly corroborated plaintiffs' affidavits and financial statements, and defendants neither produced any contradictory affidavits, pointed to any specific grounds for impeachment, nor utilized section (f) of this rule, summary judgment against defendants decreeing specific performance was appropriate. Kidd v. Early, 289 N.C. 343, 222 S.E.2d 392 (1976).

Summary judgment in favor of land seller was correct where there was no contract in writing pertaining to the conveyance of the realty as required by § 22-2. Henry v. Shore, 18 N.C. App. 463, 197 S.E.2d 270 (1973).

Action for Fraud. — Where plaintiff failed to prove that defendant car dealership knew or had reason to know of used car's history, and did not even forecast that she could produce such evidence at trial, there was no genuine issue regarding the dealership's knowledge and summary judgment was correct as to charge of fraud. Ramsey v. Keever's Used Cars, 92 N.C. App. 187, 374 S.E.2d 135 (1988).

In an action for fraud based upon alleged misrepresentation of acreage in a land sale, summary judgment was properly granted for defendants who successfully carried the burden of negating an element of fraud by showing that any representations on their part were made neither with knowledge of their falsity nor in culpable ignorance of their truth. Russo v. Mountain High, Inc., 38 N.C. App. 159, 247 S.E.2d 654 (1978).

Libel Claim. — Trial court did not err in granting defendants' motion for summary judgment on plaintiffs' libel claim. Martin Marietta

Corp. v. Wake Stone Corp., 111 N.C. App. 269, 432 S.E.2d 428 (1993), aff'd, 339 N.C. 602, 453 S.E.2d 146 (1995).

In an action to recover on a note which was guaranteed by defendants, summary judgment was properly entered for plaintiff where the record did not indicate any doubts, other than latent doubts, as to the credibility of plaintiff's affiant, defendants failed to introduce any materials in their favor or point to any specific areas of impeachment or contradiction, and no genuine issue of material fact was raised. United Va. Bank v. Woronoff, 50 N.C. App. 160, 272 S.E.2d 618 (1980), cert. denied, 302 N.C. 629, 280 S.E.2d 449 (1981).

Where plaintiff, in her deposition, repudiated the allegations of her complaint in an unequivocal manner, a motion for summary judgment in defendant's favor would be proper, since a directed verdict in defendant's favor would be called for at trial on the basis of plaintiff's testimony. Woods v. Smith, 297 N.C. 363, 255 S.E.2d 174 (1979).

Inability to Serve Process. — Plaintiff's failure to demonstrate that her inability to serve process upon a codefendant was excusable, or that it prejudiced her case against the defendant at bar, would not constitute grounds for reversing summary judgment as to the present defendant. Ramsey v. Keever's Used Cars, 92 N.C. App. 187, 374 S.E.2d 135 (1988).

Estoppel. — Where plaintiff asserts estoppel against defendants, summary judgment is appropriate when the defendants as the moving parties establish the absence of any genuine issue of fact as a complete defense to the opponent's claim. If the factual evidence, taken in the light most favorable to the nonmovant, allows no inferences inconsistent with the defense, the movant has satisfied his burden, and summary judgment in its favor will be affirmed, and this is true even when the facts raise difficult questions of law. Thomas v. Ray, 69 N.C. App. 412, 317 S.E.2d 53 (1984).

Alleged Negligence of Veterinarian. — Plaintiff cat owner possessed knowledge that her cat might bite during an attempted catheterization and such knowledge was equal or superior to that of the veterinarian attempting to perform such procedure, and where the cat bit plaintiff during the course of said catheterization, plaintiff failed to establish a breech of duty on the part of the veterinarian, and the veterinarian was entitled to summary judgment as no material fact remained to be resolved at trial. Branks v. Kern, 320 N.C. 621, 359 S.E.2d 780 (1987), overruled on other grounds, Nelson v. Freeland, 349 N.C. 615, 507 S.E.2d 882 (1998).

Medical Malpractice. — There was no error in granting defendant's motion for summary judgment in a medical malpractice action where the affidavits of experts relied upon by plaintiff failed to identify the applicable standard of care required for the defendant. Evans v. Appert, 91 N.C. App. 362, 372 S.E.2d 94, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 623, 374 S.E.2d 584 (1988).

Legal Malpractice Action. — Summary judgment in favor of estate of defendant attorney in legal malpractice action alleging his negligent representation of plaintiff in a medical malpractice action held proper. Rorrer v. Cooke, 313 N.C. 338, 329 S.E.2d 355 (1985).

Summary Judgment Properly Entered for Defendants. — See Smith v. Association for Retarded Citizens for Hous. Dev. Servs., Inc., 75 N.C. App. 435, 331 S.E.2d 324 (1985).

Action to Quiet Title. — Where a city became the record owner of property pursuant to a tax foreclosure sale, and where purported adverse possessors brought their action to quiet title beyond the one year statute of limitation contained in § 105-377, there were no genuine issues of material fact and the city was entitled to summary judgment. Overstreet v. City of Raleigh, 75 N.C. App. 351, 330 S.E.2d 643 (1985).

In a private nuisance action against adjacent landowners, one of the defendants presented an affidavit that it was not and had never been an owner of the land in question. By failing to come forward with evidence, by affidavit or otherwise, which would have tended to show an issue of triable fact, the plaintiff's claim was subject to summary judgment. Bjornsson v. Mize, 75 N.C. App. 289, 330 S.E.2d 520, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 537, 335 S.E.2d 13 (1985).

Obligations Under a Separation Agreement. — Where the facts indicated that the parties executed a separation agreement free from any duress or other illegalities which would invalidate their contract, and the parties negotiated the terms of their agreement at arms-length, there was no genuine issue of material fact to be decided; defendant's obligation to pay support to plaintiff was clear and summary judgment on the issue was proper. Brandt v. Brandt, 92 N.C. App. 438, 374 S.E.2d 663 (1988), aff'd, 325 N.C. 429, 383 S.E.2d 656 (1989).

Controlling Statutes of Limitation and Repose. — Although ordinarily it is error for a court to hear and rule on a motion for summary judgment when discovery procedures, which might lead to the production of evidence relevant to the motion, are still pending, where the information sought by plaintiff was not material to the pertinent dates under the statutes of limitation and repose which controlled the disposition of the case, plaintiff suffered no prejudice because the court granted defendant's summary judgment motion, based on such statutes, prior to the completion of discovery. Cellu Prods. Co. v. G.T.E. Prods. Corp., 81 N.C. App. 474, 344 S.E.2d 566 (1986).

Where plaintiff failed to comply with sections (e) and (f) of this rule and did not point to any specific ground for impeaching defendant's affidavit, which established his right to summary judgment, trial court properly granted summary judgment against plaintiff on its claims against defendant. G & S Bus. Servs., Inc. v. Fast Fare, Inc., 94 N.C. App. 483, 380 S.E.2d 792, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 325 N.C. 546, 385 S.E.2d 497 (1989).

Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress. — Where one plaintiff could place no time period in which defendant allegedly intentionally inflicted emotional distress, and where she was unable to place a day, month or year on any of the specific events she alleged, there was simply no evidence to indicate that any of the alleged incidents regarding plaintiff took place within the three-year statute of limitations period, and the trial court did not err in granting summary judgment to defendant against that plaintiff. Waddle v. Sparks, 100 N.C. App. 129, 394 S.E.2d 683 (1990), modified on other grounds, 331 N.C. 73, 412 S.E.2d 22 (1992).

Action to Quiet Title Based on Fraud. — Where the cause of action is in fraud, the defendants would have a basic right to a jury trial. However, judge in action to quiet title based on fraud and on construction of deed considered only the intent of the parties in the deed in question and did not reach the issue of fraud. Once the intent was determined from the four corners of the deed, "fraud" no longer mattered and no jury trial was necessary; therefore, the judge was able to dispose of the case on a judgment on the pleadings. Mason-Reel v. Simpson, 100 N.C. App. 651, 397 S.E.2d 755 (1990).

Conspiracy. — Summary judgment proper where plaintiff did not obtain the right to be valedictorian and offered nothing beyond bare assertions that defendants engaged in some conspiracy to keep her from attaining the position. Townsend v. Board of Educ., 118 N.C. App. 302, 454 S.E.2d 817 (1995).

Application for Certificate of Need. — Where both parties forecast evidence to support recommendation by the administrative law judge and final agency decision which were contrary, a genuine issue of material fact existed regarding hospital's application for a certificate of need, a contested case hearing would be required, and final agency inappropriately granted summary judgment for hospital. Presbyterian-Orthopaedic Hosp. v. North Carolina Dep't of Human Resources, 122 N.C. App. 529, 470 S.E.2d 831 (1996), discretionary review improvidently allowed, 346 N.C. 267, 485 S.E.2d 294 (1997).

An application for certificate of need must comply with all review criteria, and where an application failed to show that it satisfied mandatory criteria, administrative law judge did not err in recommending summary judgment against applicant. Presbyterian-Orthopaedic Hosp. v. North Carolina Dep't of Human Resources, 122 N.C. App. 529, 470 S.E.2d 831 (1996), discretionary review improvidently allowed, 346 N.C. 267, 485 S.E.2d 294 (1997).

Negligent Entrustment Claim. — Summary judgment was proper where there was insufficient evidence to show that car rental agency knew or should have known that driver was an "incompetent or reckless driver who is likely to cause injury to others", an essential element of a negligent entrustment claim. Dwyer v. Margono, 128 N.C. App. 122, 493 S.E.2d 763 (1997), cert. denied, 347 N.C. 670, 500 S.E.2d 85 (1998).

Evidence Not Sufficient. — Where plaintiff's evidence was properly excluded because service was not timely and plaintiff offered nothing to counter defendant's evidence, summary judgment for the defendant was proper. Precision Fabrics Group, Inc. v. Transformer Sales & Serv., Inc., 120 N.C. App. 866, 463 S.E.2d 787 (1995).

D. Cases in Which Summary Judgment Held Improper.

Explosion of Water Heater. — Defendants were not entitled to judgment as a matter of law where the record did not clearly establish the inapplicability of the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur, where the evidentiary materials tended to show that the water heater in question was under the exclusive control and management of the defendants, as explosion of a water heater does not ordinarily happen if those who have the management of it use proper care. Under those circumstances the explosion itself would be some evidence of negligence on the part of those in control and would tend to establish a prima facie case requiring its submission to the jury. Evidence tending to explain the cause of the explosion merely accentuated the jury's role in the controversy and the unwisdom of summary judgment. Page v. Sloan, 281 N.C. 697, 190 S.E.2d 189 (1972).

Medical Malpractice. — In an action for medical malpractice, alleging that defendant negligently caused and continued plaintiff's addiction to narcotics, there was sufficient evidence presented at the hearing to raise material issues of fact as to whether standard practice still regarded addiction as necessary in the treatment of plaintiff's disease, and whether defendant knew or should have known that narcotics were not necessary to control plaintiff's pain, so as to overcome a motion for summary judgment on the grounds that there was no negligence as a matter of law. Ballenger v. Crowell, 38 N.C. App. 50, 247 S.E.2d 287 (1978).

In an action for medical malpractice, alleging that defendant negligently caused and continued plaintiff's addiction to narcotics, the evidence was sufficient to withstand defendant's motion for summary judgment based on contributory negligence, even though plaintiff knowingly continued his addiction, where plaintiff believed it was necessary to be addicted for the rest of his life because defendant had told him so. Ballenger v. Crowell, 38 N.C. App. 50, 247 S.E.2d 287 (1978).

Deed of Trust. — Where there was a genuine issue of fact as to the extent to which deed of trust secured amounts additional to purchase price of shopping center property summary judgment was improper. Dalton Moran Shook, Inc. v. Pitt Dev. Co., 113 N.C. App. 707, 440 S.E.2d 585 (1994).

Specific Performance. — Summary judgment in an action seeking specific performance of vendor's offer to purchase property was precluded by an issue of material fact as to whether an agreement was reached between the parties for the sale of two lots. Williford v. Atlantic Am. Properties, Inc., 129 N.C. App. 409, 498 S.E.2d 852 (1998).

In an action to determine whether plaintiff lender was entitled to possession of personal property, used to secure a loan, which was subsequently sold to a third party, the trial court erred in granting summary judgment for plaintiff where a genuine issue of fact existed as to whether plaintiff and defendant borrower intended their loan transaction of June, 1977, to renew, enlarge or extinguish note executed in April, 1976, by borrower which was secured by the property in question, since the nature of the second loan determined whether it was a future advance within the meaning of § 25-9-307(3) and thus whether defendant purchaser from defendant borrower took the property in question free from plaintiff lender's security interest. Spector United Employees Credit Union v. Smith, 45 N.C. App. 432, 263 S.E.2d 319 (1980).

Promissory Note. — Where, in an action to recover on a promissory note, defendant's affidavit in support of her motion for summary judgment merely reiterated the allegations in her answer, and plaintiff's note verified the complaint, the evidence, when viewed in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, showed the existence of a triable issue, and defendant was not entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Liberty Loan Corp. v. Miller, 15 N.C. App. 745, 190 S.E.2d 672 (1972).

Parol Agreement as to Payment of Notes. — Where defendant's evidence, taken in the light most favorable to him, established the execution of certain notes and security instruments accompanied by a prior or contemporaneous parol agreement as to the mode of payment and the fund from which it would be paid, evidence tending to show a continued course of dealings pursuant to this oral agreement was sufficient to have affected the result of the action, thereby creating a conflict between plaintiff's evidence and defendant's evidence as to a material fact; a jury question was thus presented and the trial judge erred when he granted plaintiff's motion for summary judgment. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Gillespie, 291 N.C. 303, 230 S.E.2d 375 (1976).

Foreclosure. — Where trial judge's resolution against plaintiffs of the issue of fact as to whether or not they were in default in their payments under a deed of trust at the time of foreclosure made it impossible for plaintiffs to prevail and clearly affected the result of their action, summary judgment in favor of defendants would be reversed. Lowman v. Huffman, 15 N.C. App. 700, 190 S.E.2d 700 (1972).

Evidence of Negotiations with Defendant Insurer. — Evidence tending to show that insurer offered to pay for loss, continually negotiated with plaintiff as to the amount thereof, and repeatedly assured plaintiff that her claim would be paid, was sufficient to show that there was a genuine triable issue as to whether defendants waived the requirements of the insurance policy relating to filing formal proof of loss and institution of the action within 12 months. Pennell v. Security Ins. Co., 18 N.C. App. 465, 197 S.E.2d 240 (1973).

Where a question of fact existed as to when a breach of an agreement occurred and the statute of limitations began to run, summary judgment on the basis of the statute of limitations was inappropriate. Snyder v. Freeman, 300 N.C. 204, 266 S.E.2d 593 (1980).

Conversion. — Summary judgment is inappropriately granted in an action for conversion when the evidence raises a genuine issue as to whether defendant's possession of plaintiff's property is authorized or wrongful. Gadson v. Toney, 69 N.C. App. 244, 316 S.E.2d 320 (1984).

Burden of Resale. — In an action by sellers of securities under a contract for sale to recover the purchase price of securities not accepted by buyer, the question of whether efforts to resell the securities would be unduly burdensome, or whether there was a readily available market for resale required weighing facts, rather than solely applying legal principles. Such facts do not lend themselves to disposition by summary judgment and must be resolved by a trier of fact. Atkins v. Mitchell, 91 N.C. App. 730, 373 S.E.2d 152 (1988).

Dispute over Validity of Contractor's License. — On appeal from summary judgment, where plaintiff contractor was licensed up to $175,000.00 when contract was executed and two months later secured an unlimited license, but plaintiff began construction during the two-month period, and where he presented his affidavit that he had passed the unlimited general contractor examination when the contract with the defendants was executed and that he had done approximately $2,800.00 worth of work before he was issued his unlimited license, so that the value of the work done by plaintiff was never in excess of his license limit and plaintiff was not, as evidenced by his license, incompetent to perform the work, plaintiff should have been allowed to prove his case if he could and was entitled if successful to recover to the extent of his unlimited license and defend the counterclaim. Dellinger v. Michal, 92 N.C. App. 744, 375 S.E.2d 698, cert. denied, 324 N.C. 432, 379 S.E.2d 240 (1989).

Construction Contract. — Where plaintiff asserted that it was entitled to summary judgment because it had substantially performed its contract but had not been paid as agreed, but even if all the claims made by plaintiff in support of his motion were accepted as true, questions of whether the incomplete performance by plaintiff was substantial performance and of the amount plaintiff was entitled to recover remained, summary judgment for plaintiff as to its claim against defendant would be reversed. Almond Grading Co. v. Shaver, 74 N.C. App. 576, 329 S.E.2d 417 (1985).

Covenant Not to Compete. — Where there was a genuine issue as to whether a covenant not to compete between the parties was supported by valuable consideration, summary judgment was improvidently entered. Stevenson v. Parsons, 96 N.C. App. 93, 384 S.E.2d 291 (1989), cert. denied, 326 N.C. 366, 389 S.E.2d 819 (1990).

Use of Road Where Dedication in Issue. — Where plaintiff brought an action against her neighbor to enjoin his use of a road which ran against plaintiff's property to defendant's property, the material issue of whether road dedication had ever been accepted or rejected by an appropriate authority precluded summary judgment as a matter of law. Cavin v. Ostwalt, 76 N.C. App. 309, 332 S.E.2d 509 (1985).

Separation Agreement Did Not Bar Divorce Action Where Issue of Duress Raised. — Since plaintiff's affidavit, averring duress or fear, raised a genuine issue of material fact as to the validity of a separation agreement asserted by defendant in bar of action for absolute divorce and an equitable distribution of marital property, the court improvidently granted defendant's motion for summary judgment. Cox v. Cox, 75 N.C. App. 354, 330 S.E.2d 506 (1985).

Fraudulent Inducement of Real Estate Purchase. — Where evidence was introduced to indicate that plaintiff purchasers of real estate had been induced through defendant's fraudulent actions to forego inquiry regarding the property's condition, it was improper for the trial court to grant defendant real estate company's motion for summary judgment. Bolick v. Townsend Co., 94 N.C. App. 650, 381 S.E.2d 175, cert. denied, 325 N.C. 545, 385 S.E.2d 495 (1989).

In a fraudulent concealment claim, conclusionary, self-serving denials of fraud contained in the defendant's affidavits were clearly insufficient to show that the defendant was entitled to summary judgment. Watts v. Cumberland County Hosp. Sys., 75 N.C. App. 1, 330 S.E.2d 242 (1985), rev'd on other grounds, 317 N.C. 321, 345 S.E.2d 201 (1986).

Automobile Accident. — In action for damages arising out of automobile accident, trial court erred in granting defendant's motion for summary judgment. Mobley v. Estate of Johnson, 111 N.C. App. 422, 432 S.E.2d 425 (1993).

Permission to Drive Vehicle. — Although driver of truck involved in accident did not have owner's permission to drive truck and did not have a valid driver's license, and owner's insurance policy excluded coverage for persons using insured vehicle without reasonable belief that he or she was entitled to do so, insurance company was not entitled to summary judgment on its claim denying coverage as there was a question as to the driver's subjective belief of being entitled to drive the vehicle. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. v. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 95 N.C. App. 178, 381 S.E.2d 874 (1989).

Negligence of Fire Truck Driver. — Summary judgment was improper in case based upon fire truck driver's alleged negligence, where there was conflicting evidence as to whether or not the siren was on, whether or not the driver's election of traffic lanes was prudent, and whether or not the speed at which the fire truck was travelling was excessive. Lopez v. Snowden, 96 N.C. App. 480, 386 S.E.2d 65 (1989).

Equitable Distribution. — On appeal from summary judgment, the record did not provide basis for determination of whether defendant's equitable distribution action would allow redress of injury complained of in her constructive trust proceeding, thus barring the constructive trust action under the doctrine of election of remedies; nonetheless, as the equitable distribution action had not been prosecuted to a final judgment, the trial court erred in entering summary judgment for the plaintiff and dismissing defendant's counterclaim for a constructive trust. Lamb v. Lamb, 92 N.C. App. 680, 375 S.E.2d 685 (1989).

Conflict in Forecasts of Evidence as to Causation. — In a private nuisance action, where there was a conflict in the forecasts of evidence as to causation offered by the parties' affidavits, the question of causation was a question of fact and the court erred in granting summary judgment. Bjornsson v. Mize, 75 N.C. App. 289, 330 S.E.2d 520, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 537, 335 S.E.2d 13 (1985).

While it is not advisable to make findings of fact in a summary judgment proceeding, such findings do not render summary judgment invalid. Summey Outdoor Adv., Inc. v. County of Henderson, 96 N.C. App. 533, 386 S.E.2d 439 (1989).

Validity of Right of First Refusal Provision as Question for Court. — On a motion for summary judgment, whether a right of first refusal provision is valid or void is a question of law for the trial court. Pinehurst v. Regional Invs., 97 N.C. App. 114, 387 S.E.2d 222 (1990), aff'd, 330 N.C. 725, 412 S.E.2d 645 (1992).

In an action for constructive fraud and constructive trust, summary judgment for defendant attorney was precluded by a genuine issue of material fact as to the existence of an attorney-client relationship at the time a referral fee arrangement was made. Booher v. Frue, 98 N.C. App. 585, 392 S.E.2d 105 (1990).

Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress. — Where plaintiff's allegations were sufficient to establish that defendant's behavior constituted more than insults or unflattering opinions the trial court erred in granting summary judgment in favor of defendant with regard to suit alleging intentional inflictions of emotional distress, as there were sufficient facts alleged to raise a question of whether defendant's conduct was extreme and outrageous. Waddle v. Sparks, 100 N.C. App. 129, 394 S.E.2d 683 (1990).

Libel and Slander. — There was ample evidence to withstand summary judgment in the record of libel and slander case that defendant's statement was false and made with actual malice; defendant's firing of plaintiff within days after newspaper published a letter from plaintiff's mother in support of defendant's political opponent, and the vehement character of the statement to the newspaper were some evidence of defendant's ill-will toward plaintiff. Plaintiff also introduced evidence that he was competent at his job as assistant district attorney. Clark v. Brown, 99 N.C. App. 255, 393 S.E.2d 134 (1990).

Summary judgment was improper where plaintiffs forecast evidence that purchasing corporation was a "mere continuation" of the old corporation. Bryant v. Adams, 116 N.C. App. 448, 448 S.E.2d 832 (1994), cert. denied, 339 N.C. 736, 454 S.E.2d 647 (1995).

Where plaintiffs had reasonable notice that their agreement to charge pharmaceuticals to defendant's open account was terminated, defendant was entitled to judgment as a matter of law; thus, the order of the trial court granting summary judgment in plaintiff's favor was reversed. J.M. Smith Corp. v. Matthews, 123 N.C. App. 771, 474 S.E.2d 798 (1996).

Mitigation of Damages. — Defendant's affidavit presented a genuine issue of material fact as to the adequacy of plaintiff's attempted mitigation of damages; therefore, the trial court incorrectly granted summary judgment on the issue of damages. RC Assocs. v. Regency Ventures, Inc., 111 N.C. App. 367, 432 S.E.2d 394 (1993).

Piercing the Corporate Veil. — Because only one of several factors that can justify a court in piercing the corporate veil and treating a corporation as the alter ego of its officers or stockholders was established without contradiction by the materials in the record, the court correctly denied plaintiff's motion for summary judgment on the issue of piercing the corporate veil. Hoots v. Toms & Bazzle, 100 N.C. App. 412, 396 S.E.2d 820 (1990).

Contributory Negligence of Paper Mill Operator. — Genuine issues of fact, precluding summary judgment, existed as to whether a paper mill owner was contributorily negligent in operating a continuous digester system which the owner alleged had been improperly designed and installed by the system's manufacturer. Federal Paper Bd. Co. v. Kamyr, Inc., 101 N.C. App. 329, 399 S.E.2d 411 (1991), discretionary review denied, 328 N.C. 570, 403 S.E.2d 510 (1991).

Action for Attorney's Fees. — Where there was a genuine issue of material fact as to whether a nurse anesthetist's attorney fees were actually and necessarily incurred in connection with any threatened action seeking to hold her liable, summary judgment was not proper. Gregorino v. Charlotte-Mecklenburg Hosp. Auth., 121 N.C. App. 593, 468 S.E.2d 432 (1996).

For additional case in which summary judgment was held improper, see Wilkes County Vocational Workshop, Inc. v. United Sleep Prods., Inc., 321 N.C. 735, 365 S.E.2d 292 (1988).

IV. BURDEN ON MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT.

Movant Must Establish Lack of a Triable Issue. — The burden is on the moving party to establish the lack of a triable issue of fact. Pridgen v. Hughes, 9 N.C. App. 635, 177 S.E.2d 425 (1970); Haithcock v. Chimney Rock Co., 10 N.C. App. 696, 179 S.E.2d 865 (1971); Moore v. Bryson, 11 N.C. App. 260, 181 S.E.2d 113 (1971); Robinson v. McMahan, 11 N.C. App. 275, 181 S.E.2d 147, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 395, 183 S.E.2d 243 (1971); Lineberger v. Colonial Life & Accident Ins. Co., 12 N.C. App. 135, 182 S.E.2d 643 (1971); Brevard v. Barkley, 12 N.C. App. 665, 184 S.E.2d 370 (1971); Millsaps v. Wilkes Contracting Co., 14 N.C. App. 321, 188 S.E.2d 663, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 623, 190 S.E.2d 466 (1972); Koontz v. City of Winston-Salem, 280 N.C. 513, 186 S.E.2d 897 (1972); Hinson v. Jefferson, 20 N.C. App. 204, 200 S.E.2d 812 (1973); Zimmerman v. Hogg & Allen, 286 N.C. 24, 209 S.E.2d 795 (1974); Dendy v. Watkins, 288 N.C. 447, 219 S.E.2d 214 (1975); Shook Bldrs. Supply Co. v. Eastern Assocs., 24 N.C. App. 533, 211 S.E.2d 472 (1975); Freeman v. Sturdivant Dev. Co., 25 N.C. App. 56, 212 S.E.2d 190 (1975); Kidd v. Early, 289 N.C. 343, 222 S.E.2d 392 (1976); North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Gillespie, 291 N.C. 303, 230 S.E.2d 375 (1976); Cameron-Brown Capital Corp. v. Spencer, 31 N.C. App. 499, 229 S.E.2d 711 (1976), cert. denied, 291 N.C. 710, 232 S.E.2d 203 (1977); Five Star Enters., Inc. v. Russell, 34 N.C. App. 275, 237 S.E.2d 859 (1977); Wachovia Mtg. Co. v. Autry-Barker-Spurrier Real Estate, Inc., 39 N.C. App. 1, 249 S.E.2d 727 (1978), aff'd, 297 N.C. 696, 256 S.E.2d 688 (1979); Baumann v. Smith, 298 N.C. 778, 260 S.E.2d 626 (1979); Moye v. Thrifty Gas Co., 40 N.C. App. 310, 252 S.E.2d 837, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 611, 257 S.E.2d 219 (1979); Lula Conrad Hoots Mem. Hosp. v. Hoots, 40 N.C. App. 595, 253 S.E.2d 330, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 609, 257 S.E.2d 218 (1979); Smith v. Currie, 40 N.C. App. 739, 253 S.E.2d 645, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 612, 257 S.E.2d 219 (1979); English v. Holden Beach Realty Corp., 41 N.C. App. 1, 254 S.E.2d 223, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 609, 257 S.E.2d 217 (1979); Baumann v. Smith, 41 N.C. App. 223, 254 S.E.2d 627, rev'd on other grounds, 298 N.C. 778, 260 S.E.2d 626 (1979); Oliver v. Roberts, 49 N.C. App. 311, 271 S.E.2d 399 (1980); Brenner v. Little Red Sch. House, Ltd., 302 N.C. 207, 274 S.E.2d 206 (1981); Stanback v. Stanback, 53 N.C. App. 243, 280 S.E.2d 498, cert. denied, 304 N.C. 197, 285 S.E.2d 101 (1981); Moore v. Crumpton, 306 N.C. 618, 295 S.E.2d 436 (1982); Sharpe v. Quality Educ., Inc., 59 N.C. App. 304, 296 S.E.2d 661 (1982); Seay v. Allstate Ins. Co., 59 N.C. App. 220, 296 S.E.2d 30 (1982); Murphrey v. Winslow, 70 N.C. App. 10, 318 S.E.2d 849, cert. denied as to additional issues, 312 N.C. 495, 322 S.E.2d 558 (1984); Carlton v. Carlton, 74 N.C. App. 690, 329 S.E.2d 682 (1985); Overstreet v. City of Raleigh, 75 N.C. App. 351, 330 S.E.2d 643 (1985); Sanyo Elec., Inc. v. Albright Distrib. Co., 76 N.C. App. 115, 331 S.E.2d 738 (1985); Lessard v. Lessard, 77 N.C. App. 97, 334 S.E.2d 475 (1985); Land-of-Sky Regional Council v. County of Henderson, 78 N.C. App. 85, 336 S.E.2d 653 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 553, 344 S.E.2d 7 (1986); Hatfield v. Jefferson Std. Life Ins. Co., 85 N.C. App. 438, 355 S.E.2d 199 (1987); Hall v. Post, 85 N.C. App. 610, 355 S.E.2d 819, reversed on other grounds, 323 N.C. 259, 372 S.E.2d 711 (1988); Higgins v. Higgins, 86 N.C. App. 513, 358 S.E.2d 553 (1987); Brawley v. Brawley, 87 N.C. App. 545, 361 S.E.2d 759 (1987); White v. Hunsinger, 88 N.C. App. 382, 363 S.E.2d 203 (1988); Boudreau v. Baughman, 322 N.C. 331, 368 S.E.2d 849 (1988).

The party moving for summary judgment has the burden of showing that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact. Miller v. Snipes, 12 N.C. App. 342, 183 S.E.2d 270, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 619, 184 S.E.2d 883 (1971); Liberty Loan Corp. v. Miller, 15 N.C. App. 745, 190 S.E.2d 672 (1972); Brawley v. Heymann, 16 N.C. App. 125, 191 S.E.2d 366, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 425, 192 S.E.2d 835 (1972); Butler v. Berkeley, 25 N.C. App. 325, 213 S.E.2d 571 (1975); Frank H. Conner Co. v. Spanish Inns Charlotte, Ltd., 294 N.C. 661, 242 S.E.2d 785 (1978); Carson v. Sutton, 35 N.C. App. 720, 242 S.E.2d 535 (1978); Dixie Chem. Corp. v. Edwards, 68 N.C. App. 714, 315 S.E.2d 747 (1984); Campbell v. Board of Educ., 76 N.C. App. 495, 333 S.E.2d 507 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 390, 338 S.E.2d 878 (1986); Uzzell v. Integon Life Ins. Corp., 78 N.C. App. 458, 337 S.E.2d 639 (1985), cert. denied, 317 N.C. 341, 346 S.E.2d 149 (1986).

When the party bringing the cause of action moves for summary judgment, he must establish that all of the facts on all of the essential elements of his claim are in his favor and that there is no genuine issue of material fact with respect to any one of the essential elements of his claim. Steel Creek Dev. Corp. v. Smith, 300 N.C. 631, 268 S.E.2d 205 (1980).

In order to bear its burden of showing that it was entitled to summary judgment, a defendant is required to present a forecast of the evidence which is available at trial and which shows that there is no material issue of fact concerning an essential element of the plaintiff's claim and that such element could not be proved by the plaintiff through the presentation of substantial evidence. Jenkins v. Stewart & Everett Theatres, Inc., 41 N.C. App. 262, 254 S.E.2d 776, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 698, 259 S.E.2d 295 (1979).

A defendant must show as a matter of law that he is entitled to summary judgment in his favor by showing that there is no genuine issue of material fact concerning an essential element of the plaintiff's claim for relief and that the plaintiff cannot prove the existence of that element. Blue Ridge Sportcycle Co. v. Schroader, 60 N.C. App. 578, 299 S.E.2d 303 (1983).

A defendant is entitled to summary judgment only when he can produce a forecast of evidence, which when viewed most favorably to plaintiff would, if offered by plaintiff at trial, without more, compel a directed verdict in defendant's favor, or if defendant can show through discovery that plaintiff cannot support his claim. Coats v. Jones, 63 N.C. App. 151, 303 S.E.2d 655, aff'd, 309 N.C. 815, 309 S.E.2d 253 (1983).

The moving party has the burden of establishing that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact, entitling him to judgment as a matter of law. This motion requires the movant and the opponent to produce a forecast of the evidence he will present at trial. Normile v. Miller, 63 N.C. App. 689, 306 S.E.2d 147 (1983), modified and aff'd, 313 N.C. 98, 326 S.E.2d 11 (1985).

The party moving for summary judgment has the burden of establishing the absence of any triable issue of fact. His papers are meticulously scrutinized and all inferences are resolved against him. Joel T. Cheatham, Inc. v. Hall, 64 N.C. App. 678, 308 S.E.2d 457 (1983); Boyce v. Meade, 71 N.C. App. 592, 322 S.E.2d 605 (1984), cert. denied, 313 N.C. 506, 329 S.E.2d 390 (1985).

The party moving for summary judgment ultimately has the burden of establishing the lack of any triable issue of fact. Pembee Mfg. Corp. v. Cape Fear Constr. Co., 313 N.C. 488, 329 S.E.2d 350 (1985).

The party moving for summary judgment has the burden of clearly establishing a lack of any triable issue of fact by the record proper before the court. Jennings Communications Corp. v. PCG of Golden Strand, Inc., 126 N.C. App. 637, 486 S.E.2d 229 (1997).

The moving party has the burden of clearly establishing the lack of any triable issue of fact; his papers are carefully scrutinized while those of the nonmoving party are indulgently regarded. Town of West Jefferson v. Edwards, 74 N.C. App. 377, 329 S.E.2d 407 (1985); Almond Grading Co. v. Shaver, 74 N.C. App. 576, 329 S.E.2d 417 (1985).

The party moving for summary judgment has the burden of showing the lack of any genuine issue of material fact. If the movant is also the party bringing the action, he must establish his claim beyond any genuine dispute with respect to any material fact. Lambe-Young, Inc. v. Austin, 75 N.C. App. 569, 331 S.E.2d 293 (1985).

A party moving for summary judgment must establish that there is no genuine issue of material fact or that it has a complete defense as a matter of law. Walker v. Westinghouse Elec. Corp., 77 N.C. App. 253, 335 S.E.2d 79 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 597, 341 S.E.2d 39 (1986).

As the movants for summary judgment, plaintiffs had the burden of clearly establishing by the record presented to the court that there was no triable issue of fact in regard to defendants' counterclaim. Rose v. Lang, 85 N.C. App. 690, 355 S.E.2d 795 (1987).

By the Record Before the Court. — The party moving for summary judgment has the burden of clearly establishing the lack of any triable issue of fact by the record properly before the court. Singleton v. Stewart, 280 N.C. 460, 186 S.E.2d 400 (1972); Page v. Sloan, 281 N.C. 697, 190 S.E.2d 189 (1972); Wall v. Flack, 15 N.C. App. 747, 190 S.E.2d 671 (1972); Houck v. Overcash, 282 N.C. 623, 193 S.E.2d 905 (1973); Kiser v. Snyder, 17 N.C. App. 445, 194 S.E.2d 638, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 257, 195 S.E.2d 689 (1973); Norfolk & W. Ry. v. Werner Indus., Inc., 286 N.C. 89, 209 S.E.2d 734 (1974); Caldwell v. Deese, 288 N.C. 375, 218 S.E.2d 379 (1975); Reavis v. Campbell, 27 N.C. App. 231, 218 S.E.2d 873 (1975); Furst v. Loftin, 29 N.C. App. 248, 224 S.E.2d 641 (1976); Executive Leasing Assocs. v. Rowland, 30 N.C. App. 590, 227 S.E.2d 642 (1976); Pitts v. Village Inn Pizza, Inc., 296 N.C. 81, 249 S.E.2d 375 (1978); Robinson v. Duszynski, 36 N.C. App. 103, 243 S.E.2d 148 (1978); Johnson v. Phoenix Mut. Life Ins. Co., 300 N.C. 247, 266 S.E.2d 610 (1980); Branch Banking & Trust Co. v. Creasy, 301 N.C. 44, 269 S.E.2d 117 (1980); Cockerham v. Ward, 44 N.C. App. 615, 262 S.E.2d 651, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 195, 269 S.E.2d 622 (1980); Heritage Communities of N.C., Inc. v. Powers, Inc., 49 N.C. App. 656, 272 S.E.2d 399 (1980); Miller v. Triangle Volkswagen, Inc., 55 N.C. App. 593, 286 S.E.2d 608 (1982).

And Must Show Entitlement to Judgment. — The moving party must clearly establish that there is no triable issue of fact and that it is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Edwards v. Akion, 52 N.C. App. 688, 279 S.E.2d 894, aff'd, 304 N.C. 585, 284 S.E.2d 518 (1981); Derrick v. Ray, 61 N.C. App. 218, 300 S.E.2d 721 (1983).

Every party moving for summary judgment has the burden of proving that it is entitled to judgment in its favor. Olney Paint Co. v. Zalewski, 29 N.C. App. 149, 223 S.E.2d 573 (1976).

A party moving for summary judgment must show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Oestreicher v. American Nat'l Stores, Inc., 290 N.C. 118, 225 S.E.2d 797 (1976); Hicks v. Old Republic Life Ins. Co., 29 N.C. App. 561, 225 S.E.2d 164 (1976); Stancill v. City of Washington, 29 N.C. App. 707, 225 S.E.2d 834 (1976); Boone v. Fuller, 30 N.C. App. 107, 226 S.E.2d 191 (1976); Econo-Travel Motor Hotel Corp. v. Taylor, 301 N.C. 200, 271 S.E.2d 54 (1980); Rockingham Square Shopping Center, Inc. v. Town of Madison, 45 N.C. App. 249, 262 S.E.2d 705 (1980); Southern Nat'l Bank v. B & E Constr. Co., 46 N.C. App. 736, 266 S.E.2d 1 (1980); General Greene Inv. Co. v. Greene, 48 N.C. App. 29, 268 S.E.2d 810, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 235, 283 S.E.2d 132 (1980); Mace v. Bryant Constr. Corp., 48 N.C. App. 297, 269 S.E.2d 191 (1980); O'Neal v. Kellett, 55 N.C. App. 225, 284 S.E.2d 707 (1981); Ind-Com Elec. Co. v. First Union Nat'l Bank, 58 N.C. App. 215, 293 S.E.2d 215 (1982); Kaimowitz v. Duke L.J., 68 N.C. App. 463, 315 S.E.2d 82 (1984); Cox v. Cox, 75 N.C. App. 354, 330 S.E.2d 506 (1985); Bjornsson v. Mize, 75 N.C. App. 289, 330 S.E.2d 520, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 537, 335 S.E.2d 13 (1985); Branch Banking & Trust Co. v. Kenyon

Inv. Corp., 76 N.C. App. 1, 332 S.E.2d 186; Pardue v. Northwestern Bank, 77 N.C. App. 834, 336 S.E.2d 456 (1985); Surrette v. Duke Power Co., 78 N.C. App. 647, 338 S.E.2d 129 (1986); Lyles v. City of Charlotte, 120 N.C. App. 96, 461 S.E.2d 347 (1995).

Once movant establishes that there is no genuine issue of material fact, he must further prove that he is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. In re Will of Edgerton, 29 N.C. App. 60, 223 S.E.2d 524, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 308, 225 S.E.2d 832 (1976).

Because the burden is on the moving party to establish the lack of a triable issue of fact, the motion may only be granted where he shows that he is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law. Long v. Long, 15 N.C. App. 525, 190 S.E.2d 415 (1972).

Movant for summary judgment must make it perfectly clear that he was entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Shook Bldrs. Supply Co. v. Eastern Assocs., 24 N.C. App. 533, 211 S.E.2d 472 (1975); Lambert v. Duke Power Co., 32 N.C. App. 169, 231 S.E.2d 31, cert. denied, 292 N.C. 265, 233 S.E.2d 392 (1977).

In order to prevail on a summary judgment motion, defendant must carry the burden of establishing the lack of a genuine issue as to any material fact and entitlement to judgment as a matter of law. Clodfelter v. Bates, 44 N.C. App. 107, 260 S.E.2d 672 (1979), cert. denied, 299 N.C. 329, 265 S.E.2d 394 (1980); Bernick v. Jurden, 306 N.C. 435, 293 S.E.2d 405 (1982).

Regardless of Who Has Burden of Proof at Trial. — Irrespective of who has the burden of proof at trial upon issues raised by the pleadings, upon a motion for summary judgment the burden is upon the party moving therefor to establish that there is no genuine issue of fact remaining for determination and that he is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Branch Banking & Trust Co., 282 N.C. 44, 191 S.E.2d 683 (1972); Whitley v. Cubberly, 24 N.C. App. 204, 210 S.E.2d 289 (1974); Keith v. S.S. Kresge Co., 29 N.C. App. 579, 225 S.E.2d 135 (1976).

The burden is on the party moving for summary judgment to show that there is no genuine issue of material fact, regardless of who will have the burden of proof on the issue at trial. In re Will of Edgerton, 29 N.C. App. 60, 223 S.E.2d 524, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 308, 225 S.E.2d 832 (1976).

The burden to show that there is no genuine issue of material fact rests on the party moving for summary judgment, whether he or his opponent would at trial have the burden of proof on the issue concerned, and rests on him whether he is by it required to show the existence or nonexistence of facts. Whitley v. Cubberly, 24 N.C. App. 204, 210 S.E.2d 289 (1974).

The movant must meet his burden of proof even when he does not have the burden of proof at trial. Norfolk & W. Ry. v. Werner Indus., Inc., 286 N.C. 89, 209 S.E.2d 734 (1974).

When the party with the burden of proof moves for summary judgment, he must show that there are no genuine issues of fact, that there are no gaps in his proof, that no inferences inconsistent with his recovery arise from the evidence, and that there is no standard that must be applied to the facts by the jury. The party with the burden of proof who moves for summary judgment supported only by his own affidavits will ordinarily not be able to meet these requirements and thus will not be entitled to summary judgment. Parks Chevrolet, Inc. v. Watkins, 74 N.C. App. 719, 329 S.E.2d 728 (1985).

If a defendant moves for summary judgment, he assumes the burden of producing evidence of the necessary certitude which negatives plaintiff's claim. The burden of proof is reversed from what it would be if the case were at the trial stage. Clodfelter v. Bates, 44 N.C. App. 107, 260 S.E.2d 672 (1979), cert. denied, 299 N.C. 329, 265 S.E.2d 394 (1980).

A defendant who moves for summary judgment assumes the burden of positively and clearly showing that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that he or she is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. A defendant may meet this burden by (1) proving that an essential element of the plaintiff's case is nonexistent; or (2) showing through discovery that the plaintiff cannot produce evidence to support an essential element of his or her claim; or (3) showing that the plaintiff cannot surmount an affirmative defense which would bar the claim. Once the defendant satisfies his or her burden of proof, the burden shifts to the plaintiff to present a forecast of evidence which shows that a genuine issue of fact exists, or to provide an excuse for not so doing. Watts v. Cumberland County Hosp. Sys., 75 N.C. App. 1, 330 S.E.2d 242 (1985), rev'd on other grounds, 317 N.C. 321, 345 S.E.2d 201 (1986).

A defendant who moves for summary judgment may meet his burden by showing either that (1) an essential element of plaintiff's claim is nonexistent; (2) plaintiff cannot produce evidence to support an essential element of its claim; or (3) plaintiff cannot surmount an affirmative defense raised in bar of its claim. Lyles v. City of Charlotte, 120 N.C. App. 96, 461 S.E.2d 347 (1995).

Movant Must Negative Opponent's Claim in Its Entirety. — The party moving for summary judgment carries the burden of producing evidence of the necessary certitude to negative plaintiff's claim in its entirety and thereby demonstrate a lack of genuine issues of material fact. Caldwell v. Deese, 26 N.C. App. 435, 216 S.E.2d 452, rev'd on other grounds, 288 N.C. 375, 218 S.E.2d 379 (1975).

And Establish Own Claim Beyond Dispute. — The moving party must establish his claim beyond any genuine dispute with respect to any of the material facts. Steel Creek Dev. Corp. v. Smith, 300 N.C. 631, 268 S.E.2d 205 (1980).

Movant Shifted Burden by Showing Opponent Lacked Standing. — Because defendant met its summary judgment burden by showing that there was no genuine issue of material fact due to lack of standing, the burden shifted to plaintiff. Landfall Group Against Paid Transferability v. Landfall Club, Inc., 117 N.C. App. 270, 450 S.E.2d 513 (1994).

Burden of Proof on Movant. — The burden on the party moving for summary judgment may be carried by proving that an essential element of the opposing party's claim is nonexistent. Executive Leasing Assocs. v. Rowland, 30 N.C. App. 590, 227 S.E.2d 642 (1976).

When the party without the burden of proof on the substantive claim or defense moves for summary judgment he is entitled to it if he can meet the burden of proving that any one or more of the essential elements of the opposing party's claim or defense is nonexistent. Steel Creek Dev. Corp. v. Smith, 300 N.C. 631, 268 S.E.2d 205 (1980).

A defendant-movant must produce evidence of the necessary certitude which negatives any one or more of the essential elements of plaintiff's claim. Edwards v. Northwestern Bank, 39 N.C. App. 261, 250 S.E.2d 651 (1979), aff'd, 53 N.C. App. 492, 281 S.E.2d 86 (1981).

In order to prevail, a movant must establish the absence of any material issue of fact. One way he can meet this burden is by showing the nonexistence of an essential element of the plaintiff's claim for relief. Southerland v. Kapp, 59 N.C. App. 94, 295 S.E.2d 602 (1982).

The party moving for summary judgment meets its burden by proving that an essential element of the opposing party's claim is nonexistent, or by showing through discovery that the opposing party cannot produce evidence to support an essential element of the claim. Estate of Mullis v. Monroe Oil Co., 349 N.C. 196, 505 S.E.2d 131 (1998).

Showing That Opponent Cannot Produce Evidence to Support Its Claim Satisfies Burden. — The movant can satisfy his burden either by proving that an essential element of the opposing party's claim is nonexistent or by showing, through discovery, that the opposing party cannot produce evidence to support an essential element of its claim. Zimmerman v. Hogg & Allen, 286 N.C. 24, 209 S.E.2d 795 (1974); Harris v. Barham, 35 N.C. App. 13, 239 S.E.2d 717 (1978); Wachovia Mtg. Co. v. AutryBarker-Spurrier Real Estate, Inc., 39 N.C. App. 1, 249 S.E.2d 727 (1978), aff'd, 297 N.C. 696, 256 S.E.2d 688 (1979); Durham v. Vine, 40 N.C. App. 564, 253 S.E.2d 316 (1979); Roumillat v. Simplistic Enters., Inc., 331 N.C. 57, 414 S.E.2d 339 (1992), overruled on other grounds, Nelson v. Freeland, 349 N.C. 615, 507 S.E.2d 882 (1998); City of Thomasville v. Lease-Afex, Inc., 300 N.C. 651, 268 S.E.2d 190 (1980), overruled on other grounds; Econo-Travel Motor Hotel Corp. v. Taylor, 301 N.C. 200, 271 S.E.2d 54 (1980); Cockerham v. Ward, 44 N.C. App. 615, 262 S.E.2d 651, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 195, 269 S.E.2d 622 (1980); Spivey v. White Motor Corp., 46 N.C. App. 313, 264 S.E.2d 772, appeal dismissed, 300 N.C. 559, 270 S.E.2d 111 (1980); Gregory v. Perdue, Inc., 47 N.C. App. 655, 267 S.E.2d 584 (1980); Oliver v. Roberts, 49 N.C. App. 311, 271 S.E.2d 399 (1980); Gelder & Assocs. v. Huggins, 52 N.C. App. 336, 278 S.E.2d 295 (1981); Tyson v. North Carolina Nat'l Bank, 53 N.C. App. 189, 280 S.E.2d 478 (1981), modified and aff'd, 305 N.C. 136, 286 S.E.2d 561 (1982); Asheville Contracting Co. v. City of Wilson, 62 N.C. App. 329, 303 S.E.2d 365 (1983); Byrd Motor Lines v. Dunlop Tire & Rubber Corp., 63 N.C. App. 292, 304 S.E.2d 773 (1983), cert. denied, 310 N.C. 624, 315 S.E.2d 689 (1984); Herbert v. Browning-Ferris Indus. of S. Atl., Inc., 90 N.C. App. 339, 368 S.E.2d 416 (1988); Evans v. Appert, 91 N.C. App. 362, 372 S.E.2d 94, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 623, 374 S.E.2d 584 (1988).

A party moving for summary judgment may prevail if it meets the burden (1) of proving that an essential element of the opposing party's claim is nonexistent, or (2) of showing through discovery that the opposing party cannot produce evidence to support an essential element of his or her claim. Taylor v. Greensboro News Co., 57 N.C. App. 426, 291 S.E.2d 852, discretionary review improvidently granted and appeal dismissed, 307 N.C. 459, 298 S.E.2d 385 (1983); 53 N.C. App. 492, 281 S.E.2d 86 (1981); Kidd v. Early, 289 N.C. 343, 222 S.E.2d 392 (1976); Olney Paint Co. v. Zalewski, 29 N.C. App. 149, 223 S.E.2d 573 (1976); Carson v. Sutton, 35 N.C. App. 720, 242 S.E.2d 535 (1978), rev'd on other grounds, Whitley v. Cubberly, 24 N.C. App. 204, 210 S.E.2d 289 (1974).

To succeed in a summary judgment motion, the movant has the burden of showing, based on pleadings, depositions, answers, admissions, and affidavits, there is no genuine issue of material fact and that the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Defendant may meet this burden by showing either (1) an essential element of the nonmovant's claim is nonexistent, (2) the nonmovant cannot produce evidence to support an essential element of his claim, (3) or the nonmovant cannot surmount an affirmative defense which would bar his claim. Taylor v. Ashburn, 112 N.C. App. 604, 436 S.E.2d 276 (1993), cert. denied, 336 N.C. 77, 445 S.E.2d 46 (1994).

Or to Surmount an Affirmative Defense. — A defending party is entitled to summary judgment if he can show that the claimant cannot prove the existence of an essential element of his claim or cannot surmount an affirmative defense which would bar the claim. Dickens v. Puryear, 302 N.C. 437, 276 S.E.2d 325 (1981); Town of West Jefferson v. Edwards, 74 N.C. App. 377, 329 S.E.2d 407 (1985); Walker v. Durham Life Ins. Co., 90 N.C. App. 191, 368 S.E.2d 43 (1988).

Defendant may meet its burden by proving that an essential element of the opposing party's claim is nonexistent, or by showing through discovery that the opposing party cannot produce evidence to support an essential element of his or her claim or cannot surmount an affirmative defense which would bar the claim. Bernick v. Jurden, 306 N.C. 435, 293 S.E.2d 405 (1982); Sanyo Elec., Inc. v. Albright Distrib. Co., 76 N.C. App. 115, 331 S.E.2d 738, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 668, 335 S.E.2d 496 (1985); Boudreau v. Baughman, 322 N.C. 331, 368 S.E.2d 849 (1988).

Question of when the burden will shift to the opposing party may depend on the type of proof utilized by the moving party. Old S. Life Ins. Co. v. Bank of N.C., 36 N.C. App. 18, 244 S.E.2d 264 (1978).

Failure to Respond Not Always Fatal. — Not every failure of the opposing party to respond to a motion for summary judgment will require the entry of summary judgment. Kidd v. Early, 289 N.C. 343, 222 S.E.2d 392 (1976).

Under some circumstances the trial judge may properly deny the motion for summary judgment even when the nonmoving party fails to offer competent counter-affidavits or other evidence. Baumann v. Smith, 298 N.C. 778, 260 S.E.2d 626 (1979).

Granting of summary judgment where the adverse party does not respond to the motion "by affidavits or as otherwise provided in this rule" is proper only "if appropriate" under all of the circumstances of the case. Robinson v. McMahan, 11 N.C. App. 275, 181 S.E.2d 147, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 395, 183 S.E.2d 243 (1971); Brevard v. Barkley, 12 N.C. App. 665, 184 S.E.2d 370 (1971).

On a motion for summary judgment the moving party has the burden of establishing that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact. Once the moving party has met its burden, the opposing party may not rest on the mere allegations or denials of his pleading. Instead, the opposing party must set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial, either by affidavits or as otherwise provided in this rule. If the opposing party is unable to present the necessary opposing material he may seek the protection of section (f) of this rule, which gives the trial court the discretion to refuse the motion for judgment or order a continuance. Gillis v. Whitley's Disct. Auto Sales, Inc., 70 N.C. App. 270, 319 S.E.2d 661 (1984).

Mere failure of the nonmoving party to respond with opposing affidavits or depositions does not automatically mean that summary judgment is appropriate. The moving party must still succeed on the strength of its evidence, and when that evidence contains material contradictions or leaves questions of credibility unanswered the movant has failed to satisfy its burden. Perry v. Aycock, 68 N.C. App. 705, 315 S.E.2d 791 (1984).

The mere failure of the nonmoving party to respond with opposing affidavits or depositions does not automatically mean that summary judgment is appropriate, and the moving party must still succeed on the strength of its evidence. Cellu Prods. Co. v. G.T.E. Prods. Corp., 81 N.C. App. 474, 344 S.E.2d 566 (1986).

If movant fails to carry his burden of proof, the opposing party does not have to respond and summary judgment is not proper regardless of whether he responds or not. Steel Creek Dev. Corp. v. Smith, 300 N.C. 631, 268 S.E.2d 205 (1980); Almond Grading Co. v. Shaver, 74 N.C. App. 576, 329 S.E.2d 417 (1985).

If the moving party fails in his showing, summary judgment is not proper regardless of whether the opponent responds. Bernick v. Jurden, 306 N.C. 435, 293 S.E.2d 405 (1982); Brown v. Fulford, 311 N.C. 205, 316 S.E.2d 220 (1984).

On motion for summary judgment, movant has the burden of showing the absence of a genuine issue as to any material fact. When movant fails to carry this burden, summary judgment should be denied, even though no opposing evidence is presented. Durham v. Vine, 40 N.C. App. 564, 253 S.E.2d 316 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Roumillat v. Simplistic Enters., Inc., 331 N.C. 57, 414 S.E.2d 339 (1992), overruled on other grounds, Nelson v. Freeland, 349 N.C. 615, 507 S.E.2d 882 (1998); Atkins v. Beasley, 53 N.C. App. 33, 279 S.E.2d 866 (1981).

If the movant's forecast of evidence which he has available for presentation at trial fails to establish that there is no genuine issue of fact remaining for determination, summary judgment is not proper, whether or not the opponent responds. First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Branch Banking & Trust Co., 282 N.C. 44, 191 S.E.2d 683 (1972).

Until defendant-movant meets his initial burden, the opposing party, even though he may bear the burden of proof at trial, need not respond with evidence showing further support for his claim and a grant of summary judgment in defendant's favor is improper. Edwards v. Northwestern Bank, 39 N.C. App. 261, 250

S.E.2d 651 (1979), aff'd, 53 N.C. App. 492, 281 S.E.2d 86 (1981).

Motion for summary judgment should ordinarily be denied even though the opposing party makes no response, if: (1) the movant's supporting evidence is self-contradictory or circumstantially suspicious or the credibility of a witness is inherently suspect either because he is interested in the outcome of the case and the facts are peculiarly within his knowledge or because he has testified as to matters of opinion involving a substantial margin for honest error, (2) there are significant gaps in the movant's evidence or it is circumstantial and reasonably allows inferences inconsistent with the existence of an essential element, or (3) although all the evidentiary or historical facts are established, reasonable minds may still differ over their application to some principle such as the prudent man standard for negligence cases. Kidd v. Early, 289 N.C. 343, 222 S.E.2d 392 (1976); Carson v. Sutton, 35 N.C. App. 720, 242 S.E.2d 535 (1978).

Nonmovant does not have burden of coming forward until movant produces evidence of the necessary certitude which negatives the claim of the party opposing the motion against it in its entirety. Whitley v. Cubberly, 24 N.C. App. 204, 210 S.E.2d 289 (1974); Butler v. Berkeley, 25 N.C. App. 325, 213 S.E.2d 571 (1975); Mace v. Bryant Constr. Corp., 48 N.C. App. 297, 269 S.E.2d 191 (1980).

The burden rests on the movant to make a conclusive showing; until then, the nonmovant has no burden to produce evidence. VEPCO v. Tillett, 80 N.C. App. 383, 343 S.E.2d 188, cert. denied, 317 N.C. 715, 347 S.E.2d 457 (1986).

If the moving party satisfies its burden of proof, then the burden shifts to the nonmoving party to set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial. The nonmoving party may not rest upon the mere allegations of his pleadings. Taylor v. Greensboro News Co., 57 N.C. App. 426, 291 S.E.2d 852, discretionary review improvidently granted and appeal dismissed, 307 N.C. 459, 298 S.E.2d 385 (1983); 316 N.C. 374, 342 S.E.2d 889 (1986); White v. Hunsinger, 88 N.C. App. 382, 363 S.E.2d 203 (1988).

Once the movant for summary judgment demonstrates that no material issues of fact exist, the burden shifts to the nonmovant to set forth specific facts showing that genuine issues of fact remain for trial. Orient Point Assocs. v. Plemmons, 68 N.C. App. 472, 315 S.E.2d 366 (1984); Little v. National Servs. Indus., Inc., 79 N.C. App. 688, 340 S.E.2d 510 (1986); Walker v. Durham Life Ins. Co., 90 N.C. App. 191, 368 S.E.2d 43 (1988); Ward v. Durham Life Ins. Co., 90 N.C. App. 286, 368 S.E.2d 391 (1988), aff'd, 325 N.C. 202, 381 S.E.2d 698 (1989).

When a party moves for summary judgment on a claim and properly supports all the essentials of that claim with evidence, it falls to the opposing party to present contradictory evidence or to show by facts that the movant's evidence is insufficient or unreliable. And when the opposing party fails to do that and it plainly appears from the pleadings and evidence presented that the movant is entitled to recover on the claim, summary judgment is proper. Blackwell v. Massey, 69 N.C. App. 240, 316 S.E.2d 350 (1984).

The moving party has the burden of showing that no material issues of fact exist. In rebuttal, the nonmovant must then set forth specific facts showing that genuine issues of fact remain for trial. Southeastern Asphalt & Concrete Co. v. American Defender Life Ins. Co., 69 N.C. App. 185, 316 S.E.2d 311 (1984).

If the movant's burden is carried, the burden is on the opposing party to show that there is a question of material fact that can only be resolved by proceeding to trial. Branch Banking & Trust Co. v. Kenyon Inv. Corp., 76 N.C. App. 1, 332 S.E.2d 186, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 662, 335 S.E.2d 902 (1985).

The burden is upon the party moving for summary judgment to show that there is no genuine issue of law. If the movant meets this burden, the burden then shifts to the nonmovant to set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue of material fact for trial. BM & W of Fayetteville, Inc. v. Barnes, 75 N.C. App. 600, 331 S.E.2d 308 (1985).

Once the moving party has submitted materials in support of the motion the burden shifts to the opposing party to produce evidence establishing that the motion should not be granted. Campbell v. Board of Educ., 76 N.C. App. 495, 333 S.E.2d 507 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 390, 338 S.E.2d 878 (1986).

When Nonmovant Must Come Forward with Forecast of Evidence. — On a motion for summary judgment, it is only when the movant's evidence, considered alone, is sufficient to establish his right to judgment as a matter of law that the nonmovant must come forward with a forecast of his own evidence. Durham v. Vine, 40 N.C. App. 564, 253 S.E.2d 316 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Roumillat v. Simplistic Enters., Inc., 331 N.C. 57, 414 S.E.2d 339 (1992), overruled on other grounds, Nelson v. Freeland, 349 N.C. 615, 507 S.E.2d 882 (1998).

When movant presents an argument or defense supported by facts which would entitle him to judgment as a matter of law, the party opposing the motion must present a forecast of the evidence which will be available for presentation at trial and which will tend to support his claim for relief. Cone v. Cone, 50 N.C. App. 343, 274 S.E.2d 341, cert. denied, 302 N.C. 629, 280 S.E.2d 440 (1981).

If the moving party forecasts such evidence as would require a directed verdict for the movant at trial, the party opposing the motion must file papers which forecast evidence which would prevent a directed verdict at trial in order to prevent summary judgment in favor of the movant. Buck v. Tweetsie R.R., 44 N.C. App. 588, 261 S.E.2d 517 (1980).

Until defendant has forecast evidence tending to establish his right to judgment as a matter of law, claimant is not required to present any evidence to support his claim for relief. However, once defendant forecasts evidence which will be available to him at trial and which tends to establish his right to judgment as a matter of law, claimant must present a forecast of the evidence which will be available for presentation at trial and which will tend to support his claim for relief. If claimant does not respond at that time with a forecast of evidence which will be available at trial to show that defendant is not entitled to judgment as a matter of law, summary judgment should be entered in favor of defendant. Best v. Perry, 41 N.C. App. 107, 254 S.E.2d 281 (1979).

If the party moving for summary judgment successfully carries its burden of proof of showing that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact, the opposing party, by affidavits or otherwise, as provided by this rule, must set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial. Hillman v. United States Liab. Ins. Co., 59 N.C. App. 145, 296 S.E.2d 302 (1982), cert. denied, 307 N.C. 468, 299 S.E.2d 221 (1983).

In addition to no issue of fact being present, to grant summary judgment a court must find "that on the undisputed aspects of the opposing evidential forecasts the party given judgment is entitled to it as a matter of law." Sauls v. Charlotte Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 62 N.C. App. 533, 303 S.E.2d 358 (1983); Elmore's Feed & Seed, Inc. v. Patrick, 62 N.C. App. 715, 303 S.E.2d 394 (1983).

Once a defendant has properly pleaded the statute of limitations, the burden is then placed upon the plaintiff to offer a forecast of evidence showing that the action was instituted within the permissible period after the accrual of the cause of action. Pembee Mfg. Corp. v. Cape Fear Constr. Co., 313 N.C. 488, 329 S.E.2d 350 (1985); Boundreau v. Baughman, 86 N.C. App. 165, 356 S.E.2d 907 (1987), rev'd in part, modified and aff'd in part, 322 N.C. 331, 368 S.E.2d 849 (1988).

When the moving party presents an adequately supported motion, the opposing party must come forward with facts, not mere allegations, which controvert the facts set forth in the moving party's case, or otherwise suffer a summary judgment. Campbell v. Board of Educ., 76 N.C. App. 495, 333 S.E.2d 507 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 390, 338 S.E.2d 878 (1986).

Once plaintiff has made and supported its motion for summary judgment, under section (e) of this rule, the burden is then on the defendant to introduce evidence in opposition to the motion setting forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial. The defendant then must come forward with a forecast of his own evidence. Amoco Oil Co. v. Griffin, 78 N.C. App. 716, 338 S.E.2d 601, cert. denied, 316 N.C. 374, 342 S.E.2d 889 (1986).

When defendant has adduced evidence negating an essential element of plaintiff's proof, plaintiff must at a minimum come forward with competent evidence that raises a genuine issue of material fact on that element. White v. Hunsinger, 88 N.C. App. 382, 363 S.E.2d 203 (1988).

By making a motion for summary judgment, a defendant may force a plaintiff to produce a forecast of evidence demonstrating that the plaintiff will be able to make out at least a prima facie case at trial. Boudreau v. Baughman, 322 N.C. 331, 368 S.E.2d 849 (1988).

Where the moving party offers facts and the opposing party offers mere allegations, there is no genuine issue as to a material fact. Moore v. Fieldcrest Mills, Inc., 36 N.C. App. 350, 244 S.E.2d 208 (1978), aff'd, 296 N.C. 467, 251 S.E.2d 419 (1979).

Unsupported allegations in pleadings are insufficient to create a genuine issue as to a material fact where the moving adverse party supports his motion by allowable evidentiary matter showing the facts to be contrary to that alleged in the pleadings. Pridgen v. Hughes, 9 N.C. App. 635, 177 S.E.2d 425 (1970); Gudger v. Transitional Furn., Inc., 30 N.C. App. 387, 226 S.E.2d 835 (1976).

Section (e) of this rule clearly precludes any party from prevailing against a motion for summary judgment through reliance on conclusory allegations unsupported by facts. Nasco Equip. Co. v. Mason, 291 N.C. 145, 229 S.E.2d 278 (1976).

Hence when a motion for summary judgment is properly supported, the adverse party may not rest upon the mere allegations or denials of his pleading. Five Star Enters., Inc. v. Russell, 34 N.C. App. 275, 237 S.E.2d 859 (1977).

If the defendant moving for summary judgment successfully carries his burden of proof, the plaintiff may not rely upon the bare allegations of his complaint to establish triable issues of fact. Haithcock v. Chimney Rock Co., 10 N.C. App. 696, 179 S.E.2d 865 (1971); Brevard v. Barkley, 12 N.C. App. 665, 184 S.E.2d 370 (1971); Jarrell v. Samsonite Corp., 12 N.C. App. 673, 184 S.E.2d 376, cert. denied, 280 N.C. 180, 185 S.E.2d 704 (1971); Millsaps v. Wilkes Contracting Co., 14 N.C. App. 321, 188 S.E.2d 663, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 623, 190 S.E.2d 466 (1972); Moore v. Galloway, 35 N.C. App. 394, 241 S.E.2d 386 (1978); Cockerham v. Ward, 44 N.C. App. 615, 262 S.E.2d 651, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 195, 269 S.E.2d 622 (1980).

Plaintiff may not rely on the bare allegations of his complaint where defendants' motions for summary judgment are supported as provided in this rule. Peterson v. Winn-Dixie of Raleigh, Inc., 14 N.C. App. 29, 187 S.E.2d 487 (1972).

Upon a motion for summary judgment the adverse party may not rest upon his complaint and wait for trial to present his evidence, if any, when the moving party has presented affidavits or other matter indicating that summary judgment is appropriate. First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Branch Banking & Trust Co., 14 N.C. App. 567, 188 S.E.2d 661, rev'd on other grounds, 282 N.C. 44, 191 S.E.2d 683 (1972).

Section (e) of this rule requires an adverse party to do more than merely rely on his pleading if the movant supports his motion by affidavit or otherwise. Old S. Life Ins. Co. v. Bank of N.C., 36 N.C. App. 18, 244 S.E.2d 264 (1978).

If the party moving for summary judgment successfully carries his burden of proof, the opposing party must, by affidavits or otherwise, set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial, and he cannot rest upon the bare allegations or denials of his pleading. Hillman v. United States Liab. Ins. Co., 59 N.C. App. 145, 296 S.E.2d 302 (1982), cert. denied, 307 N.C. 468, 299 S.E.2d 221 (1983).

When the party moving for summary judgment presents an adequately supported motion, the opposing party must come forward with facts, not mere allegations, which controvert the facts set forth in the moving party's case, or otherwise suffer a summary judgment. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Grose, 64 N.C. App. 289, 307 S.E.2d 216 (1983), cert. denied, 311 N.C. 309, 317 S.E.2d 908 (1984).

Not every failure to respond to a motion for summary judgment will require the entry of summary judgment. The moving party must satisfy his burden of proving that there is no genuine issue of any material fact. However, when the moving party presents an adequately supported motion, the opposing party must come forward with facts, not mere allegations, which controvert the facts set forth in the moving party's case, or otherwise suffer a summary judgment. Whitley v. Coltrane, 65 N.C. App. 679, 309 S.E.2d 712 (1983).

The moving party has the burden of establishing a lack of triable issues of fact but the nonmoving party may not rest upon mere allegations of his pleadings. Cashion v. Texas Gulf, Inc., 79 N.C. App. 632, 339 S.E.2d 797 (1986).

The moving party, through his forecast of the evidence, has the burden of establishing a lack of triable issues of fact, but the nonmoving party may not rest upon the mere allegations of his pleadings. Johnson v. Builder's Transp., Inc., 79 N.C. App. 721, 340 S.E.2d 515 (1986).

But Must Demonstrate Existence of a Genuine Issue. — A party against whom the motion for summary judgment is made may not rest upon the allegations or denials of his pleadings, but must demonstrate that there is a genuine issue for trial. Coakley v. Ford Motor Co., 11 N.C. App. 636, 182 S.E.2d 260, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 393, 183 S.E.2d 244 (1971); Pierce Concrete, Inc. v. Cannon Realty & Constr. Co., 75 N.C. App. 411, 335 S.E.2d 30 (1985).

When a movant makes out a convincing showing that genuine issues of fact are lacking, it is required that the adversary adequately demonstrate by receivable facts that a real, not formal, controversy exists, and he does not do that by mere denial or holding back evidence. Patrick v. Hurdle, 16 N.C. App. 28, 190 S.E.2d 871, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 304, 192 S.E.2d 195 (1972).

If the moving party files papers, including testimonial affidavits, which show there is not a triable issue, the opposing party, pursuant to sections (e) and (f) of this rule, must file papers which show that there is a triable issue, or the moving party will be entitled to summary judgment. Nye v. Lipton, 50 N.C. App. 224, 273 S.E.2d 313, cert. denied, 302 N.C. 630, 280 S.E.2d 441 (1981); Town of Atlantic Beach v. Young, 58 N.C. App. 597, 293 S.E.2d 821 (1982), rev'd on other grounds, 307 N.C. 422, 298 S.E.2d 686, appeal dismissed, 462 U.S. 1101, 103 S. Ct. 2446, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1328 (1983).

Where a party has shown that he is entitled to relief and the opposing party offers not even the slightest suggestion of a genuine issue of fact, a motion for summary judgment should be granted. Carson v. Sutton, 35 N.C. App. 720, 242 S.E.2d 535 (1978).

Once the moving party meets his burden, the burden is then on the opposing party to show that a genuine issue of material fact exists. If the opponent fails to forecast such evidence, then the trial court's entry of summary judgment is proper. White v. Hunsinger, 88 N.C. App. 382, 363 S.E.2d 203 (1988).

Or Provide an Excuse for Not So Showing. — If the movant carries his burden of establishing prima facie that he is entitled to summary judgment, then his motion should be granted, unless the opposing party responds and shows either that a genuine issue of material fact exists or that he has an excuse for not so showing. Steel Creek Dev. Corp. v. Smith, 300 N.C. 631, 268 S.E.2d 205 (1980).

If the moving party meets his burden of proof, the party who opposes the motion for summary judgment must either show that a genuine issue of material fact for trial does exist or provide an excuse for not so doing. Zimmerman v. Hogg & Allen, 286 N.C. 24, 209 S.E.2d 795 (1974); Vassey v. Burch, 301 N.C. 68, 269 S.E.2d 137 (1980); Econo-Travel Motor Hotel Corp. v. Taylor, 301 N.C. 200, 271 S.E.2d 54 (1980); Spivey v. White Motor Corp., 46 N.C. App. 313, 264 S.E.2d 772, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 300 N.C. 559, 270 S.E.2d 111 (1980); Quality Inns Int'l, Inc. v. Booth, Fish, Simpson, Harrison & Hall, 58 N.C. App. 1, 292 S.E.2d 755 (1982); Bernick v. Jurden, 306 N.C. 435, 293 S.E.2d 405 (1982); Town of West Jefferson v. Edwards, 74 N.C. App. 377, 329 S.E.2d 407 (1985).

On motion for summary judgment, the burden on the moving party is to establish that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact remaining to be determined, and if the movant carries this burden by showing that an essential element of the opposing party's claim is nonexistent, then the burden shifts to the nonmoving party to either show that a genuine issue of material fact does exist or provide an excuse for not so doing. Blue Jeans Corp. v. Pinkerton, Inc., 51 N.C. App. 137, 275 S.E.2d 209 (1981).

Nonmovant Must Evince Existence of Triable Issue of Material Fact. — The party opposing summary judgment is not entitled to have the motion denied on the mere hope that at trial he will be able to discredit the movant's evidence; he must, at the hearing upon the motion for summary judgment, be able to evince the existence of a triable issue of material fact. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Grose, 64 N.C. App. 289, 307 S.E.2d 216 (1983), cert. denied, 311 N.C. 309, 317 S.E.2d 908 (1984).

Nonmovant Must Set Forth Specific Facts. — This rule provides that the adverse party, when responding to a motion for summary judgment, must set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial. Beeson v. Moore, 31 N.C. App. 507, 229 S.E.2d 703 (1976), cert. denied, 291 N.C. 710, 232 S.E.2d 203 (1977).

An adequately supported motion for summary judgment triggers the opposing party's responsibility to come forward with facts, as distinguished from allegations, sufficient to indicate that he will be able to sustain his claim at trial. Dickens v. Puryear, 302 N.C. 437, 276 S.E.2d 325 (1981).

When the moving party presents an adequately supported motion, the opposing party must come forward with facts, not mere allegations, which controvert the facts set forth in the moving party's case, or otherwise suffer a summary judgment. Frank H. Conner Co. v. Spanish Inns Charlotte, Ltd., 294 N.C. 661, 242 S.E.2d 785 (1978); Ballinger v. North Carolina Dep't of Revenue, 59 N.C. App. 508, 296 S.E.2d 836 (1982), cert. denied, 307 N.C. 576, 299 S.E.2d 645 (1983).

By Affidavits or Otherwise. — Once a motion for summary judgment has been made and supported as provided by this rule, the opposing party may not rest upon the mere allegations and denials of his pleadings, but must come forth, by affidavits or as otherwise provided in this rule, with specific facts showing that a genuine issue for trial exists. Brice v. Moore, 30 N.C. App. 365, 226 S.E.2d 882 (1976); Cameron-Brown Capital Corp. v. Spencer, 31 N.C. App. 499, 229 S.E.2d 711 (1976), cert. denied, 291 N.C. 710, 232 S.E.2d 203 (1977); First Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Holland, 51 N.C. App. 529, 277 S.E.2d 108 (1981); Atkins v. Beasley, 53 N.C. App. 33, 279 S.E.2d 866 (1981).

When a motion for summary judgment is made and supported as provided in this rule, the response of an adverse party, by affidavits or otherwise, must set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial. Brevard v. Barkley, 12 N.C. App. 665, 184 S.E.2d 370 (1971); Millsaps v. Wilkes Contracting Co., 14 N.C. App. 321, 188 S.E.2d 663, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 623, 190 S.E.2d 466 (1972); Five Star Enters., Inc. v. Russell, 34 N.C. App. 275, 237 S.E.2d 859 (1977).

If the defendant moving for summary judgment successfully carries his burden of proof, the plaintiff must, by affidavits or otherwise, set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial. Patterson v. Reid, 10 N.C. App. 22, 178 S.E.2d 1 (1970); Haithcock v. Chimney Rock Co., 10 N.C. App. 696, 179 S.E.2d 865 (1971); Jarrell v. Samsonite Corp., 12 N.C. App. 673, 184 S.E.2d 376, cert. denied, 280 N.C. 180, 185 S.E.2d 704 (1971); Caldwell v. Deese, 26 N.C. App. 435, 216 S.E.2d 452, rev'd on other grounds, 288 N.C. 375, 218 S.E.2d 379 (1975); Brooks v. Smith, 27 N.C. App. 223, 218 S.E.2d 489 (1975); Bentley v. Langley, 39 N.C. App. 20, 249 S.E.2d 481 (1978), cert. denied, 296 N.C. 735, 254 S.E.2d 176 (1979); Neihage v. Kittrell Auto Parts, Inc., 41 N.C. App. 538, 255 S.E.2d 315, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 298, 259 S.E.2d 914 (1979); Cockerham v. Ward, 44 N.C. App. 615, 262 S.E.2d 651, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 195, 269 S.E.2d 622 (1980).

Where a defendant seeking summary judgment carries his burden of proving a lack of genuine issue of fact for trial by evidentiary presumption or otherwise, the plaintiff may not rely on his bare allegations to the contrary but must, by affidavits or otherwise, set forth specific facts showing a genuine issue of fact for trial to defeat defendants' motion. Clifton v. Fesperman, 50 N.C. App. 178, 272 S.E.2d 624 (1980).

General Denial by Nonmovant Is Insufficient. — Once plaintiff has made and supported its motion for summary judgment, under section (e) of this rule the burden is on defendant to introduce evidence in opposition to the motion setting forth "specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial." An answer filed by defendant which only generally denies the allegations of the complaint fails to do this. Stroup Sheet Metal Works, Inc. v. Heritage, Inc., 43 N.C. App. 27, 258 S.E.2d 77 (1979).

In order to resist a motion for summary judgment, it is incumbent upon the opposing party to show that he has, or will have, evidence sufficient to raise an issue of fact. This rule does not contemplate the use of affidavits merely to deny allegations in the pleadings. N.C. Monroe Constr. Co. v. Coan, 30 N.C. App. 731, 228 S.E.2d 497, cert. denied, 291 N.C. 323, 230 S.E.2d 676 (1976).

An answer filed by defendant as nonmovant which only generally denies the allegations of the complaint fails to raise a genuine issue of fact. An affidavit which merely reaffirms the allegations of the defendant's answer is also insufficient. Amoco Oil Co. v. Griffin, 78 N.C. App. 716, 338 S.E.2d 601, cert. denied, 316 N.C. 374, 342 S.E.2d 889 (1986).

But party opposing motion for summary judgment does not have to establish that he would prevail on the issue involved, but merely that the issue exists. In re Will of Edgerton, 29 N.C. App. 60, 223 S.E.2d 524, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 308, 225 S.E.2d 832 (1976); Cox v. Cox, 75 N.C. App. 354, 330 S.E.2d 506 (1985); Ward v. Durham Life Ins. Co., 90 N.C. App. 286, 368 S.E.2d 391, cert. granted, 322 N.C. 838, 371 S.E.2d 284 (1988), aff'd, 325 N.C. 202, 381 S.E.2d 698 (1989).

And Nonmovant Is Not Required to Make Out Prima Facie Case for Jury. — On a motion for summary judgment, the nonmovant is not required to come forward and make a prima facie case for the jury, as he would on a motion for directed verdict at trial. He is only required to show that he has evidence to contest such evidentiary matters as the movant may have produced in support of the motion that would, standing alone, defeat the action. Durham v. Vine, 40 N.C. App. 564, 253 S.E.2d 316 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Roumillat v. Simplistic Enters., Inc., 331 N.C. 57, 414 S.E.2d 339 (1992), overruled on other grounds, Nelson v. Freeland, 349 N.C. 615, 507 S.E.2d 882 (1998); Rorrer v. Cooke, 69 N.C. App. 305, 317 S.E.2d 34 (1981), rev'd on other grounds, 313 N.C. 338, 329 S.E.2d 355 (1985).

Summary judgment is a device by which a defending party may force the claimant to produce a forecast of the claimant's evidence demonstrating that the claimant will, at trial, be able to make out at least a prima facie case, or that he will be able to surmount an affirmative defense; the claimant need not present all the evidence available in his favor, but only that necessary to rebut the defendant's showing that an essential element of his claim is nonexistent or that he cannot surmount an affirmative defense. Dickens v. Puryear, 302 N.C. 437, 276 S.E.2d 325 (1981).

In a hearing on a motion for summary judgment the nonmovant, unlike a plaintiff at trial, does not have to automatically make out a prima facie case, but only has to refute any showing made that his case is fatally deficient. Riddle v. Nelson, 84 N.C. App. 656, 353 S.E.2d 866 (1987).

Nor to Present Evidence as to All Elements of Claim. — As nonmovants at a hearing on a motion for summary judgment, defendants did not have to automatically present evidence as to all the elements of their counterclaim as they would at trial; they only had to refute any showing by plaintiffs that the claim was fatally deficient. Rose v. Lang, 85 N.C. App. 690, 355 S.E.2d 795 (1987).

Burden on Defendant-Movant in Cases Dependent on State of Mind. — Defendant-movant has a particularly difficult burden to carry in a case in which plaintiff's claim is dependent on proof that defendant acted with a particular state of mind, e.g., cases involving fraud, conspiracy, or bad faith. In such a case defendant-movant, in order to meet his initial burden on a motion for summary judgment, must at least produce more than a mere denial by affidavits that he acted with the state of mind alleged by plaintiff. His evidence in support of his motion must be of the necessary certitude to negative any one or more of the essential elements of plaintiff's claim. Edwards v. Northwestern Bank, 39 N.C. App. 261, 250 S.E.2d 651 (1979), aff'd, 53 N.C. App. 492, 281 S.E.2d 86 (1981).

Defendant's Response Held Inadequate. — In a suit against defendant as guarantor of payment on a promissory note, where defendant filed an affidavit in opposition to plaintiff's motion for summary judgment, but in it merely referred to the question of a material change made in the terms of the note, which issue had been raised in his answer, and did not set forth any specific facts to support his allegation of material alteration, his response to plaintiff's motion for summary judgment was inadequate. Better Adv., Inc. v. Peace, 43 N.C. App. 534, 259 S.E.2d 359 (1979), cert. denied, 299 N.C. 328, 265 S.E.2d 393 (1980).

Where in opposition to plaintiff's evidence, defendant's sole and only support was verified denial upon information and belief of forgery allegations in complaint, this was not sufficient to rebut affidavits based on personal knowledge, and since no excuse was offered for defendant's failure of proof, and the court was given no reason to believe that her position in the case would ever be stronger than it then was, judgment against her was correctly entered. Blackwell v. Massey, 69 N.C. App. 240, 316 S.E.2d 350 (1984).

Defendant's affidavit, which only restated the unsupported allegations previously made by the defendant in his answer and in his answers to plaintiff's interrogatories, was insufficient to withstand plaintiff's motion for summary judgment. Dixie Chem. Corp. v. Edwards, 68 N.C. App. 714, 315 S.E.2d 747 (1984).

Party may succeed on summary judgment motion upon the strength of his own evidence or the weakness of the opposing party's evidence when such a forecast of that evidence can be obtained in discovery or in response to movant's prima facie showing on the motion. Steel Creek Dev. Corp. v. Smith, 300 N.C. 631, 268 S.E.2d 205 (1980).

For summary judgment to be appropriate for the party with the burden of persuasion he must still succeed on the strength of his own evidence, even though his affidavits and supporting material are not challenged as provided by sections (e) and (f) of this rule. Kidd v. Early, 289 N.C. 343, 222 S.E.2d 392 (1976).

V. FUNCTION OF TRIAL COURT.

Court Is Not Authorized to Decide Issues of Fact. — This rule does not authorize the court to decide an issue of fact. Caldwell v. Deese, 288 N.C. 375, 218 S.E.2d 379 (1975).

Under section (c) of this rule the trial judge does not sit as fact finder as is true under § 1A-1, Rule 52. Billings v. Joseph Harris Co., 27 N.C. App. 689, 220 S.E.2d 361 (1975), aff'd, 290 N.C. 502, 226 S.E.2d 321 (1976).

In ruling on a motion for summary judgment, the court should not decide issues of fact. However, summary judgments should be looked upon with favor where no genuine issue of material fact is presented. Joel T. Cheatham, Inc. v. Hall, 64 N.C. App. 678, 308 S.E.2d 457 (1983).

The court is not authorized to decide an issue of fact but to determine if such an issue exists. Campbell v. Board of Educ., 76 N.C. App. 495, 333 S.E.2d 507 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 390, 338 S.E.2d 878 (1986).

In ruling on a motion for summary judgment, the court does not resolve issues of fact, and must deny the motion if there is any genuine issue of material fact. Warren v. Rosso & Mastracco, Inc., 78 N.C. App. 163, 336 S.E.2d 699 (1985).

Nor to Make Findings of Facts and Conclusions of Law. — It is not a part of the function of the court on a motion for summary judgment to make findings of fact and conclusions of law. Capps v. City of Raleigh, 35 N.C. App. 290, 241 S.E.2d 527 (1978); Sainz v. Sainz, 36 N.C. App. 744, 245 S.E.2d 372 (1978); Marshall v. Keaveny, 38 N.C. App. 644, 248 S.E.2d 750 (1978).

There is no necessity for findings of fact where facts are not at issue, and summary judgment presupposes that there are no triable issues of material fact. Hyde Ins. Agency, Inc. v. Dixie Leasing Corp., 26 N.C. App. 138, 215 S.E.2d 162 (1975).

The court went far beyond the purview of summary judgment when it treated the hearing on the motion as a nonjury trial of the case on the merits, found facts on conflicting evidence, made conclusions of law, and entered final judgment between the parties. Stonestreet v. Compton Motors, Inc., 18 N.C. App. 527, 197 S.E.2d 579 (1973).

Findings of fact in a summary judgment order are ill advised because they indicate that a question of fact was presented and resolved by the trial court. Amoco Oil Co. v. Griffin, 78 N.C. App. 716, 338 S.E.2d 601, cert. denied, 316 N.C. 374, 342 S.E.2d 889 (1986).

A trial judge is not required to make findings of fact for summary judgment. Amoco Oil Co. v. Griffin, 78 N.C. App. 716, 338 S.E.2d 601, cert. denied, 316 N.C. 374, 342 S.E.2d 889 (1986).

A trial judge is not required to make findings of fact and conclusions of law in determining a motion for summary judgment, and if he does make some, they are disregarded on appeal. White v. Town of Emerald Isle, 82 N.C. App. 392, 346 S.E.2d 176, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 511, 349 S.E.2d 874 (1986).

But to Determine Whether Genuine Issues of Material Fact Exist. — It is not the duty of the court hearing a motion for summary judgment to decide an issue of fact, but rather to determine whether a genuine issue as to any material fact exists. Lee v. Shor, 10 N.C. App. 231, 178 S.E.2d 101 (1970); Moore v. Bryson, 11 N.C. App. 260, 181 S.E.2d 113 (1971); Clear Fir Sales Co. v. Carolina Plywood Distrib., Inc., 13 N.C. App. 429, 185 S.E.2d 737 (1972); Keith v. G.D. Reddick, Inc., 15 N.C. App. 94, 189 S.E.2d 775 (1972); Long v. Long, 15 N.C. App. 525, 190 S.E.2d 415 (1972); Lowman v. Huffman, 15 N.C. App. 700, 190 S.E.2d 700 (1972); Graham v. Northwestern Bank, 16 N.C. App. 287, 192 S.E.2d 109, cert. denied, 287 N.C. 426, 192 S.E.2d 836 (1972); Houck v. Overcash, 282 N.C. 623, 193 S.E.2d 905 (1973); Stonestreet v. Compton Motors, Inc., 18 N.C. App. 527, 197 S.E.2d 579 (1973); Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Chantos, 25 N.C. App. 482, 214 S.E.2d 438, cert. denied, 287 N.C. 465, 215 S.E.2d 624 (1975); Reavis v. Campbell, 27 N.C. App. 231, 218 S.E.2d 873 (1975); Lambert v. Duke Power Co., 32 N.C. App. 169, 231 S.E.2d 31, cert. denied, 292 N.C. 265, 233 S.E.2d 392 (1977); Vassey v. Burch, 301 N.C. 68, 269 S.E.2d 137 (1980); Flippin v. Jarrell, 301 N.C. 108, 270 S.E.2d 482 (1980), rehearing denied, 301 N.C. 727, 274 S.E.2d 228 (1981); Thompson v. Northwestern Sec. Life Ins. Co., 44 N.C. App. 668, 262 S.E.2d 397, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 202, 269 S.E.2d 620 (1980); Bone Int'l, Inc. v. Brooks, 51 N.C. App. 183, 275 S.E.2d 556, rev'd on other grounds, 304 N.C. 371, 283 S.E.2d 518 (1981); Gore v. Hill, 52 N.C. App. 620, 279 S.E.2d 102, cert. denied, 303 N.C. 710 (1981); Texaco, Inc. v. Creel, 57 N.C. App. 611, 292 S.E.2d 130, aff'd, 310 N.C. 695, 314 S.E.2d 506 (1984); Shew v. Southern Fire & Cas. Co., 58 N.C. App. 637, 294 S.E.2d 233 (1982), rev'd on other grounds, 307 N.C. 438, 298 S.E.2d 380 (1983); Godwin Sprayers, Inc. v. Utica Mut. Ins. Co., 59 N.C. App. 497, 296 S.E.2d 843 (1982), cert. denied, 307 N.C. 576, 299 S.E.2d 646 (1983); Narron v. Hardee's Food Sys., 75 N.C. App. 579, 331 S.E.2d 205, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 542, 335 S.E.2d 316 (1985); Lessard v. Lessard, 77 N.C. App. 97, 334 S.E.2d 475 (1985), aff'd, 316 N.C. 546, 342 S.E.2d 522 (1986), cert. granted as to additional issues, 315 N.C. 390, 338 S.E.2d 879 (1986); Barnes v. Wilson Hdwe. Co., 77 N.C. App. 773, 336 S.E.2d 457 (1985); Johnson v. Builder's Transp., Inc., 79 N.C. App. 721, 340 S.E.2d 515 (1986).

In ruling on a motion for summary judgment, the court does not resolve issues of fact, but goes beyond the pleadings to determine whether there is a genuine issue of material fact. Zimmerman v. Hogg & Allen, 286 N.C. 24, 209 S.E.2d 795 (1974).

It is not the province of the court to find the facts upon a motion for summary judgment. Its province is to determine whether there are genuine issues of material fact in dispute. Eggimann v. Wake County Bd. of Educ., 22 N.C. App. 459, 206 S.E.2d 754, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 756, 209 S.E.2d 280 (1974).

In passing upon a motion for summary judgment, the court does not decide facts, but makes a determination as to whether an issue exists which is germane to the action. Furst v. Loftin, 29 N.C. App. 248, 224 S.E.2d 641 (1976), overruled on other grounds, Connolly v. Potts, 63 N.C. App. 547, 306 S.E.2d 123 (1983); Nytco Leasing, Inc. v. Dan-Cleve Corp., 31 N.C. App. 634, 230 S.E.2d 559 (1976), cert. denied, 292 N.C. 265, 233 S.E.2d 393 (1977); Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Peace Broadcasting Corp., 32 N.C. App. 655, 233 S.E.2d 687, cert. denied, 292 N.C. 734, 235 S.E.2d 788 (1977); Reid v. Reid, 32 N.C. App. 750, 233 S.E.2d 620 (1977).

The judge's role in ruling on a motion for summary judgment is to determine whether any material issues of fact exist that require trial. Wachovia Mtg. Co. v. Autry-Barker-Spurrier Real Estate, Inc., 39 N.C. App. 1, 249 S.E.2d 727 (1978), aff'd, 297 N.C. 696, 256 S.E.2d 688 (1979); Stroup Sheet Metal Works, Inc. v. Heritage, Inc., 43 N.C. App. 27, 258 S.E.2d 77 (1979); Reed's Jewelers, Inc. v. ADT Co., 43 N.C. App. 744, 260 S.E.2d 107 (1979); DeCarlo v. Gerryco, Inc., 46 N.C. App. 15, 264 S.E.2d 370; Stanback v. Stanback, 53 N.C. App. 243, 280 S.E.2d 498, cert. denied, 304 N.C. 197, 285 S.E.2d 101 (1981); Land-of-Sky Regional Council v. County of Henderson, 78 N.C. App. 85, 336 S.E.2d 653 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 553, 344 S.E.2d 7 (1986).

Summary judgment does not authorize the court to decide an issue of fact. It authorizes the court to determine whether a genuine issue of fact exists. Sauls v. Charlotte Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 62 N.C. App. 533, 303 S.E.2d 358 (1983); Elmore's Feed & Seed, Inc. v. Patrick, 62 N.C. App. 715, 303 S.E.2d 394 (1983); Justus v. Deutsch, 62 N.C. App. 711, 303 S.E.2d 571, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 821, 310 S.E.2d 349 (1983).

The judge's role is to determine from the forecast of the evidence if there is a material issue of fact that is triable. Lawson v. Lawson, 84 N.C. App. 51, 351 S.E.2d 794, rev'd on other grounds, 321 N.C. 274, 362 S.E.2d 269 (1987).

In determining whether summary judgment is appropriate, the judge's function is not to decide the truth of issues raised by the pleadings and other materials of record, but to determine whether any genuine issue of material fact exists that requires adjudication. Avriett v. Avriett, 88 N.C. App. 506, 363 S.E.2d 875, aff'd, 322 N.C. 468, 368 S.E.2d 377 (1988).

And Whether a Party Is Entitled to Judgment as a Matter of Law. — Function of trial judge is to examine the materials, determine what facts are established and conclude whether there is a genuine issue as to any material fact and if a party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Billings v. Joseph Harris Co., 27 N.C. App. 689, 220 S.E.2d 361 (1975), aff'd, 290 N.C. 502, 226 S.E.2d 321 (1976).

Section 1A-1, Rule 52(a)(2) does not apply to the decision on a summary judgment motion, because if findings of fact are necessary to resolve an issue summary judgment is improper. Mosley v. National Fin. Co., 36 N.C. App. 109, 243 S.E.2d 145, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 467, 246 S.E.2d 9 (1978); Stone v. Conder, 46 N.C. App. 190, 264 S.E.2d 760, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 105, 273 S.E.2d 310 (1980); White v. Town of Emerald Isle, 82 N.C. App. 392, 346 S.E.2d 176, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 511, 349 S.E.2d 874 (1986).

Unless Hearing Is Extended into Court Trial. — If the summary judgment hearing is a protracted hearing, in effect a trial to determine that a trial must be held, and if all the parties desire to and do turn the summary judgment into a court trial, they cannot be heard to object. In that event the court should make findings of fact and conclusions of law in accordance with § 1A-1, Rule 52. Walton v. Meir, 14 N.C. App. 183, 188 S.E.2d 56, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 515, 189 S.E.2d 35 (1972).

If findings of fact are necessary to resolve an issue as to a material fact, summary judgment is improper. Hyde Ins. Agency, Inc. v. Dixie Leasing Corp., 26 N.C. App. 138, 215 S.E.2d 162 (1975); Nytco Leasing, Inc. v. Dan-Cleve Corp., 31 N.C. App. 634, 230 S.E.2d 559 (1976), cert. denied, 292 N.C. 265, 233 S.E.2d 393 (1977); Moore v. Galloway, 35 N.C. App. 394, 241 S.E.2d 386 (1978); PMB, Inc. v. Rosenfeld, 48 N.C. App. 736, 269 S.E.2d 748 (1980), cert. denied, 301 N.C. 722, 274 S.E.2d 231 (1981).

If the facts are not in dispute, there is no need to "find facts." If there is a need to "find facts," then summary judgment will not be appropriate if those facts are material. Capps v. City of Raleigh, 35 N.C. App. 290, 241 S.E.2d 527 (1978); Strickland v. Tant, 41 N.C. App. 534, 255 S.E.2d 325, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 304, 259 S.E.2d 917 (1979).

However, findings of fact and conclusions of law do not render a summary judgment void or voidable, and may be helpful, if the facts are not at issue and support the judgment. Mosley v. National Fin. Co., 36 N.C. App. 109, 243 S.E.2d 145, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 467, 246 S.E.2d 9 (1978); Stone v. Conder, 46 N.C. App. 190, 264 S.E.2d 760, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 105 (1980); PMB, Inc. v. Rosenfeld, 48 N.C. App. 736, 269 S.E.2d 748 (1980), cert. denied, 301 N.C. 722, 274 S.E.2d 231 (1981).

Although a trial judge was not required to make and enter into the record detailed findings of fact in ruling on a motion for summary judgment, it was not error for the court to do so, where there was plenary evidence in the record to support his findings. Singleton v. Stewart, 280 N.C. 460, 186 S.E.2d 400 (1972).

Although trial court's detailed findings of fact on granting summary judgment were irregular and unnecessary, nevertheless plaintiff was not prejudiced by such findings, even assuming arguendo that some of them were erroneous, where the materials before the court established without contradiction that plaintiff's action was fatally deficient. Avriett v. Avriett, 88 N.C. App. 506, 363 S.E.2d 875, aff'd, 322 N.C. 468, 368 S.E.2d 377 (1988).

As a Summary of Undisputed Facts Justifying Entry of Judgment. — Although findings of fact are not necessary on a motion for summary judgment, it is helpful to the parties and the courts for the trial judge to articulate a summary of the material facts which he considers are not at issue and which justify entry of judgment. Hyde Ins. Agency, Inc. v. Dixie Leasing Corp., 26 N.C. App. 138, 215 S.E.2d 162 (1975).

The action by the trial judge in making findings of fact was without error where his stated findings were merely a summary of the material facts not at issue which he thought justified entry of judgment. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Peace Broadcasting Corp., 32 N.C. App. 655, 233 S.E.2d 687, cert. denied, 292 N.C. 734, 235 S.E.2d 788 (1977).

In rare situations it can be helpful for the trial court to set out the undisputed facts which form the basis for his summary judgment. When that appears helpful or necessary, the court should let the judgment show that the facts set out therein are the undisputed facts. Capps v. City of Raleigh, 35 N.C. App. 290, 241 S.E.2d 527 (1978).

In ruling on a motion for summary judgment the trial judge does not make findings of fact, which are decisions upon conflicting evidence, but he may properly list the uncontroverted material facts which are the basis of his conclusions of law and judgment. Rodgerson v. Davis, 27 N.C. App. 173, 218 S.E.2d 471, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 731, 220 S.E.2d 351 (1975); A-S-P Assocs. v. City of Raleigh, 38 N.C. App. 271, 247 S.E.2d 800 (1978), rev'd on other grounds, 298 N.C. 207, 258 S.E.2d 444 (1979).

Orders granting summary judgment under this rule do not normally contain detailed findings of fact. However, if the findings of fact are actually the trial court's summation of the undisputed facts which support the judgment, findings of fact and conclusions of law do not render a summary judgment void or voidable. Noel Williams Masonry, Inc. v. Vision Contractors, 103 N.C. App. 597, 406 S.E.2d 605 (1991).

Consideration of Findings on Appeal. — Findings of fact on summary judgment entered by the trial judge, insofar as they may resolve issues as to a material fact, have no effect on appeal and are irrelevant to appeal decision. Hyde Ins. Agency, Inc. v. Dixie Leasing Corp., 26 N.C. App. 138, 215 S.E.2d 162 (1975).

A trial judge is not required to make findings of fact and conclusions of law in determining a motion for summary judgment, and if he does make some, they are disregarded on appeal. Mosley v. National Fin. Co., 36 N.C. App. 109, 243 S.E.2d 145, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 467, 246 S.E.2d 9 (1979).

VI. EVIDENCE ON MOTION.

A. In General.

What Evidence May Be Considered on Motion for Summary Judgment. — Evidence which may be considered under this rule includes admissions in the pleadings, depositions on file, answers to interrogatories under § 1A-1, Rule 33, admissions on file whether obtained under § 1A-1, Rule 36 or in any other way, affidavits, and any other material which would be admissible in evidence or of which judicial notice may properly be taken. Kessing v. National Mtg. Corp., 278 N.C. 523, 180 S.E.2d 823 (1971); Blades v. City of Raleigh, 280 N.C. 531, 187 S.E.2d 35 (1972); Riggins v. County of Mecklenburg, 14 N.C. App. 624, 188 S.E.2d 749 (1972); Jernigan v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 16 N.C. App. 46, 190 S.E.2d 866 (1972).

On a motion for summary judgment the court may consider admissions in the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, affidavits, admissions on file, oral testimony, documentary materials, facts which are subject to judicial notice, such presumptions as would be available upon trial, and any other materials which would be admissible in evidence at trial. Singleton v. Stewart, 280 N.C. 460, 186 S.E.2d 400 (1972); Koontz v. City of Winston-Salem, 280 N.C. 513, 186 S.E.2d 897, rehearing denied, 281 N.C. 516 (1972); Booe v. Hall, 24 N.C. App. 276, 210 S.E.2d 293 (1974); Butler v. Berkeley, 25 N.C. App. 325, 213 S.E.2d 571 (1975); Old S. Life Ins. Co. v. Bank of N.C., 36 N.C. App. 18, 244 S.E.2d 264 (1978).

When the motion for summary judgment comes on to be heard, the court may consider the pleadings, depositions, admissions, affidavits, answers to interrogatories, oral testimony and documentary materials; and the court may also consider facts which are subject to judicial notice and any presumptions that would be available at trial. Dendy v. Watkins, 288 N.C. 447, 219 S.E.2d 214 (1975); Gebb v. Gebb, 67 N.C. App. 104, 312 S.E.2d 691 (1984).

On a motion for summary judgement the court may consider affidavits, depositions, answers to interrogatories, admissions, documentary materials, facts which are subject to judicial notice and any other materials which would be admissible in evidence at trial. Huss v. Huss, 31 N.C. App. 463, 230 S.E.2d 159 (1976).

The court may consider, at the hearing on the motion for summary judgment, pleadings, affidavits which meet the requirements of section (e) of this rule, depositions, answers to interrogatories, admissions, oral testimony, documentary material, facts subject to judicial notice and such presumptions as would be available at trial. Mozingo v. North Carolina Nat'l Bank, 31 N.C. App. 157, 229 S.E.2d 57 (1976), cert. denied, 291 N.C. 711, 232 S.E.2d 204 (1977).

This rule does not limit consideration of a motion for summary judgment to the pleadings; the court may consider depositions, answers to interrogatories, admissions on file and affidavits. Ridings v. Ridings, 55 N.C. App. 630, 286 S.E.2d 614, cert. denied, 305 N.C. 586, 292 S.E.2d 571 (1982).

Facts required to support summary judgment must be established by pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, admissions or affidavits. Cieszko v. Clark, 92 N.C. App. 290, 374 S.E.2d 456 (1988).

A motion for summary judgment allows one party to force his opponent to produce a forecast of evidence which he has available for presentation at trial to support his claim or defense. Dixie Chem. Corp. v. Edwards, 68 N.C. App. 714, 315 S.E.2d 747 (1984).

Summary judgment is a device by which a defending party may force the claimant to produce a forecast of claimant's evidence demonstrating that claimant will, at trial, be able to make out at least a prima facie case or that he will be able to surmount an affirmative defense. Snipes v. Jackson, 69 N.C. App. 64, 316 S.E.2d 657, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 312 N.C. 85, 321 S.E.2d 899 (1984).

Affidavits, etc., Setting Forth Inadmissible Facts Not to Be Considered. — The converse of the requirement set forth in section (e) of this rule is that affidavits or other material offered which set forth facts which would not be admissible in evidence should not be considered when passing on the motion for summary judgment. Borden, Inc. v. Brower, 17 N.C. App. 249, 193 S.E.2d 751, rev'd on other grounds, 284 N.C. 54, 199 S.E.2d 414 (1973).

Unless Unchallenged. — Uncertified or otherwise inadmissible documents may be considered by the court if not challenged by means of a timely objection. Old S. Life Ins. Co. v. Bank of N.C., 36 N.C. App. 18, 244 S.E.2d 264 (1978).

Affidavit statements based on hearsay would not be admissible in evidence and should not be considered in passing on a motion for summary judgment. Patterson v. Reid, 10 N.C. App. 22, 178 S.E.2d 1 (1970).

Oral Testimony Is Admissible. — Oral testimony at a hearing on a motion for summary judgment is admissible by virtue of § 1A-1, Rule 43(e). Walton v. Meir, 14 N.C. App. 183, 188 S.E.2d 56, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 515, 189 S.E.2d 35 (1972).

Oral testimony on a motion for summary judgment may be admissible in proper cases under § 1A-1, Rule 43(e). Huss v. Huss, 31 N.C. App. 463, 230 S.E.2d 159 (1976).

Oral testimony may be introduced into the record at the summary judgment hearing as long as it is not used overzealously. Propst Constr. Co. v. North Carolina Dep't of Transp., 56 N.C. App. 759, 290 S.E.2d 387, modified, 307 N.C. 124, 296 S.E.2d 295 (1982).

While under § 1A-1, Rule 43(e) oral testimony is permissible on a motion for summary judgment, the admission of such testimony is in the court's discretion. Hillman v. United States Liab. Ins. Co., 59 N.C. App. 145, 296 S.E.2d 302 (1982), cert. denied, 307 N.C. 468, 299 S.E.2d 221 (1983).

But Should Be Used Only in Supplementary Capacity. — Under § 1A-1, Rule 43(e), oral testimony offered at a hearing on a motion for summary judgment should be used only in a supplementary capacity, to provide a small link of required evidence, and not as the main evidentiary body of the hearing. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Chantos, 21 N.C. App. 129, 203 S.E.2d 421 (1974).

Although § 1A-1, Rule 43(e) permits the court to hear oral testimony in ruling on a motion for summary judgment, this procedure should normally be utilized only if a small link of evidence is needed, and not for a long drawn out hearing to determine whether there is to be a trial. Chandler v. Cleveland Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 24 N.C. App. 455, 211 S.E.2d 484 (1975).

Nonexpert opinion on ultimate issues may not be relied on to defend against summary judgment. Whether expert opinion on ultimate issues so presented may be relied on is not clear. Estrada v. Jaques, 70 N.C. App. 627, 321 S.E.2d 240 (1984).

Unpled affirmative defenses may be heard for the first time on motion for summary judgment even though not asserted in the answer, at least where both parties are aware of the defense. Gillis v. Whitley's Disct. Auto Sales, Inc., 70 N.C. App. 270, 319 S.E.2d 661 (1984).

The nature of summary judgment procedure coupled with the generally liberal rules relating to amendment of pleadings, require that unpleaded affirmative defenses be deemed part of the pleadings where such defenses are raised in a hearing on motion for summary judgment. C.C. Walker Grading & Hauling, Inc. v. S.R.F. Mgt. Corp., 66 N.C. App. 170, 310 S.E.2d 615, rev'd on other grounds, 311 N.C. 170, 316 S.E.2d 298 (1984).

Arguments of Counsel. — On a motion for summary judgment the court may consider the arguments of counsel as long as the arguments are not considered as facts or evidence. Gebb v. Gebb, 67 N.C. App. 104, 312 S.E.2d 691 (1984).

Information adduced from counsel during oral arguments cannot be used to support a motion for summary judgment. Huss v. Huss, 31 N.C. App. 463, 230 S.E.2d 159 (1976).

A certified arbitration award and confirmation order may be considered by the trial judge in ruling on plaintiff's motion for summary judgment on the amount of its lien in an action to enforce a mechanics' lien, and absent any evidence to the contrary, would be sufficient to show that there is no material issue of fact as regards the amount owing plaintiff under the contract. Frank H. Conner Co. v. Spanish Inns Charlotte, Ltd., 294 N.C. 661, 242 S.E.2d 785 (1978).

Court Must Consider All Evidence Before It. — The procedure under this rule being designed to allow a preview or forecast of evidence or proof of the parties in order to determine whether a jury trial is necessary and to allow the trial court to "pierce the pleadings" to determine whether any genuine factual controversy exists, it is therefore incumbent on the trial court to consider all of the papers before it on hearing the motion in order to make an appropriate disposition of the motion. Seay v. Allstate Ins. Co., 59 N.C. App. 220, 296 S.E.2d 30 (1982).

Striking of Inadmissible Evidence Because of Parole Evidence Rule. — Where pleadings, affidavits, and deposition offered by defendant did not set forth facts that would be admissible in evidence because of the parole evidence rule, such evidence was properly stricken. Borden, Inc. v. Brower, 284 N.C. 54, 199 S.E.2d 414 (1973); North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Gillespie, 291 N.C. 303, 230 S.E.2d 375 (1976).

Where the record did not show that plaintiff objected to parol evidence in the form of affidavits submitted by the defendants, the facts set out in these affidavits were competent evidence to be considered by the trial court in ruling upon motions for summary judgment. Lindsey v. North Carolina Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co., 103 N.C. App. 432, 405 S.E.2d 803 (1991).

Unopposed Evidence Supporting Motion May Not Be Sufficient. — The evidentiary matter supporting the moving party's motion may not be sufficient to satisfy his burden of proof, even though the opposing party fails to present any competent counteraffidavits or other materials. Pridgen v. Hughes, 9 N.C. App. 635, 177 S.E.2d 425 (1970); Millsaps v. Wilkes Contracting Co., 14 N.C. App. 321, 188 S.E.2d 663, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 623, 190 S.E.2d 466 (1972).

Acceptance of Statements in Affidavits Dependent on Credibility. — Affidavits in a motion for summary judgment do not supply all the needed proof. The statements in the affidavits may not suffice, because their acceptance as proof depends on credibility. Lee v. Shor, 10 N.C. App. 231, 178 S.E.2d 101 (1970).

And Court Need Not Find Uncontradicted Affidavits and Proof Credible. — The trial court is not required to assign credibility to a party's affidavits merely because they are uncontradicted. Kidd v. Early, 289 N.C. 343, 222 S.E.2d 392 (1976).

Movant's uncontradicted and unimpeached proofs in support of his motion for summary judgment do not import veracity merely because they are uncontradicted by the opposing party. Kidd v. Early, 289 N.C. 343, 222 S.E.2d 392 (1976).

Courts are slow to grant summary judgment when movant presents his own affidavit concerning facts peculiarly within his knowledge. Kidd v. Early, 289 N.C. 343, 222 S.E.2d 392 (1976).

Summary judgment may not be granted in favor of the party having the burden of proof when his right to recover depends upon credibility of his witnesses. Shearin v. National Indem. Co., 27 N.C. App. 88, 218 S.E.2d 207 (1975).

When Motion May Be Granted on Basis of Party's Own Affidavits. — Summary judgment may be granted for a party with the burden of proof on the basis of his own affidavits: (1) When there are only latent doubts as to affiant's credibility; (2) when the opposing party has failed to introduce any materials supporting his opposition, failed to point to specific areas of impeachment and contradiction, and failed to utilize section (f) of this rule; and (3) when summary judgment is otherwise appropriate. Kidd v. Early, 289 N.C. 343, 222 S.E.2d 392 (1976); Taylor v. City of Raleigh, 290 N.C. 608, 227 S.E.2d 576 (1976); Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Peace Broadcasting Corp., 32 N.C. App. 655, 233 S.E.2d 687, cert. denied, 292 N.C. 734, 235 S.E.2d 788 (1977); Frank H. Conner Co. v. Spanish Inns Charlotte, Ltd., 294 N.C. 661, 242 S.E.2d 785 (1978); Carson v. Sutton, 35 N.C. App. 720, 242 S.E.2d 535 (1978); Fitzgerald v. Wolf, 40 N.C. App. 197, 252 S.E.2d 523 (1979); Courtney v. Courtney, 40 N.C. App. 291, 253 S.E.2d 2 (1979); Lula Conrad Hoots Mem. Hosp. v. Hoots, 40 N.C. App. 595, 253 S.E.2d 330, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 609, 257 S.E.2d 218 (1979); Stroup Sheet Metal Works, Inc. v. Heritage, Inc., 43 N.C. App. 27, 258 S.E.2d 77 (1979); Brooks v. Mount Airy Rainbow Farms Center, Inc., 48 N.C. App. 726, 269 S.E.2d 704 (1980).

Summary judgment may be proper even where based in part upon the affidavits of the movant and his witnesses where there are only latent doubts as to the credibility of the affiants. North Carolina State Bd. of Registration v. IBM Corp., 31 N.C. App. 599, 230 S.E.2d 552 (1976).

Reliance on Uncontradicted Affidavit as to Nonexistence of Genuine Issue. — Party with the burden of proof may be entitled to summary judgment where he relies on the uncontradicted affidavit of a witness to establish that a genuine issue does not exist as to a material fact. If the circumstances show, however, that a material issue exists, the motion should be denied. Lacy J. Miller Mach. Co. v. Miller, 58 N.C. App. 300, 293 S.E.2d 622, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 743, 295 S.E.2d 478 (1982).

Court should not resolve an issue of credibility or conduct a "trial by affidavits" at a hearing on a motion for summary judgment, especially in cases where knowledge of the fact is largely under the control of the movants. Lee v. Shor, 10 N.C. App. 231, 178 S.E.2d 101 (1970).

A "trial by affidavits" at a hearing on a motion for summary judgment is clearly impermissible. Wall v. Flack, 15 N.C. App. 747, 190 S.E.2d 671 (1972).

The trial court, upon motion for summary judgment under this rule, should not undertake to resolve an issue of credibility. Commercial Credit Corp. v. McCorkle, 19 N.C. App. 397, 198 S.E.2d 736 (1973).

If there is any question as to the credibility of witnesses or the weight of evidence, a summary judgment should be denied. Kessing v. National Mtg. Corp., 278 N.C. 523, 180 S.E.2d 823 (1971); City of Thomasville v. Lease-Afex, Inc., 300 N.C. 651, 268 S.E.2d 190 (1980).

Credibility Not to Be Determined by Paper Affirmations or Denials. — Absent an unequivocal waiver of a trial on oral testimony, credibility ought not, when witnesses are available, be determined by mere paper affirmations or denials that inherently lack the important element of witness' demeanor. Lee v. Shor, 10 N.C. App. 231, 178 S.E.2d 101 (1970).

Credibility of Testimony of Interested Witnesses to Be Submitted to Jury. — The fact that a witness is interested in the result of the suit has been held to be sufficient to require the credibility of his testimony to be submitted to the jury. Lee v. Shor, 10 N.C. App. 231, 178 S.E.2d 101 (1970).

Where plaintiffs' interest necessarily raises a question of the credibility of their testimony in support of their motion for summary judgment, and their testimony cannot, under any circumstances, be accorded credibility as a matter of law, summary judgment would be inappropriate. Kidd v. Early, 289 N.C. 343, 222 S.E.2d 392 (1976).

Party may not defeat summary judgment by presenting deposition testimony which contradicts prior judicial admissions of his pleadings. Rollins v. Junior Miller Roofing Co., 55 N.C. App. 158, 284 S.E.2d 697 (1981).

Testimony contained in an affidavit of nonmovant which contradicts his prior sworn testimony may not be used by him to defeat a summary judgment motion where the only issue of fact raised by the affidavit is the credibility of the affiant. Wachovia Mtg. Co. v. Autry-Barker-Spurrier Real Estate, Inc., 39 N.C. App. 1, 249 S.E.2d 727 (1978), aff'd, 297 N.C. 696, 256 S.E.2d 688 (1979).

Prima Facie Evidence of Negligent Supervision. — Plaintiff's forecast of evidence was sufficient to demonstrate that she could make out a prima facie case of negligent supervision. Rouse v. Pitt County Mem. Hosp., 116 N.C. App. 241, 447 S.E.2d 505 (1994), aff'd, 343 N.C. 186, 470 S.E.2d 44 (1996).

If different material conclusions can be drawn from the evidence, summary judgment should be denied, even though the evidence is uncontradicted. Durham v. Vine, 40 N.C. App. 564, 253 S.E.2d 316 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Roumillat v. Simplistic Enters., Inc., 331 N.C. 57, 414 S.E.2d 339 (1992), overruled on other grounds, Nelson v. Freeland, 349 N.C. 615, 507 S.E.2d 882 (1998); Spector United Employees Credit Union v. Smith, 45 N.C. App. 432, 263 S.E.2d 319 (1980).

Where the evidence of the party to be awarded summary judgment is self-contradictory or allows reasonable inferences inconsistent with conclusions necessary to entitle that party to summary judgment, the trial court should not enter summary judgment and should allow the case to proceed to trial. A-S-P Assocs. v. City of Raleigh, 38 N.C. App. 271, 247 S.E.2d 800 (1978), rev'd on other grounds, 298 N.C. 207, 258 S.E.2d 444 (1979).

Summary judgment should be denied if different material conclusions can be drawn from the evidence. Godwin Sprayers, Inc. v. Utica Mut. Ins. Co., 59 N.C. App. 497, 296 S.E.2d 843 (1982), cert. denied, 307 N.C. 576, 299 S.E.2d 646 (1983); Carlton v. Carlton, 74 N.C. App. 690, 329 S.E.2d 682 (1985); Warren v. Rosso & Mastracco, Inc., 78 N.C. App. 163, 336 S.E.2d 699 (1985); Herbert v. Browning-Ferris Indus. of S. Atl., Inc., 90 N.C. App. 339, 368 S.E.2d 416 (1988).

As Where Moving Papers Affirmatively Disclose a Material Controversy. — Where the moving papers affirmatively disclose that the nature of the controversy presents a good faith and actual, as distinguished from formal, dispute on one or more material issues, summary judgment cannot be used. Page v. Sloan, 281 N.C. 697, 190 S.E.2d 189 (1972); Pitts v. Village Inn Pizza, Inc., 296 N.C. 81, 249 S.E.2d 375 (1978).

Motion for summary judgment must be denied if the opposing party submits material which casts doubts upon the existence of a material fact or upon the credibility of a material witness, or if such doubts are raised by movant's own evidentiary material. Kidd v. Early, 289 N.C. 343, 222 S.E.2d 392 (1976).

Summary judgment is appropriate when movant shows through discovery that the opposing party cannot produce evidence to support an essential element of his claim. Dellinger v. Belk, 34 N.C. App. 488, 238 S.E.2d 788 (1977), cert. denied, 294 N.C. 182, 241 S.E.2d 517 (1978).

Lack of Cause of Action or Defense Supports Grant of Judgment. — Where the pleadings or proof disclose that no cause of action or defense exists, summary judgment may be granted. Kessing v. National Mtg. Corp., 278 N.C. 523, 180 S.E.2d 823 (1971); Nat Harrison Assocs. v. North Carolina State Ports Auth., 280 N.C. 251, 185 S.E.2d 793 (1972); Norfolk & W. Ry. v. Werner Indus., Inc., 286 N.C. 89, 209 S.E.2d 734 (1974); Barrett v. Phillips, 29 N.C. App. 220, 223 S.E.2d 918 (1976).

Where the pleadings or proof disclose that no cause of action exists, summary judgment may be granted. Davenport v. Davenport, 25 N.C. App. 621, 214 S.E.2d 294 (1975); Williams v. Congdon, 43 N.C. App. 53, 257 S.E.2d 677 (1979); Rockingham Square Shopping Center, Inc. v. Town of Madison, 45 N.C. App. 249, 262 S.E.2d 705 (1980).

Summary judgment is appropriately entered if the movant establishes that an essential part or element of the opposing party's claim is nonexistent. Rorrer v. Cooke, 313 N.C. 338, 329 S.E.2d 355 (1985).

Where the pleadings or proof of the plaintiff disclose that no claim exists, summary judgment for defendant is proper. Colonial Bldg. Co. v. Justice, 83 N.C. App. 643, 351 S.E.2d 140 (1986), cert. denied, 319 N.C. 402, 354 S.E.2d 711 (1987).

When the only issues to be decided are issues of law, summary judgment is proper. Wachovia Mtg. Co. v. Autry-Barker-Spurrier Real Estate, Inc., 39 N.C. App. 1, 249 S.E.2d 727 (1978), aff'd, 297 N.C. 696, 256 S.E.2d 688 (1979); Brawley v. Brawley, 87 N.C. App. 545, 361 S.E.2d 759 (1987), cert. denied, 321 N.C. 471, 364 S.E.2d 918 (1988).

And Presence of Difficult Questions of Law Is No Barrier. — Where there is no genuine issue as to the facts, the presence of important or difficult questions of law is no barrier to the granting of summary judgment. Kessing v. National Mtg. Corp., 278 N.C. 523, 180 S.E.2d 823 (1971); Wachovia Mtg. Co. v. Autry-Barker-Spurrier Real Estate, Inc., 39 N.C. App. 1, 249 S.E.2d 727 (1978), aff'd, 297 N.C. 696, 256 S.E.2d 688 (1979).

Summary judgment is appropriate where there is no genuine issue of material fact and the case presents only questions of law. This is true even if the questions of law are complex. VEPCO v. Tillett, 80 N.C. App. 383, 343 S.E.2d 188 (1986).

Movant Entitled to Summary Judgment Where Directed Verdict Would Be Required. — If the materials before the court at the summary judgment hearing would require a directed verdict for defendants at trial, defendants are entitled to summary judgment. Whitaker v. Blackburn, 47 N.C. App. 144, 266 S.E.2d 763 (1980).

If a verdict would be directed for the movant on the evidence presented at the hearing on the motion for summary judgment, the motion for summary judgment may properly be granted. Dendy v. Watkins, 288 N.C. 447, 219 S.E.2d 214 (1975); Haskins v. Carolina Power & Light Co., 47 N.C. App. 664, 267 S.E.2d 587 (1980).

On motion for summary judgment, the test is whether the moving party presents materials which would require a directed verdict in his favor if offered as evidence at trial. Haithcock v. Chimney Rock Co., 10 N.C. App. 696, 179 S.E.2d 865 (1971); Coakley v. Ford Motor Co., 11 N.C. App. 636, 182 S.E.2d 260, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 393, 183 S.E.2d 244 (1971); Millsaps v. Wilkes Contracting Co., 14 N.C. App. 321, 188 S.E.2d 663, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 623, 190 S.E.2d 466 (1972); Fitzgerald v. Wolf, 40 N.C. App. 197, 252 S.E.2d 523 (1979).

Unless Nonmovant Shows a Triable Issue of Fact. — Where a motion for summary judgment is supported by proof which would require a directed verdict in his favor at trial, movant is entitled to summary judgment, unless the opposing party comes forward to show a triable issue of material fact. In re Will of Edgerton, 29 N.C. App. 60, 223 S.E.2d 524, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 308, 225 S.E.2d 832 (1976); Old S. Life Ins. Co. v. Bank of N.C., 36 N.C. App. 18, 244 S.E.2d 264 (1978); Watson v. Watson, 49 N.C. App. 58, 270 S.E.2d 542 (1980).

The opposing party is not entitled to have the motion for summary judgment denied on the mere hope that at trial he will be able to discredit movant's evidence; he must, at the hearing, be able to point out to the court something indicating the existence of a triable issue of material fact. Kidd v. Early, 289 N.C. 343, 222 S.E.2d 392 (1976).

Or Shows Unavailability of Affidavits. — If the party moving for summary judgment by affidavit or otherwise presents materials which would require a directed verdict in his favor if presented at trial, he is entitled to summary judgment unless the opposing party either shows that affidavits are then unavailable to him or comes forward with affidavits or other materials that show there is a triable issue of fact. Pridgen v. Hughes, 9 N.C. App. 635, 177 S.E.2d 425 (1970); First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Branch Banking & Trust Co., 14 N.C. App. 567, 188 S.E.2d 661, rev'd on other grounds, 282 N.C. 44, 191 S.E.2d 683 (1972); Millsaps v. Wilkes Contracting Co., 14 N.C. App. 321, 188 S.E.2d 663, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 623, 190 S.E.2d 466 (1972); Brooks v. Smith, 27 N.C. App. 223, 218 S.E.2d 489 (1975).

If plaintiff's claim is barred by the statute of limitations, defendant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law and summary judgment is appropriate. Brantley v. Dunstan, 10 N.C. App. 706, 179 S.E.2d 878 (1971); Poston v. Morgan-Schultheiss, Inc., 46 N.C. App. 321, 265 S.E.2d 615 (1980).

Ordinarily, the question of whether a cause of action is barred by the statute of limitations is a mixed question of law and fact. However, when the bar is properly pleaded and the facts are admitted or are not in conflict, the question of whether the action is barred becomes one of law, and summary judgment is appropriate. Pembee Mfg. Corp. v. Cape Fear Constr. Co., 313 N.C. 488, 329 S.E.2d 350 (1985).

The statute of limitations, if properly pled, and if all the facts with reference thereto are admitted or established, may act as an affirmative defense, barring plaintiff's claims and entitling defendants to summary judgment as a matter of law. Lackey v. Bressler, 86 N.C. App. 486, 358 S.E.2d 560 (1987); Rowan County Bd. of Educ. v. United States Gypsum Co., 87 N.C. App. 106, 359 S.E.2d 814, cert. denied, 321 N.C. 298, 362 S.E.2d 782 (1987).

When the statute of limitations is properly pleaded and the facts of the case are not in dispute, resolution of the question becomes a matter of law, and summary judgment may be appropriate. Marshburn v. Associated Indem. Corp., 84 N.C. App. 365, 353 S.E.2d 123, cert. denied, 319 N.C. 673, 356 S.E.2d 779, petition for reconsideration denied, 320 N.C. 170, 358 S.E.2d 53 (1987); Boundreau v. Baughman, 86 N.C. App. 165, 356 S.E.2d 907 (1987), rev'd in part, modified and aff'd in part, 322 N.C. 331, 368 S.E.2d 849 (1988).

The failure of the defendant to plead res judicata is not a bar to that issue being raised at hearing on summary judgment. County of Rutherford ex rel. Child Support Enforcement Agency ex rel. Hedrick v. Whitener, 100 N.C. App. 70, 394 S.E.2d 263 (1990).

When defendant establishes a complete defense to plaintiff's claim, he is entitled to the quick and final disposition of that claim which summary judgment provides. Ballinger v. North Carolina Dep't of Revenue, 59 N.C. App. 508, 296 S.E.2d 836 (1982), cert. denied, 307 N.C. 576, 299 S.E.2d 645 (1983).

The court may grant summary judgment if the movant conclusively establishes every element of its claim or conclusively establishes a complete defense or legal bar to the nonmovant's claim. VEPCO v. Tillett, 80 N.C. App. 383, 343 S.E.2d 188, cert. denied, 317 N.C. 715, 347 S.E.2d 457 (1986).

A defending party is entitled to summary judgment if he can show that no claim for relief exists or that the claimant cannot overcome an affirmative defense to the claim. Rolling Fashion Mart, Inc. v. Mainor, 80 N.C. App. 213, 341 S.E.2d 61 (1986).

A defending party is entitled to summary judgment if it can establish that no claim for relief exists or that the claimant cannot overcome an affirmative defense or legal bar to the claim. Wilder v. Hobson, 101 N.C. App. 199, 398 S.E.2d 625 (1990).

Motive, like intent or other states of mind, is rarely susceptible to direct proof and almost always depends on inferences drawn from circumstantial evidence. Consequently, summary judgment should rarely be granted in cases in which it is at issue. Burrow v. Westinghouse Elec. Corp., 88 N.C. App. 347, 363 S.E.2d 215, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 111, 367 S.E.2d 910 (1988).

Constitutional Arguments Susceptible to Summary Judgment. — Since the general rule is that the constitutionality of a statute is to be determined merely from an examination of the statute itself and of only those matters of which the court may take judicial notice, plaintiff's constitutional arguments presented a question of law and were properly susceptible to summary judgment. Baugh v. Woodard, 56 N.C. App. 180, 287 S.E.2d 412, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 305 N.C. 759, 292 S.E.2d 574 (1982).

edy for failure to join a necessary party. Dildy v. Southeastern Fire Ins. Co., 13 N.C. App. 66, 185 S.E.2d 272 (1971).

Summary judgment procedure is available to both plaintiff and defendant. Pridgen v. Hughes, 9 N.C. App. 635, 177 S.E.2d 425 (1970); Kessing v. National Mtg. Corp., 278 N.C. 523, 180 S.E.2d 823 (1971); Clear Fir Sales Co. v. Carolina Plywood Distrib., Inc., 13 N.C. App. 429, 185 S.E.2d 737 (1972); McNair v. Boyette, 282 N.C. 230, 192 S.E.2d 457 (1972).

A defending party may show as a matter of law that he is entitled to summary judgment in his favor by showing that there is no genuine issue of material fact concerning an essential element of the claimant's claim for relief and that the claimant cannot prove the existence of that element. Best v. Perry, 41 N.C. App. 107, 254 S.E.2d 281 (1979); Ramsey v. Rudd, 49 N.C. App. 670, 272 S.E.2d 162 (1980), cert. denied, 302 N.C. 220, 276 S.E.2d 917 (1981).

If defendants clearly establish that there is no genuine issue as to the nonexistence of material facts which are necessary as an essential element of any cause of action against them, then they are entitled to summary judgment on that action. Clodfelter v. Bates, 44 N.C. App. 107, 260 S.E.2d 672 (1979), cert. denied, 299 N.C. 329, 265 S.E.2d 394 (1980).

A defending party is entitled to summary judgment if he can show that the claimant cannot prove the existence of an essential element of his claim or cannot surmount an affirmative defense which would bar the claim. Little v. National Servs. Indus., Inc., 79 N.C. App. 688, 340 S.E.2d 510 (1986).

Party Need Not Move for Judgment in Order to Be Entitled to It. — Section (c) of this rule does not require that a party move for summary judgment in order to be entitled to it. Greenway v. North Carolina Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co., 35 N.C. App. 308, 241 S.E.2d 339 (1978); McNair Constr. Co. v. Fogle Bros. Co., 64 N.C. App. 282, 307 S.E.2d 200 (1983), cert. denied, 312 N.C. 84, 321 S.E.2d 897 (1984).

Summary judgment may be granted in favor of a nonmoving party in proper cases. A-S-P Assocs. v. City of Raleigh, 38 N.C. App. 271, 247 S.E.2d 800 (1978), rev'd on other grounds, 298 N.C. 207, 258 S.E.2d 444 (1979).

Summary judgment in favor of the nonmovant is appropriate when the evidence presented demonstrates that no material issues of fact are in dispute, and the nonmovant is entitled to entry of judgment as a matter of law. A-S-P Assocs. v. City of Raleigh, 298 N.C. 207, 258 S.E.2d 444 (1979).

In an appropriate case, summary judgment may be rendered against the moving party. Candid Camera Video World, Inc. v. Mathews, 76 N.C. App. 634, 334 S.E.2d 94 (1985), cert. denied, 315 N.C. 390, 338 S.E.2d 879 (1980).

After Movant Is Given Opportunity to Show Existence of a Genuine Issue. — Summary judgment for the nonmoving party should be granted only when the moving party has been given adequate opportunity to show in opposition that there is a genuine issue of fact to be resolved. A-S-P Assocs. v. City of Raleigh, 298 N.C. 207, 258 S.E.2d 444 (1979).

Granting of Summary Judgment by Judge on Own Motion. — The granting of summary judgment or judgment on the pleadings by the trial judge on his own motion is a practice not to be commended, and is clearly erroneous where there is a factual question to be answered. Crews v. Taylor, 21 N.C. App. 296, 204 S.E.2d 193 (1974).

Rarely is it proper to enter summary judgment in favor of the party having the burden of proof. Blackwell v. Massey, 69 N.C. App. 240, 316 S.E.2d 350 (1984).

Summary judgment may be granted for a party with the burden of proof on his own affidavits (1) when there are only latent doubts as to the affiant's credibility; (2) when the opposing party has failed to introduce any materials supporting his opposition, failed to point to specific areas of impeachment and contradiction, and failed to utilize section (f) of this rule; and (3) when summary judgment is otherwise appropriate. Almond Grading Co. v. Shaver, 74 N.C. App. 576, 329 S.E.2d 417 (1985); Valdese Gen. Hosp. v. Burns, 79 N.C. App. 163, 339 S.E.2d 23 (1986).

Plaintiff's bare assertions in unverified complaint, which were denied by defendant, held insufficient to support entry of summary judgment for plaintiff. Smith v. Rushing Constr. Co., 84 N.C. App. 692, 353 S.E.2d 692 (1987).

Where plaintiff made a motion for summary judgment, which was denied, and later plaintiff filed a second motion for summary judgment involving the same issue as presented by the initial motion, the trial court erred by granting plaintiff's second motion for summary judgment. Taylorsville Fed. Savs. & Loan Ass'n v. Keen, 110 N.C. App. 784, 431 S.E.2d 484 (1993).

Appellate Conclusion Improper. — Where Court of Appeals majority opinion included a paragraph that concluded that a balancing of the equities favored denial of relief to plaintiff, such a conclusion was improper at the summary judgment stage. Roberts v. Madison County Realtors Ass'n, 344 N.C. 394, 474 S.E.2d 783 (1996).

Rule 57. Declaratory judgments.

The procedure for obtaining a declaratory judgment pursuant to Article 26, Chapter 1, General Statutes of North Carolina, shall be in accordance with these rules, and the right to trial by jury may be demanded under the circumstances and in the manner provided in Rules 38 and 39. The existence of another adequate remedy does not preclude a judgment for declaratory relief in cases where it is appropriate. The court may order a prompt hearing of an action for a declaratory judgment and may advance it on the calendar. (1967, c. 954, s. 1.)

COMMENT

This rule tracks the language of federal Rule 57, changed only by reference to the state statutory law, which spells out in detail the scope, procedure for obtaining, and effect of declaratory judgment. The comparable federal statutory law is 28 U.S.C.A. §§ 2201, 2202, a much more general statute than the state statute. The North Carolina Declaratory Judgment Act, to which reference is made, is essentially the Uniform Declaratory Judgment Act. The Commission felt that except for one minor change in respect of jury trial, the need for which is developed below, it should retain this basic statutory law and not substitute the more general federal type formulation. Professor Borchard, father of both, felt that state declaratory judgment acts should be more specific and detailed than the basic federal statutory authority needed to be. This separate practice rule simply refers to the basic act and in effect says (what is perhaps not strictly necessary in view of the coverage rule, Rule 1) that action for this relief as other actions shall be governed by these rules.

This rule does also make specific the right to jury trial as in other actions. Although this reflects a background of separate law and equity administration with resulting problems of jury right in the federal system in "new" kinds of actions, problems not presented in the North Carolina completely fused code practice, it does no harm to leave in this reference. Indeed, the North Carolina act itself, in § 1-261, states the basic right to jury trial of fact issues in this type of action.

The provision that, "The existence of another adequate remedy does not preclude a judgment for declaratory relief. . ." merely states more plainly and bolsters what is implicit in the act itself when in § 1-253 it is provided that the power to grant declaratory relief exists "whether or not further relief is or could be claimed." The federal act contains similar language in § 2201, but the federal rules draftsman thought it expedient to solidify this in the rule itself. No reason appears to depart from this. The critical substantive point here is that this language preserves the discretionary right of the court when asked to declare rights to decline to do so, possibly on the basis of existence of another remedy, but not necessarily to do so.

The provision for advancing trial of declaratory actions seems wise and would not apparently violate any State procedural customs or rules, within which peremptory settings are familiar practice.

CASE NOTES

Basic Statutory Provisions Retained. — The basic statutory provisions for obtaining declaratory judgments have been retained. This rule simply provides that the procedure for this remedy shall be in accordance with the new Rules of Civil Procedure. Reeves Bros. v. Town of Rutherfordton, 15 N.C. App. 385, 190 S.E.2d 345 (1972), rev'd on other grounds, 282 N.C. 559, 194 S.E.2d 129 (1973).

Scope of Relief in Declaratory Judgment Actions Not Limited by § 110-104. — The spirit and intent of § 110-104, relating to injunctive relief against continuing operation of day-care facilities, do not permit, much less compel, a conclusion that the Day-Care Facilities Act is intended to restrict the general statewide jurisdiction of the superior court or to limit the scope of relief normally available in declaratory judgment actions. The mere existence of an alternate adequate remedy under § 110-104 will not be held to bar an appropriate action for declaratory judgment. State, Child

Day-Care Licensing Comm'n v. Fayetteville St. Christian School, 299 N.C. 351, 261 S.E.2d 908, aff'd on rehearing, 299 N.C. 731, 265 S.E.2d 387, appeal dismissed, 449 U.S. 807, 101 S. Ct. 55, 66 L. Ed. 2d 11 (1980).

The propriety of a summary judgment in declaratory judgment actions is governed by the same rules applicable to other actions. North Carolina Life & Accident & Health Ins. Guar. Ass'n v. ## Rule 58. Entry of judgment.

Subject to the provisions of Rule 54(b), a judgment is entered when it is reduced to writing, signed by the judge, and filed with the clerk of court. The party designated by the judge or, if the judge does not otherwise designate, the party who prepares the judgment, shall serve a copy of the judgment upon all other parties within three days after the judgment is entered. Service and proof of service shall be in accordance with Rule 5. If service is by mail, three days shall be added to the time periods prescribed by Rule 50(b), Rule 52(b), and Rule 59. All time periods within which a party may further act pursuant to Rule 50(b), Rule 52(b), or Rule 59 shall be tolled for the duration of any period of noncompliance with this service requirement, provided however that no time period under Rule 50(b), Rule 52(b), or Rule 59 shall be tolled longer than 90 days from the date the judgment is entered. Consent for the signing and entry of a judgment out of term, session, county, and district shall be deemed to have been given unless an express objection to such action was made on the record prior to the end of the term or session at which the matter was heard.

Notwithstanding any other law to the contrary, any judgment entered by a magistrate in a small claims action pursuant to Article 19 of Chapter 7A shall be entered in accordance with this Rule except judgments announced and signed in open court at the conclusion of a trial are considered to be served on the parties, and copies of any judgment not announced and signed in open court at the conclusion of a trial shall be served by the magistrate on all parties in accordance with this Rule, within three days after the judgment is entered. If service is by mail, three days shall be added to the time periods prescribed by G.S. 7A-228. All time periods within which a party may further act pursuant to G.S. 7A-228 shall be tolled for the duration of any period of noncompliance of this service requirement, provided that no time period shall be tolled longer than 90 days from the date judgment is entered. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1993 (Reg. Sess., 1994), c. 594, s. 1.)

COMMENT

Entry of judgment, as distinguished from rendition of judgment, is a critical moment under these rules. Time periods for the filing of certain motions are keyed to the moment of entry. It is therefore highly desirable that the moment of entry of judgment be easily identifiable and it is also desirable that fair notice be given all parties of the entry of judgment. The rule is drawn to achieve these objectives.

The first paragraph deals with the simple case when judgment is rendered in open court. Presumably all parties will have notice. There is no necessity for the judge to sign the judgment. This is in keeping with prior law. See former § 1-205. Of course, the rule recognizes in the judge a power to give a "contrary direction" to that contained in the rule. Accordingly, if a lawyer wishes the judgment to incorporate particular matters, or to be delayed, he may make a motion to this effect.

The second paragraph deals with the more complex judgment but again one rendered in open court. Here approval by the judge of the form of the judgment filed is necessary. Presumably, he would indicate this approval by signing the judgment but this approval is not necessary to the "entry" of judgment.

The third paragraph deals with all judgments, simple or not, "not rendered in open court." In such cases, specific notice is required to be given before a judgment will be deemed to have been entered.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Most of the cases below were decided prior to the 1993 (Reg. Sess., 1994) amendment, which rewrote this section.

Contention that the Federal Rules should be consulted in defining "entry of judgment" is without merit. Harrington v. Harrington, 38 N.C. App. 610, 248 S.E.2d 460 (1978).

The purpose of requirements for notations required by this rule is to provide a basis for making the time of entry of judgment easily identifiable and to give fair notice to all the parties of the entry of judgment. Landin Ltd. v. Sharon Luggage, Ltd., 78 N.C. App. 558, 337 S.E.2d 685 (1985).

Objectives of Rule. — This rule is designed to achieve the objectives of (1) making the moment of the entry of judgment easily identifiable, and (2) furnishing fair notice to all parties of the entry of judgment. Barringer & Gaither, Inc. v. Whittenton, 22 N.C. App. 316, 206 S.E.2d 301 (1974); John T. Council, Inc. v. Balfour Prods. Group, Inc., 74 N.C. App. 668, 330 S.E.2d 6, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 538, 335 S.E.2d 316 (1985).

The objectives of this rule are to make the moment of entry of judgment easily identifiable and to give fair notice to all parties. Rivers v. Rivers, 29 N.C. App. 172, 223 S.E.2d 568, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 309, 225 S.E.2d 829 (1976).

Since many rights relating to the appeals process are "keyed" to the time of "entry of judgment," it is imperative that the judge's decisions become part of the court's records and that all interested persons know the exact date on which judgment is entered. State v. Boone, 310 N.C. 284, 311 S.E.2d 552 (1984).

There are no cases which have construed § 15A-101(4a), which governs "entry of judgment" in criminal cases. However, this rule is sufficiently analogous to provide guidance in the area. State v. Boone, 310 N.C. 284, 311 S.E.2d 552 (1984).

The purpose of requirements for notations required by this rule is to provide a basis for making the time of entry of judgment easily identifiable and to give fair notice to all the parties of the entry of judgment. Landin Ltd. v. Sharon Luggage, Ltd., 78 N.C. App. 558, 337 S.E.2d 685 (1985).

The purpose of this rule is to make the time of entry of judgment identifiable so that all parties are given notice of the entry of judgment. Behar v. Toyota of Fayetteville, Inc., 90 N.C. App. 603, 369 S.E.2d 618 (1988).

The purpose of this rule is to provide notice of the entry of judgment to all parties and to identify the moment of entry of judgment. Ives v. Real-Venture, Inc., 97 N.C. App. 391, 388 S.E.2d 573 (1990), cert. denied, 327 N.C. 139, 394 S.E.2d 174 (1990), reconsideration denied, 328 N.C. 271, 400 S.E.2d 452 (1991).

This rule applies to judgments and orders entered in civil cases in district and superior court. In re Estate of Trull, 86 N.C. App. 361, 357 S.E.2d 437 (1987).

This rule has no application to a confession of judgment. Rivers v. Rivers, 29 N.C. App. 172, 223 S.E.2d 568, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 309, 225 S.E.2d 829 (1976).

Requirements for Completed Entry of Judgment. — Paragraph three of this rule specifies three separate events which must occur before entry of judgment is complete. First, the clerk must receive an order from the trial judge for the entry of judgment. Second, the judgment must be filed. Third, the clerk must mail notice of filing to all parties. Darcy v. Osborne, 101 N.C. App. 546, 400 S.E.2d 95 (1991).

The Court of Appeals is without authority to entertain appeal of a case which lacks entry of judgment. Abels v. Renfro Corp., 126 N.C. App. 800, 486 S.E.2d 735 (1997).

Filing of Injunction Required for Contempt Purposes. — A party could not be held in contempt for violations of a preliminary injunction that occurred after the order for the injunction was issued, but before it was filed with the county clerk. Onslow County v. Moore, 129 N.C. App. 376, 499 S.E.2d 780 (1998).

Contrary Direction. — An instruction by the court that the prevailing party's attorney is to draft the order is a contrary direction. Therefore, because of the trial court's contrary direction, the automatic entry provisions of paragraph one of this rule do not operate to determine when entry of judgment occurred. In re Hayes, 106 N.C. App. 652, 418 S.E.2d 304 (1992).

Application of Third Paragraph. — The third paragraph of this rule applies to instances where the trial judge directs the clerk to prepare and file judgment. It is inapplicable when the trial judge prepares and signs the judgment. Barringer & Gaither, Inc. v. Whittenton, 22 N.C. App. 316, 206 S.E.2d 301 (1974).

Better Practice for Trial Judge to Direct Clerk to Enter Judgment. — The inattention of the trial bench to the directory mandate of the second paragraph of this rule has resulted in conflicting decisions on the dismissal of appeals for failure to give timely notice following entry of judgment. Obviously, the better practice is for the trial judge to specifically direct the clerk as to entry of judgment, and for the parties to ensure that the provisions of such direction are included in the record on appeal. Gates v. Gates, 69 N.C. App. 421, 317 S.E.2d 402 (1984), aff'd, 312 S.E.2d 620, 323 S.E.2d 920 (1985).

It is essential that the notation of entry of judgment include at least the names of the parties, the prevailing party, the relief awarded, and the date the verdict was returned. The notation here lacks these specifics and is therefore insufficient to constitute entry of judgment under Rule 58. Reed v. Abrahamson, 331 N.C. 249, 415 S.E.2d 549 (1992).

Inadequate Notation. — In order to make a notation of "such verdict" as was returned in this case, the clerk had to specify more than the mere words "jury verdict." An adequate notation would have reflected much of the information on the actual jury verdict form, including, at minimum, the names of the parties, the prevailing party, the relief awarded, and the date the verdict was returned. Reed v. Abrahamson, 331 N.C. 249, 415 S.E.2d 549 (1992).

Entry of Magistrate's Judgment. — This rule specifically controls the determination of the magistrate's "entry" of a small claims court judgment in the court minutes for purposes of appeal under § 7A-228. Under this rule, where the magistrate "rendered" his judgment in open court, and the evidence was clear that he announced the judgment in open court both dismissing plaintiff's action and awarding defendants a sum certain on their counterclaim, entry of the magistrate's judgment was deemed to occur at the time of rendition. Provident Fin. Co. v. Locklear, 89 N.C. App. 353, 366 S.E.2d 599 (1988).

Entry of magistrate's judgment for purposes of this rule was not less automatic simply because the magistrate himself (rather than a clerk) noted the judgment in the court minutes. Provident Fin. Co. v. Locklear, 89 N.C. App. 353, 366 S.E.2d 599 (1988).

Section 7A-224 does not control the manner of "rendering" magistrate's judgments under this rule; it merely requires the magistrate's judgment to be rendered in writing in order to be deemed a judgment of the district court entitled to recording and indexing as any other district court judgment. The statement that "entry is made as soon as practicable after rendition" merely refers to the entry of that judgment in the records and indexes of the general courts. Thus, § 7A-224 simply sets forth the requirements for filing a magistrate's judgment as a judgment of the district court. Provident Fin. Co. v. Locklear, 89 N.C. App. 353, 366 S.E.2d 599 (1988).

Requirements for Entry of Judgments Not Rendered in Open Court. — Under this rule there are three requirements necessary for the entry of judgments which are not rendered in open court. First, an order for the entry of judgment must be given to the clerk by the judge. Second, the judgment must be filed. Third, the clerk must mail notice to all parties, and entry of judgment is deemed to have been made at the time of the mailing of the notice. Rivers v. Rivers, 29 N.C. App. 172, 223 S.E.2d 568, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 309, 225 S.E.2d 829 (1976).

Although there are situations where it would be more convenient for a judge to mail his ruling to the clerk, and then allow the clerk to notify the respective parties of the judge's decision, the better practice, in criminal cases, is for the judge to announce his rulings in open court and direct the clerk to note the ruling in the minutes of the court. When the judge's ruling is not announced in open court, the order or judgment containing the ruling must be signed and filed with the clerk in the county, in the district and during the session when and where the question is presented. These rules serve to protect the interests of the defendant, the State, and the public, by allowing all interested persons to be informed as to when a judgment or order has been rendered in a particular matter. State v. Boone, 310 N.C. 284, 311 S.E.2d 552 (1984).

Applicability to Probate Matters Before Clerk. — This rule had no application in a case involving the denial of a motion made before the clerk of superior court pursuant to § 28A-9-1 to revoke the letters testamentary of an executor. In re Estate of Trull, 86 N.C. App. 361, 357 S.E.2d 437 (1987).

Evidence of Mailing. — The clerk's notation on the judgment of the time of the mailing is prima facie evidence of the mailing and the time of the mailing. Rivers v. Rivers, 29 N.C. App. 172, 223 S.E.2d 568, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 309, 225 S.E.2d 829 (1976).

Mailing to Counsel as Effective Notice. — Effective notice of the filing of judgment was afforded to defendants by the mailing to counsel of a true copy of the judgment. Barringer & Gaither, Inc. v. Whittenton, 22 N.C. App. 316, 206 S.E.2d 301 (1974).

Where the trial court possessed no independent recollection of what had occurred at a hearing for alimony held more than a year earlier and no judgment had been entered at the conclusion of that hearing in accordance with the provisions of this rule, the trial court did not err in refusing to sign the judgment and order proposed and tendered by the plaintiff. Wise v. Wise, 42 N.C. App. 5, 255 S.E.2d 570, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 305, 259 S.E.2d 300 (1979).

Effectiveness of Oral Notice of Appeal. — Where written judgment did not determine any issue different from those dealt with in judgment announced in open court, defendant's oral notice of appeal, though given in open court prior to the entry of judgment, was effective to give notice of appeal to the written judgment under § 1-279. Morris v. Bailey, 86 N.C. App. 378, 358 S.E.2d 120 (1987).

Entry of judgment in open court by another district court judge without notice to the parties that the judgment was entered was error, but as the notice of appeal was timely filed, there was no prejudice. Brower v. Brower, 75 N.C. App. 425, 331 S.E.2d 170 (1985).

Entry of Written Judgment After Notice of Appeal in Open Court. — A notice of appeal entered in open court immediately after entry of oral judgment does not remove the authority of the trial court to enter its written judgment which conforms substantially with the court's oral announcement. Morris v. Bailey, 86 N.C. App. 378, 358 S.E.2d 120 (1987).

Under this rule, a judge may make an oral entry of a juvenile order, provided the order is subsequently reduced to written form as required by § 7A-651 [see now §§ 7B-905 and 7B-2512]. In re Bullabough, 89 N.C. App. 171, 365 S.E.2d 642 (1988).

Written dispositional order entered by juvenile court, which conformed generally with oral announcement of the order in open court, was valid. In re Bullabough, 89 N.C. App. 171, 365 S.E.2d 642 (1988).

Announcement in Open Court Not Entry of Judgment Where Review of Written Judgment Anticipated. — Trial judge did not render judgment in open court on June 13, 1988, for the purpose of entry of judgment under this rule when he indicated the nature of his decision and ordered counsel for third-party defendants to draft a judgment to be entered after both the judge and opposing counsel had opportunity to review it. Although the effect of the judgment was to dismiss the defendants' claim against the third-party defendants and to award sums certain on all other claims, the parties were entitled to rely on the judge's indication that he would not enter judgment until all parties had opportunity to review the written judgment. Thus, notice of appeal filed three days after judge's written judgment of June 27, 1988, was timely. Ives v. Real-Venture, Inc., 97 N.C. App. 391, 388 S.E.2d 573, cert. denied, 327 N.C. 139, 394 S.E.2d 174 (1990), reconsideration denied, 328 N.C. 271, 400 S.E.2d 452 (1991).

Announcement in Open Court Is Not Entry of Judgment. — Announcement of judgment in open court merely constitutes the rendition of judgment, not its entry; the court of appeals has no authority to hear an appeal where there has been no entry of judgment. In re Estate of Walker, 113 N.C. App. 419, 438 S.E.2d 426 (1994).

Trial court's announcement of judgment in open court, where the judgment was rendered after October 1, 1994, was the mere rendering of judgment, not the entry of judgment. Entry of judgment occurred when the judgment was reduced to writing, signed by the judge, and filed with the clerk of court; thus, the judgment was not appealable and also not enforceable. Worsham v. Richbourg's Sales & Rentals, Inc., 124 N.C. App. 782, 478 S.E.2d 649 (1996).

Announcement of judgment in open court merely constitutes "rendering" of judgment, not entry of judgment. Abels v. Renfro Corp., 126 N.C. App. 800, 486 S.E.2d 735 (1997).

A custody order remained binding and effective, where the trial court entered a written order setting aside the entry of default obtained by the father of a minor child against the mother, but this order did not purport to set aside the subsequent default judgment that was entered against the mother awarding custody of their minor child to the father, and the trial court's oral order purporting to set aside the default judgment was ineffective to do so. West v. Marko, 130 N.C. App. 751, 504 S.E.2d 571 (1998).

Judgment Entered in Open Court Held Not Subject to Repudiation. — Judgment entered on June 13, 1986, in open court, based on consent of the parties, and memorialized on September 8, 1986, when the judge signed the formal judgment, could not be repudiated by one of the parties on June 17, 1986. Blee v. Blee, 89 N.C. App. 289, 365 S.E.2d 679 (1988).

Order Dismissing Receiver Not Entered When Mere Instruction to Prepare Order Given. — An order dismissing a receiver from his duties was entered and notice given when entry of the order was given to the clerk, the order filed, and notice of its filing mailed to all parties, and not when, at an earlier hearing, the court "merely instructed" the receiver to prepare an appropriate order. John T. Council, Inc. v. Balfour Prods. Group, Inc., 74 N.C. App. 668, 330 S.E.2d 6, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 538, 335 S.E.2d 316 (1985).

Authority to Make Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law. — Pursuant to the provisions of this rule, after "entry" of judgment in open court, a trial court retains the authority to approve the judgment and direct its prompt preparation and filing. Such authority necessarily includes making appropriate findings of fact and entering appropriate conclusions of law, and the giving of notice of appeal in open court after "entry" of judgment does not divest the trial court of such authority. Hightower v. Hightower, 85 N.C. App. 333, 354 S.E.2d 743, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 792, 361 S.E.2d 76 (1987).

The stay under § 1-294 does not prevent the trial court from approving the form of its judgment and making those findings and conclusions necessary to prepare and file its judgment under this rule. Truesdale v. Truesdale, 89 N.C. App. 445, 366 S.E.2d 512 (1988).

This rule does not authorize the trial court to file findings and conclusions which contradict those rendered prior to the notice of appeal. Thus, the trial court had no authority to prepare and file an order increasing the amount of defendant's alimony over that amount ordered in open court prior to plaintiff's notice of appeal. Truesdale v. Truesdale, 89 N.C. App. 445, 366 S.E.2d 512 (1988).

Where court failed to make any findings as to whether the trial judge directed entry of judgment or if and when the clerk noted entry of judgment, and the record revealed that the clerk marked the judgment in her minutes but from the record it could not be ascertained whether the writings constituted a notation of the entry of judgment, when the notation was made, or whether it was directed by the trial judge, therefore the order dismissing the appeal had to be vacated and the case remanded to the trial court for further proceedings. Behar v. Toyota of Fayetteville, Inc., 90 N.C. App. 603, 369 S.E.2d 618 (1988).

Withdrawal of a motion under § 1A-1, Rule 59 did not entitle defendants to ten days from their withdrawal to file notice of appeal from judgment; to hold otherwise would thwart the tolling provision of N.C.R.A.P. Rule 3(c), and circumvent this rule, i.e., to give all interested parties a definite fixed time of a judicial determination they can point to as the time of entry of judgment. Landin Ltd. v. Sharon Luggage, Ltd., 78 N.C. App. 558, 337 S.E.2d 685 (1985).

Judgment Deemed Entered. — Where the trial judge announced his ruling in open court, which ruling was noted without instruction by the court, in the minutes by the clerk of court, in early April, and where the trial judge signed the written order that had been drafted by respondent's counsel at the end of the month, the order was deemed entered when the judge signed the written order. Cobb v. Rocky Mount Bd. of Educ., 102 N.C. App. 681, 403 S.E.2d 538 (1991), aff'd, 331 N.C. 280, 415 S.E.2d 554 (1992).

Notice of Appeal. — It was evident that the parties only had fair notice of the judgment at the time the written judgment was filed where only after that time did the parties take action to settle the record on appeal. In re Hawkins, 120 N.C. App. 585, 463 S.E.2d 268 (1995).

Appeal Dismissed in Absence of Record of Notice. — Where a judgment was prepared and filed in this case but there was no evidence in the record on appeal that notice of filing was mailed to the parties and the judgment does not exhibit a time of mailing constituting prima facie evidence of mailing notice, judgment was not properly entered and appeal was dismissed for lack of jurisdiction. Darcy v. Osborne, 101 N.C. App. 546, 400 S.E.2d 95 (1991).

Judgment Incomplete for Purposes of Appeal Until Entry. — Not only does the trial court have the authority to subsequently enter a written judgment which conforms to its rendered judgment, entry of judgment by the trial court is the event which vests jurisdiction in the appellate court, and the judgment is not complete for the purpose of appeal until its entry. Searles v. Searles, 100 N.C. App. 723, 398 S.E.2d 55 (1990); In re Estate of Walker, 113 N.C. App. 419, 438 S.E.2d 426 (1994).

Notice of appeal given after the general terms of the judgment are announced in open court is, alone, not sufficient to vest jurisdiction in the appellate court. Searles v. Searles, 100 N.C. App. 723, 398 S.E.2d 55 (1990).

Where the jury announced its verdict in open court, it "rendered judgment" according to § 1A-1, Rule 3(a) and this rule, and oral notice of appeal was a proper procedure. Stimpson Hosiery Mills, Inc. v. Pam Trading Corp., 98 N.C. App. 543, 392 S.E.2d 128 (1990).

Factors in Analysis of Whether an Entry of Judgment Has Occurred. — The language of this rule clearly establishes that entry of judgment occurs when the clerk makes some notation in the minutes. In cases where the procedures used do not fit within the express provisions of the rule or where there is no evidence to indicate when or whether such notation was made, the spirit and purpose of the rule should determine when entry of judgment occurs. Relevant factors in this analysis are: (1) an easily identifiable point at which entry occurred, such that (2) the parties have fair notice of the court's judgment and the time thereof, and that (3) the matters for adjudication have been finally and completely resolved so that the case is suitable for appellate review.

Stachlowski v. Stach, 328 N.C. 276, 401 S.E.2d 638 (1991).

Interrelationship Between Rules. — The importance of finality to the timing of entry of judgment is apparent more from the interrelationship between § 1A-1, Rule 54 and this rule than from the express language of this rule itself. The principal concern regarding finality is that all matters for determination be resolved. Stachlowski v. Stach, 328 N.C. 276, 401 S.E.2d 638 (1991).

Rendering of Judgment Held Not Entry of Judgment. — In a custody case, where the trial court announced in open court that the previous decree would receive full faith and credit and custody would not change, the court rendered judgment that day on the custody issue, but the court did not enter judgment, as the court directed counsel for defendant to draw the order and the parties continued to negotiate on visitation so the rendering of judgment did not constitute entry of judgment. Stachlowski v. Stach, 328 N.C. 276, 401 S.E.2d 638 (1991).

Entry of judgment occurred when the trial court adopted and signed the proposed judgment submitted by plaintiff's counsel, not when the jury returned its verdict and the assistant clerk wrote "jury verdict" on the court calendar. Reed v. Abrahamson, 331 N.C. 249, 415 S.E.2d 549 (1992).

Where judge instructed clerk to note judgment on children's paternity in minutes, valid entry of judgment occurred at this time, not at later date when judge signed written order of paternity. In re Estates of Barrow, 122 N.C. App. 717, 471 S.E.2d 669 (1996).

Adoption of Draft Order and Proposed Findings. — In a custody case, where trial court directed counsel for defendant to draft an order reflecting its decision, this order required findings of fact supporting the court's conclusion that there had been no material change of circumstances warranting a modification of the custody order. Fair notice concerns would dictate that entry of judgment occurred when the court adopted the draft order and proposed findings. Stachlowski v. Stach, 328 N.C. 276, 401 S.E.2d 638 (1991).

Each of the three paragraphs in this rule declares that entry of judgment occurs when the clerk makes some notation in the minutes. Stachlowski v. Stach, 328 N.C. 276, 401 S.E.2d 638 (1991).

In cases where entry of judgment cannot be determined from the express language of this rule, fair notice concerns indicate that "entry" occurs only after draft orders or judgments are submitted to and adopted by the court. Stachlowski v. Stach, 328 N.C. 276, 401 S.E.2d 638 (1991).

Entry of Judgment in a Divorce Action. — Because the pronouncement of divorce judgment was not entered within the explicit meaning of this Rule, and judgment can be entered only after the requisite findings of fact have been adopted in a divorce action under § 50-10, entry of judgment of absolute divorce did not occur until counsel submitted the judgment to the court and the court signed the judgment. Bumgardner v. Bumgardner, 113 N.C. App. 314, 438 S.E.2d 471 (1994).

Applied in Story v. Story, 27 N.C. App. 349, 219 S.E.2d 245 (1975); Taylor v. Triangle Porsche-Audi, Inc., 27 N.C. App. 711, 220 S.E.2d 806 (1975); Arnold v. Varnum, 34 N.C. ## Rule 59. New trials; amendment of judgments.

(a) Grounds. — A new trial may be granted to all or any of the parties and on all or part of the issues for any of the following causes or grounds:

(1) Any irregularity by which any party was prevented from having a fair trial;
(2) Misconduct of the jury or prevailing party;
(3) Accident or surprise which ordinary prudence could not have guarded against;
(4) Newly discovered evidence material for the party making the motion which he could not, with reasonable diligence, have discovered and produced at the trial;
(5) Manifest disregard by the jury of the instructions of the court;
(6) Excessive or inadequate damages appearing to have been given under the influence of passion or prejudice;
(7) Insufficiency of the evidence to justify the verdict or that the verdict is contrary to law;
(8) Error in law occurring at the trial and objected to by the party making the motion, or
(9) Any other reason heretofore recognized as grounds for new trial.

On a motion for a new trial in an action tried without a jury, the court may open the judgment if one has been entered, take additional testimony, amend findings of fact and conclusions of law or make new findings and conclusions, and direct the entry of a new judgment.

(b) Time for motion. — A motion for a new trial shall be served not later than 10 days after entry of the judgment.

(c) Time for serving affidavits. — When a motion for new trial is based upon affidavits they shall be served with the motion. The opposing party has 10 days after such service within which to serve opposing affidavits, which period may be extended for an additional period not exceeding 30 days either by the court for good cause shown or by the parties by written stipulation. The court may permit reply affidavits.

(d) On initiative of court. — Not later than 10 days after entry of judgment the court of its own initiative, on notice to the parties and hearing, may order a new trial for any reason for which it might have granted a new trial on motion of a party, and in the order shall specify the grounds therefor.

(e) Motion to alter or amend a judgment. — A motion to alter or amend the judgment under section (a) of this rule shall be served not later than 10 days after entry of the judgment. (1967, c. 954, s. 1.)

COMMENT

Section (a). — Here, in listing the grounds for new trial, the rule goes beyond the prior statutory law as set forth in former § 1-207 to include all those grounds for new trial which have been approved by North Carolina case law. Former § 1-207 made express mention of only three grounds for new trial — exceptions, insufficient evidence, and excessive damages. But the court has approved new trial in a number of other situations: Where the damages are inadequate, Hinton v. Cline, 238 N.C. 136, 76 S.E.2d 162 (1953); Where the verdict is defective, Vandiford v. Vandiford, 215 N.C. 461, 2 S.E.2d 364 (1939); Where there is misconduct of or affecting the jury, Keener v. Beal, 246 N.C. 247, 98 S.E.2d 19 (1957); In re Will of Hall, 252 N.C. 70, 113 S.E.2d 1 (1960); Where there is newly discovered evidence, Crissman v. Palmer, 225 N.C. 472, 35 S.E.2d 422 (1945); Where there are irregularities in the trial, Lupton v. Spencer, 173 N.C. 126, 91 S.E. 718 (1917); Where there is surprise, Hardy v. Hardy, 128 N.C. 178, 38 S.E. 815 (1901); When equity and justice so require, Walston v. Greene, 246 N.C. 617, 99 S.E.2d 805 (1957).

Section (b). — Here there is a new requirement as to the time within which a motion for new trial must be made. It will be observed that the time is keyed to the "entry of judgment." As to what constitutes "entry of judgment," see Rule 58.

Section (c). — While the practice prescribed here did not previously enjoy statutory sanction, a similar practice had been approved by the court. See Brown v. Town of Hillsboro, 185 N.C. 368, 117 S.E. 41 (1923); Allen v. Gooding, 174 N.C. 271, 93 S.E. 740 (1917).

Section (d). — Again, no prior statute is comparable to the section, but the Commission believes the practice has been approved by the Supreme Court. See Walston v. Greene, 246 N.C. 617, 99 S.E.2d 805 (1957).

Section (e). — This section would seem to be self-explanatory.

CASE NOTES

I. In General.
II. Time for Serving Motions and Affidavits.
III. Altering or Amending Judgments.
IV. Decisions under Prior Law.

I. IN GENERAL.

FRCP, Rule 59 is comparable to this rule. Glen Forest Corp. v. Bensch, 9 N.C. App. 587, 176 S.E.2d 851 (1970).

A motion for a new trial made under this rule is intended to serve as a substitute for the obligation of counsel to timely object to the jury instructions. Hanna v. Brady, 73 N.C. App. 521, 327 S.E.2d 22, cert. denied, 313 N.C. 600, 332 S.E.2d 179 (1985).

A motion for a new trial is no substitute for timely motions for directed verdict and judgment n.o.v. In re Will of King, 80 N.C. App. 471, 342 S.E.2d 394, cert. denied, 317 N.C. 704, 347 S.E.2d 43 (1986).

Motion Directed to Court's Discretion While Motion Under § 1A-1, Rule 50 Presents Question of Law. — A motion to set a verdict aside and for a new trial pursuant to this rule is directed to the discretion of the trial judge, while a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 50 is to be decided as a question of law. Penley v. Penley, 314 N.C. 1, 332 S.E.2d 51 (1985).

Grant of Motions for Judgment N.O.V. and New Trial Inconsistent. — The trial court's grant of the plaintiff's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict as well as plaintiff's motion for a new trial was inconsistent, where the judgment n.o.v. for the plaintiff after the jury returned a verdict for the defendant in a rear-end collision suit determined the defendant's negligence as a matter of law, while the new trial reinstated the issue for a jury. Streeter v. Cotton, — N.C. App. —, 514 S.E.2d 539 (1999).

Judge's Traditional Authority to Set Aside Verdict Was Not Diminished by the Rules. — The legislative enactment of the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1967 did not diminish the inherent and traditional authority of the trial judges of the State to set aside a verdict whenever in their sound discretion they believe it necessary to attain justice for all concerned, and the adoption of those rules did not enlarge the scope of appellate review of a trial judge's exercise of that power. Worthington v. Bynum, 305 N.C. 478, 290 S.E.2d 599 (1982); Bryant v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 313 N.C. 362, 329 S.E.2d 333 (1985).

But Was Merely Formalized. — The repeal of § 1-207 did not diminish the trial judge's traditional discretionary authority to set aside a verdict. The procedure for exercising this traditional power was merely formalized in this rule, which lists eight specific grounds and one "catch-all" ground found in subsection (a)(9) of this rule on which the judge may grant a new trial. Britt v. Allen, 291 N.C. 630, 231 S.E.2d 607 (1977).

The court is not empowered to change a verdict. Industrial Circuits Co. v. Terminal Communications, Inc., 26 N.C. App. 536, 216 S.E.2d 919 (1975).

This section provides wide latitude for the trial judge to award new trials, and it does not require that he set out grounds to support his order. Philco Fin. Corp. v. Mitchell, 26 N.C. App. 264, 215 S.E.2d 823 (1975).

A timely motion for new trial is ad- dressed to the sound judicial discretion of the trial court. Glen Forest Corp. v. Bensch, 9 N.C. App. 587, 176 S.E.2d 851 (1970).

Grounds for New Trial. — Under this rule, a party may obtain a new trial either for errors of law committed during trial or for a verdict not sufficiently supported by the evidence. Eason v. Barber, 89 N.C. App. 294, 365 S.E.2d 672 (1988).

Remedy for Errors of Law. — Section 1A-1, Rule 60(b) provides no specific relief for "errors of law" and even the broad general language of § 1A-1, Rule 60(b)(6) does not include relief for "errors of law." The appropriate remedy for errors of law committed by the court is either appeal or a timely motion for relief under subsection (a)(8) of this rule. Hagwood v. Odom, 88 N.C. App. 513, 364 S.E.2d 190 (1988).

Where errors of law were committed, the trial court is required to grant a new trial. Eason v. Barber, 89 N.C. App. 294, 365 S.E.2d 672 (1988).

And the Court's Decision Is Not Reviewable Absent Abuse. — The court's decision on a motion for a new trial under this rule is not reviewable on appeal, absent manifest abuse of discretion. Mumford v. Hutton & Bourbonnais Co., 47 N.C. App. 440, 267 S.E.2d 511 (1980); Blow v. Shaughnessy, 88 N.C. App. 484, 364 S.E.2d 444 (1988).

A motion for a new trial under this rule is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge, whose ruling is not reviewable on appeal absent an abuse of discretion. Hoover v. Kleer-Pak of N.C., Inc., 33 N.C. App. 661, 236 S.E.2d 386, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 360, 237 S.E.2d 848 (1977); Hord v. Atkinson, 68 N.C. App. 346, 315 S.E.2d 339 (1984); Watts v. Schult Homes Corp., 75 N.C. App. 110, 330 S.E.2d 41, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 548, 335 S.E.2d 320 (1985); State v. Hanes, 77 N.C. App. 222, 334 S.E.2d 444 (1985); Yeargin v. Spurr, 78 N.C. App. 243, 336 S.E.2d 680 (1985).

The decision whether to grant a new trial rests in the sound discretion of the trial judge. Absent record disclosure of abuse of discretion, the order is not subject to review on appeal. Sizemore v. Raxter, 58 N.C. App. 236, 293 S.E.2d 294, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 744, 295 S.E.2d 480 (1982).

A motion under sections (a) and (e) of this rule is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge, whose ruling, in the absence of abuse of discretion, is not reviewable on appeal. Hamlin v. Austin, 49 N.C. App. 196, 270 S.E.2d 558 (1980).

A trial court's discretionary order, pursuant to this rule, for or against a new trial upon any ground may be reversed on appeal only when abuse of discretion is clearly shown. State ex rel. Gilchrist v. Cogdill, 74 N.C. App. 133, 327 S.E.2d 647 (1985).

A trial judge's discretionary order made pursuant to this rule for or against a new trial may be reversed only when an abuse of discretion is clearly shown. Hanna v. Brady, 73 N.C. App. 521, 327 S.E.2d 22, cert. denied, 313 N.C. 600, 332 S.E.2d 179 (1985).

An order made under the discretionary power of this rule shall stand unless the reviewing court is reasonably convinced by the cold record that the trial judge's ruling probably amounted to a substantial miscarriage of justice. Hanna v. Brady, 73 N.C. App. 521, 327 S.E.2d 22, cert. denied, 313 N.C. 600, 332 S.E.2d 179 (1985).

Absent a valid motion pursuant to subsection (a)(8) of this rule and an order granting such motion for errors of law specifically identified, the Court of Appeals erred in reversing the trial judge's conditional grant of a new trial where there was no manifest abuse of discretion on the part of the trial judge. Bryant v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 313 N.C. 362, 329 S.E.2d 333 (1985).

A trial court's order under this rule is not to be disturbed absent an affirmative showing of manifest abuse of discretion by the judge or a substantial miscarriage of justice. Branch Banking & Trust Co. v. Home Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 85 N.C. App. 187, 354 S.E.2d 541 (1987).

Discretion of Trial Judge. — A motion to set aside the verdict and for a new trial is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge, whose ruling, in the absence of abuse of discretion, is not reviewable on appeal. Glen Forest Corp. v. Bensch, 9 N.C. App. 587, 176 S.E.2d 851 (1970); Mangum v. Surles, 12 N.C. App. 547, 183 S.E.2d 839 (1971), rev'd on other grounds, 281 N.C. 91, 187 S.E.2d 697 (1972); City of Winston-Salem v. Rice, 16 N.C. App. 294, 192 S.E.2d 9, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 425, 192 S.E.2d 835 (1972); Townsend v. Norfolk & S. Ry., 35 N.C. App. 482, 241 S.E.2d 859, aff'd, 296 N.C. 246, 249 S.E.2d 801 (1978); Currence v. Hardin, 36 N.C. App. 130, 243 S.E.2d 172, aff'd, 296 N.C. 95, 249 S.E.2d 387 (1978); Coletrane v. Lamb, 42 N.C. App. 654, 257 S.E.2d 445 (1979); Horne v. Trivette, 58 N.C. App. 77, 293 S.E.2d 290, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 741, 295 S.E.2d 759 (1982).

The courts have held repeatedly since 1820 in case after case, and no principle is more fully settled in this jurisdiction, that the action of the trial judge in setting aside a verdict in his discretion is not subject to review on appeal in the absence of an abuse of discretion. Worthington v. Bynum, 53 N.C. App. 409, 281 S.E.2d 166 (1981), rev'd on other grounds, 305 N.C. 478, 290 S.E.2d 599 (1982).

A motion under section (a) of this rule is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge. Such a ruling raises no question of law. Frye v. Anderson, 86 N.C. App. 94, 356 S.E.2d

370, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 370, 361 S.E.2d 74 (1987).

Refusal to Award New Trial Upheld. — In a civil action in which buyer claimed that sellers committed fraud and unfair or deceptive trade in their sale of a condominium to buyer, award of damages of $33,074.30, which essentially restored buyer to her condition prior to sale, was not excessive, and the trial court did not abuse its discretion in refusing to set aside the award and declare a new trial. Douglas v. Doub, 95 N.C. App. 505, 383 S.E.2d 423 (1989).

Where there was nothing in the record to indicate that jury award was influenced by passion or prejudice, it was not a manifest abuse of discretion for the trial judge to uphold the jury's verdict and to deny plaintiff's motion for a new trial. McFarland v. Cromer, 117 N.C. App. 678, 453 S.E.2d 527 (1995), cert. denied, — N.C. —, 458 S.E.2d 183 (1995), review denied, 340 N.C. 114, 456 S.E.2d 317 (1995).

Discretion Where No Question of Law or Legal Inference Involved. — Where no question of law or legal inference is involved, a motion to set aside the verdict is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court and its ruling is not subject to review in the absence of an abuse of discretion. In re Will of Herring, 19 N.C. App. 357, 198 S.E.2d 737 (1973).

The trial judge has the discretionary power to set aside a verdict or grant a new trial when, in his opinion, it would work injustice to let the jury's verdict stand; and if no question of law or legal inference is involved in the motion, his action in so doing is not subject to review on appeal in the absence of a clear abuse of discretion. Seaman v. McQueen, 51 N.C. App. 500, 277 S.E.2d 118 (1981).

Appealability of Decision as to New Trial Based on Law or Legal Inference. — When a judge presiding at a trial grants or refuses to grant a new trial because of some question of law or legal inference which the judge decides, the decision may be appealed and the appellate court will review it. In re Will of Herring, 19 N.C. App. 357, 198 S.E.2d 737 (1973).

When a verdict is set aside for error in law, the decision is not a matter of discretion. In such a situation, the aggrieved party may appeal, provided the error is specifically designated. Britt v. Allen, 291 N.C. 630, 231 S.E.2d 607 (1977).

Scope of Review of Discretionary Ruling. — An appellate court's review of a trial judge's discretionary ruling either granting or denying a motion to set aside a verdict and order a new trial is strictly limited to the determination of whether the record affirmatively demonstrates a manifest abuse of discretion. Worthington v. Bynum, 305 N.C. 478, 290 S.E.2d 599 (1982); Pearce v. Fletcher, 74 N.C. App. 543, 328 S.E.2d 889 (1985); Bryant v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 313 N.C. 362, 329 S.E.2d 333 (1985); Yeargin v. Spurr, 78 N.C. App. 243, 336 S.E.2d 680 (1985).

The decision whether to grant a new trial rests in the sound discretion of the trial judge. Absent record disclosure of abuse of discretion, the order is not subject to review on appeal. Sizemore v. Raxter, 58 N.C. App. 236, 293 S.E.2d 294 (1982), cert. denied, 306 N.C. 744, 295 S.E.2d 479 (1982); Watkins v. Watkins, 83 N.C. App. 587, 351 S.E.2d 331 (1986).

The standard for review of a trial court's discretionary ruling either granting or denying a motion to set aside a verdict and order a new trial is virtually prohibitive of appellate intervention. Pearce v. Fletcher, 74 N.C. App. 543, 328 S.E.2d 889 (1985).

An appellate court's review of a trial judge's discretionary ruling denying a motion to set aside a verdict and order a new trial is limited to a determination of whether the record clearly demonstrates a manifest abuse of discretion by the trial judge. Pittman v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 79 N.C. App. 431, 339 S.E.2d 441, cert. denied, 316 N.C. 733, 345 S.E.2d 391 (1986); Thomas v. Dixson, 88 N.C. App. 337, 363 S.E.2d 209 (1988).

Since under this rule motions are addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court, the only question before the court on appeal is whether the trial court abused its discretion in denying the motion. In re Will of King, 80 N.C. App. 471, 342 S.E.2d 394, cert. denied, 317 N.C. 704, 347 S.E.2d 43 (1986).

When the trial court grants or denies a motion for a new trial without making findings of fact, appellate review is limited to determining whether the record indicates that the ruling amounts to a manifest abuse of discretion. Strickland v. Jacobs, 88 N.C. App. 397, 363 S.E.2d 229 (1988).

When Discretionary Order May Be Reversed. — A trial judge's discretionary order pursuant to this rule granting or denying a new trial upon any ground may be reversed on appeal only in those exceptional cases where an abuse of discretion is clearly shown. Worthington v. Bynum, 305 N.C. 478, 290 S.E.2d 599 (1982); Pearce v. Fletcher, 74 N.C. App. 543, 328 S.E.2d 889 (1985); Bryant v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 313 N.C. 362, 329 S.E.2d 333 (1985); Blow v. Shaughnessy, 88 N.C. App. 484, 364 S.E.2d 444 (1988).

An appellate court should not disturb a discretionary order under this rule unless it is reasonably convinced by the cold record that the trial judge's ruling probably amounted to a substantial miscarriage of justice. Worthington v. Bynum, 305 N.C. 478, 290 S.E.2d 599 (1982); Pearce v. Fletcher, 74 N.C. App. 543, 328 S.E.2d 889 (1985); Bryant v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 313 N.C. 362, 329 S.E.2d 333 (1985); Blow

v. Shaughnessy, 88 N.C. App. 484, 364 S.E.2d 444 (1988).

A discretionary ruling granting or denying a new trial is reversed only where an abuse of discretion is clearly shown resulting in a substantial miscarriage of justice. Travis v. Knob Creek, Inc., 84 N.C. App. 561, 353 S.E.2d 229 (1987).

Trial court's order granting a new trial which contained neither findings nor explication reflecting the grounds for the court's action lacked any basis upon which to conduct appellate review and was reversed. Chiltoski v. Drum, 121 N.C. App. 161, 464 S.E.2d 701 (1995).

Both a motion and an order for new trial filed under subsection (a)(8) of this rule have two basic requirements: First, the errors to which the trial judge refers must be specifically stated; second, the moving party must have objected to the error which is assigned as the basis for the new trial. Barnett v. Security Ins. Co., 84 N.C. App. 376, 352 S.E.2d 855 (1987).

Motion for new trial on the grounds of newly discovered evidence is addressed to trial court's sound discretion and is not subject to review absent a showing of an abuse of discretion. Horne v. Trivette, 58 N.C. App. 77, 293 S.E.2d 290, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 741, 295 S.E.2d 759 (1982).

Discretion of Court as to Motion Claiming Excessive or Inadequate Damages. — A motion for a new trial on the grounds that damages awarded are inadequate or excessive and which appear to have been given under the influence of passion or prejudice is directed to the sound discretion of the trial court. The trial court's decision will not be disturbed on appeal in the absence of a showing of abuse of discretion. Haas v. Kelso, 76 N.C. App. 77, 331 S.E.2d 759 (1985).

A motion for a new trial on the grounds of inadequate damages is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge. Blow v. Shaughnessy, 88 N.C. App. 484, 364 S.E.2d 444 (1988).

Evaluation of Jury Award. — Because a motion for a new trial must be considered on the basis of the jury award, it is error to base an evaluation of the motion on an amount different from that award. Allen v. Beddingfield, 118 N.C. App. 100, 454 S.E.2d 287 (1995).

In deciding a party's motion for a new trial under this Rule, the trial court is limited to a determination of whether the jury's award of damages is inadequate or the jury's verdict is otherwise in error. Allen v. Beddingfield, 118 N.C. App. 100, 454 S.E.2d 287 (1995).

Trial judge has discretionary power to set aside an award of damages if he believes that the damages were excessive and given under the influence of passion or prejudice, or if the evidence was insufficient to justify the verdict. A ruling that is within the discretion of a trial judge may not be set aside except upon a showing of abuse of discretion. Samons v. Meymandi, 9 N.C. App. 490, 177 S.E.2d 209 (1970), cert. denied, 277 N.C. 458, 178 S.E.2d 225 (1972); Griffin v. Griffin, 45 N.C. App. 531, 263 S.E.2d 39 (1980); Maintenance Equip. Co. v. Godley Bldrs., 107 N.C. App. 343, 420 S.E.2d 199 (1992), cert. denied, 333 N.C. 345, 426 S.E.2d 707 (1993).

Remand for New Trial on Damage Issues. — Where the trial judge remarked that the maximum amount of damages that could have been available under the evidence presented was $45,000, but he only remitted the award to $60,000, which was still excessive under the evidence presented and constituted a manifest abuse of discretion, a remand for a new trial on the issue of damages was required. Munie v. Tangle Oaks Corp., 109 N.C. App. 336, 427 S.E.2d 149 (1993).

Failure to state a particular rule number as the basis for a motion is not a fatal error so long as the substantive grounds and relief desired are apparent and the nonmovant is not prejudiced thereby. Garrison v. Garrison, 87 N.C. App. 591, 361 S.E.2d 921 (1987).

Court Not Required to State Reasons or Make Findings Absent Request Therefor. — In ruling on a motion for a new trial under section (a) of this rule, absent a specific request made pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 52(a)(2), a trial court is not required to either state the reasons for its decision or make findings of fact showing those reasons. Strickland v. Jacobs, 88 N.C. App. 397, 363 S.E.2d 229 (1988).

A motion for new trial on the grounds of inadequate damages is addressed to the discretion of the trial judge. Gwaltney v. Keaton, 29 N.C. App. 91, 223 S.E.2d 506 (1976); Southern Ry. v. Jeffco Fibres, Inc., 41 N.C. App. 694, 255 S.E.2d 749, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 299, 259 S.E.2d 302 (1979); Moon v. Bostian Heights Volunteer Fire Dep't, 97 N.C. App. 110, 387 S.E.2d 225 (1990).

As Is a Motion to Limit New Trial to Issue of Damages. — A motion to limit a new trial to the issue of damages is directed to the sound discretion of the trial judge and the appellate courts will not supervise the lower court's judgment except in "extreme circumstances." Lazenby v. Godwin, 40 N.C. App. 487, 253 S.E.2d 489 (1979).

And a ruling by the trial judge on the damage issue will not be set aside except upon a showing of abuse of discretion. Southern Ry. v. Jeffco Fibres, Inc., 41 N.C. App. 694, 255 S.E.2d 749, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 299, 259 S.E.2d 302 (1979).

The courts of this State have no authority to grant remittiturs without consent of the prevailing party. Pittman v. Nationwide

Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 79 N.C. App. 431, 339 S.E.2d 441, cert. denied, 316 N.C. 733, 345 S.E.2d 391 (1986).

The practice of remittitur with the successful party's consent is still permissible in our courts under this rule. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Holman, 30 N.C. App. 395, 226 S.E.2d 848, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 778, 229 S.E.2d 33 (1976).

As to the constitutionality of remittitur, see Redevelopment Comm'n v. Holman, 30 N.C. App. 395, 226 S.E.2d 848, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 778, 229 S.E.2d 33 (1976).

When the jury's verdict exceeds the evidence, the decision to grant a new trial is in the discretion of the trial judge, and the appellate court will review the trial judge only if it appears he grossly abused his discretion. Redevelopment Comm'n v. Holman, 30 N.C. App. 395, 226 S.E.2d 848, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 778, 229 S.E.2d 33 (1976).

Authority to Set Aside Verdict Contrary to Credible Testimony. — The trial judge is vested with discretionary authority to set aside a verdict and order a new trial whenever in his opinion the verdict is contrary to the greater weight of the credible testimony, and since a motion to this effect requires the trial judge's appraisal of the testimony, it necessarily invokes the exercise of his discretion and raises no question of law, so that his ruling thereon is irreviewable in the absence of manifest abuse of discretion. Britt v. Allen, 291 N.C. 630, 231 S.E.2d 607 (1977).

Showing Required for New Trial on Grounds of Irrelevant Testimony. — In order to receive a new trial in a civil suit on the grounds that defense counsel improperly elicited irrelevant testimony on several occasions, the plaintiff must demonstrate (1) that the evidence did not have any logical tendency to prove a fact in issue, and (2) that its improper admission misled the jury or prejudiced his case. Fisher v. Thompson, 50 N.C. App. 724, 275 S.E.2d 507 (1981).

Order entered by trial judge after verdict, due to his apprehension about the jury being affected by an exhibit that he had excluded, although improperly denominated a mistrial, would not fail merely because it was inadvertently given the wrong nomenclature, and would therefore be considered an order granting a new trial for misconduct by the jury or prevailing party under the provisions of section (a)(2) of this rule. Elks v. Hannan, 68 N.C. App. 757, 315 S.E.2d 553 (1984).

It is not an abuse of discretion to require a new trial on all issues, even though the error giving rise to a new trial occurred in only one issue. Lazenby v. Godwin, 40 N.C. App. 487, 253 S.E.2d 489 (1979).

Where the evidence showed that defendants were not misled by plaintiff about its possession of a certificate of authority to transact business in North Carolina, defendants' failure to raise the issue of plaintiff's authority to transact business in North Carolina in a motion prior to trial, as required by § 55-15-02(a), precluded it from doing so in a motion after trial. Spivey & Self, Inc. v. Highview Farms, Inc., 110 N.C. App. 719, 431 S.E.2d 535, cert. denied, 334 N.C. 623, 435 S.E.2d 342 (1993).

Authority to Order New Trial on Only One Issue. — Under section (a) of this rule, the courts of this State have authority to set aside a verdict as to one issue and order a new trial as to it while leaving the verdict for the remaining issues intact. Housing, Inc. v. Weaver, 52 N.C. App. 662, 280 S.E.2d 191, cert. denied, 304 N.C. 390, 285 S.E.2d 832 (1981), aff'd, 305 N.C. 428, 290 S.E.2d 642 (1982).

Granting New Trial Based on Misapprehension of Law. — If trial court granted a motion for new trial on the belief that by admitting fault, defendant had necessarily admitted plaintiff suffered damages which were the proximate result of defendant's fault, the basis of its action would be a misapprehension of law and its order would constitute reversible error. Chiltoski v. Drum, 121 N.C. App. 161, 464 S.E.2d 701 (1995).

Grant of Partial New Trial for Error in Charge on Damages. — Where error in the charge of the court related only to the measure of damages recoverable by the plaintiff and had no bearing upon the jury's determination of the negligence of the defendant as the proximate cause of the plaintiff's injury, only a partial new trial would be granted. Brown v. Neal, 283 N.C. 604, 197 S.E.2d 505 (1973).

Grant of New Trial Based on Erroneous Instruction of Lien Amount. — Instruction of an erroneous amount for workers' compensation lien was an irregularity which prevented defendant from having a fair trial and the court's failure to grant a new trial on these grounds was a substantial miscarriage of justice. Edwards v. Hardy, 126 N.C. App. 69, 483 S.E.2d 724 (1997).

For case upholding court's exercise of discretion, see City of Winston-Salem v. Rice, 16 N.C. App. 294, 192 S.E.2d 9, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 425, 192 S.E.2d 835 (1972).

Section (d) of this rule, requiring a statement of reasons, applies only to cases in which the trial court orders a new trial on its own motion. Edge v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 78 N.C. App. 624, 337 S.E.2d 672 (1985).

Time in Which Court May Act. — Subsection (d) does not require that sua sponte action by the trial court be accompanied by a statement of the reasons therefor only after entry of judgment, but rather sets forth the maximum time following entry of judgment within which the court is statutorily authorized to act upon its own initiative. Chiltoski v. Drum, 121 N.C. App. 161, 464 S.E.2d 701 (1995).

Court Need Not Specify Grounds for Order Allowing Litigant's Motion. — The trial court is not required to specify the grounds for its order allowing a litigant's motion to set aside a verdict and grant a new trial, where the order is not entered on the trial court's own initiative. Glen Forest Corp. v. Bensch, 9 N.C. App. 587, 176 S.E.2d 851 (1970).

But Must Specify Grounds for Order Made on Own Initiative. — Order setting aside verdict and granting a new trial for errors of law committed during trial, made on the courts' own initiative, was erroneous in failing to specify the errors upon which it was based. In re Will of Herring, 19 N.C. App. 357, 198 S.E.2d 737 (1973).

The law does not require that trial judge specify his reasons for granting discretionary new trial in the absence of a specific request. Edge v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 78 N.C. App. 624, 337 S.E.2d 672 (1985).

Additional Findings Held Essential to Provide Basis for Review. — Given the defendant's motion specifically asking for findings of fact and conclusions of law on the decision of the plaintiff's motion for a new trial, the insufficiency in the findings of fact in the order granting the motion, and the conflicting evidence in the record, additional findings of fact were essential to provide the appellate court with a basis for a meaningful review. Andrews v. Peters, 75 N.C. App. 252, 330 S.E.2d 638, cert. denied, 315 N.C. 182, 337 S.E.2d 65 (1985), aff'd, 318 N.C. 133, 347 S.E.2d 409 (1986).

Appeal Divests Trial Court of Jurisdiction. — The general rule that an appeal takes a case out of the jurisdiction of the trial court was not changed by this rule or § 1A-1, Rule 60. Wiggins v. Bunch, 280 N.C. 106, 184 S.E.2d 879 (1971); Sink v. Easter, 288 N.C. 183, 217 S.E.2d 532 (1975).

When an appeal is taken the trial court is divested of jurisdiction, except to aid in certifying a correct record. Wiggins v. Bunch, 280 N.C. 106, 184 S.E.2d 879 (1971).

The general rule that an appeal takes a case out of the jurisdiction of the trial court was not changed by the enactment of this rule and § 1A-1, Rule 60. Estrada v. Jaques, 70 N.C. App. 627, 321 S.E.2d 240 (1984).

The trial court did not have jurisdiction to hear motions for new trial where defendants filed notices of appeal at the same time they filed their motions for new trial. Argument that the trial court retained jurisdiction because defendants had filed motions for stay of proceedings one minute before filing their notices of appeal had no merit. Seafare Corp. v. Trenor Corp., 88 N.C. App. 404, 363 S.E.2d 643, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 113, 367 S.E.2d 917 (1988).

Where defendants moved for a new trial after giving notice of appeal and none of the exceptions set out in Bowen v. Hodge Motor Co., 292 N.C. 633, 234 S.E.2d 748 (1977) applied, the trial court was without jurisdiction to hear the motion for new trial. American Aluminum Prods., Inc. v. Pollard, 97 N.C. App. 541, 389 S.E.2d 589 (1990).

Timing of Judgment on Motion. — This rule requires that a motion for a new trial or to amend a judgment be made within ten days of the judgment, but does not prescribe the time for judicial action on the motion; therefore, when defendant moved to amend the judgment within the ten-day window provided by subsection (e), the trial court had authority to enter its supplemental judgment on that motion nearly a month later. Buford v. GMC, 339 N.C. 396, 451 S.E.2d 293 (1994).

Timely Filing of Motions Tolls Time for Appeal. — Under N.C.R.A.P., Rule 3, timely filing of a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict or for a new trial pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 50(b) and this rule tolls the period for filing and serving written notice of appeal in civil actions. The full time for appeal commences to run and is to be computed from the entry of the order granting or denying the motions under § 1A-1, Rule 50(b) or this rule. Middleton v. Middleton, 98 N.C. App. 217, 390 S.E.2d 453 (1990), cert. denied, 327 N.C. 637, 399 S.E.2d 124 (1990).

But Written Motions Following Denial of Oral Motions Would Not Toll Time for Appeal. — Plaintiffs, who entered their written notice of appeal within 10 days after the entry of June 6 order denying their April 22 written motions for judgment notwithstanding the verdict and for a new trial, were not entitled to make these written motions or to a hearing on these motions, because they had previously made oral motions for judgment notwithstanding the verdict and for a new trial in open court on April 14, and were afforded an opportunity to be heard, which they declined. Their motions under this rule and § 1A-1, Rule 50(b) having been denied in open court at that time, plaintiffs were not entitled to file written motions requesting the same relief and thereby toll the period for filing written notice of appeal. Since the June 13 written notice of appeal was not filed within 10 days of entry of judgment, which by the terms of the judgment was April 14, their appeal was untimely. Middleton v. Middleton, 98 N.C. App. 217, 390 S.E.2d 453 (1990), cert. denied, 327 N.C. 637, 399 S.E.2d 124 (1990).

And Court May Not Order New Trial While Appeal Is Pending. — A trial court has no jurisdiction to enter an order granting defendant a new trial while an appeal of the cause is pending. Jim Walter Homes, Inc. v. Peartree, 24 N.C. App. 579, 211 S.E.2d 457, cert. denied, 286 N.C. 722, 213 S.E.2d 722 (1975).

But General Rule Has Exceptions. — The general rule that an appeal takes a case out of the jurisdiction of the trial court is subject to two exceptions and one qualification: The exceptions are that notwithstanding the pendency of an appeal the trial judge retains jurisdiction over the cause (1) during the session in which the judgment appealed from was rendered, and (2) for the purpose of settling the case on appeal. The qualification to the general rule is that "the trial judge, after notice and on proper showing, may adjudge the appeal has been abandoned" and thereby regain jurisdiction of the cause. Estrada v. Jaques, 70 N.C. App. 627, 321 S.E.2d 240 (1984).

A discretionary new trial order, as opposed to an order granting a new trial as a matter of law, is not reviewable on appeal in the absence of manifest abuse. Edge v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 78 N.C. App. 624, 337 S.E.2d 672 (1985).

Withdrawal of a motion under this rule did not entitle defendants to ten days from their withdrawal to file notice of appeal from judgment; to hold otherwise would thwart the tolling provision of N.C.R.A.P., Rule 3(c), and circumvent the purpose of § 1A-1. Rule 58, i.e., to give all interested parties a definite fixed time of a judicial determination they can point to as the time of entry of judgment. Landin Ltd. v. Sharon Luggage, Ltd., 78 N.C. App. 558, 337 S.E.2d 685 (1985).

Vacating of Dismissal for Failure to State Claim Not Binding on Later Appeal. — The appellate court's prior decision, in which it "vacated" an order dismissing the plaintiff's complaint for failure to state a claim, was not binding on the court on a later appeal of a judgment notwithstanding the verdict. While the appellate court, in the first appeal, held that the complaint disclosed no insurmountable bar to recover under at least one of the claims for relief, its inquiry in the second appeal was a very different one: Was the evidence introduced at trial, viewed in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, insufficient as a matter of law to support the jury's verdict? Pearce v. American Defender Life Ins. Co., 74 N.C. App. 620, 330 S.E.2d 9, aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 316 N.C. 461, 343 S.E.2d 174 (1986).

New Trial Where Instructions Did Not Reflect Change in Law Only Hours Before. — Although plaintiffs did not object to jury instructions, it was not error for the trial court to grant a new trial on the grounds that the jury had been erroneously charged, where both court and counsel were understandably unaware that the law had changed only hours before the jury was charged. Any objections lodged by the plaintiffs would have been unavailing where the trial judge instructed the jury in accordance with what to him was still established law. Hunnicutt v. Griffin, 76 N.C. App. 259, 332 S.E.2d 525, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 665, 336 S.E.2d 400 (1985).

Order denying a motion for a new trial was reversed because it was based upon an error of law, to wit, that the evidence raised an issue of fact as to contributory negligence. The evidence was undisputed and susceptible of only one inference, i.e., no contributory negligence, and the question should have been withdrawn from the jury. Watts v. Schult Homes Corp., 75 N.C. App. 110, 330 S.E.2d 41, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 548, 335 S.E.2d 320 (1985).

New Trial on Basis of Juror Misconduct. — Prior to July 1, 1984, the effective date of the Rules of Evidence, a juror's testimony could not be received even to show that extraneous prejudicial information was improperly brought to the jury's attention. While such evidence could be received in a criminal case because of the constitutional right of confrontation, no such exception to the general anti-impeachment rule applied in civil cases. Therefore, it was error for judge to grant a conditional new trial on the basis of juror misconduct proved solely by the juror's affidavit and testimony. Smith v. Price, 315 N.C. 523, 340 S.E.2d 408 (1986).

Affidavits of Two Jurors as to Mistake in Recording Verdict Insufficient for New Trial. — The evidence of only two of the jurors that there was a mistake in the recording of the verdict is, as a matter of law, insufficient to support an order for a new trial. Chandler v. U-Line Corp., 91 N.C. App. 315, 371 S.E.2d 717, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 623, 374 S.E.2d 583 (1988).

Punitive Damages Held Not Excessive. — Where plaintiff clearly presented sufficient evidence to prove he was entitled to an award of punitive damages, upon a strict review of the record it could not be said as a matter of law that the trial court erred in denying defendant's motion for a new trial on the grounds of excessive punitive damages. State v. Morrell, 108 N.C. App. 465, 424 S.E.2d 147, appeal dismissed, 333 N.C. 463, 427 S.E.2d 626 (1993).

No Abuse of Discretion Found. — No abuse of discretion was found where a jury awarded $225,000.00 against an insurance company for bad faith refusal to settle. Lovell v. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 108 N.C. App. 416, 424 S.E.2d 181, aff'd in part; discretionary review improvidently granted in part, 334 N.C. 682, 435 S.E.2d 71 (1993).

When the trial court fails to comply with § 1A-1, Rule 50 and this rule in ordering a new trial, the general course is to reverse and remand for reinstatement of the verdict. Barnett v. Security Ins. Co., 84 N.C. App. 376, 352 S.E.2d 855 (1987).

Findings on Setting Aside Verdict on Damages. — Findings, when requested, should be made in support of the ultimate conclusion that the damages appear to have been given under the influence of passion or prejudice in order to facilitate meaningful appellate review of an order setting aside a verdict on damages. Andrews v. Peters, 318 N.C. 133, 347 S.E.2d 409 (1986).

Failure of Court to Specify Errors Relied on in Granting Motion. — Where the trial court allowed defendants' motion for a new trial "for errors committed by the court during the course of the trial," but the court's order did not specify the errors, the trial court failed to fulfill the requirements of this rule. Barnett v. Security Ins. Co., 84 N.C. App. 376, 352 S.E.2d 855 (1987).

Refusal to Consider Affidavit After Hearing on Motion to Amend. — In action for modification of child custody and child support, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in refusing to consider the affidavit of the child, where the affidavit was offered after defendant's motion under § 1A-1, Rule 52 to amend the judgment had been heard and without notice to plaintiff, and defendant sought only to amend the judgment based on the insufficiency of the evidence already offered and errors of law which occurred during trial, under subsections (a)(7) and (8) of this rule respectively. Payne v. Payne, 91 N.C. App. 71, 370 S.E.2d 428 (1988).

Request to Amend Order to Include Findings Not Timely. — A request for the trial court to amend its order to include specific findings of fact after the order has already been issued is not a timely request for findings under § 1A-1, Rule 52(a)(2). Strickland v. Jacobs, 88 N.C. App. 397, 363 S.E.2d 229 (1988).

Notice of appeal from denial of a motion to set aside a judgment which does not also specifically appeal the underlying judgment does not properly present the underlying judgment for review. Von Ramm v. Von Ramm, 99 N.C. App. 153, 392 S.E.2d 422 (1990).

Applied in Horton v. Iowa Mut. Ins. Co., 9 N.C. App. 140, 175 S.E.2d 725 (1970); State v. Britt, 285 N.C. 256, 204 S.E.2d 817 (1974); Blackley v. ### II. TIME FOR SERVING MOTIONS AND AFFIDAVITS.

Service to Be Made Within 10 Days. — Section (b) of this rule, when construed with § 1A-1, Rule 5(a), means that service must be made within 10 days when service is required. Hennessee v. Cogburn, 39 N.C. App. 627, 251 S.E.2d 623, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 300, 254 S.E.2d 919 (1979).

Service vs. Filing. — This rule requires that the motion be served, not filed, within ten days after entry of judgment. Muse v. Charter Hosp., 117 N.C. App. 468, 452 S.E.2d 589, cert. denied, 340 N.C. 114, 455 S.E.2d 663, aff'd per curiam, 342 N.C. 403, 464 S.E.2d 44 (1995).

Timeliness Not Affected by Entry of Jury Verdict. — The entry of the jury verdict is not mentioned in the provisions of section (b) of this rule which limit the time period within which motions for a new trial can be made. Sheehan v. Harper Bldrs., Inc., 83 N.C. App. 630, 351

S.E.2d 114 (1986), appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 320 N.C. 171, 357 S.E.2d 927 (1987).

Amendment of Divorce Judgment. — Although not so designated, a motion to have separation agreement incorporated into divorce decree was essentially one made pursuant to this rule to alter or amend the divorce judgment. The trial court had no authority to alter or amend such judgment under this rule pursuant to a motion made more than 10 days after entry of the judgment sought to be altered or amended. Coats v. Coats, 79 N.C. App. 481, 339 S.E.2d 676 (1986).

Second Motion Held Timely. — The plaintiff's appeal was timely filed under the tolling provision of the Rules of Appellate Procedure 3, where the plaintiff filed a timely second motion asserting four additional grounds for a new trial after the first motion was orally denied at the end of a medical malpractice trial, and the plaintiff's appeal was filed within 30 days of the date the court entered an order ruling on the second motion. Sherrod v. Nash Gen. Hosp., 348 N.C. 526, 500 S.E.2d 708 (1998).

Defendant's Motion Held Untimely. — Where, by the express terms of the parties' divorce agreement, defendant had at least constructive knowledge that one of plaintiff's possible alternatives to recover support payments included foreclosure on defendant's property mentioned in the agreement, there was no merit in defendant's contention that this constituted newly discovered evidence which by due diligence he could not have discovered in time to move for a new trial under section (b) of this Rule. Lang v. Lang, 108 N.C. App. 440, 424 S.E.2d 190 (1993).

III. ALTERING OR AMENDING JUDGMENTS.

Purpose of Insuring Speedy Trial on Merits Served by Amendments. — The rules achieve their purpose of insuring a speedy trial on the merits of a case by providing for and encouraging liberal amendments to conform the pleadings and evidence under § 1A-1, Rule 15(a), by pretrial order under § 1A-1, Rule 16, during and after reception of evidence under § 1A-1, Rule 15(b), and after entry of judgment under § 1A-1, Rules 15(b) and 60 and under this rule. Such amendments are made upon motion and with leave of court, by express consent, and by implied consent. Roberts v. William N. & Kate B. Reynolds Mem. Park, 281 N.C. 48, 187 S.E.2d 721 (1972).

Applicability of § 1A-1, Rule 7(b). — In order to suspend the running of the appeal clock, a motion under section (e) of this rule must not only be timely served, but it must also meet the demands of § 1A-1, Rule 7(b). Dusenberry v. Dusenberry, 87 N.C. App. 490, 361 S.E.2d 605 (1987).

If a motion under section (e) of this rule fails to comply with the requirements of § 1A-1, Rule 7(b), it is ipso facto ineffective to suspend the running of appeal time. Dusenberry v. Dusenberry, 87 N.C. App. 490, 361 S.E.2d 605 (1987).

Amendment Following Dismissal under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6). — A motion to dismiss under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6) is not a "responsive pleading" under § 1A-1, Rule 15(a) and so does not itself terminate plaintiff's unconditional right to amend a complaint under § 1A-1, Rule 15(a). However, once the trial court enters its dismissal under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6), plaintiff's right to amend under § 1A-1, Rule 15(a) is terminated. Under certain limited circumstances set forth in section (e) of this rule and § 1A-1, Rule 60(b), a plaintiff may, however, seek to reopen the trial court's judgment and amend the complaint concurrently under § 1A-1, Rule 15(a). Johnson v. Bollinger, 86 N.C. App. 1, 356 S.E.2d 378 (1987).

Amendment upon Motion of the Court. — A trial court has the power to amend its judgment on its own motion within the ten-day period provided by section (e) of this rule. Fox v. Fox, 103 N.C. App. 13, 404 S.E.2d 354 (1991).

Alteration or Amendment of Judgment After Adjournment of Term. — The legislature, in delineating the precise time periods of § 1A-1, Rule 50(b) and section (e) of this rule, did not intend for these specific periods to be curtailed by the adjournment of the term of court at which judgment was rendered; thus a trial court may alter or amend a judgment pursuant to this rule and a trial court may enter judgment n.o.v. pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 50 (including the alteration of a judgment entered upon such a verdict) after the adjournment of the term during which the judgment was entered. Housing, Inc. v. Weaver, 305 N.C. 428, 290 S.E.2d 642 (1982).

Defendant's motion to amend divorce judgment to permit him to claim the two children of the parties as dependents on his State and federal tax returns was not properly made pursuant to subsection (b)(6) of this rule, which permits motions for relief from judgments, and should have been made pursuant to section (e) of this rule. Coleman v. Arnette, 48 N.C. App. 733, 269 S.E.2d 755 (1980).

Motion under § 1A-1, Rule 59 to amend judgment filed 10 days after judgment by defendant tolled the time for filing and serving a cross-notice of appeal until entry of an order on the motion pursuant to N.C.R.A.P., Rule 3(c). However, where defendants later withdrew their motion under this rule, the 10-day time limit to give notice of appeal under N.C.R.A.P., Rule 3(c) was not tolled, because there was never a judicial determination on defendants' motion. Landin Ltd. v.

Sharon Luggage, Ltd., 78 N.C. App. 558, 337 S.E.2d 685 (1985).

This rule is an inappropriate vehicle to challenge the denial of a Rule 60 motion. Garrison ex rel. Chavis v. Barnes, 117 N.C. App. 206, 450 S.E.2d 554 (1994).

Discretion of Trial Court. — A motion under section (e) of this rule to amend the trial court's judgment or order is made subsequent to the judgment and is, itself, a matter within the trial court's discretion. Strickland v. Jacobs, 88 N.C. App. 397, 363 S.E.2d 229 (1988).

Order entered by trial judge after verdict, due to his apprehension about the jury being affected by an exhibit that he had excluded, although improperly denominated a mistrial, would not fail merely because it was inadvertently given the wrong nomenclature, and would therefore be considered an order granting a new trial for misconduct by the jury or prevailing party under the provisions of subsection (a)(2) of this rule. Elks v. Hannan, 68 N.C. App. 757, 315 S.E.2d 553 (1984).

Trial court erred in not granting motion to amend or open judgment where arbitrator failed to disclose numerous social, business, and professional relationships with partners in law firm representing insurance company. William C. Vick Constr. Co. v. North Carolina Farm Bureau Fed'n, 123 N.C. App. 97, 472 S.E.2d 346 (1996).

IV. DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW.

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former § 1-207.

The court is not empowered to change a verdict. Rankin v. Oates, 183 N.C. 517, 112 S.E. 32 (1922); Hyatt v. McCoy, 194 N.C. 760, 140 S.E. 807 (1927); Bundy v. Sutton, 207 N.C. 422, 177 S.E. 420 (1934); Edwards v. Upchurch, 212 N.C. 249, 193 S.E. 19 (1937).

Duty to Set Aside Verdict Where Jury Commits Palpable Error. — When it appears from the evidence, the charge of the court, and the verdict that the jury has committed a palpable error in the answer to one of the issues, it is the duty of the trial judge to set aside to prevent a miscarriage of justice. Hussey v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 183 N.C. 7, 110 S.E. 599 (1922).

As to discretion of court and review thereof, see Hoke v. Tilley, 174 N.C. 658, 94 S.E. 446 (1917); Baily v. Dibbrell Mineral Co., 183 N.C. 525, 112 S.E. 29 (1922); Goodman v. Goodman, 201 N.C. 808, 161 S.E. 686 (1931); Strayhorn v. Fidelity Bank, 203 N.C. 383, 166 S.E. 312 (1932); Manufacturers' Fin. Acceptance Corp. v. Jones, 203 N.C. 523, 166 S.E. 504 (1932); Brantley v. Collie, 205 N.C. 229, 171 S.E. 88 (1933); Harrison v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 207 N.C. 487, 177 S.E. 423 (1934); Anderson v. Holland, 209 N.C. 746, 184 S.E. 511 (1936); Hawley v. Powell, 222 N.C. 713, 24 S.E.2d 523 (1943); Alligood v. Shelton, 224 N.C. 754, 32 S.E.2d 350 (1944); Ziglar v. Ziglar, 226 N.C. 102, 36 S.E.2d 657 (1946); King v. Byrd, 229 N.C. 177, 47 S.E.2d 856 (1948); Carolina Coach Co. v. Central Motor Lines, 229 N.C. 650, 50 S.E.2d 909 (1948); Pruitt v. Ray, 230 N.C. 322, 52 S.E.2d 876 (1949).

Rule 60. Relief from judgment or order.

(a) Clerical mistakes. — Clerical mistakes in judgments, orders or other parts of the record and errors therein arising from oversight or omission may be corrected by the judge at any time on his own initiative or on the motion of any party and after such notice, if any, as the judge orders. During the pendency of an appeal, such mistakes may be so corrected before the appeal is docketed in the appellate division, and thereafter while the appeal is pending may be so corrected with leave of the appellate division.

(b) Mistakes; inadvertence; excusable neglect; newly discovered evidence; fraud, etc. — On motion and upon such terms as are just, the court may relieve a party or his legal representative from a final judgment, order, or proceeding for the following reasons:

(1) Mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect;
(2) Newly discovered evidence which by due diligence could not have been discovered in time to move for a new trial under Rule 59(b);
(3) Fraud (whether heretofore denominated intrinsic or extrinsic), misrepresentation, or other misconduct of an adverse party;
(4) The judgment is void;
(5) The judgment has been satisfied, released, or discharged, or a prior judgment upon which it is based has been reversed or otherwise vacated, or it is no longer equitable that the judgment should have prospective application; or
(6) Any other reason justifying relief from the operation of the judgment.

The motion shall be made within a reasonable time, and for reasons (1), (2) and (3) not more than one year after the judgment, order, or proceeding was entered or taken. A motion under this section does not affect the finality of a judgment or suspend its operation. This rule does not limit the power of a court to entertain an independent action to relieve a party from a judgment, order, or proceeding, or to set aside a judgment for fraud upon the court. The procedure for obtaining any relief from a judgment, order, or proceeding shall be by motion as prescribed in these rules or by an independent action.

(c) Judgments rendered by the clerk. — The clerk may, in respect of judgments rendered by himself, exercise the same powers authorized in sections (a) and (b). The judge has like powers in respect of such judgments. Where such powers are exercised by the clerk, appeals may be had to the judge in the manner provided by law. (1967, c. 954, s. 1.)

COMMENT

The prior North Carolina law was that the court could correct clerical mistakes at any time by motion in the cause, either in or out of term. The motion to correct a clerical error need not be made to the same judge who tried the cause.

There were two statutes dealing with the subject matter. Former § 1-220 provided in effect that where there had been personal service upon the defendant the court could set aside a judgment for mistake, surprise, inadvertence or excusable neglect within one year from the rendition of the judgment. Section 1-108 formerly provided in effect that where there had been constructive service only the defendant must be allowed to defend even after judgment at any time within one year after notice of the judgment but within five years after rendition of the judgment. In any such case the judge must find the facts concerning the mistake, surprise, etc., and that the defendant had a meritorious defense and he must reduce this information to writing.

In reference to section (b)(3) of the federal rule, North Carolina makes a distinction in extrinsic and intrinsic fraud and in the manner in which such judgment may be attacked.

There is not as much difference between the federal rule and the North Carolina as first blush would indicate. Actually, the federal rule uses very succinct language to incorporate most of the results obtained under the North Carolina statutes and case law. As noted above the prior North Carolina practice distinguished between the rights of a defendant who was personally served and a defendant against whom constructive notice was served.

I. IN GENERAL.

The rules achieve their purpose of insuring a speedy trial on the merits by providing for and encouraging liberal amendments to conform pleadings and evidence under § 1A-1, Rule 15(a), by pretrial order under § 1A-1, Rule 16, during and after reception of evidence under § 1A-1, Rule 15(b), and after entry of judgment under § 1A-1, Rules 15(b) and 59 and this rule. Such amendments are made upon motion and with leave of court, by express consent, and by implied consent. Roberts v. William N. & Kate B. Reynolds Mem. Park, 281 N.C. 48, 187 S.E.2d 721 (1972).

Court May Act Otherwise Than "On Motion". — Although this rule says that the court is to act "on motion," it does not deprive the court of the power to act in the interest of justice in an unusual case where its attention has been directed to the necessity for relief by means other than a motion. Taylor v. Triangle Porsche-Audi, Inc., 27 N.C. App. 711, 220 S.E.2d 806 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 619, 223 S.E.2d 396 (1976).

A motion in the cause is not an improper procedure for seeking relief from an execution sale under the judgment. Witten Supply Co. v. Redmond, 11 N.C. App. 173, 180 S.E.2d 487 (1971).

Any reference to or discussion of this rule by defendant in his motion under § 1A-1, Rule 55(d) to set aside and vacate entry of default is unnecessary and surplusage. Hubbard v. Lumley, 17 N.C. App. 649, 195 S.E.2d 330 (1973).

Only a party to an action can seek relief under this section. Watson v. Ben Griffin Realty & Auction, 128 N.C. App. 61, 493 S.E.2d 331 (1997).

Standing to Have Order Set Aside. — Generally, only a party or his legal representative has standing to have an order set aside pursuant to this rule; and a stranger to the action may not obtain such relief. Bowling v. Combs, 60 N.C. App. 234, 298 S.E.2d 754, cert. denied, 307 N.C. 696, 301 S.E.2d 389 (1983).

Erroneous judgment may be corrected only by appeal, and a motion under this rule cannot be used as a substitute for appellate review. Chicopee, Inc. v. Sims Metal Works, Inc., 98 N.C. App. 423, 391 S.E.2d 211, cert. denied, 327 N.C. 426, 395 S.E.2d 674 (1990).

Wording of Judgment Controls. — When it is unclear from looking at a judgment whether a default judgment or a summary judgment was intended, the wording of the body of the judgment itself controls, not the heading. East Carolina Oil Transp., Inc. v. Petroleum Fuel & Term. Co., 82 N.C. App. 746, 348 S.E.2d 165 (1986), cert. denied, 318 N.C. 693, 351 S.E.2d 745 (1987).

Judgment Entered in Open Court Held Not Subject to Repudiation. — Judgment entered on June 13, 1986, in open court, based on consent of the parties, and memorialized on September 8, 1986, when the judge signed the formal judgment, could not be repudiated by one of the parties on June 17, 1986. Blee v. Blee, 89 N.C. App. 289, 365 S.E.2d 679 (1988).

Claim That Judgment Is Defective Not Permitted After Accepting Its Benefits. — After petitioning the court to enter a default judgment, plaintiff relied upon its validity and force thrice — by executing on it; by retaining the money collected by execution; and by suing defendant in a separate action for future rents. The law does not permit a party to claim that a judgment is defective after relying upon its validity and accepting its benefits. Kimzay Winston-Salem, Inc. v. Jester, 103 N.C. App. 77, 404 S.E.2d 176, cert. denied, 329 N.C. 497, 407 S.E.2d 534 (1991).

Effect of Grant of Relief. — The grant of relief from an order does not overrule the earlier order but relieves the parties of the effect of the order. Charns v. Brown, 129 N.C. App. 635, 502 S.E.2d 7 (1998), cert. denied, 349 N.C. 228, 515 S.E.2d 701 (1998), cert. denied, 349 N.C. 353, — S.E.2d — (1998).

Applied in Cheshire v. Bensen Aircraft Corp., 17 N.C. App. 74, 193 S.E.2d 362 (1972); Lowe's Charlotte Hdwe., Inc. v. Howard, 18 N.C. App. 80, 196 S.E.2d 53 (1973); Carolina Paper Co. v. Bouchelle, 19 N.C. App. 697, 200 S.E.2d 203 (1973); Carolina Paper Co. v. Bouchelle, 285 N.C. 56, 203 S.E.2d 1 (1974); Broughton v. Broughton, 22 N.C. App. 233, 206 S.E.2d 302 (1974); Smith v. ## II. RELIEF UNDER SUBSECTION (a).

Section (a) of this rule simply codifies the body of law in existence in this State at the time the new Rules of Civil Procedure were adopted. H & B Co. v. Hammond, 17 N.C. App. 534, 195 S.E.2d 58 (1973).

Liberal amendment of pleadings is encouraged by the Rules of Civil Procedure and the philosophy of § 1A-1, Rule 15 has been applied to this rule. McGinnis v. Robinson, 43 N.C. App. 1, 258 S.E.2d 84 (1979).

Trial court has inherent power to amend judgments by correcting clerical errors or supplying defects so as to make the record speak the truth. Snell v. Washington County Bd. of Educ., 29 N.C. App. 31, 222 S.E.2d 756 (1976).

Generally, no substantive changes may be corrected by a motion under section (a) of this rule. Howard Schultz & Assocs. v. Ingram, 38 N.C. App. 422, 248 S.E.2d 345 (1978).

Limit on Court's Power. — Subsection (a) permits the courts to correct clerical errors or omissions; however, courts do not have the power under this section to affect the substantive rights of the parties or to correct substantive errors in their decisions. Watson v. Watson, 118 N.C. App. 534, 455 S.E.2d 866 (1995).

Amended order made substantive changes in the original order and was not an attempt to correct clerical errors; therefore, the amended order was hereby vacated as outside the authority of subsection (a) and the original order remained in full force and effect. Buncombe County ex rel. Child Support Enforcement Agency ex rel. Andres v. Newburn, 111 N.C. App. 822, 433 S.E.2d 782 (1993).

The court's authority under section (a) of this rule is limited to the correction of clerical errors or omissions. Courts do not have the power under section (a) to affect the substantive rights of the parties or to correct substantive errors in their decisions. Hinson v. Hinson, 78 N.C. App. 613, 337 S.E.2d 663 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 376, 342 S.E.2d 895 (1986).

Correction of Clerical Errors and Modification, etc., of Judgment Distinguished. — The power to correct clerical errors and supply defects or omissions must be distinguished from the power of the court to modify or vacate an existing judgment. Snell v. Washington County Bd. of Educ., 29 N.C. App. 31, 222 S.E.2d 756 (1976).

Section (a) of this rule does not authorize the trial court to set aside a previous ruling where the basis is a legal error. Sink v. Easter, 288 N.C. 183, 217 S.E.2d 532 (1975); Utica Mut. Ins. Co. v. Johnson, 41 N.C. App. 299, 254 S.E.2d 643 (1979).

Correction of clerical errors is not limited to the term of court, but may be done at any time upon motion, or the court may on its own motion make the correction when such defect appears. Snell v. Washington County Bd. of Educ., 29 N.C. App. 31, 222 S.E.2d 756 (1976).

No Time Limit. — Defendant was not barred from seeking correction by the doctrine of laches because subsection (a) provides no time limit for the correction of clerical errors. Gordon v. Gordon, 119 N.C. App. 316, 458 S.E.2d 505 (1995).

Effect of Clerical Correction. — Where plaintiff's unqualified duty under the conclusions of law and the decretal portion of order was to continue making payments to defendant, clerical correction did not alter the effect of the original order. Gordon v. Gordon, 119 N.C. App. 316, 458 S.E.2d 505 (1995).

But power to correct clerical errors after lapse of the term must be exercised with great caution and may not be extended to the correction of judicial errors, so as to make the judgment different from what was actually rendered. Snell v. Washington County Bd. of Educ., 29 N.C. App. 31, 222 S.E.2d 756 (1976).

While courts have always had the inherent authority to correct clerical errors or errors of expression in a judgment, they have never been deemed to have the authority, outside of a term, to correct an error in a decision or to amend a judgment so as to adversely affect the rights of third parties. H & B Co. v. Hammond, 17 N.C. App. 534, 195 S.E.2d 58 (1973); Vandooren v. Vandooren, 27 N.C. App. 279, 218 S.E.2d 715 (1975).

Vacation of Default Judgment Not Correction of Clerical Mistake. — Court order which vacated a prior order and held that a party was not entitled to have a default judgment against him set aside was not an order correcting a clerical mistake or oversight entered pursuant to section (a) of this rule. Utica Mut. Ins. Co. v. Johnson, 41 N.C. App. 299, 254 S.E.2d 643 (1979).

A motion under section (a) of this rule was proper to reform an order granting a preliminary injunction so as to comply with the requirements of § 1A-1, Rule 65(d), since the correction did not alter the effect of the order, but only clarified the record for appeal. Howard Schultz & Assocs. v. Ingram, 38 N.C. App. 422, 248 S.E.2d 345 (1978).

Notice and Hearing Opportunity Required Where Rights Affected by Amendment, etc., of Judgment for Order. — The courts have always had inherent authority to correct clerical errors in orders and judgments, but they do not have the power to amend or vacate an order or judgment so as to affect the rights of the parties without giving the parties notice and an opportunity to be heard. Utica Mut. Ins. Co. v. Johnson, 41 N.C. App. 299, 254 S.E.2d 643 (1979).

The trial court's failure to allow and tax costs could be considered an oversight or omission in the order, and since the substantive rights of the parties were not affected thereby, the court had authority under section (a) of this rule to correct the inadvertent omission of costs from its order. Ward v. Taylor, 68 N.C. App. 74, 314 S.E.2d 814, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 769, 321 S.E.2d 157 (1984).

Trial court had jurisdiction to consider a motion filed by a guardian ad litem pursuant to this rule requesting a supplemental order, wherein she alleged that through oversight and inadvertence the district court had failed to order assessment of costs incurred in custody action, including witness fees for out-of-county witnesses as well as for expert witnesses, even though the guardian ad litem's motion was made approximately four months after the order awarding custody was entered and the county Division of Social Services had filed its notice of appeal. In re Scearce, 81 N.C. App. 662, 345 S.E.2d 411, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 415, 349 S.E.2d 590 (1986).

By changing the incorrect date of entry of judgment to a date other than the actual date judgment was entered, the trial court improperly altered the substantive rights of the parties by extending the period in which the parties could file a timely notice of appeal; this rule does not vest the trial court with such authority. Food Serv. Specialists v. Atlas Restaurant Mgt., Inc., 111 N.C. App. 257, 431 S.E.2d 878 (1993).

Rule Does Not Cover Serious Errors. — Section (a) of this rule does allow the trial court by motion of a party or on its own initiative to correct clerical errors, but errors of a serious or substantial nature are not intended to be covered. Rivenbark v. Southmark Corp., 93 N.C. App. 414, 378 S.E.2d 196 (1989).

Granting of Motion Was Proper. — Where the judgment did not state under what legal theory plaintiff was entitled to prevail and where the amended judgment merely corrected that omission, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in granting plaintiff's motion under section (a) of this rule, because the amendment to the judgment did not affect the substantive rights of the parties. Woods v. Shelton, 93 N.C. App. 649, 379 S.E.2d 45 (1989).

III. RELIEF UNDER SUBSECTION (b).

A. In General.

Section (b) of this rule is nearly identical to FRCP, Rule 60(b). Sink v. Easter, 288 N.C. 183, 217 S.E.2d 532 (1975).

The nearly identical provisions of section (b) of this rule and FRCP, Rule 60(b) point to the federal decisions for interpretation and enlightenment. Wiggins v. Bunch, 280 N.C. 106, 184 S.E.2d 879 (1971).

The purpose of subsection (b) of this rule is to strike a proper balance between the conflicting principles of finality and relief from unjust judgments. Generally, the rule is liberally construed. Carter v. Clowers, 102 N.C. App. 247, 401 S.E.2d 662 (1991).

This rule replaces former § 1-220. Kirby v. Asheville Contracting Co., 11 N.C. App. 128, 180 S.E.2d 407, cert. denied, 278 N.C. 701, 181 S.E.2d 602 (1971); Gregg v. Steele, 24 N.C. App. 310, 210 S.E.2d 434 (1974); Hickory White Trucks, Inc. v. Greene, 34 N.C. App. 279, 237 S.E.2d 862 (1977); Howard v. Williams, 40 N.C. App. 575, 253 S.E.2d 571 (1979).

The provisions of former § 1-220 are now incorporated in this rule. Williams Lumber Co. v. Taylor, 8 N.C. App. 255, 174 S.E.2d 109 (1970).

Procedure under section (b) of this rule is analogous to the former practice under former § 1-220 and under motions to set aside an irregular judgment. Brady v. Town of Chapel Hill, 277 N.C. 720, 178 S.E.2d 446 (1971); Texas W. Fin. Corp. v. Mann, 36 N.C. App. 346, 243 S.E.2d 904 (1978).

And the cases interpreting former § 1-220 are still applicable. Kirby v. Asheville Contracting Co., 11 N.C. App. 128, 180 S.E.2d 407, cert. denied, 278 N.C. 701, 181 S.E.2d 602 (1971); Gregg v. Steele, 24 N.C. App. 310, 210 S.E.2d 434 (1974); Hickory White Trucks, Inc. v. Greene, 34 N.C. App. 279, 237 S.E.2d 862 (1977); Texas W. Fin. Corp. v. Mann, 36 N.C. App. 346, 243 S.E.2d 904 (1978); Howard v. Williams, 40 N.C. App. 575, 253 S.E.2d 571 (1979).

Grounds under section (b) of this rule for vacation of a prior judgment or order for "mistake, inadvertence, surprise or excusable neglect" are the exact grounds spelled out in former § 1-220, and cases decided under the former statute remain good authority. Dishman v. Dishman, 37 N.C. App. 543, 246 S.E.2d 819 (1978).

To proceed under subsection (b) of this rule requires an initial determination of whether a notice of dismissal constitutes a "judgment, order or proceeding." Carter v. Clowers, 102 N.C. App. 247, 401 S.E.2d 662 (1991).

The broad language of subsection (b)(6) of this rule gives the court ample power to vacate judgments whenever such action is appropriate to accomplish justice. Flinn v. Laughinghouse, 68 N.C. App. 476, 315 S.E.2d 72, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 311 N.C. 755, 321 S.E.2d 132 (1984).

Section (b) of this rule provides no specific relief for "errors of law" and even the broad general language of subsection (b)(6) of this rule does not include relief for "errors of law." The appropriate remedy for errors of law committed by the court is either appeal or a timely motion for relief under § 1A-1, Rule 59(a)(8). Hagwood v. Odom, 88 N.C. App. 513, 364 S.E.2d 190 (1988).

Section (b) of this rule has been described as a grand reservoir of equitable power to do justice in a particular case. Jim Walter Homes, Inc. v. Peartree, 28 N.C. App. 709, 222 S.E.2d 706 (1976).

If the motion does not allege factual allegations corresponding to the specific situations contemplated in subsections (b)(1) through (5) of this rule, subsection (b)(6) of this rule serves as a "grand reservoir of equitable power" by which a court may grant relief from an order or judgment. Oxford Plastics v. Goodson, 74 N.C. App. 256, 328 S.E.2d 7 (1985).

Motion Under Subsection (b) of This Rule Cannot Be a Substitute for Appellate Review. — O'Neill v. Southern Nat'l Bank, 40 N.C. App. 227, 252 S.E.2d 231 (1979); Jenkins v. Richmond County, 118 N.C. App. 166, 454 S.E.2d 290 (1995).

Erroneous judgments may be corrected only by appeal, and a motion under this rule cannot be used as a substitute for appellate review. Town of Sylva v. Gibson, 51 N.C. App. 545, 277 S.E.2d 115, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 303 N.C. 319, 281 S.E.2d 659 (1981); Coleman v. Coleman, 74 N.C. App. 494, 328 S.E.2d 871 (1985); Long v. Fink, 80 N.C. App. 482, 342 S.E.2d 557 (1986).

Because defendant attempted to use a subdivision (b)(6) motion as a substitute for appellate review, the trial court's order denying defendant's motion was affirmed. Garrison ex rel. Chavis v. Barnes, 117 N.C. App. 206, 450 S.E.2d 554 (1994).

Applicability of Section (b) to Final Judgments Only. — Section (b) of this rule has no application to interlocutory judgments, orders or proceedings of the trial court. It only applies, by its express terms, to final judgments. Sink v. Easter, 288 N.C. 183, 217 S.E.2d 532 (1975).

Section (b) of this rule has no application to interlocutory orders; by its express terms it applies only to final judgments and orders. O'Neill v. Southern Nat'l Bank, 40 N.C. App. 227, 252 S.E.2d 231 (1979).

A voluntary dismissal with prejudice is a "final judgment" within the meaning of this rule. Couch v. Private Diagnostic Clinic, — N.C. App. —, 515 S.E.2d 30 (1999).

Amendment of Voluntary Dismissal. — A voluntary dismissal under § 1A-1, Rule 41(a)(1) can be amended pursuant to section (b) of this rule. Newberry Metal Masters Fabricators, Inc. v. Mitek Indus., Inc., 333 N.C. 250, 424 S.E.2d 383 (1993).

Order Transferring Child Custody as Final Order. — An order which transferred child custody from the plaintiff to the defendant was a final order under section (b) of this rule, even though the order could be changed subsequently upon a proper showing of change of circumstances under § 50-13.7. Dishman v. Dishman, 37 N.C. App. 543, 246 S.E.2d 819 (1978).

Motion for Relief from Order Under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6) Improper Under Section (b). — Since the denial of a motion to dismiss under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6) is not a final judgment or order, a motion for relief from such an order could not, as a matter of law, be proper under section (b) of this rule. O'Neill v. Southern Nat'l Bank, 40 N.C. App. 227, 252 S.E.2d 231 (1979).

Provisions relating to the setting aside of a default judgment should be liberally construed so as to give litigants an opportunity to have a case disposed of on the merits, to the end that justice may be done. Howard v. Williams, 40 N.C. App. 575, 253 S.E.2d 571 (1979).

Any doubt should be resolved in favor of setting aside defaults so that the merits of an action may be reached. Howard v. Williams, 40 N.C. App. 575, 253 S.E.2d 571 (1979).

But Provisions Designed to Protect Plaintiffs Cannot Be Ignored. — Statutory provisions designed to protect plaintiffs from defendants who do not give reasonable attention to important business affairs such as lawsuits cannot be ignored. Howard v. Williams, 40 N.C. App. 575, 253 S.E.2d 571 (1979).

Right of Party or Legal Representative to Seek Relief from Final Judgment. — Under this rule, a party or his legal representative may seek relief from a final judgment. Browne v. Catawba County Dep't of Social Servs., 22 N.C. App. 476, 206 S.E.2d 792 (1974).

Relief May Be Granted to Successful Plaintiff. — Section (b) of this rule provides that relief may be granted to "any party" and raises no bar to granting relief to a successful plaintiff when adequate reason is shown. Wood v. Wood, 297 N.C. 1, 252 S.E.2d 799 (1979).

Factors Considered on Hearing of Section (b) Motion. — A trial judge, on hearing motions under section (b) of this rule, should consider such factors as: (1) The general desirability that a final judgment not be lightly disturbed; (2) where relief is sought from a judgment of dismissal or default, the relative interest of deciding cases on the merits and the interest in orderly procedure; (3) the opportunity the movant had to present his claim or defense; and (4) any intervening equities. McGinnis v. Robinson, 43 N.C. App. 1, 258 S.E.2d 84 (1979); Baylor v. Brown, 46 N.C. App. 664, 266 S.E.2d 9 (1980).

Power to Vacate Judgment Conditioned on Showing That Justice Requires It. — While this rule gives the court ample power to vacate a judgment whenever that action is appropriate to accomplish justice, a judge cannot do so without a showing based on competent evidence that justice requires it. Highfill v. Williamson, 19 N.C. App. 523, 199 S.E.2d 469 (1973).

When Consent Judgment May Be Changed, etc. — A consent judgment cannot be changed without the consent of the parties or set aside except upon proper allegation and proof that consent was not in fact given or that it was obtained by fraud or mutual mistake, the burden being upon the party attacking the judgment. Blankenship v. Price, 27 N.C. App. 20, 217 S.E.2d 709 (1975).

A consent judgment incorporates the bargained agreement of the parties. Such a judgment can only be attacked on limited grounds. The party attacking the judgment must properly allege and prove that consent was not in fact given, or that it was obtained by mutual mistake or fraud. Stevenson v. Stevenson, 100 N.C. App. 750, 398 S.E.2d 334 (1990).

A contract may be avoided based on mutual mistake where the mistake is common to both parties and because of it each has done what neither intended. A unilateral mistake, unaccompanied by fraud, imposition, or like circumstances, is not sufficient to avoid a contract. These contract principles apply to consent judgments. Stevenson v. Stevenson, 100 N.C. App. 750, 398 S.E.2d 334 (1990).

Absent a showing of fraud, mutual mistake or a lack of consent, attacks on consent judgments are controlled by Rule 60(b)(6). Thacker v. Thacker, 107 N.C. App. 479, 420 S.E.2d 479, cert. denied, 332 N.C. 672, 424 S.E.2d 407 (1992).

Power to Set Aside Judgment or Order Entered by Another Judge. — A superior court judge had authority, upon motion under this rule, to set aside an order entered in another superior court where that order was entered without power and authority and was a nullity. Charleston Capital Corp. v. Love Valley Enters., Inc., 10 N.C. App. 519, 179 S.E.2d 190 (1971).

One judge can hear a party's motion for rehearing to set aside a judgment entered by another, provided that such is proper and authorized by this rule. Waters v. Qualified Personnel, Inc., 32 N.C. App. 548, 233 S.E.2d 76 (1977), rev'd on other grounds, 294 N.C. 200, 240 S.E.2d 338 (1978).

A superior court judge has the authority to grant relief on a motion under section (b) of this rule without offending the rule that precludes one superior court judge from reviewing the decision of another. Hoglen v. James, 38 N.C. App. 728, 248 S.E.2d 901 (1978).

A judge of the district court cannot modify a judgment or order of another judge of the district court absent mistake, fraud, newly discovered evidence, satisfaction and release, or a showing based on competent evidence that justice requires it. Town of Sylva v. Gibson, 51 N.C. App. 545, 277 S.E.2d 115, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 303 N.C. 319, 281 S.E.2d 659 (1981).

In ruling on a motion under subsection (b)(6) of this rule to set aside a default judgment, the trial court had no authority to determine whether the defendant had made an appearance in the case where the trial court which entered the default judgment had previously ruled that the defendant had made no appearance. Whitfield v. Wakefield, 51 N.C. App. 124, 275 S.E.2d 263, cert. denied, 303 N.C. 184, 280 S.E.2d 459 (1981).

A superior court judge has authority to grant relief under a subsection (b) motion without offending the rule that precludes one superior court judge from reviewing the decision of another. Hieb v. Lowery, 121 N.C. App. 33, 464 S.E.2d 308 (1995), aff'd, 344 N.C. 403, 474 S.E.2d 323 (1996).

Motions under section (b) of this rule must be made within a reasonable time. Brady v. Town of Chapel Hill, 277 N.C. 720, 178 S.E.2d 446 (1971).

What Constitutes Reasonable Time. — While motions pursuant to subsections (b)(1), (b)(2), and (b)(3) of this rule must be made "not more than one year after the judgment, order, or proceeding was entered or taken," as well as "within a reasonable time," motions pursuant to subsections (b)(4), (b)(5), and (b)(6) of this rule must simply be made "within a reasonable time," and what constitutes a "reasonable time" depends upon the circumstances of the individual case. Nickels v. Nickels, 51 N.C. App. 690, 277 S.E.2d 577, cert. denied, 303 N.C. 545, 281 S.E.2d 392 (1981).

Plaintiffs' motion was not made within a reasonable time, and they were not entitled to relief where plaintiffs waited literally an entire year before filing their motion for relief, and this motion followed not only the dismissal of their appeal from the judgment itself, but also the dismissal of their appeal from the order dismissing their appeal from the judgment. Jenkins v. Richmond County, 118 N.C. App. 166, 454 S.E.2d 290 (1995).

Reasonable Time. — Where plaintiff's motion for reconsideration was made after the 15 days allowed under § 97-85, subsection (b) merely requires that a motion for relief from the judgment be filed within a reasonable time. Thus, the commission should have considered the motion as a subsection (b) motion for relief from the judgment. Jones v. Yates Motor Co., 121 N.C. App. 84, 464 S.E.2d 479 (1995).

Delay Held Unreasonable. — Trial court did not abuse its discretion in concluding that delay of one year in filing motion for relief under section (b) of this rule was unreasonable and in denying the motion. Brown v. Windhom, 104 N.C. App. 219, 408 S.E.2d 536 (1991).

Section (b) of this rule does not provide that notice be given to any party. Wood v. Wood, 297 N.C. 1, 252 S.E.2d 799 (1979).

Written Motion to Set Aside Default Judgment Not to Be Heard Ex Parte. — Defendant's written motion to set aside a default judgment is not one which might be heard ex parte. Doxol Gas of Angier, Inc. v. Barefoot, 10 N.C. App. 703, 179 S.E.2d 890 (1971).

No Express Provisions for Manner of Service Made by Section (b). — Section (b) of this rule makes no express provisions for the manner in which a motion thereunder must be served. Wood v. Wood, 297 N.C. 1, 252 S.E.2d 799 (1979).

Forum for Relief from Judgment in Magistrate's Court. — The district court is the proper forum to hear and decide a motion made pursuant to section (b) of this rule for relief from a judgment or order entered in a magistrate's court. A new trial is not permitted before the magistrate. Menache v. Atlantic Coast Mgt. Corp., 43 N.C. App. 733, 260 S.E.2d 100 (1979), cert. denied, 299 N.C. 331, 265 S.E.2d 396 (1980).

Nonparties to Original Suit Lack Standing Under Rule. — Where plaintiffs were never made parties to the original suit, they were excluded from using this rule in order to attack a final judgment, since this rule does not apply to nonparties or strangers to the action giving rise to the judgment or order. Lawyers Title Ins. Corp. v. Langdon, 91 N.C. App. 382, 371 S.E.2d 727 (1988), cert. denied, 324 N.C. 335, 378 S.E.2d 793 (1989).

Specification of Subsection (b)(1) or (b)(6) Unnecessary Where Movant Is Uncertain But Motion Is Timely. — When the motion is based on subsection (b)(1) of this rule, the rule requires it to be made not later than one year after the judgment is taken or entered. If movant is uncertain whether to proceed under subsection (b)(1) or (b)(6), he need not specify if his motion is timely and the reason justifies relief. Brady v. Town of Chapel Hill, 277 N.C. 720, 178 S.E.2d 446 (1971); Sides v. Reid, 35 N.C. App. 235, 241 S.E.2d 110 (1978).

A motion for relief under section (b) of this rule is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court. Burwell v. Wilkerson, 30 N.C. App. 110, 226 S.E.2d 220 (1976); Hoglen v. James, 38 N.C. App. 728, 248 S.E.2d 901 (1978); Oxford Plastics v. Goodson, 74 N.C. App. 256, 328 S.E.2d 7 (1985); Perkins v. Perkins, 88 N.C. App. 568, 364 S.E.2d 166 (1988); Danna v. Danna, 88 N.C. App. 680, 364 S.E.2d 694, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 479, 370 S.E.2d 221 (1988).

And Will Be Disturbed Only for Abuse of Discretion. — Relief under section (b) of this rule is within the discretion of the trial court, and such a decision will be disturbed only for an abuse of discretion. Harrington v. Harrington, 38 N.C. App. 610, 248 S.E.2d 460 (1978); Harris v. Harris, 307 N.C. 684, 300 S.E.2d 369 (1983); Oxford Plastics v. Goodson, 74 N.C. App. 256, 328 S.E.2d 7 (1985); Williams v. Jennette, 77 N.C. App. 283, 335 S.E.2d 191 (1985); Vuncannon v. Vuncannon, 82 N.C. App. 255, 346 S.E.2d 274 (1986).

Appellate review of a motion under section (b) of this rule is limited to determining whether the trial court abused its discretion. Burwell v. Wilkerson, 30 N.C. App. 110, 226 S.E.2d 220 (1976); Hilton v. Howington, 63 N.C. App. 717, 306 S.E.2d 196 (1983), cert. denied, 310 N.C. 152, 311 S.E.2d 291 (1984); Thomas M. McInnis & Assocs. v. Hall, 76 N.C. App. 486, 333 S.E.2d 544 (1985), modified on other grounds, 318 N.C. 421, 349 S.E.2d 552 (1986); Stoner v. Stoner, 83 N.C. App. 523, 350 S.E.2d 916 (1986); Cole v. Cole, 90 N.C. App. 724, 370 S.E.2d 272, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 475, 373 S.E.2d 862 (1988); Gallbronner v. Mason, 101 N.C. App. 362, 399 S.E.2d 139., appeal dismissed,.

A motion for relief under section (b) of this rule is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court, and appellate review is limited to determining whether the court abused its discretion. Sink v. Easter, 288 N.C. 183, 217 S.E.2d 532 (1975); Commercial Union Assurance Cos. v. Atwater Motor Co., 35 N.C. App. 397, 241 S.E.2d 334 (1978); Kolendo v. Kolendo, 36 N.C. App. 385, 243 S.E.2d 907 (1978); McGinnis v. Robinson, 43 N.C. App. 1, 258 S.E.2d 84 (1979); Greenhill v. Crabtree, 45 N.C. App. 49, 262 S.E.2d 315, aff'd, 301 N.C. 520, 271 S.E.2d 908 (1980); In re Estate of Snipes, 45 N.C. App. 79, 262 S.E.2d 292 (1980); Peters v. Elmore, 59 N.C. App. 404, 297 S.E.2d 154 (1982); City Fin. Co. v. Boykin, 86 N.C. App. 446, 358 S.E.2d 83 (1987); In re Finnican, 104 N.C. App. 157, 408 S.E.2d 742 (1991), cert. denied,.

The trial judge's extensive power to afford relief from judgments is accompanied by a corresponding discretion to deny it, and the only question for appellate determination is whether the trial court abused its discretion in denying the motion. Sawyer v. Goodman, 63 N.C. App. 191, 303 S.E.2d 632, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 823, 310 S.E.2d 352 (1983).

Court to Make Findings of Fact. — It is the duty of the judge presiding at a hearing under section (b) of this rule to make findings of fact and to determine from such facts whether the movant is entitled to relief from the final judgment or order in question. Hoglen v. James, 38 N.C. App. 728, 248 S.E.2d 901 (1978); York v. Taylor, 79 N.C. App. 653, 339 S.E.2d 830 (1986).

Court Not Required to Make Findings of Fact. — Where the trial court denied the motion to set aside the default judgment without making findings of fact, a better practice would have been to make findings of fact when ruling on a motion under subsection (b); however, the trial court is not required to do so. McLean v. Mechanic, 116 N.C. App. 271, 447 S.E.2d 459 (1994), review denied, 339 N.C. 738, 454 S.E.2d 654, cert. denied, 339 N.C. 738, 454 S.E.2d 653 (1995).

Findings of Fact are Conclusive If Based on Competent Evidence. — The facts found by the judge are conclusive if there is any evidence on which to base such findings of fact. Doxol Gas of Angier, Inc. v. Barefoot, 10 N.C. App. 703, 179 S.E.2d 890 (1971).

Findings of fact made by the trial court upon a motion to set aside a judgment by default are binding on appeal if supported by any competent evidence. Kirby v. Asheville Contracting Co., 11 N.C. App. 128, 180 S.E.2d 407, cert. denied, 278 N.C. 701, 181 S.E.2d 602 (1971); Norton v. Sawyer, 30 N.C. App. 420, 227 S.E.2d 148, cert. denied, 291 N.C. 176, 229 S.E.2d 689 (1976).

But conclusions of law made by the judge upon the facts found by him are reviewable on appeal. Norton v. Sawyer, 30 N.C. App. 420, 227 S.E.2d 148, cert. denied, 291 N.C. 176, 229 S.E.2d 689 (1976).

The trial judge's findings of fact are conclusive on appeal when supported by competent evidence, but the conclusions of law made by the judge upon the facts found are reviewable on appeal. U.S.I.F. Wynnewood Corp. v. Soderquist, 27 N.C. App. 611, 219 S.E.2d 787 (1975).

When Court Fails to Make Findings of Fact. — Where the trial court does not make findings of fact in its order denying the motion to set aside the judgment, the question on appeal is whether, on the evidence before it, the court could have made findings of fact sufficient to support its legal conclusion. Grant v. Cox, 106 N.C. App. 122, 415 S.E.2d 378 (1992).

Amendment Following Dismissal Under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6). — A motion to dismiss under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6) is not a "responsive pleading" under § 1A-1, Rule 15(a) and so does not itself terminate plaintiff's unconditional right to amend a complaint under § 1A-1, Rule 15(a). However, once the trial court enters its dismissal under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6), plaintiff's right to amend under § 1A-1, Rule 15(a) is terminated. Under certain limited circumstances set forth in § 1A-1, Rule 59(e) and section (b) of this rule, a plaintiff may, however, seek to reopen the trial court's judgment and amend the complaint concurrently under § 1A-1, Rule 15(a). Johnson v. Bollinger, 86 N.C. App. 1, 356 S.E.2d 378 (1987).

Order Setting Aside Default Judgment Interlocutory and Not Appealable. — An order of the trial court allowing a motion pursuant to section (b) of this rule to set aside a default judgment was interlocutory and not appealable, and the Court of Appeals should have dismissed the appeal, even though the question of appealability was not raised by the parties. Bailey v. Gooding, 301 N.C. 205, 270 S.E.2d 431 (1980).

Order Setting Aside Dismissal Interlocutory and Appeal Premature. — An order entered pursuant to subsection (b)(1) of this rule, setting aside a judgment which had dismissed plaintiff's action with prejudice for failure of plaintiffs' counsel to appear when the case was called for trial, was interlocutory, and defendants' appeal therefrom was premature. Metcalf v. Palmer, 46 N.C. App. 622, 265 S.E.2d 484 (1980).

Appeal Divests Trial Court of Jurisdiction. — The general rule that an appeal takes the case out of the jurisdiction of the trial court is not changed by § 1A-1, Rule 59 or this rule. Wiggins v. Bunch, 280 N.C. 106, 184 S.E.2d 879 (1971); Sink v. Easter, 288 N.C. 183, 217 S.E.2d 532 (1975).

When an appeal is taken the trial court is divested of jurisdiction, except to aid in certifying a correct record. Wiggins v. Bunch, 280 N.C. 106, 184 S.E.2d 879 (1971).

The general rule that an appeal takes a case out of the jurisdiction of the trial court was not changed by the enactment of § 1A-1, Rule 59 and this rule. Estrada v. Jaques, 70 N.C. App. 627, 321 S.E.2d 240 (1984).

The general rule that an appeal takes a case out of the jurisdiction of the trial court is subject to two exceptions and one qualification. The exceptions are that notwithstanding the pendency of an appeal the trial judge retains jurisdiction over the cause (1) during the session in which the judgment appealed from was rendered, and (2) for the purpose of settling the case on appeal. The qualification to the general rule is that the trial judge, after notice and on proper showing, may adjudge that the appeal has been abandoned and thereby regain jurisdiction of the cause. Estrada v. Jaques, 70 N.C. App. 627, 321 S.E.2d 240 (1984).

Entertainment of Motion by Court of Appeals. — A motion under this rule to set aside the judgment and for a new trial on the ground that a witness for plaintiff had perjured himself, which was filed after the appeal had been scheduled for argument, was properly made in the Court of Appeals. Rhodes v. Henderson, 14 N.C. App. 404, 188 S.E.2d 565 (1972).

Remand for Hearing of Issues Raised by Motion. — Since at the time plaintiff's motion under section (b) of this rule was filed the case was pending on appeal in the Court of Appeals, the motion was properly filed in the appellate court. However, as determination of the motion required resolution of controverted questions of fact which the trial court was in a better position to pass upon than the Court of Appeals, the cause would be remanded to the trial court for the purpose of hearing and passing upon all questions and issues raised by the motion. Swygert v. Swygert, 46 N.C. App. 173, 264 S.E.2d 902 (1980).

Consideration of Section (b) Motion by Trial Court While Appeal Pending. — The general rule is that when one party gives notice of appeal, the jurisdiction of the trial court is ousted and it may take no further action in the case except in aid of the appeal, unless the case is remanded to it by the appellate court. However, the trial court should consider a motion under section (b) of this rule filed while the appeal is pending for the limited purpose of indicating, by a proper entry in the record, how it would be inclined to rule on the motion were the appeal not pending. At the time the motion is made in the lower court, the movant should notify the appellate court, so that it may delay consideration of the appeal until the trial court has considered the motion. Upon an indication of favoring the motion, appellant would be in a position to move the appellate court to remand to the trial court for judgment on the motion and the proceedings would thereafter continue until a final, appealable judgment was rendered. An indication by the trial court that it would deny the motion would be considered binding on that court and appellant could then request appellate court review of the lower court's action. This procedure would allow the trial court to rule in the first instance on the motion and would permit the appellate court to review the trial court's decision on such motion at the same time it considered other assignments of error. Bell v. Martin, 43 N.C. App. 134, 258 S.E.2d 403 (1979), rev'd on other grounds, 299 N.C. 715, 264 S.E.2d 101 (1980).

As a general rule, an appeal divests the trial court of jurisdiction. However, the trial court retains limited jurisdiction to hear a motion under section (b) of this rule and to indicate its probable disposition after the notice of appeal has been entered. Where the trial court indicates that the motion should be denied, the appellate court will review that action along with any other assignments of error raised by the appellant. Hagwood v. Odom, 88 N.C. App. 513, 364 S.E.2d 190 (1988).

Motion Made After Notice of Appeal. — The trial court does not have jurisdiction to rule on a motion pursuant to section (b) of this rule where such motion is made after the notice of appeal has been given. York v. Taylor, 79 N.C. App. 653, 339 S.E.2d 830 (1986).

As a general rule, an appeal divests the trial court of jurisdiction of a case and, pending appeal, the trial court is functus officio. However, the trial court retains limited jurisdiction to hear and consider a motion under section (b) of this rule to indicate what action it would be inclined to take were an appeal not pending. Talbert v. Mauney, 80 N.C. App. 477, 343 S.E.2d 5 (1986).

Notice of Appeal Filed at Same Time as Motions. — Where notice of appeal from default judgment for defendants with respect to plaintiff's claim and defendants' counterclaim against plaintiff was filed at the same time as plaintiff's motion under § 1A-1, Rule 52(b) for amended and additional findings of fact and his motion under section (b) of this rule for relief from judgment, under the circumstances of the case, the trial court had jurisdiction to rule on plaintiff's motion under section (b) of this rule. York v. Taylor, 79 N.C. App. 653, 339 S.E.2d 830 (1986).

Filing and granting of motion of withdrawal and abandonment of appeal served to invest trial judge with jurisdiction over the cause, and hence he had sufficient jurisdictional power to file his order granting plaintiff relief pursuant to subsections (b)(1) and (b)(2) of this rule. Sink v. Easter, 288 N.C. 183, 217 S.E.2d 532 (1975).

Perjured testimony is not usually recognized as a "fraud upon the court" within the meaning of the provision of section (b) of this rule providing that the rule "does not limit the power of a court to entertain an independent action . . . to set aside a judgment for a fraud upon the court." McGinnis v. Robinson, 43 N.C. App. 1, 258 S.E.2d 84 (1979).

Where a movant is uncertain whether to proceed under subsection (b)(1) or (b)(6) of this rule, he need not specify which section if his motion is timely and the reason justifies relief under either. The movant must show that he has a meritorious defense, as it would be a waste of judicial economy to vacate a judgment or order when the movant could not prevail on the merits of the civil action. Oxford Plastics v. Goodson, 74 N.C. App. 256, 328 S.E.2d 7 (1985).

Proceedings Under Chapter 40A. — This Rule applies to proceedings under Chapter 40A in order to provide relief from judgments or orders when necessary to promote the interests of justice. City of Durham v. Woo, 129 N.C. App. 183, 497 S.E.2d 457 (1998), cert. denied, 348 N.C. 496, 518 S.E.2d 380 (1998).

Divorce Decree Regular on Face of Judgment Roll. — Subsection (b)(4) of this rule requires that the judgment be void. A divorce decree, in all respects regular on the face of the judgment roll, is at most voidable, not void. Howell v. Tunstall, 64 N.C. App. 703, 308 S.E.2d 454 (1983).

Alimony Pendente Lite. — Given the interlocutory nature of an order for alimony pendente lite, which allows correction of any error at the district court's final hearing on the matter, such an order is not a "final judgment, order, or proceeding" that can be the proper subject of a motion under section (b) of this rule. Coleman v. Coleman, 74 N.C. App. 494, 328 S.E.2d 871 (1985).

Child Support. — Like custody orders, child support orders are not "final" orders only in the sense that they may be modified subsequently upon a motion in the cause and a showing of change of circumstances, and thus, like custody orders, a party may seek relief from a child support order pursuant to section (b) of this rule. Coleman v. Coleman, 74 N.C. App. 494, 328 S.E.2d 871 (1985).

Child Support Judgment Not Voided by Temporary Resumption of Marital Relationship. — Temporary resumption of the marital relationship does not require the court to grant a motion, pursuant to subsection (b)(4) of this rule, to have declared void a judgment ordering payment of child support. Walker v. Walker, 59 N.C. App. 485, 297 S.E.2d 125 (1982).

Applicability to Industrial Commission Motion. — Since the North Carolina Industrial Commission has no rule comparable to section (b) of this rule, and because the Rules of Civil Procedure were applicable, the Industrial Commission should have treated defendant's motion pursuant to § 97-85 and Industrial Commission Rule XXI for a new hearing on the ground that he had not received notice of hearing in which plaintiff was awarded compensation as one made pursuant to section (b) of this rule to be relieved from a judgment. Long v. Reeves, 77 N.C. App. 830, 336 S.E.2d 98 (1985).

Remand to Industrial Commission Following Appeal. — Motion under subsections (b)(2) and (b)(6) of this rule, filed in the Court of Appeals while workers' compensation case was pending therein, whereby defendants moved for a new hearing before the Industrial Commission in the event that the Court of Appeals ruled adversely to defendants on the merits of their appeal, should have been remanded to the Commission for initial determination following decision on the merits of the appeal. Hill v. Hanes Corp., 319 N.C. 167, 353 S.E.2d 392 (1987).

Court's Miscalculation of Ability to Pay Alimony Arrearages Held Error. — Where the trial court understated defendant's monthly expenses by approximately $500.00 per month and failed to include that amount in its calculation of the amount of defendant's present ability to pay alimony arrearages and prospective alimony, while this miscalculation may have had no effect on the trial court's order of specific performance, it may have had an effect on the amount defendant can reasonably afford to pay plaintiff on a monthly basis; the trial court's miscalculation in this situation was of a substantial nature and was a prejudicial error. Edwards v. Edwards, 102 N.C. App. 706, 403 S.E.2d 530, cert. denied, 329 N.C. 787, 408 S.E.2d 518 (1991).

Elapsed Time Held Not Unreasonable. — The period of time between November 26, 1984, and April 1, 1985, was not an unreasonable amount of time to elapse so as to preclude relief under subsections (b)(5) and (b)(6) of this rule. Poston v. Morgan, 83 N.C. App. 295, 350 S.E.2d 108 (1986).

Where defendants contended that a mistake was mutual in that both parties settling a wrongful death claim agreed to purchase an annuity for $300,000.00 and that both parties were mistaken as to the actual future payments that the decedent's child would receive from the annuity based on a present value of $300,000.00, as based on incorrect figures received from the annuity company, but where the settlement agreement made no representation as to the cost of the annuity to defendants, and the agreement did not set forth a present value for the settlement, but rather simply set forth the payments to be made by the defendants to decedent's wife and child, the defendants' allegation that the mistake as to the present value of the annuity was mutual was not evident in the settlement agreement. Goodwin v. Cashwell, 102 N.C. App. 275, 401 S.E.2d 840 (1991).

Motions to Set Aside Magistrate's Judgment. — Section 7A-228(a) provides for motions under subsection (b)(1) of this rule to set aside a magistrate's judgment. Provident Fin. Co. v. Locklear, 89 N.C. App. 535, 366 S.E.2d 599 (1988).

Where denial of Rule 60(b) motion was in the nature of an interlocutory order because plaintiff's voluntary dismissal resulted in there being no action pending, and defendants would not suffer the loss of a substantial right absent an appeal, in the court's discretion pursuant to Rules 2 and 21, the appeal was treated as a writ of certiorari. Troy v. Tucker, 126 N.C. App. 213, 484 S.E.2d 98 (1997).

Jurisdiction. — Equitable distribution action and ancillary claim for restitution held properly dismissed for lack of personal jurisdiction over defendant where evidence failed to show that defendant purposefully established numerous contacts with this state. Shamley v. Shamley, 117 N.C. App. 175, 455 S.E.2d 435 (1994).

B. Mistake, Inadvertence, Surprise and Excusable Neglect.

1. In General.

One Year Filing Period. — The requirement that the motion to set aside a judgment made pursuant to subsection (b)(1) of this rule be made within one year is mandatory. Huggins v. Hallmark Enters., Inc., 84 N.C. App. 15, 351 S.E.2d 779 (1987).

Final Adjudication. — Once the one-year period for refiling an action has elapsed and the action can no longer be resurrected, the voluntary dismissal acts as a final adjudication for purposes of section (b). Robinson v. General Mills Restaurants, Inc., 110 N.C. App. 633, 430 S.E.2d 696, cert. granted, 334 N.C. 623, 435 S.E.2d 340, 435 S.E.2d 341 (1993).

Relief Possible Without Motion. — [A]lthough this rule says that the court is to act "on motion," it does not deprive the court of the power to act in the interest of justice in an unusual case where its attention has been directed to the necessity for relief by means other than a motion. Carter v. Clowers, 102 N.C. App. 247, 401 S.E.2d 662 (1991).

Motions to Set Aside Magistrate's Judgment. — Section 7A-228(a) provides for motions under subsection (b)(1) of this rule to set aside a magistrate's judgment. Provident Fin. Co. v. Locklear, 89 N.C. App. 535, 366 S.E.2d 599 (1988).

Excusable Neglect Has Long Been Recognized. — Although the ground of excusable neglect is set forth in this rule, it has long been recognized in this jurisdiction and the Supreme Court has spoken on the subject many times. Rawleigh, Moses & Co. v. Capital City Furn., Inc., 9 N.C. App. 640, 177 S.E.2d 332 (1970).

What constitutes "excusable neglect" depends on what may be reasonably expected of a party in paying proper attention to his case under all the surrounding circumstances. Dishman v. Dishman, 37 N.C. App. 543, 246 S.E.2d 819 (1978).

While there is no clear dividing line as to what falls within the confines of excusable neglect as grounds for setting aside a judgment, what constitutes excusable neglect depends upon what, under all the surrounding circumstances, may be reasonably expected of a party in paying proper attention to his case. Higgins v. Michael Powell Bldrs., — N.C. App. —, 515 S.E.2d 17 (1999).

Excusable neglect is something which must have occurred at or before entry of judgment, and which caused it to be entered. Norton v. Sawyer, 30 N.C. App. 420, 227 S.E.2d 148, cert. denied, 291 N.C. 176, 229 S.E.2d 689 (1976); Higgins v. Michael Powell Bldrs., — N.C. App. —, 515 S.E.2d 17 (1999).

Deliberate or willful conduct is not "excusable neglect" within the meaning of this rule. Couch v. Private Diagnostic Clinic, — N.C. App. —, 515 S.E.2d 30 (1999).

Inadvertent conduct that does not demonstrate diligence is not "excusable neglect" under this rule. Couch v. Private Diagnostic Clinic, — N.C. App. —, 515 S.E.2d 30 (1999).

Mistakes of legal advice or mistakes of law are not "excusable neglect" under this rule. Couch v. Private Diagnostic Clinic, — N.C. App. —, 515 S.E.2d 30 (1999).

Findings of Fact. — Under section (b), the trial court is not required to make findings of fact unless requested to do so by a party. Nations v. Nations, 111 N.C. App. 211, 431 S.E.2d 852 (1993).

Although negligence and carelessness can support relief from judgment, it is only when such neglect or carelessness is excusable. Couch v. Private Diagnostic Clinic, — N.C. App. —, 515 S.E.2d 30 (1999).

Finding of Excusable Neglect Required to Set Aside Judgment. — Unless the judge finds that there was excusable neglect, and this finding is correct as a matter of law, he is not authorized to set aside the judgment. Doxol Gas of Angier, Inc. v. Barefoot, 10 N.C. App. 703, 179 S.E.2d 890 (1971).

Along with Finding of a Meritorious Defense. — Even in situations when the facts found justify a conclusion that the neglect was excusable, the court cannot set aside the judgment unless the defendant has a meritorious defense. U.S.I.F. Wynnewood Corp. v. Soderquist, 27 N.C. App. 611, 219 S.E.2d 787 (1975).

In order to vacate a judgment there must be both excusable neglect and a meritorious defense. Norton v. Sawyer, 30 N.C. App. 420, 227 S.E.2d 148, cert. denied, 291 N.C. 176, 229 S.E.2d 689 (1976); Menache v. Atlantic Coast Mgt. Corp., 43 N.C. App. 733, 260 S.E.2d 100 (1979), cert. denied, 299 N.C. 331, 265 S.E.2d 396 (1980); Chaparral Supply v. Bell, 76 N.C. App. 119, 331 S.E.2d 735 (1985); Thomas M. McInnis & Assocs. v. Hall, 76 N.C. App. 486, 333 S.E.2d 544 (1985), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 318 N.C. 421, 349 S.E.2d 552 (1986).

In order to have a judgment set aside, the movant must show excusable neglect and a meritorious defense. Howard v. Williams, 40 N.C. App. 575, 253 S.E.2d 571 (1979); Higgins v. Michael Powell Bldrs., — N.C. App. —, 515 S.E.2d 17 (1999).

It is the duty of the judge presiding at the hearing on the motion to make findings of fact and upon those facts to determine as a matter of law whether there is a showing of excusable neglect and of a meritorious defense. U.S.I.F. Wynnewood Corp. v. Soderquist, 27 N.C. App. 611, 219 S.E.2d 787 (1975).

Even if there is evidence from which a finding of excusable neglect can be made, case law requires a finding of a meritorious defense before the judgment may be set aside. Kirby v. Asheville Contracting Co., 11 N.C. App. 128, 180 S.E.2d 407, cert. denied, 278 N.C. 701, 181 S.E.2d 602 (1971); Davis v. Mitchell, 46 N.C. App. 272, 265 S.E.2d 248 (1980).

In proceeding under subsection (b)(1) of this rule the movant must show that he has a meritorious defense. Sides v. Reid, 35 N.C. App. 235, 241 S.E.2d 110 (1978).

In order for a party to be entitled to relief under section (b) of this rule, he must show excusable neglect and a meritorious defense. East Carolina Oil Transp., Inc. v. Petroleum Fuel & Term. Co., 82 N.C. App. 746, 348 S.E.2d 165 (1986), cert. denied, 318 N.C. 693, 351 S.E.2d 745 (1987); Thomas M. McInnis & Assocs. v. Hall, 318 N.C. 421, 349 S.E.2d 552 (1986).

A party moving to set aside a judgment under subdivision (b)(1) must show not only mistake, inadvertence, surprise or excusable neglect, but also the existence of a meritorious defense. Baker v. Baker, 115 N.C. App. 337, 444 S.E.2d 478 (1994).

As It Would Be Idle to Vacate a Judgment Where There Is No Real Defense. — Even when the facts found justify a conclusion that the neglect was excusable, the court cannot set aside the judgment unless there is a meritorious defense, for it would be idle to vacate a judgment where there is no real or substantial defense on the merits. Doxol Gas of Angier, Inc. v. Barefoot, 10 N.C. App. 703, 179 S.E.2d 890 (1971).

Error to Set Aside Judgment Absent Meritorious Defense. — Where defendants contended that judgment was properly set aside under subsection (b)(1) of this rule, for "excusable neglect," but defendants failed to show a meritorious defense, the setting aside of the default judgment was error. First Union Nat'l Bank v. Richards, 90 N.C. App. 650, 369 S.E.2d 620 (1988).

Court Determines Only Whether Meritorious Defense Pleaded. — As for the defense, the trial court does not hear the facts but determines only whether the movant has pleaded a meritorious defense. Chaparral Supply v. Bell, 76 N.C. App. 119, 331 S.E.2d 735 (1985).

Meritorious Defense Need Not Be Proved. — At the hearing on the motion to set aside a judgment it is not necessary that a meritorious defense be proved, but only that a prima facie defense exists. U.S.I.F. Wynnewood Corp. v. Soderquist, 27 N.C. App. 611, 219 S.E.2d 787 (1975).

To merely deny indebtedness and assert the presence of a meritorious defense is not sufficient. This is true even when the facts found justify a conclusion that the movant's neglect was excusable. The trial court cannot set aside the judgment unless there is a meritorious defense, a real or substantial defense on the merits. Chaparral Supply v. Bell, 76 N.C. App. 119, 331 S.E.2d 735 (1985).

A mere denial of indebtedness is not sufficient to constitute a meritorious defense. PYA/Monarch, Inc. v. Ray Lackey Enters., Inc., 96 N.C. App. 225, 385 S.E.2d 170 (1989).

A party served with a summons must give the matter the attention that a person of ordinary prudence would give to his important business. Failure to do so is not excusable neglect under subsection (b)(1) of this rule. East Carolina Oil Transp., Inc. v. Petroleum Fuel & Term. Co., 82 N.C. App. 746, 348 S.E.2d 165 (1986), cert. denied, 318 N.C. 693, 351 S.E.2d 745 (1987).

When a party is duly served with a summons, yet fails to give her defense the attention which a person of ordinary prudence usually gives her important business, there is no excusable neglect. In re Hall, 89 N.C. App. 685, 366 S.E.2d 882, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 835, 371 S.E.2d 277 (1988).

Absence of a sufficient showing of excusable neglect renders the question of meritorious defense immaterial. Texas W. Fin. Corp. v. Mann, 36 N.C. App. 346, 243 S.E.2d 904 (1978); Howard v. Williams, 40 N.C. App. 575, 253 S.E.2d 571 (1979).

A court need not make findings as to meritorious defense after a hearing on a motion to set aside a judgment for excusable neglect when it concludes that no excusable neglect was shown. Whether or not there was a meritorious defense is immaterial in such case. Dishman v. Dishman, 37 N.C. App. 543, 246 S.E.2d 819 (1978).

And Relief Will Not Be Granted Where Neglect Is Inexcusable. — The exceptional relief of this rule to set aside a judgment for mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect will not be granted where there is inexcusable neglect on the part of the litigant. Holcombe v. Bowman, 8 N.C. App. 673, 175 S.E.2d 362 (1970).

The exceptional relief provided by section (b) of this rule will not be granted where there is inexcusable neglect on the part of the litigant. City of Durham v. Keen, 40 N.C. App. 652, 253 S.E.2d 585, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 608, 257 S.E.2d 217 (1979).

Excusability of the neglect on which relief is granted is that of the litigant, not that of the attorney. Kirby v. Asheville Contracting Co., 11 N.C. App. 128, 180 S.E.2d 407, cert. denied, 278 N.C. 701, 181 S.E.2d 602 (1971); Norton v. Sawyer, 30 N.C. App. 420, 227 S.E.2d 148, cert. denied, 291 N.C. 176, 229 S.E.2d 689 (1976).

In considering granting relief from a court order finding the waiver of exemptions by failure to act, the court must focus on the litigant's excusable neglect, not the attorney's. The negligence of the attorney, in attending to his clients' case, although inexcusable, may still be cause for relief. In re Laughinghouse, 44 Bankr. 789 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1984).

Attorney neglect can constitute grounds for relief from judgment on grounds of excusable neglect if the client has been diligent in communicating with his attorney and is not otherwise at fault. Couch v. Private Diagnostic Clinic, — N.C. App. —, 515 S.E.2d 30 (1999).

Neglect of the attorney will not be imputed to the litigant unless he is guilty of inexcusable neglect. Kirby v. Asheville Contracting Co., 11 N.C. App. 128, 180 S.E.2d 407, cert. denied, 278 N.C. 701, 181 S.E.2d 602 (1971); Dishman v. Dishman, 37 N.C. App. 543, 246 S.E.2d 819 (1978).

Ordinarily a client is not charged with the inexcusable neglect of his attorney, provided the client himself has exercised proper care. Norton v. Sawyer, 30 N.C. App. 420, 227 S.E.2d 148, cert. denied, 291 N.C. 176, 229 S.E.2d 689 (1976).

Where a defendant engages an attorney and thereafter diligently confers with the attorney and generally tries to keep informed as to the proceedings, the negligence of the attorney will not be imputed to the defendant. Mayhew Elec. Co. v. Carras, 29 N.C. App. 105, 223 S.E.2d 536 (1976).

When the client employs counsel and communicates the merits of his case to such counsel, and the counsel is negligent, it is excusable on the part of the client, who may reasonably rely upon the counsel's doing what may be necessary on his behalf. Norton v. Sawyer, 30 N.C. App. 420, 227 S.E.2d 148, cert. denied, 291 N.C. 176, 229 S.E.2d 689 (1976).

A party may be relieved from a judgment rendered against him as a result of the negligence of his attorney if the litigant himself is not at fault. Wood v. Wood, 297 N.C. 1, 252 S.E.2d 799 (1979).

In cases allowing relief from judgments pursuant to subsection (b)(1) of this rule, the courts have pointed out that where the client shows some diligence, and there is no evidence of inexcusable neglect, relief will be granted. This is because the law does not demand that a litigant in effect be his own attorney, when he employs one to represent him. A nonlawyer is not supposed to know the technical steps of a lawsuit and cannot be expected to know what allegations must be pled to prove those facts which the nonlawyer client relates to his attorney. Furthermore, the court must keep in mind that exemption laws must be liberally construed in the debtor's favor. In re Laughinghouse, 44 Bankr. 789 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1984).

When Attorney's Neglect Imputed to Defendant. — Where a defendant engages an attorney and thereafter diligently confers with him and generally tries to keep informed as to the proceedings, the negligence of the attorney will not be imputed to defendant. If, however, the defendant turns a legal matter over to an attorney upon the latter's assurance that he will handle the matter, and then the defendant does nothing further about it, such neglect will be inexcusable. Kirby v. Asheville Contracting Co., 11 N.C. App. 128, 180 S.E.2d 407, cert. denied, 278 N.C. 701, 181 S.E.2d 602 (1971); Howard v. Williams, 40 N.C. App. 575, 253 S.E.2d 571 (1979).

Excusable Neglect Not Shown Despite Attorney's Absence. — Although their attorney's failure to appear for defendants at a summary judgment hearing would not be imputed to defendants, where the trial court properly determined that attorney's absence did not cause summary judgment to be entered against defendants, excusable neglect for purposes of setting aside the judgment did not exist. PYA/Monarch, Inc. v. Ray Lackey Enters., Inc., 96 N.C. App. 225, 385 S.E.2d 170 (1989).

Client May Not Abandon His Case on Employment of Counsel. — The mere employment of counsel is not enough. The client may not abandon his case on employment of counsel and when he has a case in court he must attend to it. Norton v. Sawyer, 30 N.C. App. 420, 227 S.E.2d 148, cert. denied, 291 N.C. 176, 229 S.E.2d 689 (1976).

Failure to Comply with Ordinary Prudent Man Standard Not Excusable. — Parties who have been duly served with summons are required to give their defense that attention which a man of ordinary prudence usually gives his important business, and failure to do so is not excusable. Doxol Gas of Angier, Inc. v. Barefoot, 10 N.C. App. 703, 179 S.E.2d 890 (1971); Kirby v. Asheville Contracting Co., 11 N.C. App. 128, 180 S.E.2d 407, cert. denied, 278 N.C. 701, 181 S.E.2d 602 (1971); Engines & Equip., Inc. v. Lipscomb, 15 N.C. App. 120, 189 S.E.2d 498 (1972); Gregg v. Steele, 24 N.C. App. 310, 210 S.E.2d 434 (1974); Boyd v. Marsh, 47 N.C. App. 491, 267 S.E.2d 394 (1980).

The standard of care required of the litigant in his participation in a lawsuit is that which a man of ordinary prudence usually bestows on his important business. Norton v. Sawyer, 30 N.C. App. 420, 227 S.E.2d 148, cert. denied, 291 N.C. 176, 229 S.E.2d 689 (1976).

The test of the negligence of the client or party is whether he has acted as a man of ordinary prudence while engaged in transacting important business. Norton v. Sawyer, 30 N.C. App. 420, 227 S.E.2d 148, cert. denied, 291 N.C. 176, 229 S.E.2d 689 (1976).

As to burden of proof as to negligence of party, see Norton v. Sawyer, 30 N.C. App. 420, 227 S.E.2d 148, cert. denied, 291 N.C. 176, 229 S.E.2d 689 (1976).

Findings of Fact on Excusable Neglect. — Upon hearing a motion to set aside a judgment on the ground of excusable neglect, the trial court should make findings of fact from which it can determine, as a matter of law, whether excusable neglect has been shown, although absent a request therefor it is not required to do so. Texas W. Fin. Corp. v. Mann, 36 N.C. App. 346, 243 S.E.2d 904 (1978).

What constitutes "excusable neglect" is a question of law, which is fully reviewable on appeal. However, the trial court's decision is final if there is competent evidence to support its findings and those findings support its conclusion. Whether the movant has shown excusable neglect must be determined by his actions at or before entry of judgment. In re Hall, 89 N.C. App. 685, 366 S.E.2d 882, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 835, 371 S.E.2d 277 (1988).

Better Practice Is to Make Findings as to Meritorious Defense Even Where Excusable Neglect Not Found. — Although it is not necessary that a court make findings as to meritorious defense when it finds adequate notice and concludes that there was no excusable neglect, it would be the better practice to make such findings, since the court may have its conclusion of no excusable neglect reversed, and would then have to make such findings on remand. Dishman v. Dishman, 37 N.C. App. 543, 246 S.E.2d 819 (1978).

Determination of whether excusable neglect, inadvertence, or surprise has been shown is a question of law, not a question of fact. Mason v. Mason, 22 N.C. App. 494, 206 S.E.2d 764 (1974).

Whether excusable neglect has been shown is a question of law, not a question of fact. Engines & Equip., Inc. v. Lipscomb, 15 N.C. App. 120, 189 S.E.2d 498 (1972); Texas W. Fin. Corp. v. Mann, 36 N.C. App. 346, 243 S.E.2d 904 (1978); Thomas M. McInnis & Assocs. v. Hall, 318 N.C. 421, 349 S.E.2d 552 (1986).

Upon the facts found the court determines, as a matter of law, whether or not they constitute excusable neglect. Engines & Equip., Inc. v. Lipscomb, 15 N.C. App. 120, 189 S.E.2d 498 (1972).

And Reviewable on Appeal. — Whether the facts found constitute excusable neglect or not is a matter of law and reviewable upon appeal. Doxol Gas of Angier, Inc. v. Barefoot, 10 N.C. App. 703, 179 S.E.2d 890 (1971); Texas W. Fin. Corp. v. Mann, 36 N.C. App. 346, 243 S.E.2d 904 (1978); Dishman v. Dishman, 37 N.C. App. 543, 246 S.E.2d 819 (1978); Higgins v. Michael Powell Bldrs., — N.C. App. —, 515 S.E.2d 17 (1999); Couch v. Private Diagnostic Clinic, — N.C. App. —, 515 S.E.2d 30 (1999).

Finality of Findings on Excusable Neglect, etc. — Conclusion as to whether excusable neglect, inadvertence, or surprise has been shown is final unless exception is made that there was no evidence to support the findings of fact or that there was a failure to find sufficient material facts to support the conclusion. Mason v. Mason, 22 N.C. App. 494, 206 S.E.2d 764 (1974).

Findings of fact by the judge on a motion to set aside a judgment on the grounds of excusable neglect are final unless excepted to or contentions are made that the evidence does not support the findings of fact. Menache v. Atlantic Coast Mgt. Corp., 43 N.C. App. 733, 260 S.E.2d 100 (1979), cert. denied, 299 N.C. 331, 265 S.E.2d 396 (1980); Chaparral Supply v. Bell, 76 N.C. App. 119, 331 S.E.2d 735 (1985).

The court's findings as to excusable neglect are generally conclusive on appeal if supported by any competent evidence, but findings made under a misapprehension of the law are not binding, and if the findings are insufficient to support the conclusion the order will be reversed. Dishman v. Dishman, 37 N.C. App. 543, 246 S.E.2d 819 (1978).

Whether the facts found constitute excusable neglect or not is a matter of law and reviewable on appeal when the trial court's findings are made under a misapprehension of the law, and when the findings are insufficient to support the trial court's conclusion of law. Oxford Plastics v. Goodson, 74 N.C. App. 256, 328 S.E.2d 7 (1985).

What constitutes "excusable neglect" is a question of law, which is fully reviewable on appeal. However, the trial court's decision is final if there is competent evidence to support its findings and those findings support its conclusion. Whether the movant has shown excusable neglect must be determined by his actions at or before entry of judgment. In re Hall, 89 N.C. App. 685, 366 S.E.2d 882, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 835, 371 S.E.2d 277 (1988).

The trial court's ruling on a motion for relief from judgment will not be disturbed on appeal unless the trial court has abused its discretion. Couch v. Private Diagnostic Clinic, — N.C. App. —, 515 S.E.2d 30 (1999).

Application of Section (b)(1) Standard to Entry of Default Improper. — A judgment by a superior court judge which determined the issue of liability in a personal injury action and ordered a trial on the issue of damages was only an entry of default rather than a default judgment, since it was not a final judgment. Therefore, the trial court erred in applying the "mistake, inadvertence, surprise or excusable neglect" standard of subsection (b)(1) of this rule rather than the "good cause shown" standard of § 1A-1, Rule 55(d) in ruling on defendant's motion to set aside its judgment. Pendley v. Ayers, 45 N.C. App. 692, 263 S.E.2d 833 (1980).

Attacking Consent Judgment on Grounds of Mutual Mistake. — When parties seek to attack a consent judgment on the basis of mutual mistake by way of a motion in the cause, subsection (b)(6) of this rule controls. In re Baity, 65 N.C. App. 364, 309 S.E.2d 515 (1983), cert. denied, 311 N.C. 401, 319 S.E.2d 266 (1984).

Remand for Hearing and Findings. — Where although a hearing was conducted, at which plaintiff's counsel was not present, the trial court made no findings of fact resolving the critical issues of whether plaintiff was entitled to relief from judgment on the grounds of "mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect" and whether plaintiff had a meritorious defense to defendants' counterclaim, the order denying plaintiff's motion would be vacated and the case would be remanded to the district court for a new hearing and ruling on all issues raised by the motion under section (b) of this rule. York v. Taylor, 79 N.C. App. 653, 339 S.E.2d 830 (1986).

Wife's failure to respond to complaint was excusable neglect, where she turned the papers over to her husband upon the assurance from him that the matter had been resolved and that there was no necessity to respond to the complaint. Thomas M. McInnis & Assocs. v. Hall, 76 N.C. App. 486, 333 S.E.2d 544 (1985), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 318 N.C. 421, 349 S.E.2d 552 (1986).

Workers' Compensation Cases. — A motion made under § 97-47 is not the same as a motion under this rule, and a motion by defendant before the Industrial Commission pursuant to § 97-47 would not afford the same relief as a motion filed pursuant to subsections (b)(2) and (b)(6) of this rule. Hill v. Hanes, 319 N.C. 167, 353 S.E.2d 392 (1987).

Waiver of Errors. — Errors of law alleged to have been committed by the trial court in entering the equitable distribution judgment were issues which could have been raised in the first appeal to the Court of Appeals; therefore, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying section (b) motion, as the record could support no other conclusion. Nations v. Nations, 111 N.C. App. 211, 431 S.E.2d 852 (1993).

Attorney Ignorance or Carelessness Not a Ground for Relief. — Although attorney error may qualify as a reason for granting relief from judgment under certain conditions, neither ignorance nor carelessness on the part of an attorney will provide grounds for such relief. Briley v. Farabow, 348 N.C. 537, 501 S.E.2d 649 (1998).

Attorney's Negligent Conduct Not Excusable Neglect. — An attorney's negligent conduct is not "excusable neglect" that would warrant relief from judgment, and in determining such, the court must look at the behavior of the attorney. Briley v. Farabow, 348 N.C. 537, 501 S.E.2d 649 (1998).

2. Relief Held Proper.

Plaintiff's failure to appear at a custody hearing was understandable and excusable neglect where, although plaintiff was served with process and notified of the hearing date, she relied on her attorney's advice to disregard the notice. It was the duty of the attorney to notify the court properly that he represented plaintiff and to determine whether the hearing would in fact be held on the date specified in the notice to plaintiff, since the case did not appear on the printed trial calendar but was handwritten onto the add-on calendar, and his failure to do so would not be imputed to plaintiff. Dishman v. Dishman, 37 N.C. App. 543, 246 S.E.2d 819 (1978).

Where trial court expressly found that defendant was diligent in communicating with his attorneys and providing them with information necessary to prepare an answer, and that the neglect of the attorneys in failing to file an answer within apt time was both excusable and was not to be imputed to defendant, these findings, coupled with the court's finding that defendant had a meritorious defense, fully supported the order setting aside a judgment of default for excusable neglect. Mayhew Elec. Co. v. Carras, 29 N.C. App. 105, 223 S.E.2d 536 (1976).

Failure to Maintain Agent for Service of Process. — Where defendant corporation failed for more than eight years to maintain a registered agent in North Carolina to receive service of process, and failed, for over eight years, to notify the Secretary of State that its address had changed, there existed competent evidence in the record of inexcusable neglect that led to the entry a default judgment which could not be set aside. Patridge v. Associated Cleaning Consultants & Servs., Inc., 108 N.C. App. 625, 424 S.E.2d 664 (1993).

Council's failure to move for an extension of time in which to produce and deliver transcript supported a finding of excusable neglect. Anuforo v. Dennie, 119 N.C. App. 359, 458 S.E.2d 523 (1995).

Wife's Reliance on Husband's Assurances. — In an action for nonpayment of an open account, excusable neglect was shown where defendant wife relied upon her husband's assurances that he would take care of the matter, and a meritorious defense was shown by the fact that the account ledger was in the name of her husband only, her name did not appear on the open account at all, and she had never received a demand for payment from plaintiff. Hickory White Trucks, Inc. v. Greene, 34 N.C. App. 279, 237 S.E.2d 862 (1977).

Wife's failure or neglect to file an answer in a suit against herself and her husband, upon assurances by her husband that he would be responsible for and assume defense of the action, was excusable neglect. Gregg v. Steele, 24 N.C. App. 310, 210 S.E.2d 434 (1974).

When counsel engaged for a case declines to go forward with it, the litigant is entitled both to reasonable notice of that fact and a reasonable opportunity to obtain substitute counsel. And where the record plainly showed that plaintiff had had neither, its failure to attend trial was excusable as a matter of law. Barclays Am. Corp. v. Howell, 81 N.C. App. 654, 345 S.E.2d 228 (1986).

Suit Filed Against Wife Where Judgment Against Husband Had Been Satisfied. — It was not unreasonable for wife to rely on her husband's assurance that the matter raised in the suit filed against her had been taken care of, where a prior action against her husband was based upon the same contract on which she was being sued, and her husband had satisfied the judgment entered against him in that action. Thomas M. McInnis & Assocs. v. Hall, 318 N.C. 421, 349 S.E.2d 552 (1986).

3. Relief Held Improper.

Where important information was requested from plaintiff by plaintiff's counsel, and plaintiff did not produce the information until well after the time for filing a response to the counterclaim and after hearing on summary judgment, plaintiff showed no excusable neglect and was not entitled to relief under subsection (b)(1) of this rule. East Carolina Oil Transp., Inc. v. Petroleum Fuel & Term. Co., 82 N.C. App. 746, 348 S.E.2d 165 (1986), cert. denied, 318 N.C. 693, 351 S.E.2d 745 (1987).

Where facts found in order setting aside default judgment did not constitute excusable neglect as a matter of law, and defendant failed to show a meritorious defense, and there was no finding that he had such a defense, such order was erroneous. Doxol Gas of Angier, Inc. v. Barefoot, 10 N.C. App. 703, 179 S.E.2d 890 (1971).

Failure to Monitor Corporate Affairs. — Trial judge committed no error in denying company's motion for relief under subsection (b)(1) of this rule, where company's own neglect and not any intervening negligence was responsible for its failure to appeal in the action. Not only did company fail to change registered agents in Maryland, it failed altogether to name one in this State as required by statute. Furthermore, had the company established some means to ensure that it was promptly informed of important business matters coming to registered agent's attention, the loss of summons and complaint in the mail would not have gone unnoticed, and it would have received motion for default judgment and notice of hearing. Anderson Trucking Serv., Inc. v. Key Way Transp., Inc., 94 N.C. App. 36, 379 S.E.2d 665 (1989).

Failure to Appear on Date Calendared for Trial. — Failure to retain counsel promptly or otherwise to maintain contact with the court, resulting in failure to appear on the date calendared for trial, should not be classified as excusable neglect of one's own lawsuit. Standard Equip. Co. v. Albertson, 35 N.C. App. 144, 240 S.E.2d 499 (1978).

Judgment would not be set aside because present counsel was not made aware of prior action until after summary judgment was rendered, as it was inconceivable that plaintiff was unaware of the prior action, since it was instituted in his behalf by counsel retained by him. Plaintiff's failure to apprise his counsel of the prior action was not the attention to litigation required. Lattimore v. Powell, 15 N.C. App. 522, 190 S.E.2d 288 (1972).

Dismissal of Party With Prejudice. — Counsel's decision in a medical malpractice case to dismiss one defendant with prejudice and proceed against a single defendant was part of counsel's trial strategy rather than excusable neglect; thus, relief under this rule was not available. Couch v. Private Diagnostic Clinic, — N.C. App. —, 515 S.E.2d 30 (1999).

Where inattention and neglect were attributed to the similarity in the title of a case to a former action, and to his preoccupation in the duties of his profession, this should not be held in law to constitute such excusable neglect as would relieve an intelligent and active businessman from the consequences of his inattention, as against diligent suitors. Rawleigh, Moses & Co. v. Capital City Furn., Inc., 9 N.C. App. 640, 177 S.E.2d 332 (1970).

Failure to file an answer in a paternity and child support action was not the result of excusable neglect where defendant had a ninth grade education and could read and write, had employed attorneys in other matters, and testified that he failed to file an answer because he did not believe he could be subject to orders of paternity and child support more than seven years after the child was born. Boyd v. Marsh, 47 N.C. App. 491, 267 S.E.2d 394 (1980).

Physical and Mental Strain. — An affidavit stating that as a result of certain duties defendant affiant was under tremendous physical and mental strain at the time he was served with a summons and complaint and for several weeks thereafter was insufficient to support an order setting aside a default judgment on the ground of excusable neglect. Rawleigh, Moses & Co. v. Capital City Furn., Inc., 9 N.C. App. 640, 177 S.E.2d 332 (1970).

Consumer Installment Contract Signed by Wife. — Following a deficiency judgment on a consumer installment contract, defendant wife showed excusable neglect by her reliance on her husband's verbal assurances that he would take care of the matter, but she failed to show a meritorious defense by admitting that she signed the consumer installment contract as a co-customer, thus acknowledging that she became bound thereby. Hickory White Trucks, Inc. v. Greene, 34 N.C. App. 279, 237 S.E.2d 862 (1977).

Failure to Attend Termination Proceedings. — Where respondent testified that she could have returned to North Carolina in time to attend proceeding to terminate her parental rights, but did not think about it because she was worrying about finding work, caring for her other child, and the termination of her relationship with baby's father, while her financial situation may have been a difficult one, under the circumstances, it did not constitute excusable neglect. In re Hall, 89 N.C. App. 685, 366 S.E.2d 882, cert. denied, 322 N.C. 835, 371 S.E.2d 277 (1988).

Where defendants should have been aware of the deficiency in their case before judgment was entered, relief for alleged mistake under subsection (b)(1) of this rule was not justified. Hagwood v. Odom, 88 N.C. App. 513, 364 S.E.2d 190 (1988).

Consent Order. — Motion under section (b)(6) of this rule should have been denied where defendant altered the agreement from what was agreed upon at trial, as each side apparently did during several redrafts. There was no finding or evidence which would lead to a conclusion that this was inadvertent; therefore, any mistake was not mutual, and a consent order incorporating the agreement could not be modified. Stevenson v. Stevenson, 100 N.C. App. 750, 398 S.E.2d 334 (1990).

A finding that plaintiff received a greater percentage of the marital assets pursuant to the consent judgment would not otherwise be sufficient to render the agreement invalid, and defendant could not invoke the broad language of subdivision (b)(6) of this rule simply to obtain relief to which she was otherwise not entitled. Thacker v. Thacker, 107 N.C. App. 479, 420 S.E.2d 479, cert. denied, 332 N.C. 672, 424 S.E.2d 407 (1992).

Subdivision (b)(6) of this rule is not a catch-all rule; in order to be entitled to relief thereunder, the movant must show that (1) extraordinary circumstances exist and that (2) justice demands such relief. Goodwin v. Cashwell, 102 N.C. App. 275, 401 S.E.2d 840 (1991).

Failure to Attend Proceedings After Insurance Carrier Refused to Defend. — Where defendants were well aware that their insurance carrier refused to represent them, and counsel for plaintiff waited three months before moving for default and also sent defendants a letter stating his intention to seek default if defendants continued to fail to respond, there was sufficient time to protect their interests; accordingly, trial court's refusal to grant defendants relief from judgment for excusable neglect was not an abuse of discretion. Hayes v. Evergo Tel. Co. Ltd., 100 N.C. App. 474, 397 S.E.2d 325 (1990).

An order reopening and enlarging a default judgment was erroneous because, by deciding to obtain a final judgment for the sum certain that was owed when the default judgment was entered, rather than to have the damages determined later by a trial, plaintiff waived any right it might have had to obtain judgment for a larger amount. Kimzay Winston-Salem, Inc. v. Jester, 103 N.C. App. 77, 404 S.E.2d 176, cert. denied, 329 N.C. 497, 407 S.E.2d 534 (1991).

Plaintiff's affidavits did not support the court's finding that judgment was entered as a result of mistake, inadvertence or excusable neglect, as the inadvertence, mistake, or neglect that they showed were of a kind that the law does not excuse. All the affidavits showed, when sifted down, was that in signing the court papers which enabled default judgment to be entered plaintiff's treasurer and counsel were unaware that they had sued for future rents — a matter that they could have known through the exercise of due diligence and reasonable care, and that they were required to know by § 1A-1, Rule 11 of our civil procedure rules. Kimzay Winston-Salem, Inc. v. Jester, 103 N.C. App. 77, 404 S.E.2d 176, cert. denied, 329 N.C. 497, 407 S.E.2d 534 (1991).

Defendant's Failure to Protect Interests. — The defendant failed to show excusable neglect necessary to vacate a default judgment in a wrongful death action, where both the defendant's insurer's refusal to defend and the defendant's attorney's failure to forward a copy of the plaintiff's amended complaint to the insurer or to file a responsive pleading constituted inexcusable neglect. Estate of Teel v. Darby, 129 N.C. App. 604, 500 S.E.2d 759 (1998).

Case Unsupported by Evidence. — Subsection (b) afforded no relief from summary judgment for a medical malpractice plaintiff, where the plaintiff would have had a sufficient forecast of evidence to defeat the motion, but the plaintiff's affidavit presented bare allegations unsupported by evidence. Briley v. Farabow, 348 N.C. 537, 501 S.E.2d 649 (1998).

C. Newly Discovered Evidence.

Criteria in Subsection (b)(2) Must Be Met. — A motion based on newly discovered evidence must meet the criteria established in subsection (b)(2) of this rule. Cole v. Cole, 90 N.C. App. 724, 370 S.E.2d 272, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 475, 373 S.E.2d 862 (1988).

Fathering of Child After First Trial Held Not Newly Discovered Evidence. — Evidence that approximately one year after first trial, in which the Court of Appeals reversed the trial court's finding that defendant was the father of couple's third child, based on evidence that he had undergone a vasectomy and was infertile, defendant had fathered a daughter with his new wife, did not qualify as "newly discovered evidence" within the meaning of subsection (b)(2) of this rule, because the evidence did not exist at the time of the first trial. Cole v. Cole, 90 N.C. App. 724, 370 S.E.2d 272, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 475, 373 S.E.2d 862 (1988).

Failure to Produce Evidence Earlier Must Not Be Due to Lack of Diligence. — For relief to be granted under subsection (b)(2) of this rule the failure to produce evidence at a hearing under § 1A-1, Rule 12(b) must not have been caused by the moving party's lack of due diligence. The evidence must be such as was not and could not by the exercise of diligence have been discovered in time to present in the original proceeding. Harris v. Family Medical Ctr., 38 N.C. App. 716, 248 S.E.2d 768 (1978).

The trial court did not abuse its discretion in ordering a new trial pursuant to subsection (b)(2) of this rule where the plaintiff used due diligence in bringing to the court's attention the merits of its motion and the plaintiff could not have otherwise learned of the recanted evidence and perjured testimony of defendant's witness which formed the basis of the motion but for the subsequent change by said witness. Conrad Indus., Inc. v. Sonderegger, 69 N.C. App. 159, 316 S.E.2d 327, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 752, 321 S.E.2d 129 (1984).

Prior Action Is Not Newly Discovered Evidence. — The existence of a prior action is not newly discovered evidence which by due diligence could not have been discovered. To say plaintiff was unaware of an action instituted by him would be ludicrous. Lattimore v. Powell, 15 N.C. App. 522, 190 S.E.2d 288 (1972).

Results of a new physical examination were not "newly discovered evidence" which would allow reopening a judgment and granting a new trial under section (b) of this rule. Grupen v. Thomasville Furn. Indus., 28 N.C. App. 119, 220 S.E.2d 201 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 297, 222 S.E.2d 696 (1976).

D. Fraud, Misrepresentation and Misconduct of Adverse Party.

Time for Bringing Attack on Judgment. — An attack against judgment on the basis of fraud must be brought within one year after judgment. Caswell Realty Assocs. v. Andrews Co., 121 N.C. App. 483, 466 S.E.2d 310 (1996), review denied, 343 N.C. 304, 471 S.E.2d 68 (1996).

Intrinsic or Extrinsic Nature of Fraud Irrelevant to Motion Under Subsection (b)(3). — Under subsection (b)(3) of this rule, where relief is sought from final judgment by motion it is irrelevant whether the fraud alleged is "intrinsic" or "extrinsic." Textile Fabricators, Inc. v. C.R.C. Indus., Inc., 43 N.C. App. 530, 259 S.E.2d 570 (1979).

But Intrinsic Fraud Can Only Be Subject to Subsection (b)(3) Motion. — While this rule does not limit the power of a court to entertain an independent action to set aside a judgment for fraud, whenever the alleged fraud is intrinsic it can only be the subject of a motion under subsection (b)(3) of this rule, and it is barred after one year following the judgment. Textile Fabricators, Inc. v. C.R.C. Indus., Inc., 43 N.C. App. 530, 259 S.E.2d 570 (1979).

Only Extrinsic Fraud Is Defense to Action on Foreign Judgment. — Although extrinsic fraud is a defense to an action to recover on a foreign judgment, intrinsic fraud is not. Florida Nat'l Bank v. Satterfield, 90 N.C. App. 105, 367 S.E.2d 358 (1988).

Allegations that defendant's attorney in a foreign state had a conflict of interest and failed to protect his interests were claims of intrinsic fraud and had to be directly attacked in that state. Florida Nat'l Bank v. Satterfield, 90 N.C. App. 105, 367 S.E.2d 358 (1988).

Where decedent's nephew was not notified or made a party to adoption nullification proceeding initiated by daughter of decedent's former wife, the nephew was fully empowered to bring an independent action to vacate the clerk's order. Flinn v. Laughinghouse, 68 N.C. App. 476, 315 S.E.2d 72, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 311 N.C. 755, 321 S.E.2d 132 (1984).

Failure to Serve Amended Complaint on Defendant. — A default judgment was not void as to the defendant, where the defendant argued that the plaintiff in a wrongful death action never served its amended complaint on defendant, but the defendant's attorney admitted via affidavit that the defendant was served with a copy of the amended complaint and that the defendant forwarded a copy of the amended complaint to the attorney. Estate of Teel v. Darby, 129 N.C. App. 604, 500 S.E.2d 759 (1998).

E. Other Reasons Justifying Relief under Subdivision (b)(6).

Subdivision (b)(6) of this section is equitable in nature and authorizes the trial judge to exercise his discretion in granting or withholding the relief sought. State ex rel. Envtl. Mgt. Comm'n v. House of Raeford Farms, Inc., 101 N.C. App. 433, 400 S.E.2d 107 (1991), discretionary review denied, 328 N.C. 576, 403 S.E.2d 521 (1991).

Subdivision (b)(6) serves as a "grand reservoir of equitable power" by which a court may grant relief from a judgment whenever extraordinary circumstances exist and there is a showing that justice demands it. Dollar v. Tapp, 103 N.C. App. 162, 404 S.E.2d 482 (1991).

Subdivision (b)(6) has been referred to as a "vast reservoir of equitable power." Lumsden v. Lawing, 117 N.C. App. 514, 451 S.E.2d 659 (1995).

Subdivision (b)(6) Not a "Catch-All" Rule. — While subsection (b)(6) of this rule has been described as a grand reservoir of equitable power to do justice in a particular case, it should not be a "catch-all" rule. Standard Equip. Co. v. Albertson, 35 N.C. App. 144, 240 S.E.2d 499 (1978); Vaglio v. Town & Campus Int'l, Inc., 71 N.C. App. 250, 322 S.E.2d 3 (1984).

Although subsection (b)(6) of this rule has often been termed "a vast reservoir of equitable power," a court cannot set aside a judgment pursuant to this rule without a showing (1) that extraordinary circumstances exist, and (2) that justice demands relief. Thacker v. Thacker, 107 N.C. App. 479, 420 S.E.2d 479, cert. denied, 332 N.C. 672, 424 S.E.2d 407 (1992).

Movant Must Proceed Under Proper Subsection. — Subsection (b)(6) of this rule cannot be the basis for a motion to set aside a judgment if the facts supporting it are facts which more appropriately would support one of the five preceding subsections; a movant may not be allowed to circumvent the requirements of subsections (b)(1) through (b)(5) of this rule by designating their motion as one made under subsection (b)(6) of this rule. Therefore, where appellants' arguments were based upon circumstances which would allow relief, if at all, under subsection (b)(1) and not subsection (b)(6), and they did not bring their motions within one year of entry of judgment, their motions were not timely filed and denial was proper. Bruton v. Sea Captain Properties, Inc., 96 N.C. App. 485, 386 S.E.2d 58 (1989).

Two-Pronged Test. — The setting aside of a judgment pursuant to subsection (b)(6) of this rule should only take place where (i) extraordinary circumstances exist and (ii) there is a showing that justice demands it. This test is two-pronged, and relief should be forthcoming only where both requisites exist. In addition to these requirements, the movant must also show that he has a meritorious defense. State ex rel. Envtl. Mgt. Comm'n v. House of Raeford Farms, Inc., 101 N.C. App. 433, 400 S.E.2d 107 (1991), discretionary review denied, 328 N.C. 576, 403 S.E.2d 521 (1991).

A judgment may be valid, irregular, erroneous, or void. An erroneous judgment is one rendered according to the course and practice of the court but contrary to the law or upon a mistaken view of the law. A void judgment has semblance of a valid judgment, but lacks some essential element such as jurisdiction or service of process. Thus, a judgment is not void if the court had jurisdiction over the parties and the subject matter and had authority to render the judgment entered. Windham Distrib. Co. v. Davis, 72 N.C. App. 179, 323 S.E.2d 506 (1984), cert. denied, 313 N.C. 613, 330 S.E.2d 617 (1985).

A judgment or order rendered without an essential element, such as jurisdiction or proper service of process, is void. County of Wayne ex rel. Williams v. Whitley, 72 N.C. App. 155, 323 S.E.2d 458 (1984).

Failure to Obtain Personal Jurisdiction Over Defendant. — Motion to set aside the consent judgment, although made more than six years after its entry, was based on the argument that the trial court did not have personal jurisdiction over defendant. Because a judgment entered without personal jurisdiction over a party is void, defendant's motion was not untimely because it was undisputed that defendant neither accepted service of process nor was served with process. Nye, Mitchell, Javis & Bugg v. Oates, 109 N.C. App. 289, 426 S.E.2d 291 (1993).

Waiver of Objection to Personal Jurisdiction. — Defendants were not entitled to relief from the judgment pursuant to this rule as any objection to personal jurisdiction was waived by defendant appearing at the hearing and consenting to the substitution of the administrator as party defendant and the subsequent entry of judgment against the defendants. Farm Credit Bank v. Edwards, 121 N.C. App. 72, 464 S.E.2d 305 (1995).

Where the record supported the trial court's finding that there was no evidence to show that plaintiff's attorney had actual knowledge of an address where defendant could be served, substituted service on the Secretary of State was effective, and trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion to set aside the judgment on that ground pursuant to subdivision (b)(4) of this rule. Patridge v. Associated Cleaning Consultants & Servs., Inc., 108 N.C. App. 625, 424 S.E.2d 664 (1993).

The lack of notice to interested party of the original incompetency proceeding would clearly justify granting relief pursuant to subsection (b)(6). In re Ward, 337 N.C. 443, 446 S.E.2d 40 (1994).

Irregular, But Not Erroneous, Judgments Within Purview of Subsection (b)(6). — Under the broad power of subsection (b)(6) of this rule an erroneous judgment cannot be attacked, but irregular judgments, rendered contrary to the cause and practice of the court, come within its purview. Taylor v. Triangle Porsche-Audi, Inc., 27 N.C. App. 711, 220

S.E.2d 806 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 619, 223 S.E.2d 396 (1976).

Procedure for setting aside an irregular judgment is now found in subsection (b)(6) of this rule. City of Salisbury v. Kirk Realty Co., 48 N.C. App. 427, 268 S.E.2d 873 (1980).

Section (b)(6) of this rule is equitable in nature and authorizes the trial judge to exercise his discretion in granting or withholding the relief sought. Kennedy v. Starr, 62 N.C. App. 182, 302 S.E.2d 497, cert. denied, 309 N.C. App. 321, 307 S.E.2d 164 (1983); Huggins v. Hallmark Enters., Inc., 84 N.C. App. 15, 351 S.E.2d 779 (1987); Howell v. Howell, 321 N.C. 87, 361 S.E.2d 585 (1987).

Court Has Power under Subsection (b)(6) to Vacate Judgments to Accomplish Justice. — The broad language of subsection (b)(6) of this rule gives the court ample power to vacate judgments whenever such action is appropriate to accomplish justice. Brady v. Town of Chapel Hill, 277 N.C. 720, 178 S.E.2d 446 (1971); Norton v. Sawyer, 30 N.C. App. 420, 227 S.E.2d 148, cert. denied, 291 N.C. 176, 229 S.E.2d 689 (1976); Thomas v. Thomas, 43 N.C. App. 638, 260 S.E.2d 163 (1979).

Subsection (b)(6) of this rule empowers the court to set aside or modify a final judgment, order or proceeding whenever such action is necessary to do justice under the circumstances. Howell v. Howell, 321 N.C. 87, 361 S.E.2d 585 (1987).

Where Competent Evidence Shows That Justice Requires It. — While subsection (b)(6) of this rule vests power in courts adequate to enable them to vacate judgments whenever such action is appropriate to accomplish justice, a judge cannot do so without a showing based on competent evidence that justice requires it. Norton v. Sawyer, 30 N.C. App. 420, 227 S.E.2d 148, cert. denied, 291 N.C. 176, 229 S.E.2d 689 (1976).

Notwithstanding the broad equitable power of a trial court to vacate judgments pursuant to subsection (b)(6) of this rule, it should not grant such relief absent a showing based on competent evidence that justice requires it. Sides v. Reid, 35 N.C. App. 235, 241 S.E.2d 110 (1978).

Courts have the power to vacate judgments when such is appropriate, yet they should not do so under subsection (b)(6) of this rule except in extraordinary circumstances and after a showing that justice demands it. Vaglio v. Town & Campus Int'l, Inc., 71 N.C. App. 250, 322 S.E.2d 3 (1984).

The expansive test by which relief can be given under subsection (b)(6) of this rule is whether (1) extraordinary circumstances exist, and (2) there is a showing that justice demands it. Oxford Plastics v. Goodson, 74 N.C. App. 256, 328 S.E.2d 7 (1985).

Test for Setting Aside Judgment Pursuant to Subsection (b)(6). — The setting aside of a judgment pursuant to subsection (b)(6) of this rule should only take place where (1) extraordinary circumstances exist, and (2) there is a showing that justice demands it. This test is two-pronged, and relief should be forthcoming only where both requisites exist. Baylor v. Brown, 46 N.C. App. 664, 266 S.E.2d 9 (1980); Huggins v. Hallmark Enters., Inc., 84 N.C. App. 15, 351 S.E.2d 779 (1987).

Courts have the power to vacate judgments when such action is appropriate, yet they should not do so under subsection (b)(6) of this rule except in extraordinary circumstances and after a showing that justice demands it. Standard Equip. Co. v. Albertson, 35 N.C. App. 144, 240 S.E.2d 499 (1978).

The test for whether a judgment, order or proceeding should be modified or set aside under subsection (b)(6) of this rule is two pronged: (1) extraordinary circumstances must exist, and (2) there must be a showing that justice demands that relief be granted. Howell v. Howell, 321 N.C. 87, 361 S.E.2d 585 (1987).

Meritorious Defense Required Under Subsection (b)(6). — In proceeding under subsection (b)(6) of this rule the movant must show that he has a meritorious defense. Sides v. Reid, 35 N.C. App. 235, 241 S.E.2d 110 (1978).

To set aside a judgment for irregularity, it is necessary to make a motion in the cause before the court which rendered the judgment, with notice to the other party. The objection cannot be made by an appeal, an independent action, or collateral attack. The time for such motion is not limited to one year after the judgment is rendered, but it must be made by the party affected and within a reasonable time, in order to show that the movant has been diligent to protect his rights. The application should also show that the judgment affects injuriously the rights of the party and that he has a meritorious defense; otherwise, it would be useless to set aside the judgment. City of Salisbury v. Kirk Realty Co., 48 N.C. App. 427, 268 S.E.2d 873 (1980).

Motion to Amend Divorce Judgment Not Proper Under Subsection (b)(6). — Defendant's motion to amend divorce judgment to permit him to claim the two children of the parties as dependents on his State and federal tax returns was not properly made pursuant to subsection (b)(6) of this rule, since defendant sought to amend the judgment rather than to be relieved of it, and his motion should have been made pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 59(e). Coleman v. Arnette, 48 N.C. App. 733, 269 S.E.2d 755 (1980).

Motion to Amend Consent Judgment Not Allowed. — Subsection (b)(6) of this rule permits motions for relief from judgments for "[a]ny other reason justifying relief from the operation of the judgment." However, where a request for relief pursuant to subsection (b)(6) of this rule was in reality a motion to amend the Consent Judgment and that result could not be achieved by a motion under subsection (b)(6). State ex rel. Envtl. Mgt. Comm'n v. House of Raeford Farms, Inc., 101 N.C. App. 433, 400 S.E.2d 107 (1991), discretionary review denied, 328 N.C. 576, 403 S.E.2d 521 (1991).

The interest of deciding cases on the merits cannot outweigh all other considerations and entitle plaintiff to extraordinary relief under subsection (b)(6) of this rule. Standard Equip. Co. v. Albertson, 35 N.C. App. 144, 240 S.E.2d 499 (1978).

Motions under subsection (b)(6) of this rule are not to be used as a substitute for appeal, and an erroneous judgment cannot be attacked under this subsection. Waters v. Qualified Personnel, Inc., 32 N.C. App. 548, 233 S.E.2d 76 (1977), rev'd on other grounds, 294 N.C. 200, 240 S.E.2d 338 (1978).

Failure to Perfect Appeal. — The Superior Court's appropriate dismissal of defendant's appeal on the grounds that defendant failed to perfect it barred any discussion of the merits of the exchange rate used in the judgment; accordingly, the trial court properly denied defendant's motion under subdivision (b)(6) of this rule. Lang v. Lang, 108 N.C. App. 440, 424 S.E.2d 190 (1993).

Attacking Consent Judgment on Grounds of Mutual Mistake. — When parties seek to attack a consent judgment on the basis of mutual mistake by way of a motion in the cause, section (b)(6) of this rule controls. In re Baity, 65 N.C. App. 364, 309 S.E.2d 515 (1983), cert. denied, 311 N.C. 401, 319 S.E.2d 266 (1984).

Failure to Agree to Order's Modification. — Where order set aside equitable distribution award because the parties could not agree as to a modification of the order, and plaintiff failed to preserve his right of appeal while such modification was being considered, the parties' failure to agree as to the order's modification was not a justifiable reason for setting the order aside; setting the order aside because plaintiff lost his right to appeal through his own oversight would amount to using subsection (b)(6) of this rule as a substitute for appeal, which the law does not permit. Draughon v. Draughon, 94 N.C. App. 597, 380 S.E.2d 547 (1989).

Court May Not Nullify Effect of Judgment While Leaving Judgment Intact. — Neither subsection (b)(6) of this rule nor any other provision of law authorizes a court to nullify or avoid one or more of the legal effects of a valid judgment while leaving the judgment itself intact. Howell v. Howell, 321 N.C. 87, 361 S.E.2d 585 (1987).

Trial court erred in granting wife's motion to be "relieved of the effect" of a divorce judgment solely to the extent that the judgment barred her claim for equitable distribution. Howell v. Howell, 321 N.C. 87, 361 S.E.2d 585 (1987).

The Industrial Commission has inherent power analogous to that conferred on courts by subsection (b)(6), of this rule in the exercise of supervision over its own judgments to set aside a former judgment when the paramount interest in achieving a just and proper determination of a workers' compensation claim requires it. Hogan v. Cone Mills Corp., 315 N.C. 127, 337 S.E.2d 477 (1985).

Plaintiffs who because of procedural blunders made by some of their attorneys had never had a full hearing on the merits of any of their claims, and whose avenues of appeal were cut off through gross neglect by their attorneys, showed a basis for relief under subsections (b)(5) and (b)(6) of this rule, and the trial court abused its discretion in denying plaintiffs' motion to modify a prior court order which enjoined further suits by plaintiffs against defendants as vexatious as a matter of law. Poston v. Morgan, 83 N.C. App. 295, 350 S.E.2d 108 (1986).

Four Year Old Consent Order. — Trial court did not abuse its discretion in refusing to set aside a consent order that plaintiff had signed over four years ago on grounds that it was void because of plaintiff's lack of voluntary consent thereto. Prescott v. Prescott, 83 N.C. App. 254, 350 S.E.2d 116 (1986).

Failure to Give Notice or Opportunity to Be Heard. — Defendant, who defaulted on original complaint which alleged that she was a resident of this State, was entitled to notice of plaintiff's subsequent motion to declare that none of her property was exempt by virtue of non-residency, and an opportunity to contest the factual allegations as to her non-residency. Where she was given neither notice nor an opportunity to be heard, in violation of statutory and constitutional provisions, the order declaring that her property was not exempt was invalid, and she was entitled to relief therefrom pursuant to subsection (b)(4) of this rule. First Union Nat'l Bank v. Rolfe, 83 N.C. App. 625, 351 S.E.2d 117 (1986).

Lost Mail. — Trial judge did not abuse his discretion in refusing to grant equitable relief from a judgment under subsection (b)(6) of this rule, since loss of summons and complaint in the mail was not an extraordinary circumstance; the evidence suggested that corporation exhibited a longstanding pattern of irresponsibility and disregard of legal matters and failed to respond to two communications about a pending suit, only one of which allegedly was lost in the mail. Anderson Trucking Serv., Inc. v. Key Way Transp., Inc., 94 N.C. App. 36, 379 S.E.2d 665 (1989).

No Notice of Calendaring for Trial. — Judge erred in denying defendants' motion to obtain relief from judgment pursuant to their motion under this rule where defendants had no notice that the case which they had appealed from the magistrate to the district court had been calendared for trial; since the judge found as a fact that the case had been duly calendared and that neither plaintiff nor defendants appeared and since the only evidence regarding the matter of whether defendants had received notice was in the negative, it was the duty of the trial judge to find as a fact that defendants did not have notice and to allow defendants' motion entering an order vacating the judgment. Windley v. Dockery, 95 N.C. App. 771, 383 S.E.2d 682 (1989).

Unilateral Reduction of Verdict. — In a breach of contract case in which the jury awarded judgment against one defendant in the amount of $2,426.10 and judgment in the amount of $2,426.10 against the other defendant, the total recovery being the precise amount of the prayer for relief, $4,852.20, it was an abuse of discretion for the trial court, on its own motion, to enter a judgment jointly and severally against the defendants in the total sum of $2,426.10, thereby reducing the verdict by 50 percent. Jorgensen v. Seeman, 95 N.C. App. 767, 383 S.E.2d 702 (1989).

Where defendant failed to appeal from judgment against it in favor of subcontractor and failed to move for a new trial under § 1A-1, Rule 59, it was not entitled to relief from judgment under section (b) of this rule on grounds that it had already paid contractor all that was due under contract. Concrete Supply Co. v. Ramseur Baptist Church, 95 N.C. App. 658, 383 S.E.2d 222 (1989).

After foreclosure, where property was owned and possessed by independent third persons, it was impossible for plaintiffs to satisfy the requirement of reconveyance; this change in circumstances is a good example of a situation which would justify relief under subdivision (b)(6). Lumsden v. Lawing, 117 N.C. App. 514, 451 S.E.2d 659 (1995).

F. Void Judgments.

Four Year Old Consent Order. — Trial court did not abuse its discretion in refusing to set aside a consent order that plaintiff had signed over four years ago on grounds that it was void because of plaintiff's lack of voluntary consent thereto. Prescott v. Prescott, 83 N.C. App. 254, 350 S.E.2d 116 (1986).

A void judgment binds no one, and it is immaterial whether the judgment was or was not entered by consent. Allred v. Tucci, 85 N.C. App. 138, 354 S.E.2d 291, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 166, 358 S.E.2d 47 (1987).

A judgment is void only when the issuing court has no jurisdiction over the parties or subject matter in question or has no authority to render the judgment entered. Burton v. Blanton, 107 N.C. App. 615, 421 S.E.2d 381 (1992).

A judgment is not void if the court has jurisdiction over the parties and the subject matter and had the authority to render the judgment entered. Sharp v. Sharp, 84 N.C. App. 128, 351 S.E.2d 799 (1987).

A judgment, if proper on its face, is not void. Burton v. Blanton, 107 N.C. App. 615, 421 S.E.2d 381 (1992).

Failure to Give Notice or Opportunity to Be Heard. — Defendant, who defaulted on original complaint which alleged that she was a resident of this state, was entitled to notice of plaintiff's subsequent motion to declare that none of her property was exempt by virtue of non-residency, and an opportunity to contest the factual allegations as to her non-residency. Where she was given neither notice nor an opportunity to be heard, in violation of statutory and constitutional provisions, the order declaring that her property was not exempt was invalid, and she was entitled to relief therefrom pursuant to subsection (b)(4) of this rule. First Union Nat'l Bank v. Rolfe, 83 N.C. App. 625, 351 S.E.2d 117 (1986).

Time for Attacking Void Judgment. — Although section (b) of this rule contains the requirement that all motions made pursuant thereto be made "within a reasonable time," the requirement is not enforceable with respect to motions made pursuant to subsection (b)(4) of this rule, because a void judgment is a legal nullity which may be attacked at any time. Allred v. Tucci, 85 N.C. App. 138, 354 S.E.2d 291, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 166, 358 S.E.2d 47 (1987); In re Finnican, 104 N.C. App. 157, 408 S.E.2d 742 (1991), cert. denied, 330 N.C. 612, 413 S.E.2d 800 (1992).

Relief from Void Divorce Following Death of Spouse. — A proceeding to set aside an invalid divorce decree is not barred by the death of one of the spouses where property rights are involved. Allred v. Tucci, 85 N.C. App. 138, 354 S.E.2d 291, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 166, 358 S.E.2d 47 (1987).

Husband's motion for relief from December 16, 1985, judgment of divorce from bed and board, filed on May 20, 1986, two months after wife's death, was timely, and was properly granted, as the judgment of divorce, although entered with the consent of the parties, contained no finding of material facts and was therefore void. Allred v. Tucci, 85 N.C. App. 138, 354 S.E.2d 291, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 166, 358 S.E.2d 47 (1987).

Order for Husband to Sign Standard Separation Agreement Held Void. — Court erred in denying husband's motion to be relieved from "Memorandum of Judgment/Order" requiring husband to sign "a standard separation agreement," since the provision in the "Memorandum of Judgment/Order" requiring husband to sign such agreement was void for vagueness, as the law does not recognize that any particular form is a "standard separation agreement." Morrow v. Morrow, 94 N.C. App. 187, 379 S.E.2d 705 (1989), cert. denied, 326 N.C. 365, 389 S.E.2d 816 (1990).

Lack of In Personam Jurisdiction. — Judgment entered against defendant over which the court does not have in personam jurisdiction is void and subject to being set aside pursuant to subsection (b)(4) of this rule. Hayes v. Evergo Tel. Co., 100 N.C. App. 474, 397 S.E.2d 325 (1990).

Motion Under Subsection (b)(4) Held Inappropriate. — Where the court had jurisdiction and authority to enter a contempt order, the order was not void, and therefore, a subsection (b)(4) motion was an inappropriate means to rectify the alleged error of failing to appoint counsel for defendant. Vaughn v. Vaughn, 99 N.C. App. 574, 393 S.E.2d 567 (1990).

IV. DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW.

A. In General.

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former § 1-220.

Former § 1-220 was not applicable to proceedings before the Industrial Commission, because the Industrial Commission is not a court of general jurisdiction. It has no jurisdiction except that conferred upon it by statute. Hartsell v. Pickett Cotton Mills, 4 N.C. App. 67, 165 S.E.2d 792 (1969).

No Application to Irregular Verdicts. — Where an irregular verdict was rendered by the court, the same could not be set aside or altered under former statute. Becton v. Dunn, 137 N.C. 559, 50 S.E. 289 (1905); Gough v. Bell, 180 N.C. 268, 104 S.E. 535 (1920); Hood v. Stewart, 209 N.C. 424, 184 S.E. 36 (1936).

Judgment or Order Not to Be Set Aside on Motion of Stranger. — The remedy provided is restricted to the parties aggrieved by the judgment or order sought to be set aside, and the superior court had no power to set aside a judgment or order once rendered upon motion of a stranger to the cause. Smith v. City of New Bern, 73 N.C. 303 (1875); Edwards v. Phillips, 91 N.C. 355 (1884); In re Hood, 208 N.C. 509, 181 S.E. 621 (1935).

On application for relief no distinction is made between adult and infant parties, provided the latter are represented according to the requirements of the law and the practice of the court. Mauney v. Gidney, 88 N.C. 200 (1883).

Modification by One Judge of Judgment Rendered by Another. — Where on notice and showing that there was on the part of the complainant a mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect by which he was injured, the judgment rendered against him may be modified by a judge other than the one by whom it was rendered. Johnson v. Marcom, 121 N.C. 83, 28 S.E. 58 (1897).

A judgment may be set aside in whole or in part; the court is invested with full legal discretion over the matter. Geer v. Reams, 88 N.C. 197 (1883).

Relief Discretionary with Judge. — The application for relief is addressed to the discretion of the judge presiding. Bank of Statesville v. Foote, 77 N.C. 131 (1877).

The setting aside of a judgment is in the sound legal discretion of the trial judge. Dunn v. Jones, 195 N.C. 354, 142 S.E. 320 (1928).

A rehearing is not a matter of right, but rests in the sound discretion of the court. Williams v. Alexander, 70 N.C. 665 (1874).

It is discretionary with a judge whether he will relieve a party against a judgment taken against him through his "inadvertence, mistake, surprise, or excusable neglect." If a judge refuses to entertain a motion to set aside a judgment for any of the enumerated causes because he thinks he has no power to grant it, then there is error, as he has failed to exercise the discretion conferred on him by law. Hudgins v. White, 65 N.C. 393 (1871).

The surprise contemplated is some condition or situation in which a party to a cause is unexpectedly placed to his injury, without any fault or negligence of his own, which ordinary prudence could not have guarded against. Townsend v. Carolina Coach Co., 231 N.C. 81, 56 S.E.2d 39 (1949).

Withdrawal of defendant's attorney by leave of court when the case is called for trial constitutes "surprise." Perkins v. Sykes, 233 N.C. 147, 63 S.E.2d 133 (1951).

The court's permitting counsel for defendant to withdraw from a case upon the calling of the case for trial, in the absence of notice to defendant, constitutes "surprise," but does not entitle defendant to have the judgment set aside in the absence of a showing of a meritorious defense. Roediger v. Sapos, 217 N.C. 95, 6 S.E.2d 801 (1940).

Relief Afforded from Mistakes of Fact and Not of Law. — Former statute applied only to matters of fact, and did not afford relief from a judgment on the ground of a mistake of law. Skinner v. Terry, 107 N.C. 103, 12 S.E. 118 (1890); Crissman v. Palmer, 225 N.C. 472, 35 S.E.2d 422 (1945).

Relief given on the ground of "mistake, inadvertence, surprise or excusable neglect" referred to mistake of fact and not of law. Rierson v. York, 227 N.C. 575, 42 S.E.2d 902 (1947).

Mistaken legal advice by counsel acted on by client is not remediable, being a mistake of law and not of fact. Phifer v. Travellers Ins. Co., 123 N.C. 405, 31 S.E. 715 (1898).

A judgment may be set aside for excus- able neglect irrespective of whether the neglect is induced by mistake of fact or law. Rierson v. York, 227 N.C. 575, 42 S.E.2d 902 (1947).

The larger part of the court's jurisdiction is invoked under "excusable neglect" where there is neither mistake of law nor fact. Rierson v. York, 227 N.C. 575, 42 S.E.2d 902 (1947).

The discretion to set aside a judgment is not given unless there has been excusable neglect. Norton v. McLaurin, 125 N.C. 185, 34 S.E. 269 (1899). See also, Meir v. Walton, 2 N.C. App. 578, 163 S.E.2d 403, cert. denied, 274 N.C. 518, 164 S.E.2d 289 (1968).

Along with a Meritorious Defense. — A party moving in apt time to set aside a judgment taken against him on the ground of excusable neglect, not only must show excusable neglect, but also must make it appear that he has a meritorious defense to the plaintiff's cause of action. Hanford v. McSwain, 230 N.C. 229, 53 S.E.2d 84 (1949). See Bowie v. Tucker, 197 N.C. 671, 150 S.E. 200 (1929); State v. O'Connor, 223 N.C. 469, 27 S.E.2d 88 (1943); Perkins v. Sykes, 233 N.C. 147, 63 S.E.2d 133 (1951).

A judgment may be set aside if the moving party can show excusable neglect and that he has a meritorious defense. Dunn v. Jones, 195 N.C. 354, 142 S.E. 320 (1928). See also, Henderson Chevrolet Co. v. Ingle, 202 N.C. 158, 162 S.E. 219 (1932); Bowie v. Tucker, 206 N.C. 56, 173 S.E. 28 (1934); Jones v. Craddock, 211 N.C. 382, 190 S.E. 224 (1937); Sawyer v. Sawyer, 1 N.C. App. 400, 161 S.E.2d 625 (1968).

Court held without discretion to vacate default judgment except upon a finding of fatal irregularity or excusable neglect and meritorious defense. Wilson v. Thaggard, 225 N.C. 348, 34 S.E.2d 140 (1945).

A party seeking to have a judgment set aside on the ground of excusable neglect must at least set forth in his application such a case as prima facie amounts to a valid defense; whether the defense is valid is a question to be determined by the court, not the party. Mauney v. Gidney, 88 N.C. 200 (1883).

Denial of a motion to set aside a judgment will not be disturbed on appeal when there is neither allegation nor finding of a meritorious defense, and the appellate court will not consider affidavits for the purpose of finding facts in motions of this sort. Cayton v. Clark, 212 N.C. 374, 193 S.E. 404 (1937).

Which Is Prerequisite to Relief. — Existence of a meritorious cause of action is a prerequisite to relief on motion to vacate former judgment. Craver v. Spaugh, 226 N.C. 450, 38 S.E.2d 525 (1946).

In order to set aside a judgment for mistake, surprise, or excusable neglect, there must be a showing of a meritorious defense so that the courts can reasonably pass upon the question whether another trial, if granted, would result advantageously for the defendant. Farmers & Merchants Bank v. Duke, 187 N.C. 386, 122 S.E. 1 (1924); Hill v. Huffines Hotel Co., 188 N.C. 586, 125 S.E. 266 (1924). See Fellos v. Allen, 202 N.C. 375, 162 S.E. 905 (1932); Hooks v. Neighbors, 211 N.C. 382, 190 S.E. 236 (1937); Garrett v. Trent, 216 N.C. 162, 4 S.E.2d 319 (1939).

Absence of a sufficient showing of excusable neglect renders the question of meritorious defense immaterial. Johnson v. Sidbury, 225 N.C. 208, 34 S.E.2d 67 (1945); Whitaker v. Raines, 226 N.C. 526, 39 S.E.2d 266 (1946); Ellison v. White, 3 N.C. App. 235, 164 S.E.2d 511 (1968).

And a want of a sufficient showing of a meritorious defense renders the question of excusable neglect immaterial. Ellison v. White, 3 N.C. App. 235, 164 S.E.2d 511 (1968).

Mistake, etc., Must Be of the Party Seeking Relief. — Former statute applied only where the mistake, surprise, etc., was that of the party seeking relief and had no application where the mistake and surprise arose from the fraudulent conduct of another. Boyden v. Williams, 80 N.C. 95 (1879).

And not of the Court. — Former section did not apply where a motion was made to correct an erroneous judgment rendered at a former term, if it appeared that the error committed was that of the court and not that of the party. Simmons v. Dowd, 77 N.C. 155 (1877).

Whether neglect is excusable is to be determined with reference to the litigant's neglect, and not that of his attorney or defendant's insurer. Ellison v. White, 3 N.C. App. 235, 164 S.E.2d 511 (1968).

The omission of an attorney retained as counsel to perform his duty as such is excusable neglect in the party, and the judgment may be vacated. Griel v. Vernon, 65 N.C. 76 (1871); Wiley v. Logan, 94 N.C. 564 (1886).

Especially where counsel is insolvent, and unable to respond in damages for his negligence. Hygenic Plate Ice Mfg. Co. v. Raleigh & A. Air Line R.R., 125 N.C. 17, 34 S.E. 100 (1899). See also, Deal v. Palmer, 68 N.C. 215 (1873); English v. English, 87 N.C. 497 (1882).

Where a party to an action employs a reputable attorney and is guilty of no negligence himself, the attorney's negligence in failing to appear and answer will not be imputed to such party in a proceeding to vacate a default judgment, but the law will excuse the party and afford him relief. Stallings v. Spruill, 176 N.C. 121, 96 S.E. 890 (1918). See also, Geer v. Reams, 88 N.C. 197 (1883).

But the client may not abandon his case on employment of counsel, and when he has a case in court he must attend to it. Meir v.

Walton, 2 N.C. App. 578, 163 S.E.2d 403 (1968).

Where a defendant engages an attorney and thereafter diligently confers with the attorney and generally tries to keep informed as to the proceedings, the negligence of the attorney will not be imputed to the defendant. If, however, the defendant turns a legal matter over to an attorney upon the latter's assurance that he will handle the matter, and then the defendant does nothing further about it, such neglect will be inexcusable. Meir v. Walton, 2 N.C. App. 578, 163 S.E.2d 403 (1968).

For the personal inattention of a suitor no relief can be granted. Ellington, Royster & Co. v. Wicker, 87 N.C. 14 (1882).

Failure to Comply with Ordinary Prudent Man Standard Not Excusable. — Parties who have been duly served with summons are required to give their defense that attention which a man of ordinary prudence usually gives his important business, and failure to do so is not excusable. Meir v. Walton, 2 N.C. App. 578, 163 S.E.2d 403 (1968); Ellison v. White, 3 N.C. App. 235, 164 S.E.2d 511 (1968).

Changing or Setting Aside Consent Judgment. — Where court enters a judgment on its record which appears to have been by the consent of the parties, such judgment cannot thereafter be changed, altered, or set aside without the consent of the parties to it, unless it appears, upon proper allegation and proof and a finding of the court wherein it had been entered, that the judgment was obtained by fraud or mutual mistake, or that consent had not in fact been given. The burden is on the party attacking the judgment to show facts which will entitle him to relief. Gardiner v. May, 172 N.C. 192, 89 S.E. 955 (1916).

Voidability of Judgment Against Incompetent Defendant. — A judgment obtained against one who was non compos mentis is not void, but voidable, and can only be set aside for excusable neglect and the showing of a meritorious defense. Farmers & Merchants Bank v. Duke, 187 N.C. 386, 122 S.E. 1 (1924).

Verification of a complaint by swearing with uplifted hand rather than on the Bible is not a sufficient ground for setting aside a judgment entered by default. Fellos v. Allen, 202 N.C. 375, 162 S.E. 905 (1932).

The burden is upon the party seeking to vacate a judgment to show facts which would make the refusal to vacate appear to be an abuse of discretion. Kerchner v. Baker, 82 N.C. 169 (1880).

Findings of Fact Are Required. — Before a judge can vacate a judgment on the grounds of excusable neglect, he must find and state the facts. Clegg v. New York White Soapstone Co., 66 N.C. 391 (1872); Powell v. Weith, 66 N.C. 423 (1872).

In setting aside a judgment, the court is required to find not only the facts in regard to the excusable neglect relied on, but also the facts in regard to a meritorious defense, and a finding of a "meritorious defense," without finding the facts showing a meritorious defense, is insufficient. Parnell v. Ivey, 213 N.C. 644, 197 S.E. 128 (1938).

And Are Conclusive When Supported by Competent Evidence. — The findings of fact by the trial court upon the hearing of a motion to set aside a judgment for excusable neglect are conclusive on appeal when supported by any competent evidence. Carter v. Anderson, 208 N.C. 529, 181 S.E. 750 (1935).

Where, on a motion to set aside a default judgment, the trial court finds facts sufficient to support the conclusion that the litigant's neglect was excusable, objection to the order setting aside the default judgment on the ground that the facts were insufficient to show a mistake of fact, is untenable, the finding of excusable neglect and meritorious defense being sufficient to support the judgment, and the appellate court being bound by the findings when supported by evidence. Rierson v. York, 227 N.C. 575, 42 S.E.2d 902 (1947).

But Are Not Conclusive If Made Under a Misapprehension of Law. — Upon motion to set aside a judgment, the findings of the court as to excusable neglect and meritorious defense are conclusive on appeal when supported by evidence, but such findings are not conclusive if made under a misapprehension of the law, in which instance the cause will be remanded to the end that the evidence be considered in its true legal light. Van Hanford v. McSwain, 230 N.C. 229, 53 S.E.2d 84 (1949). See also, Perkins v. Sykes, 233 N.C. 147, 63 S.E.2d 133 (1951).

Discretion of Judge Not Reviewable on Appeal. — The appellate court can review on appeal what is a mistake, surprise, or excusable neglect, but it cannot review the discretion exercised by a judge of the superior court. Branch v. Walker, 92 N.C. 87 (1885); D.J. Foley, Bro. & Co. v. Blank & Lovick, 92 N.C. 476 (1885).

Absent Abuse of Discretionary Power. — The refusal of a motion to set aside a judgment on the grounds of surprise or excusable neglect is a matter of discretion with the judge below, and cannot be reviewed on appeal unless it should appear that such discretion was abused. Cowles v. Cowles, 121 N.C. 272, 28 S.E. 476 (1897).

But Whether Facts Found Constitute Mistake, etc., May Be Reviewed. — When the judge grants relief, in the exercise of his discretion, that conclusion is not reviewable; but whether the facts found constitute, in law, mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect may be reviewed, and if it is determined that the court below erred therein, the judgment will be corrected, and the motion remanded, to the end that the trial judge may exercise the discretion conferred on him alone. Weil v. Woodard, 104 N.C. 94, 10 S.E. 129 (1889).

After hearing the evidence and finding the facts, the action of the judge is conclusive upon the parties, and there is no appeal therefrom; however, this discretion is not arbitrary, but implies a legal discretion, and if the judge mistake the meaning of "mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect," his judgment is the subject of appeal and review. Hudgins v. White, 65 N.C. 393 (1871); Albertson v. Terry, 108 N.C. 75, 12 S.E. 892 (1891).

Existence of mistake, surprise, inadvertence, or excusable neglect as a ground for relieving a party from a judgment, etc., is a question of law, and if the judge below errs in his ruling in regard thereto, his decision is subject to review. Powell v. Weith, 68 N.C. 342 (1873).

Should the judge set aside a judgment upon a state of facts which did not bring the case within the scope of the former statute, his action would be subject to correction on appeal. Beck v. Bellamy, 93 N.C. 129 (1885).

The discretionary power of the trial court to set aside a default judgment for mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect is a legal discretion and reviewable. Rierson v. York, 227 N.C. 575, 42 S.E.2d 902 (1947).

Whether, upon the facts found by the judge, the neglect of attorneys for defendants to file answers to the complaint within the time required by statute was excusable, or whether, in any event, such neglect was imputable to defendants, were questions of law with respect to which the conclusions of the judge were reviewable on appeal. Abbitt v. Gregory, 195 N.C. 203, 141 S.E. 587 (1928).

Upon the facts found the court determines, as a matter of law, whether or not they constitute excusable neglect, and whether or not they show a meritorious defense; and from such ruling either party may appeal. Ellison v. White, 3 N.C. App. 235, 164 S.E.2d 511 (1968).

Effect of Judge's Failure to State Facts Found on Review. — When, in setting aside a judgment for excusable negligence, the judge did not state the ground on which he founded his order, his action would nevertheless be upheld if in any aspect of the case it would be proper. D.J. Foley, Bro. & Co. v. Blank & Lovick, 92 N.C. 476 (1885).

Presumption on Appeal That Excusable Neglect Was Considered. — When the court below refused a party permission to file an answer at a term subsequent to the time allowed by a former order, the appellate court would assume that the question of "excusable neglect" was passed upon. Clegg v. New York White Soap Stone Co., 67 N.C. 302 (1872).

Presumption That Findings of Fact Were Based on Sufficient Evidence. — Where no evidence appeared on appeal from an order setting aside a judgment for surprise and excusable neglect, it would be presumed that findings of fact were based upon sufficient evidence, in the absence of exceptions to the findings, and the order would be affirmed where the findings sustained the court's holding that movants had shown excusable neglect and meritorious defense. Radeker v. Royal Pines Park, 207 N.C. 209, 176 S.E. 285 (1934).

Right of Appeal May Be Lost. — The right of appeal from a judgment and a review thereof for errors of law cannot be restored to a party who has lost the right by a mere motion to vacate and an appeal from the refusal, whether founded on irregularity or for other causes. Badger v. Daniel, 82 N.C. 468 (1880).

When Certiorari Granted. — The writ of certiorari, as a substitute for a lost appeal, will be granted only when the petitioner shows that he has been diligent, that there have been no laches on his part in respect to his appeal, and further, that his failure to take and perfect the same was occasioned by some act or misleading representation on the part of the opposing party or some other person or cause in some way connected with it and not within his control. Williamson v. Boykin, 99 N.C. 238, 5 S.E. 378 (1888), rehearing denied, 104 N.C. 100, 10 S.E. 87 (1889); Graves v. Hines, 106 N.C. 323, 11 S.E. 362 (1890).

As to appeal from order of clerk, see Caldwell v. Caldwell, 189 N.C. 805, 128 S.E. 329 (1925); Kerr v. North Carolina Joint Stock Land Bank, 205 N.C. 410, 171 S.E. 367 (1933); Gunter v. Dowdy, 224 N.C. 522, 31 S.E.2d 524 (1944).

The effect of an amendment made by the court cannot be collaterally considered, but must be done in a proceeding brought for that purpose. Foster v. Woodfin, 65 N.C. 29 (1871).

Institution of an independent action in lieu of a renewal of the motion was such an abandonment of the remedy by motion as worked a discontinuance of the same. Norwood v. King, 86 N.C. 80 (1882).

Duty of Court to Supply Omissions in Record. — It is the duty of every court to supply the omissions of its officers in recording its proceedings and to see that its record truly sets forth its action in each and every instance, and this it must do upon the application of any interested person, and without regard to its effect upon the rights of parties or of third persons. It is not open to any other tribunal to call in question the propriety of the action or the verity of its records, as made, and no lapse of time will debar the court of the power to discharge this duty. Walton v. Pearson, 85 N.C. 34 (1881).

B. Relief Held Proper.

Where the answer and record disclosed a meritorious defense, denial of a motion to set aside the judgment because defendant had offered no evidence of a meritorious defense was erroneous. Perkins v. Sykes, 233 N.C. 147, 63 S.E.2d 133 (1951).

Action of the trial court in setting aside judgment for surprise and excusable neglect, etc., and placing the parties in status quo would be upheld on appeal where the record disclosed that the answer of the defendant set up a meritorious defense. Cagle v. Williamson, 200 N.C. 727, 158 S.E. 391 (1931).

Entry of Default Judgment in State Court Following Removal to Federal Court. — Where clerk erroneously granted defendants' motion to remove a cause to the federal court, the moving defendants were entitled to assume that no further proceedings would be had in the State court until the cause was remanded from the federal court, and where a judgment by default and inquiry was entered therein for the want of an answer, without notice, nothing else appearing to show laches on the part of defendants' attorneys, upon relevant findings of the trial judge, including that of a meritorious defense, the action of the trial judge is setting aside the judgment and permitting the defendants to file an answer would not be disturbed on appeal. Abbitt v. Gregory, 195 N.C. 203, 141 S.E. 587 (1928).

Where service of summons was had on defendant bus company by service on an employee of the lessees of a bus station who sold tickets for the bus companies using the station, but the ticket saleswoman failed to notify defendant and judgment by default final was taken against it, it was held that the neglect of the ticket saleswoman would not be imputed to defendant, and the trial court had discretionary power to set aside the judgment upon a showing of meritorious defense. Townsend v. Carolina Coach Co., 231 N.C. 81, 56 S.E.2d 39 (1949).

Court's order setting aside a judgment by default against a corporation that had not been properly served with summons on the ground of excusable neglect was not error where the motion was made in apt time and a meritorious defense was found as a fact upon supporting evidence. Hershey Corp. v. Atlantic C.L. R.R., 203 N.C. 184, 165 S.E. 550 (1932).

For case granting relief to a party who thought he was being summoned as a witness when in fact he was being summoned as the defendant, see Holden v. Purefoy, 108 N.C. 163, 12 S.E. 848 (1891).

Where defendant endorser of a note was required by the illness of his wife to be outside the State, and the complaint was filed on the first day of the term while judgment by default was entered two days later, there was sufficient excuse for failure to answer to justify the opening of the default. Bank of Union v. Brock, 174 N.C. 547, 94 S.E. 301 (1917).

Wife's neglect to file answer upon assurances of her husband that he would do so was excusable in joint action against them. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Turner, 202 N.C. 162, 162 S.E. 221 (1932).

Fact that an order which in effect deprived plaintiff of right of appeal was made at midnight, when plaintiff was absent and neither knew nor had reason to believe that court was in session, his counsel not being able to attend to the trial, constituted a case of "excusable neglect." Long v. Cole, 74 N.C. 267 (1876).

Where defendant employed a licensed, reputable attorney of good standing, residing in one county of the State, to defend an action brought in another county, and put him in possession of the facts constituting his defense, which attorney prepared and duly filed an answer, and the case was calendared and called for trial without notice to the defendant or his attorney, upon a judgment being obtained by default against defendant, defendant, upon his motion aptly made, could have the judgment set aside for surprise, excusable neglect, etc., upon a showing of a meritorious defense, the negligence of the attorney, if any, not being imputed to the client, and the latter being without fault. Meece v. Commercial Credit Co., 201 N.C. 139, 159 S.E. 17 (1931).

Where defendant, who had retained an attorney of high character and reputation for diligence and faithfulness in the practice of his profession, with instructions to employ an attorney local to the litigation, and fully relied on him to notify him of the steps necessary to be taken in his defense, sought to set aside a judgment by default entered against him for his failure to answer, the laches of the attorney, if any, nothing else appearing, were not attributable to defendant and the order of the superior court setting aside the judgment for his excusable neglect, when otherwise correct, would be sustained on appeal. Helderman v. Hartsell Mills Co., 192 N.C. 626, 135 S.E. 627 (1926).

Failure of Counsel to File Defendants' Verified Answers. — Where defendants, who had employed counsel who were learned in the law and skillful and diligent in its practice and whose zeal and fidelity to the cause of a client were unquestioned, verified their answers promptly and entrusted them to their attorneys for filing, attorneys' failure to file the answers within time required by law was not due to such negligence on the part of defendants as deprived the judge of power to grant them relief from a default judgment. Abbitt v. Gregory, 195 N.C. 203, 141 S.E. 587 (1928).

Failure to Notify Client of Attorney's Withdrawal. — Though an attorney may withdraw from a case with the permission of the court in proper instances, his client is entitled to such specific notice, either before or after the withdrawal, as will permit him to protect his rights, and where, for failure of such notice, a judgment upon a verdict was obtained against the client and he was without laches in moving to set it aside for surprise and excusable neglect upon a showing of a meritorious defense, it was correct for the trial judge to grant his motion. Gosnell v. Hilliard, 205 N.C. 297, 171 S.E. 52 (1933).

Attorney Prevented from Examining Complaint. — On motion to set aside a judgment on the ground of excusable negligence, where it appeared that defendant had twice called on the clerk to enter upon the docket the name of the attorney whom he had employed, and that the attorney himself had applied to the clerk to examine the plaintiff's complaint but was unable to see it and during the remainder of the term was absent in obedience to a summons as a witness, defendant's neglect was excusable. Wynne v. Prairie, 86 N.C. 73 (1882).

Incapacity of Attorney Due to Illness. — Findings that the neglect of defendant was due to the incapacity of her lawyer induced by serious illness, that she had used due diligence, that the attorney's neglect should not be imputed to her, and that defendant had a meritorious defense, were sufficient to support court's order setting aside a default judgment. Rierson v. York, 227 N.C. 575, 42 S.E.2d 902 (1947).

Where after summons and complaint were served on defendant, he timely employed an attorney to make answer and resist the suit, but judgment by default was taken by plaintiff, no answer having been filed in consequence of the illness and death of the wife of defendant's attorney and the prolonged illness of the attorney himself, such circumstances constituted excusable neglect. Gunter v. Dowdy, 224 N.C. 522, 31 S.E.2d 524 (1944).

C. Relief Held Improper.

Where there were no findings of fact which would show excusable neglect on the part of defendants, or that the failure to file proper answer and undertaking was due to excusable neglect, it was error for court to allow defendant's motion to set aside judgment. Whitaker v. Raines, 226 N.C. 526, 39 S.E.2d 266 (1946).

Fact that defendants were old and feeble, although of sound mind, and that they forgot about the service of summons upon them, and therefore took no steps to defend the action, did not show excusable neglect. Pierce v. Eller, 167 N.C. 672, 83 S.E. 758 (1914).

Infirm Party of Sound Mind. — Where defendant was of sound mind, and, though his bodily infirmities confined him, carried on business and defended other suits, a default judgment against such defendant would not be vacated on account of excusable neglect because of his infirmities. Jernigan v. Jernigan, 179 N.C. 237, 102 S.E. 310 (1920).

Mistake as to Nature of Summons. — The fact that a defendant supposed a summons which was served on him to be a paper in another cause pending between himself and plaintiff, and for that reason did not take any measure to answer the same, was not such excusable neglect as entitled him to relief. White v. Snow, 71 N.C. 232 (1874).

Inattention to Action. — Where notwithstanding fact that summons and complaint were duly served on defendant and copies left with him, defendant failed for a period of 30 days to acquaint himself with their contents and to file an answer or other defense, attributing his inattention and neglect to the similarity of the title of the case to a former action and to his preoccupation in the duties of his profession, there was no evidence of such excusable neglect as would relieve an intelligent and active businessman from the consequences of his conduct as against diligent suitors proceeding in accordance with statute. Johnson v. Sidbury, 225 N.C. 208, 34 S.E.2d 67 (1945).

Absence from Trial. — It is the duty of a party to be present in court at the trial of his cause for the performance of matters outside the proper duties of his attorney, and where, without cause, he remains out of court, he cannot claim relief, as his act amounts to inexcusable neglect. Cobb v. O'Hagan, 81 N.C. 293 (1879).

Where an attorney had ample notice as to the day of the trial, the continued absence of the client for two successive calls was inexcusable neglect for which no relief could be had under the statute. Henry v. Clayton, 85 N.C. 371 (1881).

Where party was in courtroom when court announced that motions in his case would be heard the following day, his motion to set aside an order made on the day stipulated on the ground of excusable neglect was properly denied. Abernethy v. First Sec. Trust Co., 211 N.C. 450, 190 S.E. 735 (1937).

Client Misinformed by Attorney as to Time of Trial. — When defendant moved to vacate a judgment upon the ground of excusable neglect, for the reason that his counsel, by mistake, had misinformed him as to the time of holding court, whereby he failed to answer, it was held that the excuse was not sufficient, when the facts showed that defendant did not suffer harm by the mistake of his counsel. Clegg v. New York White Soap Stone Co., 67 N.C. 302 (1872).

Failure of Defendant and Attorney to Answer. — Where it appeared upon defendant's motion to set aside a judgment by default that the same was regularly calendared for trial, and that the defendant had notice thereof and was afforded full opportunity to file his answer, but that his attorney failed to do so, defendant did not show such excusable neglect as would entitle him to have the judgment set aside on his motion. Gaster v. Thomas, 188 N.C. 346, 124 S.E. 609 (1924).

Failure to Answer After Attempt to Compromise. — Judgment by default for the want of an answer would not be set aside for excusable neglect when it was regularly entered at the preceding term of the court, and it appeared that the moving party, after endeavoring to compromise, had promised to send at once the amount sued for but failed to do so, and that his attorney had been notified before the commencement of the term at which the judgment was entered that this course would be taken. Union Guano Co. v. Middlesex Supply Co., 181 N.C. 210, 106 S.E. 832 (1921).

Failure to Defend After Denial of Motion for Continuance. — Where the trial court found that defendants and their attorney were present in court when defendants' motion for a continuance was refused that defendants and their attorney thereupon left the courtroom without definite agreement with the court or opposing counsel and did not return to defend the case, and that defendants and their attorney had failed to exercise due diligence, the court's refusal of the motion to set aside the judgment would be affirmed on appeal. Carter v. Anderson, 208 N.C. 529, 181 S.E. 750 (1935).

Failure of Counsel to Receive Notice Sent Through Mail. — Refusal of a motion to set aside a judgment for surprise and excusable neglect would be upheld where the trial court found from competent evidence that notice of the time set for trial was duly sent movant's counsel through the mail but was not received by him. Clayton v. Adams, 206 N.C. 920, 175 S.E. 185 (1934).

Fact that party was misled by a conversation between his counsel and adversary's attorney did not entitle him to relief. Hutchinson v. Rumfelt, 83 N.C. 441 (1880).

Change of Post Office and Failure to Inquire. — A judgment by default would not be set aside on the ground of excusable neglect where it appeared that defendants changed their post office and did not receive the answer mailed to them by their counsel until 11 months after it was mailed, no inquiry for letters having been made by them at their former post office, and no communication being addressed to their counsel concerning the matter until 11 months after the time for answering the complaint had expired. Vick v. Baker, 122 N.C. 98, 29 S.E. 64 (1898).

Failure to Question Counsel as to Case. — While as a general rule a client will be relieved against a judgment by default taken against him through the negligence of his attorney, yet where it devolved upon client to question his counsel in regard to his case, his failure to do so was inexcusable neglect and relief would be denied. Holland v. Edgecombe Benevolent Ass'n, 176 N.C. 86, 97 S.E. 150 (1918).

Attorney's Death Within Knowledge of Client. — Where an attorney in whose hands a cause had been placed died, and the client had notice of such fact and failed to file his answer at the proper time, he could not later claim relief on the ground of excusable neglect. Simpson v. Broom, 117 N.C. 482, 23 S.E. 441 (1895).

Failure to Retain New Counsel upon Disqualification or Withdrawal of Counsel During Pendency of Trial. — Where, pending a reference, counsel for a party to the action became disqualified, but the client, although having notice of the subsequent orders, proceedings, etc., in the cause, neglected to retain another counsel, this did not require the court to set aside the report and recommit the matter passed upon therein. Smith v. Smith, 101 N.C. 461, 8 S.E. 128 (1888).

Where the court found that defendant in claim and delivery proceedings was in court when his attorney was allowed to withdraw from case and was told he would have to employ other counsel, and the case was continued to the next term, the motion made by defendant and the surety on his replevin bond to set aside the judgment taken at the next succeeding term on the ground of mistake, surprise, and excusable neglect was properly refused. Baer v. McCall, 212 N.C. 389, 193 S.E. 406 (1937).

Neglect of Nonresident Local Attorneys. — A judgment would not be set aside for irregularity and surprise when it appeared that it had come to issue and was regularly set upon the trial docket and that judgment was entered in the due course and practice of the court, and the only ground upon which relief was sought was the employment of nonresident local attorneys, who were not notified, though means of easy communication in ample time were available, as the neglect of the attorneys was personally attributable to the party, whose duty it was also to attend to the action himself, as well as to employ attorneys for the purpose. Hyde County Land & Lumber Co. v. Thomasville Chair Co., 190 N.C. 437, 130 S.E. 12 (1925).

Consent Judgment Signed by Attorney. — Where, upon a motion to set aside a judgment for surprise and excusable neglect on the ground that the judgment was a consent judgment and was signed by movant's attorney without authority, and a motion to set aside the consent judgment for such want of authority by movant's attorney, the court found, upon evidence by affidavits, that the attorney was duly authorized to sign the judgment for movant, that finding was conclusive on the appellate court upon appeal, and the order refusing the motions would be upheld. Alston v. Southern

Where defendant, upon the suggestion of counsel, allowed judgment by default to go against him, he could not, upon discovering that the recovery was greater than he had anticipated, seek relief, for his action did not amount to excusable neglect. State ex rel. Hodgin v. Matthews, 81 N.C. 289 (1879).

Excusable Neglect Not Shown Despite Attorney's Absence. — Although their attorney's failure to appear for defendants at a summary judgment hearing would not be imputed to defendants, where the trial court properly determined that attorney's absence did not cause summary judgment to be entered against defendants, excusable neglect for purposes of setting aside the judgment did not exist. PYA/Monarch, Inc. v. Ray Lackey Enters., Inc., 96 N.C. App. 225, 385 S.E.2d 170 (1989).

Workers' Compensation Cases. — A motion made under § 97-47 is not the same as a motion under this rule, and a motion by defendant before the Industrial Commission pursuant to § 97-47 would not afford the same relief as a motion filed pursuant to subsections (b)(2) and (b)(6) of this rule. Hill v. Hanes, 319 N.C. 167, 353 S.E.2d 392 (1987).

The Industrial Commission had authority to grant relief from a judgment entered against the employee, even though the employee filed his notice of appeal after expiration of the time limit, where he showed excusable neglect in that his counsel was on vacation when the workers' compensation opinion arrived, the opinion was filed by the attorney's clerical staff, and no entry was made on the office calendar showing the date the opinion arrived. Murray v. Ahlstrom Indus. Holdings, Inc., 131 N.C. App. 294, 506 S.E.2d 724 (1998).

Failure to Monitor Corporate Affairs. — Trial judge committed no error in denying company's motion for relief under subsection (b)(1) of this rule, where company's own neglect and not any intervening negligence was responsible for its failure to appeal in the action. Not only did company fail to change registered agents in Maryland, it failed altogether to name one in this State as required by statute. Furthermore, had the company established some means to ensure that it was promptly informed of important business matters coming to registered agent's attention, the loss of summons and complaint in the mail would not have gone unnoticed, and it would have received motion for default judgment and notice of hearing. Anderson Trucking Serv., Inc. v. Key Way Transp., Inc., 94 N.C. App. 36, 379 S.E.2d 665 (1989).

Rule 61. Harmless error.

No error in either the admission or exclusion of evidence and no error or defect in any ruling or order or in anything done or omitted by any of the parties is ground for granting a new trial or for setting aside a verdict or for vacating, modifying, or otherwise disturbing a judgment or order, unless refusal to take such action amounts to the denial of a substantial right. (1967, c. 954, s. 1.)

COMMENT

The substance of this rule has been many times endorsed by the court. See e.g., Collins v. Lamb, 215 N.C. 719, 2 S.E.2d 863 (1937).

CASE NOTES

Error alone will not justify reversal; the error must affect some substantial right of the appellant. Andrews v. Andrews, 79 N.C. App. 228, 338 S.E.2d 809, cert. denied, 316 N.C. 730, 345 S.E.2d 385 (1986).

Mere formal defects in findings ordinarily will be ignored if the substance of the judgment is sufficient. Andrews v. Andrews, 79 N.C. App. 228, 338 S.E.2d 809, cert. denied, 316 N.C. 730, 345 S.E.2d 385 (1986).

The failure to make certain findings, even when specifically requested, does not rise to the level of reversible error if the requested findings are not material. Andrews v. Andrews, 79 N.C. App. 228, 338 S.E.2d 809, cert. denied, 316 N.C. 730, 345 S.E.2d 385 (1986).

Especially in light of the conclusive nature of stipulations and the binding effect of pretrial orders, failure to find facts stipulated to in a pretrial order can hardly be prejudicial. Andrews v. Andrews, 79 N.C. App. 228, 338 S.E.2d 809, cert. denied, 316 N.C. 730, 345 S.E.2d 385 (1986).

The introduction of inadmissible evidence by itself will not require reversal; the appellant must demonstrate that the error was prejudicial, i.e., that it probably influenced the verdict of the jury. Broyhill v. Coppage, 79 N.C. App. 221, 339 S.E.2d 32 (1986).

The admission of incompetent testimony will not be held prejudicial when its import is abundantly established by other competent testimony or when the testimony is merely cumulative or corroborative. Warren v. City of Asheville, 74 N.C. App. 402, 328 S.E.2d 859, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 336, 333 S.E.2d 496 (1985).

The burden is on the appellant not only to show error, but also to enable the court to see that he was prejudiced and that a different result would likely have ensued had the error not occurred. Warren v. City of Asheville, 74 N.C. App. 402, 328 S.E.2d 859, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 336, 333 S.E.2d 496 (1985).

The party asserting error must show from the record not only that the trial court committed error, but that the aggrieved party was prejudiced as a result. Lawing v. Lawing, 81 N.C. App. 159, 344 S.E.2d 100 (1986).

Introduction of Erroneous Instruction. — Trial court did not commit prejudicial error by presenting an allegedly erroneous view of the law regarding breach of fiduciary duty in its instruction to the jury by basing the instruction on a North Carolina case rather than on several Georgia cases cited in plaintiffs' brief because there was no substantial difference between the Georgia and North Carolina cases regarding the treatment of minority stockholders in a close corporation. Powell v. Omli, 110 N.C. App. 336, 429 S.E.2d 774 (1993), cert. denied, 334 N.C. 621, 435 S.E.2d 338 (1993).

The exclusion of memorandum as evidence was harmless error because plaintiff did not show that (1) it was prejudiced by the exclusion of the memorandum and (2) had the memorandum been admitted, a different result would likely have ensued. Raintree Homeowners Ass'n v. Bleimann, 116 N.C. App. 561, 449 S.E.2d 13, rev'd on other grounds, 342 N.C. 159, 463 S.E.2d 72 (1995).

Even though it is error to permit the jury to view exhibits in the jury room absent the parties' express consent, the complaining party is not entitled to a new trial absent a showing that the error was prejudicial. Gardner v. Harriss, 122 N.C. App. 697, 471 S.E.2d 447 (1996).

Applied in In re Cooke, 37 N.C. App. 575, 246 S.E.2d 801 (1978); Fisher v. Thompson, 50 N.C. App. 724, 275 S.E.2d 507 (1981); Coulbourn Lumber Co. v. Grizzard, 51 N.C. ## Rule 62. Stay of proceedings to enforce a judgment.

(a) Automatic stay; exceptions — Injunctions and receiverships. — Except as otherwise stated herein, no execution shall issue upon a judgment nor shall proceedings be taken for its enforcement until the expiration of the time provided in the controlling statute or rule of appellate procedure for giving notice of appeal from the judgment. Unless otherwise ordered by the court, an interlocutory or final judgment in an action for an injunction or in a receivership action shall not be stayed during the period after its entry and until an appeal is taken or during the pendency of an appeal. The provisions of section

(c) govern the suspending, modifying, restoring, or granting of an injunction during the pendency of an appeal.

(b) Stay on motion for new trial or for judgment. — In its discretion and on such conditions for the security of the adverse party as are proper, the court may stay the execution of or any proceedings to enforce a judgment pending the disposition of a motion for a new trial or to alter or amend a judgment made pursuant to Rule 59, or of a motion for relief from a judgment or order made pursuant to Rule 60, or of a motion for judgment made pursuant to Rule 50, or of a motion for amendment to the findings or for additional findings made pursuant to Rule 52(b). If the time provided in the controlling statute or rule of appellate procedure for giving notice of appeal from the judgment had not expired before a stay under this subsection was entered, that time shall begin to run immediately upon the expiration of any stay under this section, and no execution shall issue nor shall proceedings be taken for enforcement of the judgment until the expiration of that time.

(c) Injunction pending appeal. — When an appeal is taken from an interlocutory or final judgment granting, dissolving, or denying an injunction, the court in its discretion may suspend, modify, restore, or grant an injunction during the pendency of the appeal upon such terms as to bond or otherwise as it considers proper for the security of the rights of the adverse party.

(d) Stay upon appeal. — When an appeal is taken, the appellant may obtain a stay of execution, subject to the exceptions contained in section (a), by proceeding in accordance with and subject to the conditions of G.S. 1-289, G.S. 1-290, G.S. 1-291, G.S. 1-292, G.S. 1-293, G.S. 1-294, and G.S. 1-295.

When stay is had by giving supersedeas bond, the bond may be given at or after the time of filing the notice of appeal or of procuring the order allowing the appeal as the case may be, and stay is then effective when the supersedeas bond is approved by the court.

(e) Stay in favor of North Carolina, city, county, local board of education, or agency thereof. — When an appeal is taken by the State of North Carolina, or a city or a county thereof, a local board of education, or an officer in his official capacity or agency thereof or by direction of any department or agency of the State of North Carolina or a city or county thereof or a local board of education and the operation or enforcement of the judgment is stayed, no bond, obligation, or other security shall be required from the appellant.

(f) Power of appellate court not limited. — The provisions of this rule do not limit any power of an appellate court or of a judge or justice thereof to stay proceedings during the pendency of an appeal or to suspend, modify, restore, or grant an injunction during the pendency of an appeal or to make any order appropriate to preserve the status quo or the effectiveness of the judgment subsequently to be entered.

(g) Stay of judgment as to multiple claims or multiple parties. — When a court has ordered a final judgment under the conditions stated in Rule 54(b), the court may stay enforcement of that judgment until the entering of a subsequent judgment or judgments and may prescribe such conditions as are necessary to secure the benefit thereof to the party in whose favor the judgment is entered. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1973, c. 91; 1979, c. 820, s. 10; 1987, c. 462, s. 1; 1989, c. 377, ss. 3, 4.)

COMMENT

While in general this rule leaves the present North Carolina law intact in this area, it does make some specific provisions in order to tie in the procedure here employed to other rules.

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1977 constitutional law, see 56 N.C.L. Rev. 943 (1978).

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — Section (a) of this rule, insofar as it excepts summary ejectment cases from an automatic ten-day stay of execution of judgment, is unconstitutional and unenforceable. Usher v. Waters Ins. & Realty Co., 438 F. Supp. 1215 (W.D.N.C. 1977), decided prior to 1979 amendment to this rule.

The denial to tenants in summary ejectment of the automatic ten-day stay on execution which section (a) of this rule allows to other appellants is arbitrarily discriminatory. Usher v. Waters Ins. & Realty Co., 438 F. Supp. 1215 (W.D.N.C. 1977), decided prior to 1979 amendment to this rule.

Taken together, section (a) of this rule and §§ 42-34(b) and 42-32 deny access to jury trial and place an unconstitutionally discriminatory burden upon less-than-affluent tenants in summary ejectment cases, in violation of the equal protection clause of the United States Constitution. Usher v. Waters Ins. & Realty Co., 438 F. Supp. 1215 (W.D.N.C. 1977), decided prior to 1979 amendments to this rule and §§ 42-34(b) and 42-32.

Construction with Other Sections. — Section 1-292 must be complied with notwithstanding defendant's appeal rights under this rule. Venture Properties I v. Anderson, 120 N.C. App. 852, 463 S.E.2d 795 (1995).

Where defendant did not request the setting of a bond nor did he post a bond as required, the defendant made no attempt to comply with the requirements of § 1-292, thus he was not entitled to a stay of execution under this rule. Venture Properties I v. Anderson, 120 N.C. App. 852, 463 S.E.2d 795 (1995).

Automatic Stay Bypassed. — Intervenors' failure to preserve the status quo by obtaining an injunction to prevent town council from issuing a special use permit mooted their appeal, where town council voluntarily complied with the superior court's mandate to issue the permit, thereby bypassing the automatic stay that had issued to prevent proceedings to enforce the court's mandate. Estates, Inc. v. Town of Chapel Hill, 130 N.C. App. 664, 504 S.E.2d 296 (1998).

Superior Court Mandate as "Judgment." — The term "judgment" as used in this rule must include the mandate of a superior court when it sits as an appellate court to review the decision of a town council in granting or denying a special use permit. Estates, Inc. v. Town of Chapel Hill, 130 N.C. App. 664, 504 S.E.2d 296 (1998).

Granting or refusing an order for the appointment of a receiver is not a mere matter of discretion in the judge, and either party dissatisfied with such ruling may have it reviewed. Doxol Gas of Angier, Inc. v. Howard, 28 N.C. App. 132, 220 S.E.2d 203 (1975).

Authority to Stay Enforcement of Judgment Under Subsection (g). — Section (g) of this rule allows the trial court, after it has ordered a final judgment as to one or more but fewer than all parties under the conditions stated in § 1A-1, Rule 54(b), to stay enforcement of the judgment until the entering of a subsequent judgment or judgments, and to prescribe such conditions as are necessary to prevent harm that might result to a party if the trial court should decide not to certify judgment for immediate appeal. Equitable Leasing Corp. v. Myers, 46 N.C. App. 162, 265 S.E.2d 240 (1980).

A trial court possesses the legal authority to stay its own orders pending appeal in cases involving the Public Records Act. Wilmington Star-News, Inc. v. New Hanover Regional Medical Ctr., Inc., 125 N.C. App. 174, 480 S.E.2d 53 (1997), appeal dismissed, 346 N.C. 557, 488 S.E.2d 826 (1997).

Applied in Cox v. Cox, 33 N.C. App. 73, 234 S.E.2d 189 (1977).

Stated in Bell v. Moore, 31 N.C. App. 386, 229 S.E.2d 235 (1976); Wachovia Realty Invs. v. Housing, Inc., 292 N.C. 93, 232 S.E.2d 667 (1977).

Howell's Child Care Ctr., Inc., 123 N.C. App. 61, 472 S.E.2d 208 (1996); Howell v. Clyde, 127 N.C. App. 717, 493 S.E.2d 323 (1997), review denied, 347 N.C. 576, 502 S.E.2d 592 (1998).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Rule Inapplicable to Execution on Small Claim Judgment. — A judgment creditor is entitled as a matter of right to have execution issued on a small claim judgment irrespective of this rule, as since there is specific statutory authorization for issuance of execution, this rule is not applicable. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. James R. Sugg, 41 N.C.A.G. 368 (1971).

Rule 63. Disability of a judge.

If by reason of death, sickness, or other disability, a judge before whom an action has been tried is unable to perform the duties to be performed by the court under these rules after a verdict is returned or findings of fact and conclusions of law are filed, then those duties may be performed:

(1) In actions in the superior court by the judge senior in point of continuous service on the superior court regularly holding the courts of the district. If such judge is himself under a disability, then the resident judge of the district senior in point of service on the superior court may perform those duties. If a resident judge, while holding court in his own district suffers disability and there is no other resident judge of the district, such duties may be performed by a judge of the superior court designated by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.

(2) In actions in the district court, by the chief judge of the district, or if the chief judge is disabled, by any judge of the district court designated by the Director of the Administrative Office of the Courts.

If the substituted judge is satisfied that he cannot perform those duties because he did not preside at the trial or for any other reason, he may in his discretion grant a new trial. (1967, c. 954, s. 1.)

COMMENT

Formerly, there was no statutory prescription in respect to the problem dealt with by this rule. It can be seen, however, that in particular cases where a verdict has already been returned or findings of fact and conclusions of law filed and then the trial judge is unable to continue to function, it will be highly useful to have some judge authorized to step into the breach.

CASE NOTES

Original Judge Need Not Have Become Incapacitated. — Trial court did not err in having their post-judgment motions ruled upon by another judge; this rule neither requires nor implies that before a different judge can rule on post-trial motions, the judge who heard the case must have become incapacitated. Borg-Warner Acceptance Corp. v. Johnston, 107 N.C. App. 174, 419 S.E.2d 195 (1992), cert. denied, 333 N.C. 254, 424 S.E.2d 918 (1993).

Substitute Judge to Function Only After Return of Verdict or Filing of Findings and Conclusions. — Under this rule an appropriate judge may substitute for a disabled or deceased judge before whom an action has been tried only with respect to duties remaining to be performed after a verdict has been returned or findings of fact and conclusions of law have been filed. Girard Trust Bank v. Easton, 12 N.C. App. 153, 182 S.E.2d 645, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 393, 183 S.E.2d 245 (1971).

So as to Effectuate Decision Already Made. — This rule does not contemplate that a substitute judge, who did not hear the witnesses and participate in the trial, may nevertheless participate in the decision making process; it contemplates only that he may perform such acts as are necessary under the rules of procedure to effectuate a decision already made. Girard Trust Bank v. Easton, 12 N.C. App. 153, 182 S.E.2d 645, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 393, 183 S.E.2d 245 (1971); In re Whisnant, 71 N.C. App. 439, 322 S.E.2d 434 (1984).

Judge's Oral Statements Held Insufficient to Support Entry of Judgment by Substitute. — Where, at the conclusion of the evidence in an action tried before the court without a jury, the trial judge orally indicated answers in favor of plaintiff to issues which had been prepared by counsel for defendant in anticipation of a jury trial, and instructed plaintiff's counsel to submit a proposed judgment containing appropriate findings of fact and conclusions of law, the issues and the court's answers thereto constituted neither a verdict nor findings of fact and conclusions of law which would permit a substitute judge to proceed under this rule to enter judgment in the case. Girard Trust Bank v. Easton, 12 N.C. App. 153, 182 S.E.2d 645, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 393, 183 S.E.2d 245 (1971).

Entry of judgment in open court by another district court judge without notice to the parties that the judgment was entered was error, but as the notice of appeal was timely filed, there was no prejudice. Brower v. Brower, 75 N.C. App. 425, 331 S.E.2d 170 (1985).

Article 8.

Miscellaneous.

Rule 64. Seizure of person or property.

At the commencement of and during the course of an action, all remedies providing for seizure of person or property for the purpose of securing satisfaction of the judgment ultimately to be entered in the action are available under the circumstances and in the manner provided by the law of this State. (1967, c. 954, s. 1.)

COMMENT

This rule seems to be self-explanatory.

Rule 65. Injunctions.

(a) Preliminary injunction; notice. — No preliminary injunction shall be issued without notice to the adverse party.

(b) Temporary restraining order; notice; hearing; duration. — A temporary restraining order may be granted without notice to the adverse party if it clearly appears from specific facts shown by affidavit or by verified complaint that immediate and irreparable injury, loss, or damage will result to the applicant before notice can be served and a hearing had thereon. Every temporary restraining order granted without notice shall be endorsed with the date and hour of issuance; shall be filed forthwith in the clerk's office and entered of record; shall define the injury and state why it is irreparable and why the order was granted without notice; and shall expire by its terms within such time after entry, not to exceed 10 days, as the judge fixes, unless within the time so fixed the order, for good cause shown, is extended for a like period or unless the party against whom the order is directed consents that it may be extended for a longer period. The reasons for the extension shall be entered of record. In case a temporary restraining order is granted without notice and a motion for a preliminary injunction is made, it shall be set down for hearing at the earliest possible time and takes precedence over all matters except older matters of the same character; and when the motion comes on for hearing, the party who obtained the temporary restraining order shall proceed with a motion for a preliminary injunction, and, if he does not do so, the judge shall dissolve the temporary restraining order. On two days' notice to the party who obtained the temporary restraining order without notice or on such shorter notice to that party as the judge may prescribe, the adverse party may appear and move its dissolution or modification and in that event the judge shall proceed to hear and determine such motion as expeditiously as the ends of justice require. Damages may be awarded in an order for dissolution as provided in section (e).

(c) Security. — No restraining order or preliminary injunction shall issue except upon the giving of security by the applicant, in such sum as the judge deems proper, for the payment of such costs and damages as may be incurred or suffered by any party who is found to have been wrongfully enjoined or restrained. No such security shall be required of the State of North Carolina or of any county or municipality thereof, or any officer or agency thereof acting in an official capacity, but damages may be awarded against such party in accord with this rule. In suits between spouses relating to support, alimony, custody of children, separation, divorce from bed and board, and absolute divorce no such security shall be required of the plaintiff spouse as a condition precedent to the issuing of a temporary restraining order or preliminary injunction enjoining the defendant spouse from interfering with, threatening, or in any way molesting the plaintiff spouse during pendency of the suit, until further order of the court, but damages may be awarded against such party in accord with this rule.

A surety upon a bond or undertaking under this rule submits himself to the jurisdiction of the court and irrevocably appoints the clerk of the court as his agent upon whom any papers affecting his liability on the bond or undertaking may be served. His liability may be enforced on motion without the necessity of an independent action. The motion and such notice of the motion as the court prescribes may be served on the clerk of the court, who shall forthwith mail copies to the persons giving the security and the sureties thereon if their addresses are known.

(d) Form and scope of injunction or restraining order. — Every order granting an injunction and every restraining order shall set forth the reasons for its issuance; shall be specific in terms; shall describe in reasonable detail, and not by reference to the complaint or other document, the act or acts enjoined or restrained; and is binding only upon the parties to the action, their officers, agents, servants, employees, and attorneys, and upon those persons in active concert or participation with them who receive actual notice in any manner of the order by personal service or otherwise.

(e) Damages on dissolution. — An order or judgment dissolving an injunction or restraining order may include an award of damages against the party procuring the injunction and the sureties on his undertaking without a showing of malice or want of probable cause in procuring the injunction. The damages may be determined by the judge, or he may direct that they be determined by a referee or jury. (1967, c. 954, s. 1.)

COMMENT

Practice Prior to Rule. — While a plaintiff may be entitled to legal and equitable relief in a civil action, the preliminary injunction continues to be an extraordinary and provisional remedy and will not be granted except where adequate relief cannot be had without it. Town of Clinton v. Ross, 226 N.C. 682, 40 S.E.2d 593 (1946).

When temporary injunction issued. — The form of relief may be a preliminary injunction or restraining order, which may be issued:

(1) To preserve the status quo pending the action. As a rule, a mandatory order or injunction will not be made as a preliminary injunction except when the injury is immediate, pressing, irreparable, and clearly established. Seaboard Air Line Ry. v. Atlantic Coast Line Ry., 237 N.C. 88, 74 S.E.2d 430 (1953).

(2) To protect the subject matter of the action.

(3) To prevent fraudulent transfer. See § 1-485.

Time of issuing. — The preliminary injunction may be granted at the time of commencing the action or at any time afterwards, before judgment. Requisites are (a) affidavits; (b) summons.

When notice required. — When the restraining order is asked for as a preliminary motion, notice is not required, but if the judge deems it proper that the other party should be heard, he may issue a show cause order, and the defendant may, in the meantime, be restrained. A restraining order cannot be granted by a judge for a longer time than twenty days, without notice. After the defendant has answered, an injunction will not be granted except upon notice. However, the defendant may be restrained pending such action. See former §§ 1-490, 1-491, 1-492.

Undertaking. — Upon granting a restraining order or an order for an injunction, the judge shall require a written undertaking. See former § 1-496.

Appeals. — Upon appeal from a judgment vacating a restraining order or denying a perpetual injunction where the injunction is the principal relief sought, the court, in its discretion, may require plaintiff to give bond and continue the restraining order pending the appeal. See § 1-500.

Damages in injunction. — A judgment dissolving an injunction carries with it judgment for damages against the party procuring it and against his sureties without the requirement of malice or want of probable cause, which damages may be obtained by a reference or otherwise, as the judge directs. See former § 1-497.

Practice under Rule. — This rule is substantially the same as federal Rule 65.

Section (a). — This section provides that no preliminary injunction shall be issued without notice to the adverse party. While the rule does not specify the type of notice, proper service of the complaint and summons upon the party or his proper agent have been held sufficient. The court must have in personam jurisdiction. Section (b) specifies the time for hearing. On the hearing, the pleadings, if verified, and other affidavits have been held sufficient to grant a preliminary injunction.

The principal change here is the requirement of notice. Ordinarily, the purpose of the preliminary or interlocutory injunction is to preserve the status quo until the issues are determined after final hearing. Section (b) takes care of the situation where immediate action is necessary.

Section (b). — A restraining order is a temporary order, entered in an action, without notice, if necessary, and upon a summary showing of its necessity in order to prevent immediate and irreparable injury, pending a fuller hearing and determination of the rights of the parties. The ex parte restraining order is, under this section, then, subject to definite time limitations and is to preserve the status quo until the motion for a preliminary injunction can, after notice, be brought on for hearing and decision. Such ex parte order must be upon verified facts. Note, also, that such order granted without notice expires by its terms within such time after entry, not to exceed ten days, unless the time is, for good cause shown, extended.

Section (c). — The requirements with respect to security as set forth in this section are similar to the requirements of former § 1-496.

In general, there are two methods for enforcement of liability on a bond or other security given to secure the issuance of a restraining order or preliminary injunction: An independent action or motion for judgment in the injunction action. The second paragraph of section (c) deals with this second method of enforcement. Since this motion procedure is part of the "equity suit," there is no right to trial by jury on the issues raised. If, however, an independent action is brought, this would be one of law, and a right to jury would be preserved.

Section (d). — The requirement that the judge state the reasons for granting the injunction and the acts to be restrained is new. Under prior law no particular form of order was required, although the decisions hold that "the defendant shall be given authentic notification of the mandate of the court or judge." Davis v. Champion Fiber Co., 150 N.C. 84, 63 S.E. 178 (1908). There does not appear to be a statute as explicit as the final clause of section (d) with respect to the parties affected by the action.

Section (e). — This is substantially the same provision as is found in former § 1-497.

I. IN GENERAL.

A "temporary restraining order" and a "preliminary injunction" serve the same function. Lambe v. Smith, 11 N.C. App. 580, 181 S.E.2d 783 (1971).

Unclear Order May Require Clarifying Instructions. — The language of an injunctive order may be so unclear that a party is, in good faith, unable to follow the trial court's directives in the absence of clarifying instructions. Hopper v. Mason, 71 N.C. App. 448, 322 S.E.2d 193 (1984).

No appeal lies to an appellate court from an interlocutory order unless the order deprives the appellant of a substantial right which he would lose absent a review prior to final determination. Thus, the threshold question presented by a purported appeal from an order granting a preliminary injunction is whether the appellant has been deprived of any substantial right which might be lost should the order escape appellate review before final judgment. Robins & Weill, Inc. v. Mason, 70 N.C. App. 537, 320 S.E.2d 693, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 495, 322 S.E.2d 559 (1984).

The voluntary and unconditional dismissal of the proceedings by the plaintiff is equivalent to a judicial determination that the proceeding for an injunction was wrongful, since thereby the plaintiff is held to have confessed that he was not entitled to the equitable relief sought. Leonard E. Warner, Inc. v. Nissan Motor Corp., 66 N.C. App. 73, 311 S.E.2d 1 (1984).

Enforcement of Ordinances Through Injunctive Relief. — Although the General Assembly has given to municipalities the power to enforce ordinances through injunctive relief, a municipality must comply with the requirements of this rule, which requires a clear showing of specific facts of irreparable injury; the availability of injunctive relief as the appropriate ultimate remedy is not prima facie evidence establishing a municipality's right to injunctive relief prior to the resolution of a matter on its merits. Town of Knightdale v. Vaughn, 95 N.C. App. 649, 383 S.E.2d 460 (1989).

App. 282, 498 S.E.2d 623 (1998), cert. denied, 348 N.C. 501, 510 S.E.2d 656 (1998).

II. PRELIMINARY INJUNCTIONS.

Purpose of Preliminary or Interlocutory Injunction. — Purpose of a preliminary injunction is to preserve the status quo pending trial on the merits. Setzer v. Annas, 286 N.C. 534, 212 S.E.2d 154 (1975); A.E.P. Indus., Inc. v. McClure, 308 N.C. 393, 302 S.E.2d 754 (1983).

Purpose of an interlocutory injunction is to preserve the status quo of the subject matter involved until a trial can be had on the merits. Pruitt v. Williams, 288 N.C. 368, 218 S.E.2d 348 (1975).

Prohibitory and Mandatory Injunctions Distinguished. — The law recognizes a distinction between prohibitory and mandatory injunctions. A prohibitory injunction seeks to preserve the status quo, until the rights of the parties can be determined, by restraining the party enjoined from doing particular acts. A mandatory injunction is intended to restore the status quo, and to that end requires a party to perform a positive act; it is comparable in nature and function to a writ of mandamus, and will ordinarily be granted only where the injury is immediate, pressing, irreparable, and clearly established. Automobile Dealer Resources, Inc. v. Occidental Life Ins. Co., 15 N.C. App. 634, 190 S.E.2d 729 (1972).

Decree May Be Both Preventive and Mandatory. — While in the greater number of instances injunction is a preventive remedy, the court has jurisdiction to issue a preliminary mandatory injunction where the case is urgent and the right is clear; moreover, if necessary to meet the exigencies of a particular situation, the injunctive decree may be both preventive and mandatory. Automobile Dealer Resources, Inc. v. Occidental Life Ins. Co., 15 N.C. App. 634, 190 S.E.2d 729 (1972).

Notice and Hearing Required for Preliminary Injunction. — Preliminary injunction, unlike a temporary restraining order, requires notice to the adverse party and a hearing. Jolliff v. Winslow, 24 N.C. App. 107, 210 S.E.2d 221 (1974), appeal dismissed, 286 N.C. 545, 212 S.E.2d 656 (1975).

A preliminary or interlocutory injunction can only be issued after notice and a hearing, which affords the adverse party an opportunity to present evidence in his behalf. Lambe v. Smith, 11 N.C. App. 580, 181 S.E.2d 783 (1971).

Where movant received no notice of injunction and was not given an opportunity to be heard before the order was entered, the court lacked personal jurisdiction over movant and the court's order was void. Helbein v. Southern Metals Co., 119 N.C. App. 431, 458 S.E.2d 518 (1995).

A preliminary injunction is interlocutory in nature, issued after notice and hearing, and restrains a party pending final determination on the merits. A.E.P. Indus., Inc. v. McClure, 308 N.C. 393, 302 S.E.2d 754 (1983).

A preliminary or interlocutory injunction is usually not for a fixed, limited period of time, since ordinarily its purpose is to preserve the status quo until the issues are adjudged after a final hearing. Lambe v. Smith, 11 N.C. App. 580, 181 S.E.2d 783 (1971).

Verification of Complaint Not a Condition for Issuance. — Verification of a complaint is not a condition for issuance of a preliminary injunction under this rule. Moore v. Wykle, 107 N.C. App. 120, 419 S.E.2d 164, cert. denied, 332 N.C. 666, 424 S.E.2d 405 (1992).

Grounds for Preliminary Injunction. — A temporary injunction will ordinarily be granted pending trial on the merits (1) if there is probable cause for supposing that plaintiff will be able to sustain his primary equity, and (2) if there is a reasonable apprehension of irreparable loss unless injunctive relief is granted, or if in the court's opinion it appears reasonably necessary to protect plaintiff's rights. Automobile Dealer Resources, Inc. v. Occidental Life Ins. Co., 15 N.C. App. 634, 190 S.E.2d 729 (1972); Robins & Weill, Inc. v. Mason, 70 N.C. App. 537, 320 S.E.2d 693, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 495, 322 S.E.2d 559 (1984).

Ordinarily, to justify the issuance of a preliminary injunction it must be made to appear that (1) there is probable cause that plaintiff will be able to establish the right he asserts, and (2) there is reasonable apprehension of irreparable loss unless interlocutory injunctive relief is granted or unless interlocutory injunctive relief appears reasonably necessary to protect plaintiffs' rights during the litigation. Setzer v. Annas, 286 N.C. 534, 212 S.E.2d 154 (1975); Pruitt v. Williams, 25 N.C. App. 376, 213 S.E.2d 369, appeal dismissed, 288 N.C. 368, 218 S.E.2d 348 (1975); Waff Bros. v. Bank of N.C., N.A., 25 N.C. App. 517, 214 S.E.2d 261 (1975), rev'd on other grounds, 289 N.C. 198, 221 S.E.2d 273 (1976); Herff Jones Co. v. Allegood, 35 N.C. App. 475, 241 S.E.2d 700 (1978); Howard Schultz & Assocs. v. Ingram, 38 N.C. App. 422, 248 S.E.2d 345 (1978).

A preliminary injunction will be issued only if plaintiff is able to show the likelihood of success on the merits of his case and if plaintiff is likely to sustain irreparable loss unless the injunction is issued, or if, in the opinion of the court, issuance is necessary for the protection of plaintiff's rights during the course of litigation. A.E.P. Indus., Inc. v. McClure, 308 N.C. 393, 302 S.E.2d 754 (1983).

To constitute irreparable injury it is not essential that it be shown that the injury is beyond the possibility of repair or possible compensation in damages, but that the injury is one to which the complainant should not be required to submit or the other party permitted to inflict, and is of such continuous and frequent recurrence that no reasonable redress can be had in a court of law. A.E.P. Indus., Inc. v. McClure, 308 N.C. 393, 302 S.E.2d 754 (1983).

Conclusory Allegation of Irreparable Harm. — In action instituted by town alleging that defendant was operating a used car lot in violation of town's zoning ordinance, where the only evidence before the trial court was town's verified complaint, wherein town alleged irreparable injury, town's conclusory allegation of irreparable harm was insufficient to allow the trial court to determine whether an interlocutory injunction should have been issued or refused. Town of Knightdale v. Vaughn, 95 N.C. App. 649, 383 S.E.2d 460 (1989), vacating preliminary injunction.

Decision of the trial judge to grant or deny a preliminary injunction rests in his sound judgment and discretion. Lambe v. Smith, 11 N.C. App. 580, 181 S.E.2d 783 (1971).

To issue or to refuse to issue an interlocutory injunction is usually a matter of discretion to be exercised by the trial court. Pruitt v. Williams, 288 N.C. 368, 218 S.E.2d 348 (1975).

Issuance of a preliminary injunction is a matter of discretion to be exercised by the hearing judge after a careful balancing of the equities. A.E.P. Indus., Inc. v. McClure, 308 N.C. 393, 302 S.E.2d 754 (1983).

Determination of Relative Conveniences and Inconveniences. — Where a serious question exists, the hearing judge must consider the relative conveniences and inconveniences of the parties in determining the propriety of a preliminary injunction and the terms thereof if granted. Setzer v. Annas, 286

N.C. 534, 212 S.E.2d 154 (1975).

Burden is on plaintiffs to establish their right to preliminary injunction. Pruitt v. Williams, 25 N.C. App. 376, 213 S.E.2d 369, appeal dismissed, 288 N.C. 368, 218 S.E.2d 348 (1975); Waff Bros. v. Bank of N.C., N.A., 25 N.C. App. 517, 214 S.E.2d 261 (1975), rev'd on other grounds, 289 N.C. 198, 221 S.E.2d 273 (1976).

The prayer for relief in a complaint may constitute a sufficient motion for a preliminary injunction, and a separate or additional motion is not necessarily required. Collins v. Freeland, 12 N.C. App. 560, 183 S.E.2d 831 (1971).

And Complaint Need Not Use Technical Language. — Although the wording of the prayer for relief in a complaint and the wording in the notice to show cause did not technically follow the language of this rule, the meaning was clear and unambiguous and sufficient to constitute a motion for a preliminary injunction. Collins v. Freeland, 12 N.C. App. 560, 183 S.E.2d 831 (1971).

Court May Consider Affidavits. — Both before and after the adoption of the Rules of Civil Procedure, it was and is proper for the court to consider evidence by affidavits in show cause hearings for injunctions, and subdivision (1) of § 1-485 does not prohibit this. State ex rel. Morgan v. Dare to Be Great, Inc., 15 N.C. App. 275, 189 S.E.2d 802 (1972).

When proceeding under subdivision (1) of § 1-485 for a preliminary injunction, the court is not limited to what appears in the complaint. The courts have historically heard motions for preliminary injunction on affidavits. State ex rel. Morgan v. Dare to Be Great, Inc., 15 N.C. App. 275, 189 S.E.2d 802 (1972).

Standard for Affidavits. — An injunction under this rule is a temporary order pending trial; thus the affidavits need not meet as high a standard as those for a summary judgment ruling. Howard Schultz & Assocs. v. Ingram, 38 N.C. App. 422, 248 S.E.2d 345 (1978).

Scope of Review of Preliminary Injunction. — In reviewing orders for temporary injunctive relief an appellate court may look beyond the findings of fact made by the trial court and determine from the evidence whether a preliminary injunction is justified. Automobile Dealer Resources, Inc. v. Occidental Life Ins. Co., 15 N.C. App. 634, 190 S.E.2d 729 (1972).

On appeal from an order of a superior court judge granting or refusing a preliminary injunction, the Supreme Court is not bound by the findings of fact of the hearing judge, but may review and weigh the evidence and find the facts for itself. Setzer v. Annas, 286 N.C. 534, 212 S.E.2d 154 (1975); Pruitt v. Williams, 288 N.C. 368, 218 S.E.2d 348 (1975); A.E.P. Indus., Inc. v. McClure, 308 N.C. 393, 302 S.E.2d 754 (1983).

The scope of appellate review in the granting or denying of a preliminary injunction is essentially de novo. An appellate court is not bound by the findings, but may review and weigh the evidence and find facts for itself. Robins & Weill, Inc. v. Mason, 70 N.C. App. 537, 320 S.E.2d 693, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 495, 322 S.E.2d 559 (1984).

On appeal of the entry of a preliminary injunction, the enjoined party bears the burden of showing that the trial court erred, as there is a presumption that the judgment is correct. Howard Schultz & Assocs. v. Ingram, 38 N.C. App. 422, 248 S.E.2d 345 (1978).

Specific Performance of Alimony Provisions. — Trial court had authority under this rule to grant specific performance of the alimony provisions of a separation agreement in order to preserve the status quo pending final determination of the merits of an action on the agreement. Gibson v. Gibson, 49 N.C. App. 156, 270 S.E.2d 600 (1980).

III. TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDERS.

Section (b) of this rule is constitutional. Jolliff v. Winslow, 24 N.C. App. 107, 210 S.E.2d 221 (1974), appeal dismissed, 286 N.C. 545, 212 S.E.2d 656 (1975).

Although the ex parte temporary restraining order procedure is drastic, it operates within an emergency context which recognizes the need for swift action, but passes constitutional muster because it immediately affords defendants notice and an opportunity to be heard. State ex rel. Gilchrist v. Hurley, 48 N.C. App. 433, 269 S.E.2d 646 (1980), cert. denied, 301 N.C. 720, 274 S.E.2d 233 (1981).

Section 1A-1, Rule 3 and section (b) of this rule must be construed in pari materia. Carolina Freight Carriers Corp. v. International Bhd. of Teamsters Local 61, 11 N.C. App. 159, 180 S.E.2d 461, cert. denied, 278 N.C. 701, 181 S.E.2d 601 (1971).

Procedure under section (b) of this rule is permissible only after an action is commenced as provided by § 1A-1, Rule 3. Carolina Freight Carriers Corp. v. International Bhd. of Teamsters Local 61, 11 N.C. App. 159, 180 S.E.2d 461, cert. denied, 278 N.C. 701, 181 S.E.2d 601 (1971).

The purpose of a temporary restraining order, issued ex parte, is "to preserve the status quo" pending a full hearing. Huff v. Huff, 69 N.C. App. 447, 317 S.E.2d 65 (1984).

The ex parte temporary restraining order neither contemplates nor authorizes the deprivation of property, and so long as certain procedural safeguards are afforded, such as definite duration, it is a universally accepted and employed procedure. State ex rel. Gilchrist v. Hurley, 48 N.C. App. 433, 269

S.E.2d 646 (1980), cert. denied, 301 N.C. 720, 274 S.E.2d 233 (1981).

An ex parte restraining order is subject to definite time limitations, and is intended to preserve the status quo until the motion for a preliminary injunction can, after notice, be brought on for hearing and decision. Lambe v. Smith, 11 N.C. App. 580, 181 S.E.2d 783 (1971).

Temporary restraining order is not predicated upon illusory injury, loss, or damage, but is entered only upon a showing of immediate and irreparable injury, loss, or damage. Jolliff v. Winslow, 24 N.C. App. 107, 210 S.E.2d 221 (1974), appeal dismissed, 286 N.C. 545, 212 S.E.2d 656 (1975).

Precedence of Hearing on Temporary Restraining Order over Hearing on Change of Venue. — This rule would appear to require that a hearing on the return of a temporary restraining order take precedence over a hearing on a motion for a change of venue. Herff Jones Co. v. Allegood, 35 N.C. App. 475, 241 S.E.2d 700 (1978).

Section 19-2.3 Made Subject to Section (b) of this Rule. — Section 19-2.3, authorizing the issuance of an ex parte temporary restraining order to abate certain nuisances, is plainly made subject to section (b) of this rule. State ex rel. Gilchrist v. Hurley, 48 N.C. App. 433, 269 S.E.2d 646 (1980), cert. denied, 301 N.C. 720, 274 S.E.2d 233 (1981).

No Jurisdiction to Determine Controversy on Merits. — A judge conducting a hearing to determine whether a temporary restraining order should be continued as a preliminary injunction pursuant to this rule has no jurisdiction to determine a controversy on its merits; neither can the parties to an action confer this jurisdiction upon the trial court by granting consent to such a hearing. Everette v. Taylor, 77 N.C. App. 442, 335 S.E.2d 212 (1985).

Factors considered justified the conclusion that absent ex parte restraining order, plaintiff wife would suffer irreparable injury for which she had no adequate remedy at law. Huff v. Huff, 69 N.C. App. 447, 317 S.E.2d 65 (1984).

It was error for the court to issue a permanent injunction at a hearing to show cause why a temporary restraining order should not be continued. Everette v. Taylor, 77 N.C. App. 442, 335 S.E.2d 212 (1985).

Where defendants moved to vacate temporary restraining order thirty days after it was entered, but the order had already expired by operation of law 10 days after issuance, there was no temporary restraining order in existence to vacate or dissolve so that defendants could not recover damages in a dissolution order pursuant to subsection (e). Democratic Party v. Guilford County Bd. of Elections, 342 N.C. 856, 467 S.E.2d 681 (1996), rehearing denied, 343 N.C. 517, 471 S.E.2d 70 (1996).

Since temporary restraining order expired, by operation of law, after ten days, defendant bank had no legal authority to continue to freeze plaintiff's funds after the ten days had passed. Taylor v. Centura Bank, 124 N.C. App. 661, 478 S.E.2d 226 (1996).

IV. SECURITY.

Rule for North Carolina practice under section (c) of this rule, in its entirety, is as follows: "The trial court has power not only to set the amount of security but to dispense with any security requirement whatsoever where the restraint will do the defendant no material damage, where there has been no proof of likelihood of harm, and where the applicant for equitable relief has considerable assets and is able to respond in damages if defendant does suffer damages by reason of a wrongful injunction." Keith v. Day, 60 N.C. App. 559, 299 S.E.2d 296 (1983).

The purpose of the security requirement in section (c) of this rule is to protect the restrained party from damages incurred as a result of the wrongful issuance of the injunctive relief. Similarly, it has been suggested that the purpose of the bond is to require that the plaintiff assume the risk of paying damages he causes as the "price" he must pay to have the extraordinary privilege of a temporary restraining order or preliminary injunction. Leonard E. Warner, Inc. v. Nissan Motor Corp., 66 N.C. App. 73, 311 S.E.2d 1 (1984).

Federal Decisions Must Be Utilized for Interpretation of Section (c). — Because of the dearth of North Carolina precedent, and the fact that section (c) of this rule was adopted verbatim from the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, it is necessary to look to federal decisions interpreting this section for guidance. Keith v. Day, 60 N.C. App. 559, 299 S.E.2d 296 (1983).

The question of when recovery on a bond posted under this rule is proper has rarely been addressed by North Carolina courts. It has been held that in interpreting section (c) of this rule North Carolina courts may look to federal decisions for guidance. Leonard E. Warner, Inc. v. Nissan Motor Corp., 66 N.C. App. 73, 311 S.E.2d 1 (1984).

Application of Section (c). — Where trial court specifically stated in its order that no security should be required of the plaintiff since this was a suit between spouses relating to divorce from bed and board, alimony, temporary alimony, possession of personal property and attorneys' fees, and it properly could view foreign action initiated by defendant-husband as a type of interference with plaintiff during pendency of the suit, its restraining order thus fell within the express exclusion from the usual security requirements of section (c) of this rule.

Huff v. Huff, 69 N.C. App. 447, 317 S.E.2d 65 (1984).

Where the record established no material damage or likelihood of harm to defendant-husband from issuance of restraining order and that plaintiff-wife had considerable assets with which to respond in damages if defendant-husband subsequently was found to have suffered from wrongful issuance of the order, trial court properly dispensed with the requirement for security. Huff v. Huff, 69 N.C. App. 447, 317 S.E.2d 65 (1984).

No security is required when a preliminary injunction is issued to preserve the trial court's jurisdiction over the subject matter involved. Huff v. Huff, 69 N.C. App. 447, 317 S.E.2d 65 (1984).

Governmental immunity is not abrogated by section (c) of this rule. Orange County v. Heath, 282 N.C. 292, 192 S.E.2d 308 (1972).

Failure to Make Findings for Order Setting Bond. — Where order setting an injunction bond at $20,000 contained no findings of fact or conclusions of law relating to the amount of the bond, and facts were in dispute, remand was necessary for proper determination of the amount of the security bond. Iverson v. TM One, Inc., 92 N.C. App. 161, 374 S.E.2d 160 (1988).

The fact that the party against which the injunction was entered prevails at trial, does not, by itself, entitle it to the posted bond; the prevailing party also must have suffered damages as a result of the injunction. Tedder v. Alford, 128 N.C. App. 27, 493 S.E.2d 487 (1997), review denied, 348 N.C. 290, 501 S.E.2d 917 (1998).

V. FORM AND SCOPE OF INJUNCTION OR RESTRAINING ORDER.

Application of Section (d). — Section (d) of this rule applies only to injunctions and restraining orders, not to contempt orders. R.E. Uptegraff Mfg. Co. v. International Union of Elec. Workers Local 189, 20 N.C. App. 544, 202 S.E.2d 309, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 234, 204 S.E.2d 24 (1974).

Necessity That Order Detail Acts Enjoined. — The mandate of this rule that an order set forth in reasonable detail the acts enjoined involves the question of whether the party enjoined can know from the language of the order itself, and without having to resort to other documents, exactly what the court is ordering it to do. Automobile Dealer Resources, Inc. v. Occidental Life Ins. Co., 15 N.C. App. 634, 190 S.E.2d 729 (1972).

Reference to some other document within a temporary restraining order is not sufficient to provide a description of the act or acts enjoined or restrained. Gibson v. Cline, 28 N.C. App. 657, 222 S.E.2d 478 (1976).

Absence of a statement of the reasons for an injunction renders the order irregular, not void, and should be corrected by the trial court and not on appeal. Howard Schultz & Assocs. v. Ingram, 38 N.C. App. 422, 248 S.E.2d 345 (1978).

An injunctive order which does not state the reasons for its issuance is merely irregular, not void, and must be obeyed by the parties until corrected. Poor Richard's, Inc. v. Stone, 86 N.C. App. 137, 356 S.E.2d 828 (1987), rev'd on other grounds, 322 N.C. 61, 366 S.E.2d 697 (1988).

Irregular injunctive orders which do not state the reasons for their issuance are properly corrected by a motion made before the trial court and will not be corrected on appeal. Poor Richard's, Inc. v. Stone, 86 N.C. App. 137, 356 S.E.2d 828 (1987), rev'd on other grounds, 322 N.C. 61, 366 S.E.2d 697 (1988).

Motion under § 1A-1, Rule 60(a) was proper to reform an order granting a preliminary injunction so as to comply with the requirements of section (d) of this rule, since the correction did not alter the effect of the order, but only clarified the record for appeal. Howard Schultz & Assocs. v. Ingram, 38 N.C. App. 422, 248 S.E.2d 345 (1978).

Findings and Conclusions Only Required When Requested. — There is no statute that requires the court to make findings of fact and conclusions of law in granting or denying a preliminary injunction under this rule. Hence, absent a request by a party that the court make findings of fact and conclusions of law, the court is required to state only the reasons for its issuance. Pruitt v. Williams, 25 N.C. App. 376, 213 S.E.2d 369, appeal dismissed, 288 N.C. 368, 218 S.E.2d 348 (1975).

Reason for Issuance Correctly Set Out in Order. — When an order provided that it was issued by consent of the parties, it correctly set forth the reason for its issuance within the meaning of section (d) of this rule. R.E. Uptegraff Mfg. Co. v. International Union of Elec. Workers Local 189, 20 N.C. App. 544, 202 S.E.2d 309, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 234, 204 S.E.2d 24 (1974).

Order Held Sufficiently Detailed. — Where allegedly ambiguous terms used by the court in injunctive order were the exact words used in defendant's letter or the contract under which the parties functioned, apparently without complaint, for more than three years, defendant could not insist that the court speak with more clarity than did plaintiff and defendant in establishing the relationship which the court sought to preserve, especially when no showing was made as to any previous difficulty on the part of either party in understanding the language used. Automobile Dealer Resources, Inc. v. Occidental Life Ins. Co., 15 N.C. App. 634, 190 S.E.2d 729 (1972).

VI. DAMAGES ON DISSOLUTION.

Remedies Available to Party Wrongfully Restrained. — When a temporary restraining order is dissolved as having been improvidently issued, the remedies available to the party who has been wrongfully restrained are as follows: (1) He may recover damages from the party who procured the restraining order and the sureties on his injunction bond, without proof of malice or want of probable cause, or (2) he may institute an action for malicious prosecution against the party who procured the restraining order and recover damages, without regard to the limit of the bond, upon establishing the elements necessary to constitute an action for malicious prosecution. International Bhd. of Elec. Workers Local 755 v. Country Club E., Inc., 283 N.C. 1, 194 S.E.2d 848 (1973).

Recovery under this rule may not be granted until the court has finally decided that plaintiff was not entitled to the injunction, or until something occurs equivalent to such a decision. Leonard E. Warner, Inc. v. Nissan Motor Corp., 66 N.C. App. 73, 311 S.E.2d 1 (1984).

Limitation on Recovery When Proceeding by Motion in Cause. — If a party damaged by an improvidently issued restraining order elects to proceed by motion in the cause on the bond of the opposing party and his sureties, his recovery is limited to the amount of the penalty of the injunction bond. Stevenson v. North Carolina Dep't of Ins., 45 N.C. App. 53, 262 S.E.2d 378 (1980).

Damages Following Voluntary Dismissal. — Award of damages upon the dissolution of an injunction was not improper where the injunction was granted because there was probable cause to believe that defendants might be able to establish their right to the injunction upon trying the issues raised by their counterclaim, but where after the case was tried almost to a conclusion, defendants voluntarily dismissed their counterclaim; although it was done "without prejudice," this dismissal could only be construed as an acknowledgement by the defendants that they could not establish their entitlement to the restraining order. Pinehurst, Inc. v. O'Leary Bros. Realty, 79 N.C. App. 51, 338 S.E.2d 918, cert. denied, 316 N.C. 378, 342 S.E.2d 896 (1986).

Unsworn Statement Not Sufficient Evidence of Damages. — Where the record indicated the trial court relied upon the unsworn statement of counsel that the Board of Education suffered "about seven fifty" in damages in making finding of fact, the statement by the attorney at trial was not considered evidence. Ronald G. Hinson Elec., Inc. v. Union County Bd. of Educ., 125 N.C. App. 373, 481 S.E.2d 326 (1997).

VII. DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW.

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former §§ 1-496 and 1-497.

Provision for Bond Mandatory. — The provision that the plaintiff in injunction give bond is mandatory and the amount fixed by the judge is conclusive of the extent of the liability thereon, the procedure being for the defendant to move to have the amount increased when he so desires or thinks it necessary for his protection. James v. Withers, 114 N.C. 474, 19 S.E. 367 (1894); McAden v. Watkins, 191 N.C. 105, 131 S.E. 375 (1926).

But the validity of an injunction is not affected by a failure to require an indemnity bond to accompany it, nor is a party for that reason justified in disobeying the mandate, but if aggrieved, his remedy is in a motion to dissolve. Young v. Rollins, 90 N.C. 125 (1884).

Failure to give the required undertaking is merely an irregularity which will be cured by a subsequent execution thereof. McKay v. Chapin, 120 N.C. 159, 26 S.E. 701 (1897); Standard Bonded Whse. Co. v. Cooper & Griffin, Inc., 30 F.2d 842 (W.D.N.C. 1929).

Bond Not Required in Action to Abate Nuisance. — In an action to abate a public nuisance, plaintiff relator was not required to give an undertaking, the provisions of former § 1-496 not being applicable. Carpenter v. Boyles, 213 N.C. 432, 196 S.E. 850 (1938).

Where an injunction was issued under an order that plaintiff should give an undertaking with sufficient sureties in a certain sum, it seemed that a deposit in money of the sum named would be sufficient; but whether it was or not, the giving by plaintiff of the required undertaking before the hearing of a motion to vacate the injunction for the want of it would supply the alleged defect and prevent the injunction from being vacated on that account. Richards v. Baurman, 65 N.C. 162 (1871).

Where an undertaking was given before the issuance of a restraining order, it was not necessary for the court, on the return of the order to show cause and upon continuing the injunction to the trial, to require a new undertaking from the plaintiff, unless it was shown that the bond already given was insufficient. Preiss v. Cohen, 112 N.C. 278, 17 S.E. 520 (1893).

Procedure to Recover Damages. — It is not contemplated that a separate action shall be brought upon an injunction bond, but the damages sustained by reason of an injunction shall be ascertained by proper proceedings in the same action, and may be by reference or otherwise, as the judge shall direct. North Carolina Gold Amalgamating Co. v. North Carolina Ore Dressing Co., 79 N.C. 48 (1878). See also, Crawford v. Pearson, 116 N.C. 718, 21 S.E. 561 (1895); Nansemond Timber Co. v. Rountree, 122 N.C. 45, 29 S.E. 61 (1898).

Right to Elect to Seek Damages in Same or Separate Action. — The provision requiring a bond in an injunction to cover defendant's damages, and further provision for recovery thereof in the same action, do not limit the remedy to that action, in the event the injunction was sought with malice and without probable cause; and defendant has the right therein to elect between this remedy and that by independent action, without limiting his recovery to an action on the bond when the damages sought are in excess of that amount. Shute v. Shute, 180 N.C. 386, 104 S.E. 764 (1920).

To sustain an action for damages, it must be made to appear that such injunction was wrongful in its inception, or at least was continued owing to some wrong on the part of plaintiff. M. Blatt Co. v. Southwell, 259 N.C. 468, 130 S.E.2d 859 (1963).

Burden of Proof in Action for Damages. — The burden of proof was on defendant to show as a prerequisite to his right to recover damages from plaintiff and its surety either that the court had finally decided that plaintiff was not entitled to temporary restraining order or that something had occurred equivalent to such a decision. M. Blatt Co. v. Southwell, 259 N.C. 468, 130 S.E.2d 859 (1963).

Want of probable cause need not be alleged. Crawford v. Pearson, 116 N.C. 718, 21 S.E. 561 (1895).

Amount of Damages Sustained Must Be Shown. — Before judgment can be given upon an injunction bond, the party alleging that he has been damnified by reason of the injunction must establish the quantum of damages sustained. Hyman v. Devereux, 65 N.C. 588 (1871).

Amount of damages does not include personal expenses in attending the hearing. Midgett v. Vann, 158 N.C. 128, 73 S.E. 801 (1912).

No Damages Where Injunction Is Rightfully Awarded and Properly Dissolved on Matters Subsequently Arising. — If an injunction is rightfully awarded, but afterwards properly dissolved because of matters done or arising subsequent to its issuance, there can be no recovery of damages. M. Blatt Co. v. Southwell, 259 N.C. 468, 130 S.E.2d 859 (1963).

Voluntary Unconditional Dismissal Held Equivalent to Determination That Plaintiff Was Not Entitled to Equitable Relief. — In an action in which plaintiff obtained a temporary restraining order or injunction by giving bond as required by former § 1-496, the voluntary and unconditional dismissal of the proceedings by plaintiff was equivalent to a judicial determination that the proceeding for an injunction was wrongful, since thereby plaintiff was held to have confessed that he was not entitled to the equitable relief sought. M. Blatt Co. v. Southwell, 259 N.C. 468, 130 S.E.2d 859 (1963).

Voluntary Dismissal by Agreement Not Adjudication That Restraining Order Was Erroneous. — A judgment of voluntary dismissal by agreement of the parties of an action in which a restraining order has been issued is not an adjudication that the restraining order was improvidently or erroneously issued. M. Blatt Co. v. Southwell, 259 N.C. 468, 130 S.E.2d 859 (1963).

For discussion as to attorneys' fees, see Hyman v. Devereux, 65 N.C. 588 (1871).

Rules 66, 67.

Omitted.

Rule 68. Offer of judgment and disclaimer.

(a) Offer of judgment. — At any time more than 10 days before the trial begins, a party defending against a claim may serve upon the adverse party an offer to allow judgment to be taken against him for the money or property or to the effect specified in his offer, with costs then accrued. If within 10 days after the service of the offer the adverse party serves written notice that the offer is accepted, either party may then file the offer and notice of acceptance together with proof of service thereof and thereupon the clerk shall enter judgment. An offer not accepted within 10 days after its service shall be deemed withdrawn and evidence of the offer is not admissible except in a proceeding to determine costs. If the judgment finally obtained by the offeree is not more favorable than the offer, the offeree must pay the costs incurred after the making of the offer. The fact that an offer is made but not accepted does not preclude a subsequent offer.

(b) Conditional offer of judgment for damages. — A party defending against a claim arising in contract or quasi contract may, with his responsive pleading, serve upon the claimant an offer in writing that if he fails in his defense, the damages shall be assessed at a specified sum; and if the claimant signifies his acceptance thereof in writing within 20 days of the service of such offer, and on the trial prevails, his damages shall be assessed accordingly. If the claimant does not accept the offer, he must prove his damages as if the offer had not been made. If the damages assessed in the claimant's favor do not exceed the sum stated in the offer, the party defending shall recover the costs in respect to the question of damages. (1967, c. 954, s. 1.)

COMMENT

Both sections of the rule would seem to be self-explanatory. They encompass the substance of former §§ 1-541 and 1-542. Former § 1-543, permitting a disclaimer of title by the defendant in trespass actions together with an offer to make amends, was repealed on the theory that its purpose can be accomplished by use of section (a).

CASE NOTES

I. In General.
II. Decisions under Prior Law.

I. IN GENERAL.

Purpose of this rule is to encourage settlements and avoid protracted litigation. Scallon v. Hooper, 58 N.C. App. 551, 293 S.E.2d 843, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 744, 295 S.E.2d 480 (1982).

The offer operates to save defendant the costs from the time of that offer if plaintiff ultimately obtains a judgment for less than the sum offered. Scallon v. Hooper, 58 N.C. App. 551, 293 S.E.2d 843, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 744, 295 S.E.2d 480 (1982).

In determining the "costs then accrued," the relative positions of the parties as they existed at the time the offer was made must be considered. Purdy v. Brown, 307 N.C. 93, 296 S.E.2d 459 (1982).

Meaning of "Judgment Finally Obtained". — The Court of Appeals erred in concluding the "judgment finally obtained" under this rule means the jury's verdict. The decision to equate "judgment finally obtained" with the jury's verdict ignores the plain meaning of the words chosen by the legislature and employed in this rule. Poole v. Miller, 342 N.C. 349, 464 S.E.2d 409 (1995).

Defendant is entitled to the protections afforded him under this rule when plaintiff's recovery is not more favorable than the offer. Thus, where defendant's offer was for $5,001.00, but plaintiff only received $3,500.00 from the jury, plaintiff would have to bear the costs incurred after the offer of judgment was made. Purdy v. Brown, 307 N.C. 93, 296 S.E.2d 459 (1982).

Prevailing Parties. — Because the rational behind this rule is to encourage a voluntary, mutual settlement, both parties may consider themselves prevailing parties. Evans v. Full Circle Prods., Inc., 114 N.C. App. 777, 443 S.E.2d 108 (1994).

Attorneys' fees were not part of the "costs then accrued" under this rule when defendant made offer to plaintiff of $5,001.00, including costs accrued, with the exception of attorneys' fees, as attorneys' fees could not properly have been taxed against defendant at that time, since at the time defendant tendered his offer to plaintiff, § 6-21.1 was not applicable, because the situation did not then involve a judgment for $5,000.00 or less. Purdy v. Brown, 307 N.C. 93, 296 S.E.2d 459 (1982).

Attorneys' fees under 42 U.S.C. § 1988 are "costs then accrued" within the meaning of that phrase as it is used in this rule. Purdy v. Brown, 307 N.C. 93, 296 S.E.2d 459 (1982).

Ambiguity of Phrase. — The phrase "together with costs accrued" was ambiguous as to whether the "costs accrued" were included in the amount offered pursuant to this rule or whether the costs were left to be separately determined by the court. Craighead v. Carrols Corp., 115 N.C. App. 381, 444 S.E.2d 651 (1994).

What Attorneys' Fees Recoverable. — Attorneys' fees which were incurred prior to the time the offer of judgment was made are recoverable. Sanctions under this rule only provide protection against the costs incurred after the offer has been made. Purdy v. Brown, 307 N.C. 93, 296 S.E.2d 459 (1982).

Taxing of Costs Incurred After Making of Offer Held Error. — Where offer was made and served on May 21, 1979, and the judgment was for less than the sum offered, the trial court erred in taxing costs against the plaintiff up to and including October 15, 1979; under section (a) of this rule the judgment should have ordered plaintiff to pay the costs incurred after May 21, 1979. Scallon v. Hooper, 58 N.C. App. 551, 293 S.E.2d 843, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 744, 295 S.E.2d 480 (1982).

Interest and Other Costs Not Included. — Where the relevant portion of defendant's offer of judgment allowed judgment to be taken against them for "$10,001.00 for all damages and attorney's fees taxable as costs, together with the remaining costs accrued"; use of the language "together with" evidenced an intent to make an offer of judgment only as to the substantive claim and attorney fees, but not as to any other costs such as interest; therefore, construing the offer against defendants, as the drafters, a lump sum offer was not intended. Aikens v. Ludlum, 113 N.C. App. 823, 440 S.E.2d 319 (1994).

Taxing of Costs on Nonspecific Offer. — Trial court did not have authority under this rule to tax costs to the plaintiff where defendants made a nonspecific offer for both plaintiffs to take judgment against defendants for a total sum of $25,000. When multiple plaintiffs in the same complaint have independent claims for relief, an offer of judgment can be valid only if it is specific as to the offer made to each plaintiff; a party wishing to accept the offer should not be barred from doing so, and thus subject himself to penalties under this rule, just because the other party would not accept. True v. T & W Textile Mach., Inc., 112 N.C. App. 358, 435 S.E.2d 551 (1993), cert. granted, 335 N.C. 555, 441 S.E.2d 134, aff'd per curiam, 337 N.C. 798, 448 S.E.2d 514 (1994).

An offeree who does not accept an offer of judgment must bear those costs incurred from the date the offer of judgment was tendered only when the "judgment finally obtained" is not more favorable than the amount of the offer. Poole v. Miller, 342 N.C. 349, 464 S.E.2d 409 (1995).

The provision of § 84-13 for double damages applies only after a factual determination at trial of fraudulent practice by an attorney and, thus, did not apply where plaintiffs accepted defendant's offer of judgment tendered pursuant to this rule. Estate of Wells v. Toms, 129 N.C. App. 413, 500 S.E.2d 105 (1998).

Applied in Shanahan v. Shelby Mut. Ins. Co., 19 N.C. App. 143, 198 S.E.2d 47 (1973); Yates Motor Co. v. Simmons, 51 N.C. App. 339, 276 S.E.2d 496 (1981); Lowe v. Bell House, Inc., 74 N.C. App. 196, 328 S.E.2d 301 (1985).

Quoted in Hicks v. Albertson, 284 N.C. 236, 200 S.E.2d 40 (1973); Members Interior Constr., Inc. v. Leader Constr. Co., 124 N.C. App. 121, 476 S.E.2d 399 (1996).

Stated in Taylor v. Brigman, 52 N.C. App. 536, 279 S.E.2d 82 (1981).

II. DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW.

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former §§ 1-541 and 1-542.

Nature of Offer. — An offer of compromise, to be sufficient, must be in a form that will enable plaintiff, if he accepts it, to have judgment entered by the clerk conformably to the offer. It must consequently come from all the defendants, or their common attorney-at-law, since otherwise the clerk would not be authorized to enter judgment against all. Williamson v. Lock's Creek Canal Co., 84 N.C. 629 (1881).

Use of Evidence of Unaccepted Tender of Judgment. — The purpose of former § 1-541 could be best subserved by holding, according to its language, that a tender of judgment that is unaccepted "cannot be given in evidence," and can only be used after verdict before the judge, to enable him to adjudge who shall pay the costs. A. Blanton Grocery Co. v. Taylor, 162 N.C. 307, 78 S.E. 276 (1913).

Former § 1-541, authorizing a tender of judgment, provides that the tender, when not accepted, is to be deemed withdrawn, and cannot be given in evidence, and while this provision is primarily for the protection of the one making the tender, and to prevent its introduction against him, the statute is a part of the wholesome scheme devised to encourage compromises and settlements, before and after action commenced. A. Blanton Grocery Co. v. Taylor, 162 N.C. 307, 78 S.E. 276 (1913).

When Tender Sufficient to Stop Accrual of Costs. — A tender of payment, to stop the costs and the accrual of interest on a judgment subsequently rendered, must be in writing, signed by the party making it, and must contain an offer of judgment for the amount tendered. Dr. Shoop Family Medicine Co. v. Davenport, 163 N.C. 294, 79 S.E. 602 (1913).

When Costs to Be Taxed Against Plain- tiff. — Where plaintiff is given judgment for no more than the amount tendered by defendant, costs from the time the tender was made should be taxed on plaintiff. Cowles v. Provident Life Assurance Soc'y, 170 N.C. 368, 87 S.E. 119 (1915).

Where defendant tenders judgment in its answer for the amount recovered by plaintiff, which tender is refused by plaintiff upon her claim that she is entitled to recover a larger amount, the costs are properly taxed against plaintiff. Webster v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 208 N.C. 759, 182 S.E. 333 (1935).

A conditional tender may accompany an answer, and this alone is its proper placing so far as a pleading is concerned, or in reply to a counterclaim. Hall v. Western Union Tel. Co., 139 N.C. 369, 52 S.E. 50 (1905).

Defendant may not defeat the purpose of § 1-510 by undertaking to make a tender. McKay v. McNair Inv. Co., 228 N.C. 290, 45 S.E.2d 358 (1947).

Tender of judgment which was not made until after nonsuit had been entered and plaintiff had appealed therefrom and the session of court had expired did not comply with former § 1-541. Oldham & Worth, Inc. v. Bratton, 263 N.C. 307, 139 S.E.2d 653 (1965).

Offer Held Not an Offer of Compromise and Admissible in Fixing Damages. — Where, pending an action to recover for damages done to a lot of tobacco which plaintiff had bought and paid for under a guarantee of soundness by defendants, an agreement was entered into adjusting the amount of damage per pound which plaintiff should recover, if entitled to recover at all, said agreement to be without prejudice to either party, it was held that such an agreement was not an offer of compromise and was admissible on the trial of the action to determine the amount of plaintiff's recovery. Garrett v. Pegram, 120 N.C. 288, 26 S.E. 778 (1897).

Defendant would have no right to force plaintiff to accept property which might have been injured or rendered worthless after conversion or pay the costs on refusal to do so, even if the action had been brought to recover the specific property tendered, unless the offer had also included with the proposed delivery of articles tendered in kind a proposal to pay an amount as damages for detention not less than that ultimately assessed by the jury. Stephens v. Koonce, 103 N.C. 266, 9 S.E. 315 (1889).

Where, in a justice's court, judgment was rendered against two defendants, and one appealed, and, pending the appeal, tendered in cash as a satisfaction of the judgment as to himself a sum which was less than the amount of the justice's judgment but more than that ultimately rendered in the superior court, plaintiff was entitled to costs. Wyatt v. Wilson, 152 N.C. 276, 67 S.E. 501 (1910).

Where defendants tendered judgment for a smaller amount on another and different liability from that alleged in the complaint, and plaintiff did not accept, the tender was thereby withdrawn, and upon judgment of nonsuit on the cause alleged plaintiff was not entitled to judgment for the amount tendered, there being no admission of liability in any amount upon the cause alleged. Doggett Lumber Co. v. Perry, 213 N.C. 533, 196 S.E. 831 (1938).

Where, on the admissions in the pleadings, plaintiff is entitled to recover any amount, it is error for the trial court to dismiss the action as in case of nonsuit, and the fact that defendant has tendered the amount admitted to be due with interest and costs to the time of filing his answer and has paid it into court subject to plaintiff's order does not vary this result. Penn v. King, 202 N.C. 174, 162 S.E. 376 (1932).

Rule 68.1. Confession of judgment.

(a) For present or future liability. — A judgment by confession may be entered without action at any time in accordance with the procedure prescribed by this rule. Such judgment may be for money due or for money that may become due. Such judgment may also be entered for alimony or for support of minor children.

(b) Procedure. — A prospective defendant desiring to confess judgment shall file with the clerk of the superior court as provided in section (c) a statement in writing signed and verified or sworn to by such defendant authorizing the entry of judgment for the amount stated. The statement shall contain the name of the prospective plaintiff, his county of residence, the name of the defendant, his county of residence, and shall concisely show why the defendant is or may become liable to the plaintiff.

If either the plaintiff or defendant is not a natural person, for the purposes of this rule its county of residence shall be considered to be the county in which it has its principal place of business, whether in this State or not.

(c) Where entered. — Judgment by confession may be entered only in the county where the defendant resides or has real property or in the county where the plaintiff resides but the entry of judgment in any county shall be conclusive evidence that this section has been complied with.

(d) Form of entry. — When a statement in conformity with this rule is filed with the clerk of the superior court, the clerk shall enter judgment thereon for the amount confessed, and docket the judgment as in other cases, with costs, together with disbursements. The statement, with the judgment, shall become the judgment roll.

(e) Force and effect. — Judgments entered in conformity with this rule shall have the same effect as other judgments except that no judgment by confession shall be held to be res judicata as to any fact in any civil action except in an action on the judgment confessed. When such judgment is for alimony or support of minor children, the failure of the defendant to make any payments as required by such judgment shall subject him to such penalties as may be adjudged by the court as in any other case of contempt of its orders. Executions may be issued and enforced in the same manner as upon other judgments. When the full amount of the judgment is not all due, or is payable in installments, and the installments are not all due, execution may issue upon such judgment for the collection of such sums as have become due and shall be in usual form. Notwithstanding the issue and satisfaction of such execution, the judgment remains as security for the sums thereafter to become due; and whenever any further sum becomes due, execution may in like manner be issued. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1987, c. 288, s. 1.)

COMMENT

While this rule largely follows former §§ 1-247, 1-248 and 1-249, there are some changes.

That part of former § 1-247 expressly allowing judgment to be confessed "to secure any person against contingent liability on behalf of the defendant" has been omitted. Otherwise, there has been no change in respect to the subject matter for which judgment may be confessed.

The provisions in respect to the particular county in which judgment may be confessed have been changed. Formerly, § 1-249 permitted a judgment to be confessed where the defendant resided or "has property." Since it would seem to be a simple matter for a defendant to have property in any county (simply by wearing his clothes there), the possibility of abuse of the procedure by nonresidents for the benefit of nonresidents is present. The rule therefore specifies that the property must be real property. More importantly, it provides that judgment may be confessed also in the county of the plaintiff's residence. It will be observed that section (c), after stating the appropriate counties for the confession of judgment, provides that entry of judgment is conclusive evidence that the section has been complied with. This, in effect, puts the responsibility on the clerks for the enforcement of this section. At any rate, it prevents any nice inquiry as to whether it has been complied with.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1987, c. 288, which amended this rule by inserting "or sworn to" in the first sentence of section (b) thereof, in s. 2 provides: "This act is effective upon ratification [June 4, 1987] and validates all confessions of judgment heretofore entered under G.S. 1A-1, Rule 68.1, which were sworn to but not verified, but this act shall not affect any pending litigation."

CASE NOTES

I. In General.
II. Decisions under Prior Law.

I. IN GENERAL.

Strict Construction. — A statute authorizing confession of judgment is in derogation of the common law and is to be strictly construed. Rivers v. Rivers, 29 N.C. App. 172, 223 S.E.2d 568, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 309, 225 S.E.2d 829 (1976).

A confession of judgment without action is a consent judgment. The judgment depends upon the consent of the parties, and the court gives effect to it as the agreement of the parties. It would not be valid unless the parties consented, nor could it affect one who was not a party. Ballard v. Hunter, 12 N.C. App. 613, 184 S.E.2d 423 (1971), cert. denied, 280 N.C. 180, 185 S.E.2d 704 (1972); Yarborough v. Yarborough, 27 N.C. App. 100, 218 S.E.2d 411, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 734, 220 S.E.2d 353 (1975).

And Its Validity Depends upon Capacity to Contract. — Since the validity of a confession of judgment is based upon the contract of the parties, there must be the authority and capacity to contract. Ballard v. Hunter, 12 N.C. App. 613, 184 S.E.2d 423 (1971), cert. denied, 280 N.C. 180, 185 S.E.2d 704 (1972).

Defendant's Written Authorization Required. — There can be no entry of a confession of judgment, under this rule, without a written authorization for entry by defendant, and defendant is therefore deemed to have notice, since without a written statement by defendant authorizing its entry there can be no confession of judgment. Rivers v. Rivers, 29 N.C. App. 172, 223 S.E.2d 568, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 309, 225 S.E.2d 829 (1976).

Effect of Judgment by Confession on Jurisdiction to Determine Custody. — Where a judgment by confession purported to grant custody of the child to a party, this judgment did not deprive the district court of jurisdiction to determine custody, but the parties, having agreed to it, were bound by its provisions until the court made some order for custody. Pierce v. Pierce, 58 N.C. App. 815, 295 S.E.2d 247 (1982).

Abatement of Later Custody Action. — Where a judgment by confession placed the custody issue before the court so that it retained jurisdiction to determine custody, it was error not to abate the subsequent action for custody. Pierce v. Pierce, 58 N.C. App. 815, 295 S.E.2d 247 (1982).

Plaintiff's Express or Implied Consent Necessary. — In order for a confession of judgment to be binding on plaintiff, it is essential that he either expressly or impliedly assent thereto. Yarborough v. Yarborough, 27 N.C. App. 100, 218 S.E.2d 411, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 734, 220 S.E.2d 353 (1975).

Minors Cannot Be Bound Without Court Investigation and Approval. — In the case of infant parties, the next friend, guardian ad litem or guardian cannot consent to a judgment or compromise without the investigation and approval of the court. Ballard v. Hunter, 12 N.C. App. 613, 184 S.E.2d 423 (1971), cert. denied, 280 N.C. 180, 185 S.E.2d 704 (1972).

Where there was nothing in the record on appeal to disclose an investigation and approval by the court, a purported judgment in favor of a minor plaintiff was a nullity and its purported cancellation by his guardian was of no effect. Ballard v. Hunter, 12 N.C. App. 613, 184 S.E.2d 423 (1971), cert. denied, 280 N.C. 180, 185 S.E.2d 704 (1972).

Estoppel to Challenge Judgment by Confession for Alimony. — Where a husband ratifies, accepts, or acquiesces in a decree of alimony by confession, he is estopped, in the absence of a showing of fraud, mistake or oppression, to challenge the validity of the judgment on the grounds of informalities or irregularities in either the confession of judgment or the decree itself. Whitehead v. Whitehead, 13 N.C. App. 393, 185 S.E.2d 706 (1972).

Change of Child Support or Custody. — A judgment concerning the custody or support of a minor child is not final, but may be altered by the showing of a substantial change of circumstances; and jurisdiction over the person of the defendant began and remained with the North Carolina court when defendant knowingly and voluntarily signed a confession of judgment pursuant to this rule. Cromer v. Cromer, 49 N.C. App. 403, 271 S.E.2d 541 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 303 N.C. 307, 278 S.E.2d 518 (1981).

Imposition of restitution as a condition of probation is not a legal obligation equivalent to a civil judgment; therefore, in sentences imposed for § 14-100 convictions, that part of the judgment purporting to require defendant to sign confessions of judgment was vacated. State v. Clemmons, 111 N.C. App. 569, 433 S.E.2d 748 (1993).

Cited in Snipes v. Snipes, 118 N.C. App. 189, 454 S.E.2d 864 (1995).

74 F.2d 790 (4th Cir. 1935), cert. denied, 295 U.S. 732, 55 S. Ct. 643, 79 L. Ed. 1680 (1935).

They are in derogation of common right, and must be strictly construed. Gibbs v. G.H. Weston & Co., 221 N.C. 7, 18 S.E.2d 698 (1942).

Strict Compliance Required. — Strict compliance with the provisions of former § 1-248 was required, and if all the requirements were not met the judgment was void because of a want of jurisdiction in the court to render judgment, which was apparent on the face of the proceedings. Smith v. Smith, 117 N.C. 348, 23 S.E. 270 (1895).

In Order to Confer Jurisdiction and Ensure Validity. — It was essential to the validity of a judgment by confession that it be confessed and entered of record according to the provisions of former § 1-248. These were essential matters required by the statute to confer jurisdiction on the court and to ensure validity of the judgment. Farmers Bank v. McCullers, 201 N.C. 440, 160 S.E. 494 (1931).

Where the requirements with respect to the form and contents of the statement have been fully complied with, the court acquires jurisdiction, and a judgment by confession, as authorized by the debtor in the statement, is valid for all purposes. Cline v. Cline, 209 N.C. 531, 183 S.E. 904 (1936).

As to requirement of substantial compliance, see Sharp v. Danville, M. & S.W.R.R., 106 N.C. 308, 11 S.E. 530 (1890).

Rendition of judgment in a proceeding of this kind is a distinct office of the court, not to be confused with the ministerial acts of filing and docketing. Gibbs v. G.H. Weston & Co., 221 N.C. 7, 18 S.E.2d 698 (1942).

Court Must Have Jurisdiction. — It is essential that the court have jurisdiction before a judgment on confession can be validly entered. Slocumb v. Cape Fear Shingle Co., 110 N.C. 20, 14 S.E. 622 (1892).

The verified statement is jurisdictional, both as to its filing and as to its contents. Gibbs v. G.H. Weston & Co., 221 N.C. 7, 18 S.E.2d 698 (1942).

Failure to comply with the mandatory terms of former § 1-248 and especially the want of rendition of judgment upon the statement and affidavit of defendant was not a mere irregularity, but constituted a fatal defect, rendering the proceeding of no effect as against creditors whose judgments were subsequently docketed. Gibbs v. G.H. Weston & Co., 221 N.C. 7, 18 S.E.2d 698 (1942).

And a judgment confessed must contain a verified statement of the facts and transactions out of which the indebtedness arose. Davenport v. Leary, 95 N.C. 203 (1886).

Filing of concise statement of the facts out of which the indebtedness arose, required of the party confessing judgment, is mandatory. Davidson v. Alexander, 84 N.C. 621 (1881).

As Well as Averment That Debt Is Justly Due. — A confession of judgment being a proceeding in derogation of a common right, former § 1-248 required, as a protection against the perpetration of fraud, that the consideration out of which the debt arose be stated, and an averment that the debt for which the judgment is confessed "is justly due." Smith v. Smith, 117 N.C. 348, 23 S.E. 270 (1895).

Confession of judgment was sufficient when it was for "goods sold and delivered," although omitting the time of sale, quantity, price, and value of the goods. Merchants Nat'l Bank v. Newton Cotton Mills, 115 N.C. 507, 20 S.E. 765 (1894).

Statement that the amount was due by a certain note described in the judgment, that said note became due on a day named, and that the consideration was cotton sold and delivered was a compliance with former § 1-248. Merchants Nat'l Bank v. Newton Cotton Mills, 115 N.C. 507, 20 S.E. 765 (1894).

Where affidavit stated that the amount was due on a bond under seal for borrowed money, due and payable 2 November, 1876, it was held that the statement was sufficient. George F. Uzzle & Co. v. Vinson, 111 N.C. 138, 16 S.E. 6 (1892).

Mere statement that debts were bona fide due, without embracing the account which was filed, was not a sufficient compliance. Davenport v. Leary, 95 N.C. 203 (1886). See also, Davidson v. Alexander, 84 N.C. 621 (1881).

Judgment confessed upon statement that defendant was indebted to plaintiff in a certain sum arising from acceptance of a draft, setting out a copy thereof, was irregular and void. Davidson v. Alexander, 84 N.C. 621 (1881).

Where judgment confessed by a wife in favor of her husband showed only that it was based upon a sum alleged to be due on account of money advanced by the husband from time to time to take care of obligations due at the banks by the wife, and failed to state the items constituting the claim, when advanced and to whom, and that the advancements were not gifts to the wife, the judgment was insufficient to meet statutory requirements and was void. Farmers Bank v. McCullers, 201 N.C. 440, 160 S.E. 494 (1931).

Failure to file note or other evidence of indebtedness does not invalidate the judgment, provided the confession contains a sufficient description of the nature of the indebtedness to enable a party to make inquiry and ascertain the truth of the matter. Merchants Nat'l Bank v. Newton Cotton Mills, 115 N.C. 507, 20 S.E. 765 (1894).

Mere filing and entry of a verified state- ment, although recorded on the judgment docket and cross-indexed as judgments are, will not be effective as a judgment. Gibbs v. G.H. Weston & Co., 221 N.C. 7, 18 S.E.2d 698 (1942).

Effect of Statement Not Expressly Authorizing Filing. — Although a confession of judgment did not contain words expressly authorizing the clerk to enter the same upon the records, yet, if the record showed that the confession was sworn to and filed and that judgment was thereupon entered, the filing was equivalent to an express authority for its entry and sufficiently conformed to the statute. Merchants Nat'l Bank v. Newton Cotton Mills, 115 N.C. 507, 20 S.E. 765 (1894).

Failure to endorse the judgment on the verified statement was an irregularity which did not affect the validity of the judgment, which the entry on the judgment docket made by the clerk or under his immediate supervision showed was rendered by the court. Cline v. Cline, 209 N.C. 531, 183 S.E. 904 (1936).

Mere fact that judgments were entered in the nighttime in the law office of counsel, which was near to the courthouse and convenient, did not render them void or irregular. Sharp v. Danville, M. & S.W.R.R., 106 N.C. 308, 11 S.E. 530 (1890).

Lien from Date of Docketing. — A judgment by confession, like any other judgment, becomes a lien on the judgment debtor's real estate as of the date the judgment is docketed. Keel v. Bailey, 214 N.C. 159, 198 S.E. 654 (1938).

Setting Aside of Void Judgment. — Ordinarily, a judgment by confession without action will not be set aside for mere irregularities, the party confessing the judgment being presumed to have waived them; but where the judgment is void for a cause appearing in the record, or the record omits some essential element, it will be set aside or quashed. Nimocks v. Cape Fear Shingle Co., 110 N.C. 24, 14 S.E. 622 (1892).

On Application of a Party Thereto. — A judgment may be set aside for irregularity only upon the application of a party thereto. George F. Uzzle & Co. v. Vinson, 111 N.C. 138, 16 S.E. 6 (1892).

Distinction Between Attack on Judgment by Creditors of Debtor and by Debtor Himself. — There is a distinction between challenges to the validity of a confessed judgment made by creditors of the confessing debtor and by the debtor himself. Pulley v. Pulley, 255 N.C. 423, 121 S.E.2d 876 (1961).

Collateral Attack on Judgment Void for Want of Jurisdiction. — Judgment which is void for want of jurisdiction in the court, if such appears on the record, may be collaterally impeached in any court in which the question arises. Henry J. Hervey & Co. v. Edmunds, 68 N.C. 243 (1873).

As to the manner of attacking judgment by confession for fraud, see Sharp v. Danville, M. & S.W.R.R., 106 N.C. 308, 11 S.E. 530 (1890); George F. Uzzle & Co. v. Vinson, 111 N.C. 138, 16 S.E. 6 (1892).

Amendment of Judgments by Confession. — Such irregularities in a confession of judgment as might be corrected by amendment in the case of ordinary judgments may be the subject of amendment in a confession of judgment. Merchants Nat'l Bank v. Newton Cotton Mills, 115 N.C. 507, 20 S.E. 765 (1894).

If a proceeding is so defective in form and substance that it is void upon its face, no amendment can be made to give it life, but if there are irregularities they may be cured by amendment. Merchants Nat'l Bank v. Newton Cotton Mills, 115 N.C. 507, 20 S.E. 765 (1894).

Parol Evidence Not Admissible to Vary Judgment. — Where a judgment is confessed by one against himself and entered of record, parol evidence is not admissible to show that it was intended to have been entered against another. Davidson v. Alexander, 84 N.C. 621 (1881).

Defendant was estopped to question the validity of his own confessed judgment for alimony. See Pulley v. Pulley, 255 N.C. 423, 121 S.E.2d 876 (1961).

Confession of Judgment with Defeasance. — It is a well recognized practice to confess a judgment with a defeasance, and the courts will take notice of the condition and will not permit an execution to issue in violation of it. Hardy v. Reynolds, 69 N.C. 5 (1873).

A stipulation in a confession of judgment that no execution shall issue thereon within a time specified is not such a reservation for the benefit of the debtor as impairs the rights of other creditors, and does not vitiate the judgment. Merchants Nat'l Bank v. Newton Cotton Mills, 115 N.C. 507, 20 S.E. 765 (1894).

A judgment by confession may be taken to cover a future debt. Bank of Ga. v. Higginbottom, 34 U.S. 48, 9 L. Ed. 46 (1835).

Judgment may, it seems, be confessed for a specific sum claimed, subject to the right of the party confessing to reduce the amount, and in case of failure or omission to do so the whole amount will be collectible. Gear v. Parish, 46 U.S. 168, 12 L. Ed. 100 (1847).

Even before dissolution, one partner cannot confess judgment so as to bind copartners. Hall v. Lanning, 91 U.S. 160, 23 L. Ed. 271 (1875).

Confession by Guardian. — A judgment confessed by a guardian of one non compos mentis, if the statement required is verified by the guardian in the absence of fraud, is not irregular. And the analogy between infants and lunatics is so close as to justify the conclusion that a similar judgment against a lunatic would not be irregular. McAden v. Hooker, 74 N.C. 24 (1876).

Where process was served on guardian alone, and not on infants also, as it should have been, and the guardian permitted judgment against the infants by nil dicit, the judgment was nevertheless not irregular, although the court acted unadvisedly in permitting the guardian whose interests were opposed to those of the ward to represent him. White v. Albertson, 14 N.C. 241 (1831).

Judgment confessed by executors on a debt created after the death of the testator and during the time of administration will bind them in their individual capacity, even though they style themselves as executors in making such a confession. Hall v. Craige, 65 N.C. 51 (1871).

Confession by Corporation. — A corporation, nothing to the contrary appearing, may by the action of its proper officers confess judgments as a natural person, if the essential requirements are complied with. Sharp v. Danville, M. & S.W.R.R., 106 N.C. 308, 11 S.E. 530 (1890).

A corporation may confess judgment, without action, in or out of term, but the record should show that the officer or person who represented the corporation in the proceedings was duly authorized to act, and that he acted under the direction of his principal. Nimocks v. Cape Fear Shingle Co., 110 N.C. 24, 14 S.E. 622 (1892).

Confession May Be Made to State. — A person may confess a judgment, or recognizance on record, to the State for a sum of money, as well as to an individual. State v. Love, 23 N.C. 264 (1840).

Where A was convicted on an indictment, fined, and ordered into the custody of the sheriff, and B, in consideration that A should be discharged from custody, confessed a judgment to the State for the fine and costs, it was held that the judgment could not afterwards be set aside. State v. Love, 23 N.C. 264 (1840).

Construction of Warrant of Attorney. — It seems to be an established principle that an authority given by warrant of attorney to confess a judgment against the maker of a note must be clear and explicit and strictly construed, and the court cannot supply any supposed omissions of the parties. National Exch. Bank v. Wiley, 195 U.S. 257, 25 S. Ct. 70, 49 L. Ed. 184 (1904).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Clerk of superior court is not authorized to enter judgment by confession which determines custody of minor children. See opinion of Attorney General to The Honorable Martha J. Adams, Clerk of Superior Court, Alexander County, 46 N.C.A.G. 168 (1977).

Rule 69.

Omitted.

Rule 70. Judgment for specific acts; vesting title.

If a judgment directs a party to execute a conveyance of land or to deliver deeds or other documents or to perform any other specific act and the party fails to comply within the time specified, the judge may direct the act to be done at the cost of the disobedient party by some other person appointed by the judge and the act when so done has like effect as if done by the party. On application of the party entitled to performance, the clerk shall issue a writ of attachment or sequestration against the property of the disobedient party to compel obedience to the judgment. The judge may also in proper cases adjudge the party in contempt. If real or personal property is within the State, the judge in lieu of directing a conveyance thereof may enter a judgment divesting the title of any party and vesting it in others and such judgment has the effect of a conveyance executed in due form of law. When any order or judgment is for the delivery of possession, the party in whose favor it is entered is entitled to execution upon application to the clerk upon payment of the necessary fees. (1967, c. 954, s. 1.)

COMMENT

While preserving the essence of the former vesting statute, § 1-227, the rule as drafted makes two changes. First, where a party has been directed in a judgment to perform an act and has failed to so perform, it imports into the statutes for the first time authorization for the court to have someone else to perform the act with "like effect as if done by the party." Perhaps this authorization is most obviously applicable to specific performance decrees, yet it should be noted that it is not limited to transfers of title but extends to all acts which the court might properly direct in a judgment. Second, the rule makes it clear that a judgment divesting title and vesting it in others "has the effect of a conveyance" without further words being added to the effect that the judgment "shall be regarded as a deed of conveyance." See Morris v. White, 96 N.C. 91, 2 S.E. 254 (1887), and Evans v. Brendle, 173 N.C. 149, 91 S.E. 723 (1917).

CASE NOTES

The recovery of costs in a civil action is totally dependent upon statutory authority, and without such authority costs may not be awarded. Upon being granted the authority to order costs, the amount of such costs lies within the discretion of the trial court. Coastal Prod. Credit Ass'n v. Goodson Farms, Inc., 71 N.C. App. 421, 322 S.E.2d 398 (1984).

Where damages are alleged because of noncompliance with a consent judgment, a motion under this rule is inappropriate. Population Planning Assocs. v. Mews, 65 N.C. App. 96, 308 S.E.2d 739 (1983).

Defendant's Failure to Timely Comply with Judgment as Necessary Precedent to Action by Judge. — Defendant's contention that the trial judge was without authority to execute an assignment of defendant's wages on the ground that the judge could direct the act to be done by someone else but could not do it himself was without merit; however, though defendant's history of willful and intentional nonpayment of alimony was sufficient to justify the judge's entry of an order to defendant to execute an assignment of wages to secure future alimony payments, the judge was without authority himself to execute such an assignment absent defendant's failure to comply with a judgment within the time specified. Sturgill v. Sturgill, 49 N.C. App. 580, 272 S.E.2d 423 (1980).

Rules 71 through 83.

Omitted.

Rule 84. Forms.

The following forms are sufficient under these rules and are intended to indicate the simplicity and brevity of statement which the rules contemplate:

(1) Complaint on a Promissory Note.

1. On or about _____, _____, defendant executed and delivered to plaintiff a promissory note [in the following words and figures: (here set out the note verbatim)]; [a copy of which is hereto annexed as Exhibit A]; [whereby defendant promised to pay to plaintiff or order on _____, _____, the sum of _____ dollars with interest thereon at the rate of _____ percent per annum].

2. Defendant owes to plaintiff the amount of said note and interest.

Wherefore, plaintiff demands judgment against defendant for the sum of _____ dollars, interest and costs.

(2) Complaint on Account.

Defendant owes plaintiff _____ dollars according to the account hereto annexed as Exhibit A.

Wherefore, plaintiff demands judgment against defendant for the sum of _____ dollars, interest and costs.

(3) Complaint for Negligence.

1. On _____, _____, at [name of place where accident occurred], defendant negligently drove a motor vehicle against plaintiff who was then crossing said street.

2. Defendant was negligent in that:

(a) Defendant drove at an excessive speed.

(b) Defendant drove through a red light.

(c) Defendant failed to yield the right-of-way to plaintiff in a marked crosswalk.

3. As a result plaintiff was thrown down and had his leg broken and was otherwise injured, was prevented from transacting his business, suffered great pain of body and mind, and incurred expenses for medical attention and hospitalization [in the sum of one thousand dollars] (or) [in an amount not yet determined].

Wherefore, plaintiff demands judgment against defendant in the sum of _____ dollars and costs.

(4) Complaint for Negligence.

(Where Plaintiff Is Unable to Determine Definitely Whether One or the Other of Two Persons Is Responsible or Whether Both Are Responsible and Where His Evidence May Justify a Finding of Willfulness or of Recklessness or of Negligence.)

1. On _____, _____, at _____, defendant X or defendant Y, or both defendants X and Y, willfully or recklessly or negligently drove or caused to be driven a motor vehicle against plaintiff who was then crossing said street.

2. Defendant X or defendant Y, or both defendants X and Y were negligent in that:

(a) Either defendant or both defendants drove at an excessive speed.

(b) Either defendant or both defendants drove through a red light.

(c) Either defendant or both defendants failed to yield the right-of-way to plaintiff in a marked crosswalk.

3. As a result plaintiff was thrown down and had his leg broken and was otherwise injured, was prevented from transacting his business, suffered great pain of body and mind, and incurred expenses for medical attention and hospitalization [in the sum of one thousand dollars] (or) [in an amount not yet determined].

Wherefore, plaintiff demands judgment against X or against Y or against both in the sum of _____ dollars and costs.

(5) Complaint for Specific Performance.

1. On or about _____, _____, plaintiff and defendant entered into an agreement in writing, a copy of which is hereto annexed as Exhibit A.

2. In accord with the provisions of said agreement plaintiff tendered to defendant the purchase price and requested a conveyance of the land, but defendant refused to accept the tender and refused to make the conveyance.

3. Plaintiff now offers to pay the purchase price.

Wherefore, plaintiff demands (1) that defendant be required specifically to perform said agreement, (2) damages in the sum of _____ dollars, and (3) that if specific performance is not granted plaintiff have judgment against defendant in the sum of _____ dollars.

(6) Complaint in the Alternative.

I.

Defendant owes plaintiff _____ dollars according to the account hereto annexed as Exhibit A.

II. ALTERNATIVE COUNT

Plaintiff claims in the alternative that defendant owes plaintiff _____ dollars for goods sold and delivered by plaintiff to defendant between _____, _____, and _____, _____.

(7) Complaint for Fraud.

1. On _____, _____, at _____, defendant with intent to defraud plaintiff represented to plaintiff that _____.

2. Said representations were known by defendant to be and were false. In truth, [what the facts actually were].

3. Plaintiff believed and relied upon the false representations, and thus was induced to _____.

4. As a result of the foregoing, plaintiff has been damaged [nature and amount of damage].

Wherefore, plaintiff demands judgment against defendant for _____ dollars, interest and costs.

(8) Complaint for Money Paid by Mistake.

Defendant owes plaintiff _____ dollars for money paid by plaintiff to defendant by mistake under the following circumstances:

1. On _____, _____, at _____, pursuant to a contract _____, plaintiff paid defendant _____ dollars.

(9) Motion for Judgment on the Pleadings.

Plaintiff moves that judgment be entered for plaintiff on the pleadings, on the ground that the undisputed facts appearing therein entitle plaintiff to such judgment as a matter of law.

(10) Motion for More Definite Statement.

Defendant moves for an order directing plaintiff to file a more definite statement of the following matters: [set out]

The ground of this motion is that plaintiff's complaint is so [vague] [ambiguous] in respect to these matters that defendant cannot reasonably be required to frame an answer hereto, in that the complaint _____.

(11) Answer to Complaint.

First Defense

The complaint fails to state a claim against defendant upon which relief can be granted.

Second Defense

If defendant is indebted to plaintiff as alleged in the complaint, he is indebted to plaintiff jointly with X. X is alive; is a resident of the State of North Carolina, and is subject to the jurisdiction of this court as to serve of process; and has not been made a party.

Third Defense

1. Defendant admits the allegations contained in paragraphs _____ and _____ of the complaint.

2. Defendant alleges that he is without knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations contained in paragraph _____ of the complaint.

3. Defendant denies each and every other allegation contained in the complaint.

Fourth Defense

The right of action set forth in the complaint did not accrue within _____ year next before the commencement of this action.

Counterclaim

[Here set forth any claim as a counterclaim in the manner in which a claim is pleaded in a complaint.]

Crossclaim Against Defendant Y

[Here set forth the claim constituting a crossclaim against defendant Y in the manner in which a claim is pleaded in a complaint.]

Dated: _____.

Attorney for Defendant

(12) Motion to Bring in Third-Party Defendant.

Defendant moves for leave to make X a party to this action and that there be served upon him summons and third-party complaint as set forth in Exhibit A attached.

(13) Third-Party Complaint.

_____,
Plaintiff,
v.
_____,
Defendant and Third-Party Complaint
Third-Party Plaintiff,
v.
_____
Third-Party Defendant.

Civil Action No. _____

1. Plaintiff _____ has filed against defendant _____ a complaint, a copy of which is attached as "Exhibit C."

2. [Here state the grounds upon which the defendant and third-party plaintiff is entitled to recover from the third-party defendant all or part of what plaintiff may recover from the defendant and third-party plaintiff.]

Wherefore, plaintiff demands judgment against third-party defendant _____ for all sums that may be adjudged against defendant _____ in favor of plaintiff.

(14) Complaint for Negligence Under Federal Employer's Liability Act.

1. During all the times herein mentioned defendant owned and operated in interstate commerce a railroad which passed through a tunnel located at _____ and known as Tunnel No. _____.

2. On or about June 1, _____, defendant was repairing and enlarging the tunnel in order to protect interstate trains and passengers and freight from injury and in order to make the tunnel more conveniently usable for interstate commerce.

3. In the course of thus repairing and enlarging the tunnel on said day defendant employed plaintiff as one of its workmen, and negligently put plaintiff to work in a portion of the tunnel which defendant had left unprotected and unsupported.

4. By reason of defendant's negligence in thus putting plaintiff to work in that portion of the tunnel, plaintiff was, while so working pursuant to defendant's orders, struck and crushed by a rock which fell from the unsupported portion of the tunnel, and was (here describe plaintiff's injuries).

5. Prior to these injuries, plaintiff was a strong, able-bodied man, capable of earning and actually earning _____ dollars per day. By these injuries he has been made incapable of any gainful activity, has suffered great physical and mental pain, and has incurred expense in the amount of _____ dollars for medicine, medical attendance, and hospitalization.

Wherefore, plaintiff demands judgment against defendant in the sum of _____ dollars and costs.

(15) Complaint for Interpleader and Declaratory Relief.

1. On or about June 1, _____, plaintiff issued to G. H. a policy of life insurance whereby plaintiff promised to pay to K. L. as beneficiary the sum of _____ dollars upon the death of G. H. The policy required the payment by G. H. of a stipulated premium on June 1, _____, and annually thereafter as a condition precedent to its continuance in force.

2. No part of the premium due June 1, _____, was ever paid and the policy ceased to have any force of effect on July 1, _____.

3. Thereafter, on September 1, _____, G. H. and K. L. died as the result of a collision between a locomotive and the automobile in which G. H. and K. L. were riding.

4. Defendant C. D. is the duly appointed and acting executor of the will of G. H.; defendant E. F. is the duly appointed and acting executor of the will of K. L.; defendant X. Y. claims to have been duly designed as beneficiary of said policy in place of K. L.

5. Each of defendants, C. D., E. F., and X. Y. is claiming that the above-mentioned policy was in full force and effect at the time of the death of G. H.; each of them is claiming to be the only person entitled to receive payment of the amount of the policy and has made demand for payment thereof.

6. By reason of these conflicting claims of the defendants, plaintiff is in great doubt as to which defendant is entitled to be paid the amount of the policy, if it was in force at the death of G. H.

Wherefore plaintiff demands that the court adjudge:

(1) That none of the defendants is entitled to recover from plaintiff the amount of said policy or any part thereof.

(2) That each of the defendants be restrained from instituting any action against plaintiff for the recovery of the amount of said policy or any part thereof.

(3) That, if the court shall determine that said policy was in force at the death of G. H., the defendants be required to interplead and settle between themselves their rights to the money due under said policy, and that plaintiff be discharged from all liability in the premises except to the person whom the court shall adjudge entitled to the amount of said policy.

(4) That plaintiff recover its costs.

(16) Averment of Capacity Under Rule 9 (a).

(North Carolina Corporation)

Plaintiff is a corporation incorporated under the law of North Carolina having its principal office in [address].

(Foreign Corporation)

Plaintiff is a corporation incorporated under the law of the State of Delaware having [not having] a registered office in the State of North Carolina.

(Unincorporated Association)

Plaintiff is an unincorporated association organized under the law of the State of New York having its principal office in [address] and (if applicable) having a principal office in the State of North Carolina at [address], and as such has the capacity to sue in its own name in North Carolina. (1967, c. 954, s. 1; 1999-456, s. 59.)

CASE NOTES

Federal Rule Compared. — The language of this rule which declares that Forms (3) and (4) and all the other forms of complaint incorporated therein are "sufficient under these rules and are intended to indicate the simplicity and brevity of statement which the rules contemplate" is identical to that of FRCP, Rule 84. Sutton v. Duke, 277 N.C. 94, 176 S.E.2d 161 (1970).

Forms (3) and (4) illustrate the sufficient form of a complaint for negligence. Ormond v. Crampton, 16 N.C. App. 88, 191 S.E.2d 405, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 304, 192 S.E.2d 194 (1972).

And Require Specific Allegations. — Although federal Forms 9 and 10, complaints for negligence, do not require specific allegations of acts of negligence, under this rule North Carolina's Forms (3) and (4) do require such specific allegations. Roberts v. William N. & Kate B. Reynolds Mem. Park, 281 N.C. 48, 187 S.E.2d 721 (1972).

Forms (3) and (4) contain much more than the corresponding federal forms, by requiring the pleader to allege the specific acts which constitute the defendant's negligence. This North Carolina requirement was the result of compromise between the drafting committee and practicing lawyers on the General Statutes Commission who wanted more specificity, especially in automobile cases. Ormond v. Crampton, 16 N.C. App. 88, 191 S.E.2d 405, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 304, 192 S.E.2d 194 (1972).

Notice Afforded by Form (4). — Form (4) approves, for a complaint for negligence, a short statement of the basic occurrences and the use of the words "reckless" and "wilful" to describe the character of a defendant's conduct, as sufficient notice to enable the adverse party to answer and prepare for trial, to allow for the application of the doctrine of res judicata, and to show the type of case brought. Brewer v. Harris, 279 N.C. 288, 182 S.E.2d 345 (1971).

Applied in Powell v. Wold, 88 N.C. App. 61, 362 S.E.2d 796 (1987).
